SAYS CREDIT SYSTEM MAY BE ENDANGERED

David R. Forgan, president of the National City Bank of Chicago, in a recent talk before the American Association of public accountants, said that unless some change is made by the banks in their present method of loaning money on unsecured promissory notes, based on a statement of his financial condition made by the borrower himself and unconfirmed, the entire credit system of the country will be endangered. As conditions exist at present, if one desires to secure a loan on real estate which he owns, the lender, before granting the request, investigates the title of the prospective borrower, his character, etc.; lawyers are employed and legal papers drawn up which must be signed by both himself and wife, all of which necessitates the consumption of much time, whereas if one desires to borrow from a bank, all that is necessary is to make a statement of one's financial condition, which, if it appear satisfactory, will enable one to borrow from the bank on his unsecured promissory note, all of which may be accomplished in a comparatively short time.

PRIVATE ORGANIZING IN MICHIGAN

A little over a year ago the private bank of Charles H. May & Co., at Clio, Mich., was re-organized into the Clio State Bank. The firm has now taken a similar step with its Birch Run business, organizing it into the Birch Run State Bank. The new bank starts out with a capital of $20,000, under most favorable conditions and with excellent prospects. Birch Run is growing rapidly and is in the center of one of the best farming sections of the state.

The Applegate Bank of Sleeper & Nigge-man at Applegate in the same state has been converted into a state institution with a capital of $20,000. The officers are: Albert E. Sleeper, president; John P. Niggeman, Jr., vice-president; Walter Calkins, cashier.

The Applegate Bank was organized in 1900 by Arnot & Mark. On May 15, 1906, the business was purchased by Sleeper & Niggeman. It has been one of the most successful of Michigan's many private banking institutions.

CHICAGO FIRM SECURES CONTRACT FOR DECORATION OF BANK

W. K. Cowan & Co. of this city have been awarded the contract for furniture, fixtures and decorations for the Pontiac (Mich.) Savings Bank. When the work is completed the bank will have quarters which will compare favorably with those of any other bank in the state.

OKLAHOMA BANK CLOSES

Washington, Oct. 28th.—The First National Bank of Wilburton, Okla., closed its doors Saturday. National Bank Examiner Wilcox, in charge of the bank, telegraphed the controller of the currency that the institution was insolvent as a result of a shortage.

CORN EXCHANGE RECIPE FOR SUCCESS

Vice-president Charles L. Hutchinson of the Corn Exchange National, Chicago, has issued a series of short paragraphs on "How to Succeed." Mr. Hutchinson is one of the busiest men in Chicago, having shouldered many of the burdens of conducting the Art Institute and taking a deep interest in civic welfare work. Here they are:

Intense industry, not special ability, made most of our successful men what they are.

Play is second in importance only to work. A man's recreations make or break him as surely as do his business habits.

Dissipation is a handicap to business success.

Application is what counts. Every man has it in him to work if he wants to.

Indifference is the principal cause of failure. A lack of real interest in the business keeps most men from financial success.

Successful work is that in which a man takes a pleasure.

Success does not end with the making of money. Success includes spiritual success, intellectual success, physical success.

In nine cases out of ten a man stumbles into what he is fitted for.

The small business gives the best chance to learn, and the big business gives the best opportunity to acquire millions.

The railroad presidents of to-day, with few exceptions, began at the bottom.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

The gathering and the marketing of the corn crop of the state occupies the most important place in the minds of Illinois bankers aside from politics. In fact, the corn crop is of more interest to many bankers, as the large crop insures good times for the farmers and the land-owners for the coming year. The ears of corn are so large in many localities that they have been humorously referred to as fence-rails or cord-wood. With a bumper crop of corn of excellent quality following an exceptionally large crop of oats, there is every reason to believe that the state will enjoy a measure of prosperity hitherto inexperienced.

The political struggle has in many parts of the state been a keen one, yet bankers seem to have been too busy this fall to have paid very serious attention, in the most cases, to the issues which have been advanced. On the eve of one of the most exciting presidential elections in the history of the nation, the bankers, farmers and business men of Illinois are so busy with the affairs of business life that the introduction of political discussions of a partisan nature has seemed out of place and unnecessary. Most bankers have been too busy this fall to take an active part in the campaign and the majority have attended strictly to the routine of every-day business.

The prosperity of the people of Illinois has never reached before the height which it has now surmounted and bankers believe that it is too well established to be affected by party politics. A leading Illinois paper sums up the commercial and agricultural conditions in the state at the present time as follows: "Labor is employed and wages are good; live stock, wheat, corn, oats and other farm products are high; lands have increased in value and Illinois is right now in the midst of the greatest era of good times ever known, when the automobile is as common as the old one-horse shay once was and when the luxuries of life have become its necessities because of the high standard of American life."

Chicago Bankers Visit Down-state

H. W. Mahan, president of the South Side State Bank, 4259 Cottage Grove Avenue, Chicago, was down-state last week supervising his Champaign county farm, northeast of Urbana. Mr. Mahan was formerly with the First National of Urbana. His son-in-law, Garland Stahl, of wonderful base ball fame, is a banker, too, as he is vice-president of the Washington Park National. Sixty-third Street and Evans Avenue, Chicago. "Jake" Stahl is a wonderful favorite around the Twin Cities of Champaign and Urbana, as he was formerly an athletic star at the University of Illinois in both baseball and football.

Another Chicago banker, R. H. Griffin, vice-president of the Peoples Trust and Savings Bank, has also been visiting in the University communities. He was formerly cashier of the First National of Urbana.

First National of Manhattan

Many bankers attending the Peoria convention met Edwin L. Wilson, cashier of the First National of Manhattan, a thriving village a few miles south of Joliet. The First National of Manhattan occupies a neat one-story bank building of the type which is so popular and so well adapted to country villages. Mr. Wilson is a farmer-banker, owning two good farms near his town. The capital of the bank is $40,000 and the deposits are $150,000. Chicago correspondents are the Corn Exchange and Drovers Deposit Nationals.

A Dangerous Custom

In many of the larger cities of the state one can see many girl cashiers of stores and offices going to banks about the middle of the afternoon to make the daily bank deposits. In altogether too many cases the girls will carry a long bank pass book with many checks and bills lying flat in the book with the ends exposed and secured by an ordinary rubber band around the book. In many cases the girls have no pockets and the book must be carried in the open hand. Many men also have been noticed observing the same custom as it seems too much trouble for them to slip the book into an inside pocket and they prefer to carry it in the hand. While no trouble with thieves and "grabbers" has been reported yet the practice has become so common in Peoria that the chief of police in that city has issued an order prohibiting the custom.

Bankers generally can call attention to this custom, as there is danger of a girl being robbed, especially if she must pass an alley or other covering for a thief. Bank messengers in many cities of the state have often invited theft by displays of currency or silver.

New Bank Building at Elliott

The Bank of Elliott, in Ford county, is erecting a new bank building. W. A. Cameron is the owner and president and C. E. Cameron is the cashier. Mr. Cameron reports the best of business conditions which are reflected in the new bank building. The correspondents are the First National of Chicago and the Peoples Bank of Bloomington.

the best since 1899. The quality is also very good. As the Illinois acreage is comparatively small there is every reason to believe that high prices will be paid for the "brush" this year. One hundred and thirty dollars per ton has been paid this year but there is a belief that higher prices will prevail.

Shuman Prominent Democrat

Irving Shuman, cashier of the First National of Sullivan, former chairman of Group 7 of the Illinois Bankers Association and a member of its committee on agriculture and vocational education, has been in Chicago for a number of weeks at the headquarters of the Democratic national committee, aiding in the management of the western campaign of Governor Wilson. Mr. Shuman was a delegate to the Baltimore convention last summer and worked for the nomination of Governor Wilson and is now working for his election. The Sullivan banker has been prominent in local politics for some time and is now actively interested in national politics.

Mr. Shuman is an interesting farmer-banker, as he resides on a farm practically within the limits of Sullivan where he has made a specialty of dairy cattle and of Percheron horses. He has recently sold out his dairy herd. Mr. Shuman's father, Charles Shuman, is president of the First National of Sullivan and is a large land-owner in Moultrie county.

Mr. Shuman was honored at the recent grand lodge meeting of the Royal Arch Masons of Illinois, held in Chicago, by being elected Master of the Third Veil.

Illinois Notes

The penny savings system in the public schools of Kankakee is proving to be a successful venture and the school children are being taught good lessons of thrift. In a recent week the sum of $156.36 was deposited by the pupils.

Frank Schuld, a Peoria teamster, was in the habit of secreting his savings under the floor of his barn and of frequently visiting the spot to see if his treasure was safely hidden. One morning he visited the barn about four o'clock and found the money there and later at seven o'clock it had disappeared. About $2000 was lost, $1500 in currency and $500 in gold. Another example of the foolish habit of many laboring people in avoiding banks.

The city of Peoria will have its transportation facilities expanded again when the North Western extension southward is completed. The North Western enters Peoria from the north, coming in from Sterling on the Omaha division and the line will be built southward from Peoria. Doubtless the coal fields of southern Illinois and possibly a St. Louis entrance are both desired by the North Western. The Alton, Jacksonville and Peoria trolley line is also being built and a portion of the road from Alton to Jerseyville will be opened November 15th. In eastern Illinois a trolley line from Urbana to Kankakee is under construction, a portion of the road from Urbana to Rantoul to be used this fall.

SENDS OUT DESK CLOCK

W. D. Sanders, cashier of the De Kalb (Texas) Exchange Bank, has been remembering his banking friends with a neat little desk clock commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of his sterling institution, which occurred on November 1st. Mr. Sanders is well and favorably known to practically everyone in Texas as well as to bankers in the larger cities, and his efficient service to the bank has been a potent factor in its growth and development.

WOODHAVEN BANK CLOSED

The Woodhaven Bank, of Woodhaven, L. I., has been closed by Bank Superintendent Van Tuyl, who announced that it was because of doubtful loans made to real estate operators and laxity in management which was persisted in despite of repeated warnings. The quarterly report of September 9th shows total assets of $726,528 and surplus of $38,069. Loans aggregated $320,161.

Superintendent Van Tuyl said: Recent investigation made by examiners under the direction of the superintendent disclosed that much of the institution's assets were questionable. Deposits aggregated about $675,000 and the books showed cash, bond investments, and due from other banks, constituting quick assets of the institution, about 45 per cent of the aggregate of deposits. The worth of many of the loans depends upon the value of the stock of the realty companies taken as collateral.

The bank had $25,000 capital stock, and was organized in 1891. The directors are William F. Wyckoff, Franklin H. Corwin, H. M. DeRonde, William E. Maynard, Don S. Lott, and Abram Van Siclen.

NEW STORY BY CYRUS TOWNSEND
BRADY

The novel writing parson of Kansas City, dating from St. George's Rectory, is out with a new, "true" story entitled "The West Wind." He wrote "When Blades Are Out and Love's Afield," and other famous books. In his latest romance the daughter of a Wyoming pioneer is abducted by a murderous half-breed and held among hostile Indians. A rancher friend, and her lover, Captain Kennard, in seeking and rescuing her, engage in record Indian fighting. The author assures the reader that he has known the characters and that the battles so finely described actually occurred. Everything in the book, assures the writer, is more or less true. How much "more" or how much "less," the reader must judge.

NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER

WISCONSIN

Resigning as a director of the Commercial National Bank of Madison in order that he might remain loyal to his political trust and vote for Taft for president, Sol Levitan, a prominent merchant and capitalist of Madison, explained his reasons for so doing in a letter to President A. F. Menges of the Commercial National this week, as follows:

"Having been duly selected as candidate for presidential elector of the Republican party in Wisconsin, and there being some question as to my right to cast my vote as such should I be elected, due to the fact that I am a director in a national bank, I herewith submit my resignation from the office which I hold in the bank and request that it be immediately accepted. I need hardly say that I take this step with regret, but that the above complication has made it necessary for me to choose between personal advantage and what I feel to be one of the highest duties of citizenship."

Speaking of his personal attitude on the political situation, Mr. Levitan said: "The Republicans have carried us through to our present prosperity, our business conditions have been improved, our banks are sound, and altogether the nation was never in a more prosperous or satisfied condition. By giving President Taft another term, he will have opportunity to profit by the lessons of the past and by the experience of the present campaign."

Central Credit Commission Formed

The formation of a central credit commission through which the value of commercial paper could be readily ascertained was the chief subject under discussion at the recent meeting of Group 5, Wisconsin Bankers Association, in Fort Atkinson. According to the proposed plans, the commission would furnish information as to the amount of commercial paper issued by manufacturing concerns and purchased by Wisconsin banks, and would provide a statement of the borrowers' credit. Action on the matter was postponed pending the outcome of State Banking Commissioner A. E. Kuolt's plans for a similar bureau in connection with the state commission, of which he advised the convention.

The enactment of the "blue sky law," intended to protect the public against the sale of stock in "wildcat" corporations, at the next session of the legislature, received the endorsement of the bankers present.

As a result of the dissatisfaction over the present rates of insurance companies, a committee was appointed to draw plans for a bankers' mutual casualty company, the report to be made probably at the next state meeting in Milwaukee next summer.

New officers elected were: President, H. A. Moelenpah, Clinton; vice-president, T. B. Caswell, Fort Atkinson; secretary, H. B. L. Adkins, Elkhorn.

Applications for Postal Savings Bonds

Applications are now being received at the Milwaukee postal savings department for postal savings deposit bonds. Applications must be in by December 2d. Although delivery of these bonds may not be made until January or February, they will bear 2½ per cent interest from January 1st. Postal savings accounts are limited to $500, when they may be converted into bonds.

$2,500,000 Bond Issue

Stockholders of the Milwaukee Western Electric Railroad, Milwaukee, this week voted the issue of $2,500,000 in bonds to build the line. The road has secured almost the entire right of way along the proposed route from Milwaukee to Fox Lake, Wis., with a spur to Waukesha.

E. J. Hughes Back from East

E. J. Hughes, assistant cashier of the First National Bank, returned this week from a three weeks' visit in New York and Atlantic City, in company with Mrs. Hughes. In New York they were entertained by several officials of the National City Bank and their wives, with whom they visited Panama, following the A. B. A. convention in New Orleans last summer.

New Bank at Waldo

The incorporation of the Waldo State Bank was approved this week by Banking Commissioner A. E. Kuolt. The bank is capitalized at $10,000 and the incorporators are Whitman A. Barber, Eugene McIntyre and Henry W. Trimmer.

¶ This Bank, being at the logical center of Wisconsin banking activity, and having an exceptional list of State and Foreign correspondents, offers its services to conservative Banks with the assurance that such a connection will be of mutual advantage.

PAYS PENALTY FOR DISHONESTY

Grand Rapids, Oct. 28th.—Be sure your sins (or the examiner) will find you out. John W. Sibben, assistant cashier of the First National Bank in Manistee, Mich., has confessed that for thirteen years he had been stealing from the institution to speculate in the Chicago stock market. His defalcations amount to $44,300.

Sibben is now under arrest. President T. J. Ramsdell and G. Kitsinger and G. A. Hart of the bank have personally made good his shortage. Sibben had been known as one of the most trusted employees of the bank.

The discovery of the defalcations was made when Herbert E. Johnson, a bank examiner, called unexpectedly. He found Sibben working unusually rapidly on the books. Suspecting something wrong, Johnson seized the books. Sibben didn't wait for exposure. He went directly into the office of Vice-president George A. Dunham and there confessed. He said in thirty minutes more he could have concealed his shortage from the inspector.

Sibben found it difficult in 1896 to meet expenses. His invalid son's doctor bills made him dip into the bank funds. Then he played the Chicago stock market, won a little, went deeper and deeper, and then he plunged, later making heavy investments in worthless New Mexican mines.

Three years ago he resolved never to take any more money after narrowly escaping detection by bank examiners. Since then he had been able to manipulate the books so as to conceal the shortage.

BUSINESS GOOD IN NEBRASKA

S. H. Burnham, president of the First National of Lincoln, Neb., called on Chicago banking acquaintances this week. He says that business conditions in Nebraska are very satisfactory.

Indiana

LaFayette is one of the strong banking cities of central Indiana, the nine banks of that city having on deposit about $11,000,000. There are five national banks in LaFayette, these being the First, Fowler, Merchants, City and American, one state bank, the Farmers and Traders, two trust companies, the LaFayette Loan and Trust Company and the Tippecanoe Loan and Trust Company and one savings bank, the LaFayette Savings Bank, although many of the other banks in the city maintain savings departments. There is also a bank, the Purdue State Bank, across the Wabash River in West LaFayette near Purdue University.

LaFayette serves as a clearing point for a wide circle of territory in central western Indiana and as its various banking institutions are organized along many different lines there are wide opportunities for banks in near-by towns and cities to find accommodations in national, savings and investment banking. LaFayette has long been a jobbing center of no small importance and there have been wholesale houses of one kind or another in the city since the Civil War. Purdue University offers educational facilities and the city has a large class of wealthy citizens.

LaFayette has not erected modern bank buildings as other cities have done recently but those who know the city well believe that when the bankers there begin the erection of new banking houses that some very modern structures will be the result. The wealth of the city and of the tributary territory means that LaFayette will continue to be one of the important clearing points of the central part of Indiana.

Indiana Prosperity

Travelers across the state of Indiana have often noticed the well constructed farm buildings which are to be seen on every hand in the central part of the state. In many ways the farm buildings of Indiana are better than those of central Illinois, inasmuch as the Indiana farmers reside for the most part on their farms while in Illinois the farms are more often tilled by tenants.

Indiana farmers till their soil in a more diversified way, as they pay more attention to dairying, hog and beef cattle raising, clover and hay culture, while wheat, corn and oats are also raised in large quantities. However, less corn goes into the grain elevators than in Illinois as there is more of a tendency for the farmers to feed their grain directly to stock on the farms.

The roads of Indiana and the rural schools are in a high stage of perfection and bankers and farmers from other states can learn much of the conditions there which will be of value to them in their home communities. Indiana occupies a high place in the prosperity of the nation and the state will offer to the bankers and merchants a large measure of prosperity during the coming winter and spring.

State Corn Show

The annual State Corn Show, under the auspices of the Indiana Corn Growers Association, will be held at Purdue University, in connection with the Farmers Short Course, January 6 to 19, 1913. At a recent meeting of the executive committee, it was decided to increase the premium list and to make this show larger and better than any one yet held. The corn crop throughout the state gives promise of producing much high class show corn. State corn men are reporting that they are finding in the fields some excellent ears, and will compete for some of the big premiums offered at the state show.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip —Special correspondence concerning also the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, Oct. 30th.—Activities in St. Louis banking during the past week were in no wise affected by the near approach of election. Officials of local banks and trust companies say that never before has general business showed less disposition to reflect political unrest than this fall. The volume of business, as indicated by clearing-house returns and reports of individual institutions, has only fluctuated with the usual intrinsic conditions, and presidential year has had little to do with the matter at all. This, it is pointed out, would be impossible but for the general prosperous condition of the Southwest and Middle West, as slack times would give more leisure for incubating apprehension. As it is, business men and agriculturists are too much occupied with their affairs to delve much into the issues before the political world, and are sawing wood and saying little. However, the opinion prevails here that with the election out of the way, the last hindrance to commercial progress will be removed, and a real boom season is expected. Confidence, born of the enormous crops, is being more and more felt and reflected in business activities. Railroad earnings in the Southwest are developing steady gains and the October showing is expected to surpass that of September, also of the corresponding months for several years past. There is a disposition to hold back grain, and the ability of farmers to do this demonstrates that they are in a prosperous condition, as the banks are not being drawn upon to any great extent to finance storing. Cotton is also backward in sections, and while the initial movement was much heavier and earlier than anticipated, it is believed the average period of marketing will be slightly later than last season. Bankers here believe the wisdom of this holding back is exceedingly doubtful, as prospects for future supply and demand seem rather to favor lower than higher prices, especially in the matter of corn, but the fact that the producers can store without borrowing heavily is a strong commendatory upon the healthiness of their position. Specifically, the money market has undergone no material change as compared with the preceding week or ten days. Possibly there is an easier tendency, but the quotable range of rates remains stationary, and the general demand for credits is quite brisk. Deposits have augmented to some extent, and the return flow from the cotton states is cutting more of a figure. Clearings are holding up excellently, and collections, both city and country, are reported as being satisfactory in the main.

B. F. Yoakum is Optimistic

B. F. Yoakum, president of the Board of the Frisco Railway, has just completed a three-weeks' trip over the lines of his road in Texas and Oklahoma, and he is extremely hopeful as to the prospects for business in that region. "Every section of the country is enjoying a healthy business," said Mr. Yoakum, "with excellent prospects for the future. The people are feeling cheerful over conditions, which have not been better for more than a decade." Mr. Yoakum was impressed with the fact that persons he met on his trip are beginning to appreciate the possibilities of business to arise from the opening of the Panama Canal. "As the canal will open for business within the next twelve months," said Mr. Yoakum, "all the wide-awake gulf ports are getting ready to capture the South American trade and a portion of the Pacific Coast trade. The commercial and manufacturing centers between the Rocky Mountains and the Alleghenies are realizing that this new gateway will mean much to the trade of the entire territory. The expansion of agricultural work is bringing vastly increased wealth. Under these circumstances there need be no doubt for the future of that section where 60,000,000 of our population live, and which is tributary to our gulf ports."

Indictments at Houston

Advices from Houston, Texas, state that Monta J. Moore, formerly president, G. M. Henderson, formerly vice-president and N. B. Sleight, formerly treasurer of the American Trust Company of Houston, have been indicted on charges of violating the bank laws. Six of the indictments are against Moore, who is prominent in Texas political circles. He is charged in four cases with the alleged offense of misapplying funds of a state banking and trust company, while in another he is charged with permitting an officer of the bank to knowingly become indebted to such bank. The charge against Sleight is perjury, while that against Henderson is knowingly becoming indebted to the bank while one of its officers.

Watonga Bank Closes Its Doors

Advices from Oklahoma City, Okla., are to the effect that the Watonga State Bank of Watonga, Okla., has closed its doors. The bank examiner has taken charge of its affairs. The cause of the failure has not been given out, and the bank examiner announces that the resources have been taken over by the Blaine County Bank, and that the liabilities would be cared for by the guaranty fund of the state. The liabilities are estimated at about $80,000. George Jamison, state representative, is president of the defunct bank.

FORMAL OPENING OF LIVINGSTONE CHANNEL

The Livingstone Channel in the lower Detroit (Mich.) River, named in honor of William Livingstone, president of the Lake Carriers Association, which it has taken four years to construct at a cost of $10,000,000, was formally opened on October 19th, with appropriate ceremonies, conspicuous among which was a marine parade of lake steamers headed by the steamer William Livingstone and piloted by its namesake and owner. The new channel extends for some distance out toward Lake Erie, from a point near the head of Bois Blanc Island, and in its construction forms one of the most interesting and marvelous feats of marine engineering construction of the twentieth century. Mr. Livingstone, who has taken a great interest in the inauguration and completion of the work, is one of the foremost citizens of Detroit, and has always been prominently identified with any and every civic and business event that tended toward the advancement of the welfare of Detroit. He is president of the Dime Savings Bank and an ex-president of the American Bankers Association.

MORE BANK CAPITAL FOR ALABAMA

Supt. of Banking for Alabama, A. E. Walker, has given out the following important interview:

"In compiling the statements of state banks as of Oct. 15, 1912, I am very much struck with one feature of these statements, and that is the rapidly increasing demand for more money with which to finance the enormous developments which are taking place every year in every part of the state. This is especially true of the agricultural developments of the state. So rapidly indeed have our agricultural developments increased in volume and value in the past two years, that the banks in the state are being taxed to their utmost in order to finance the crops of the state. Not only are many of the banks using all their own resources for this purpose, but they are compelled to borrow large sums of money outside of the state for the demand of their customers. Alabama needs more banking capital and cheaper money for her development. It will be impossible for the banks of the state to render further aid in this direction. Unless something is done along this line, in a few years the crops of the state cannot be properly handled and financed. The commercial organizations and other agencies can, in my opinion, engage in no better undertaking than encourage new banking capital and the influx of more money for legitimate lending. The Mortgage Company recently organized by T. E. Lovejoy in this city is a right step in this direction. Still there is an imperative demand for a much larger volume of banking capital, especially in the smaller centers of the state. Although I have granted charters to thirty-two new banks and permitted the increase of capital stock in many others, yet there is a cry going up for more money for legitimate enterprise from all parts of the state. No investment pays a safer and surer return than bank stock in well managed banks. This is especially true of well managed country banks. Alabama should have more banking capital."

BANK SHORTAGE $73,567

New Bedford, Mass.—Shortages aggregating $73,567 in the funds of the New Bedford and Acushnet Co-operative banks have been found by Bank Examiner Levi, according to his testimony at the hearing of former Treasurer Edgar Lord, who was arrested six weeks ago, charged with embezzlement. The only other witness was Charles R. Price, the present treasurer of the banks.

Judge Milliken declined to reduce the bail, as the shortage testified to was nearly double the amount previously indicated. He held Lord for the Superior Court under $25,000 bonds. The shortage, Mr. Levi said, was divided as follows: New Bedford Bank, $23,053; Acushnet, $50,514.

BUYS INTEREST IN OKLAHOMA BANK

George L. Browning, Ed Kirkpatrick and associates have purchased the interests of J. M. Browning in the Stockyards State Bank of Oklahoma City, Okla. George L. Browning, who has been cashier of the bank since the organization, has been elected president to succeed J. M. Browning. Mr. Kirkpatrick, formerly cashier of the First State Bank of Mill Creek, Okla., has been elected to succeed Mr. Browning as cashier. J. M. Browning, the retiring president, will move to Duncan, Okla., to enter the banking business. The splendid increase in live stock receipts at the Oklahoma City yards the last few weeks have brought considerable increase in business to the Stockyards banks.

PRIVATES CONVERTING TO NATIONALS

Two weeks ago there was printed in THE CHICAGO BANKER a long list of Illinois private banks which had converted to state institutions, thus going under state supervision and inspection. That list has created a great deal of favorable comment as showing the natural tendency of many of the private bankers of Illinois in favor of better banking conditions in the state. Since the Peoria convention expressions have been heard on every hand indicating that there is a general movement among the private bankers to undertake the matter of securing an amended banking law. That public sentiment is also pushing in this direction is shown by the unanimous action of the Chicago city council in recommending for adoption at Springfield a draft for a new banking law, based largely upon that now in force in Indiana. The Indiana state law is not ideal by any means. It was drastic enough, however, to put seven of the eight private bankers who had opposed it as a standing committee out of business the first week after it went into operation. This was brought about by the requirements of the law compelling instant examination and publication of condition showing capital, resources and partnership interests. Even a law like that of Indiana would be a vast improvement over the present chaotic conditions which permit unprincipled persons without experience or capital to defraud the public by calling themselves a "bank."

During the period covered by the tabulated list of private banks which had converted to state institutions quite a lively conversion was going on from private to national banks. Following is a list of new national banks which took the place of private banks during the five-year period covered by the other table.

Herget National Bank of Pekin, Ill.
Farmers National Bank of Rossville, Ill.
First National Bank of Breese, Ill.
First National Bank of Trenton, Ill.
First National Bank of Mazon, Ill.

When the above list is added to that published two weeks ago in these columns it makes a very encouraging showing on the part of the private banker who is willing to come in under the law and qualify as a state or national bank. It confirms the opinion of Banking Commissioner Gill of Texas, who has reported to the legislature of that state that he believes the honest private banker has no objection to coming under state supervision, if the law requiring it is not made too radical in its provisions. Illinois private bankers are as honest as the private bankers of any other state. They also are well qualified to conduct a supervised bank. The probabilities are that they will be found as open-minded on the subject of a new banking law as the private bankers of any other state where such changes have been brought about. There is indeed a present opportunity for the leaders among the private bankers to redeem themselves absolutely and entirely from the stigma which attached in some measure to them for the vote cast at Peoria in opposition to supervision. The private bankers themselves claim that this vote did not fairly represent their convictions on that subject, but that they were opposed to the manner in which the thing had been brought up. There remains considerable time before the opening of the biennial legislature in Illinois for the preparation of a real bank supervision bill which can be agreed upon by all branches of banking in the state. All that the private bankers seem to need is a financial Moses to show them the way.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION INTERESTS BANKERS

Much interest has been manifested by bankers and business men in the movement which has been started for vocational training for the youth of the country. It is recognized that the average student who is graduated from high school nowadays is but poorly equipped to play his part in life's battle. Too much attention is paid to theoretical education and not enough to practical things. While an intimate knowledge of Latin and Greek may add materially to one's accomplishments as a scholar, it does not as a rule enable one to earn a living by it. The vocational education plan contemplates the teaching of trades to the young men while they are in school, in order that they may receive instruction along the lines to which they are best adapted, so that when they leave school they will not have to worry much about finding a position or be compelled to accept the first thing which comes along, but having a definite purpose in view, they will endeavor to become so located that that object may be carried into effect.

Recognizing the importance of education of this nature, the Illinois Central Railroad has adopted a plan whereby boys in its employ may attend school on alternate days. Two boys constitute a unit. While one boy is in school the other boy is in the shop working as an apprentice. This co-operative educational plan contemplates the high school using the facilities of the Illinois Central shops wherever the road has such facilities to offer. This enables the students to acquire useful and practical knowledge, and the fact that they are paid for all work done, causes them to take increased interest in their studies. In this way the nation is provided with citizens who will be factors in its progress and not detriments. The bankers of Illinois should ask other railroads and large industries to try the Illinois Central plan of co-operating with the high schools of the state for the benefit of the boys. They are the chief asset of the republic.

CHAMP CLARK AND ROOSEVELT

When one reads about Champ Clark going about the country making speeches on behalf of the democratic party and doing everything that lies within his power to bring about the election of Governor Wilson, he cannot help but contrast the generous, broad-minded acts of the speaker with those of Mr. Roosevelt. Both were candidates for the nomination for the presidency at the hands of their respective parties and both failed to accomplish their object. Mr. Clark's success or failure in securing the nomination was a matter of deep concern to him, far more so than was the colonel's. Mr. Clark realized, as did everybody else, that this is a democratic year and that to be nominated for the presidency probably would result in his election to that high office. On the other hand, Mr. Roosevelt already had had two terms as president, which ought to be enough glory for any reasonable man.

When the speaker failed to attain his end at Baltimore he did not immediately turn about and call "thief" and "robber" and seek to disrupt the party under whose standard he has fought all his political battles. He pledged his support to the party and has been working for the interests of the party and the principles for which it stands, and not for the interests of Champ Clark. The colonel, however, when he failed to secure the nomination, started a party of his own, and attempted to overthrow the party that was good enough for Lincoln and Grant, and at whose hands he has received every political office he ever has held. If Mr. Roosevelt really believed that the republican party is dominated by special privilege and the interests, one cannot help but wonder why he tried to secure a nomination at its hands in the first place. The colonel has allowed his personal ambition to get the better of his judgment, for he no longer can expect to receive any consideration at the hands of the republican party. Had he been content to wait until 1916, he would have been reasonably certain to be re-elected at that time, but as it now is, he cannot be elected then any more than he can be elected now. His "sour grapes" attitude has provided a convenient and effective means of getting rid of him and his "policies."

BANK OF GALESBURG

Bank of Galesburg (Ill.) with capital and surplus of $450,000 and deposits of more than a million, recently has remodeled its building and banking room. At the opening which was held recently they had what they termed a "Children's Day," inviting all of the school children of Galesburg to call and inspect their new quarters. Each was presented with a rubber eraser and a little book entitled "The Boy From the Missouri Valley." To show that the plan was a success, it may be stated that more than 2,300 children called at the bank. The next day they gave a general opening for the public, and more than eight thousand people inspected the building and quarters at that time. A little booklet setting forth the services which the bank can render was supplied to each caller. Captain Charles C. Craig, son of the late A. M. Craig, who formerly was chief justice of the supreme court of Illinois, is the president of this sterling institution. Other officers are as follows: N. O. G. Johnson, vice-president; P. N. Granville, cashier, and C. E. Johnson, assistant cashier.

The new home of the bank is one of the finest in Illinois. Much of the planning was done by the late Judge Craig. The interior of the banking room is done in marble and bronze. The counters, wainscoting and similar fixtures are of Italian pavanazzo marble. The large vaults in the rear of the room are constructed of English vein marble and the floor is of Tennessee marble done in blocks, and a marble trimming along the edge of the floor is constructed of verdi green marble. The building in which the bank is located is the finest in the city.

CHICAGO'S VISTORS

Among the out-of-town bankers in Chicago this week were the following: A. D. Graham, vice-president Citizens National, Baltimore; A. J. Maynard, cashier Traverse City (Mich.) State Bank; F. F. McElhinney, president Blackhawk National, Waterloo, Ia. Mr. McElhinney reports prosperous conditions in his state.

MECHANICS-AMERICAN ON BUSINESS CONDITIONS

The Mechanics-American National of St. Louis sends out a very hopeful financial and news letter for November. It says that "business in the Southwest is expanding on a scale that is giving rise to an active demand for money, and banks in this territory are employing at advantageous rates whatever funds they have to lend. In the crop districts the demand for harvesting funds has been well handled, and while the total production of all crops will probably reach a larger yield than ever before, there has been no difficulty experienced in satisfying the requirements of legitimate borrowers. What is more, rates now prevailing for this accommodation are not above those usually exacted at times when the crop movement is in full swing. As compared with conditions existing a year ago, the demand now is, of course, much broader and rates are necessarily higher. But the difference between the two periods is really the difference between a state of uncertainty in trade, with more or less pessimism, and a condition of really active industry, with everybody feeling optimistic.

"The average farmer in the territory around St. Louis is probably more prosperous to-day than he has been in many years. He has received, or will receive, a very high average price for his grain, and he is in a position to pay off his mortgages or other debts, if he has them, and in addition to supply his family with many luxuries. He has been considerably sobered by the happenings of the last year or two, and he is not inclined this season to go to excess or to put all his savings into land purchases. The farmer has learned a good deal about business since the panic period, and the experience of the last two or three years especially has impressed upon him the wisdom of building up a surplus fund, just as other business men do, for recourse to in times of emergency. More than this, and perhaps of greater importance, he has become better trained in the art of farming, with the result that he is getting more out of his land to-day than he got out of it last year or the year before. His education is likely to be progressive too, as a result of the movement undertaken by the government and by bankers organizations in various states to acquaint farmers with improved methods of land cultivation and the principles of scientific farming, which for years have been so closely studied abroad and so generally neglected in the United States. There is little doubt that as this movement progresses there will be some headway made toward reducing the cost of living in this country."

MUNICIPAL BOND COMMITTEE OF INVESTMENT BANKERS MEETS

The committee on municipal bonds of the Investment Bankers Association of America, in conference last Friday, together with invited representatives of dealers in investment bonds, discussed ways and means to organize one or more central bureaus with which to deposit certified bonds with the Investment Bankers Association of America, having endorsed on each bond the fact that the bonds are approved by certain attorneys and that the legal papers are so deposited with the central organization, the purpose of this being to broaden the general market for municipal bonds, so that any bond which has this endorsement will be good for delivery with any dealer, without requiring a certified copy of the papers and opinion to accompany the bonds. This is said to be a matter of considerable interest to investors in municipal bonds. It has often developed in the past that bond dealers have gone out of business and papers and records lost, making it exceedingly difficult to dispose of such municipal issues.

The meeting of the committee was a preliminary to the Investment Bankers Association of America convention to be held in New York November 21st and 22d, when a report for definite action will be presented to the entire membership.

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

J. B. FORGAN INDORSES THE INSTITUTE

The distinguished president of the First National of Chicago, before a meeting of his employees, spoke very highly of the work of the A. I. B. He said:

My friends and fellow workmen: I have been asked to tell you in a few words how I regard the American Institute of Banking.

I have read with great interest your 1912 year-book, which contains in itself a striking evidence of the development of business talent in the Chicago Chapter and is certainly a credit to the executive officer or officers who got it up.

In it I find published, among others, an endorsement of the Institute, written by me some time ago, and I can add but little to what I then expressed.

As to the advantages to be derived from, and the opportunities offered by, membership in the Institute, there is certainly little to add to what is placed before you in this wonderfully compact and admirably gotten up booklet. I presume you have all read it carefully, or will have an opportunity of doing so.

If after reading it you do not at once see for yourselves the desirability, or to put it more strongly, the necessity, of belonging to the Chicago Chapter and thus put yourselves in touch with the work and objects of the Institute, you must be lacking in that ambition which alone leads to advancement in your chosen calling, and blind to your own best interests.

But right here I want to give you a word of caution. No human organization is perfect, and unless it is properly used and its object fully understood it is liable to be handicapped with some bad element. The good in it has to be taken advantage of and nurtured, while the bad should be avoided and if possible destroyed.

The advantages and opportunities offered you through membership in the Chicago Chapter of the American Institute of Banking are much greater and broader than the opportunities offered to young men in similar positions in my day; and if you are wise and want to succeed you should certainly take advantage of them.

Since I left Scotland there has been established there an Institute of Banking to which all young men entering banks now belong. Regular examinations are held annually, and those who expect success and promotion in the business are required at the end of their apprenticeship to graduate in the subjects of study prescribed. Some such system will no doubt be developed in this country as our banking system improves and the work of the American Institute of Banking develops.

In the meantime every one of you should by all means take advantage of the opportunities offered you and join the Chicago Chapter, and I hope you will do so.

The San Francisco Chapter of the American Institute of Banking gave its annual bean-bake and field day on Sunday, October 27th, on the beach near the life-saving station.

WM. READ OF NEW YORK ADDRESSES PHILADELPHIA CHAPTER

Wm. Read, assistant cashier of the National City Bank, New York City, delivered an address before the Philadelphia Chapter, A. I. B., October 18th, on the subject, "Our Relation to the Prevailing Social Unrest." Following is his address in full:

It is not necessary to direct particular attention to the fact that there does exist all over the civilized world a spirit of unrest. We are all conscious of it. It concerns us not only as citizens but as business men and bankers. I might say that it gives the banking fraternity special concern, for disturbance of any kind immediately—adversely affects commerce, of which we are the most sensitive barometer. This unrest is like a rank weed with fibrous roots, all of which find expression in the plant of discontent. From all sides we hear the complaint of high costs, of men engaged in manual pursuits demanding higher wages, of people living in lowly stations striving to live better and enjoy the privileges of the well-to-do, together with a general indulgence in extravagance, and altogether a somewhat revolutionary attitude in respect to all manner of living.

These expressions must not be confounded with legitimate ambitions, for the lack of which we or any other nation would sink into insignificance, but I have in mind the dissatisfied people who are manifesting an unreasonable uneasiness which, unless tactfully and skillfully controlled, will become unmanageable. Large undertakings must of necessity be accomplished through the medium of vast machinery. The individual parts which go to make up the complete machine are frequently unacquainted and seemingly unrelated to the functions of other parts and so it is in the social structure. There are men of varying degrees of capacity, both intellectual and physical, ranging from the utterly illiterate to the most cultured, and it is obvious that this will be so always. The civilized world, and especially that part of it in which we live, is almost racing forward in point of development. The speed we have attained to has made opportunities, some remarkable in their scope, with others in lesser degree. As a result, some men situated so as to be able to grasp advantage and with the skill to see opportunity have derived great benefits; but while some such cases stand out brilliantly, the more important fact is equally apparent that all mankind, as a result of the same development, is to-day living under more auspicious conditions than at any time in the world's history. The productions of progress cannot be restricted or confined. All men enjoy them. But we must be careful to look at this in the right way, and, while not sacrificing natural desire to excel, still refrain from nursing a feeling of bitterness against men who seem to have reaped a larger reward by reason of superior advantages. That, I believe, is what we are witnessing to-day. We all know that in our daily experiences many of the heartaches that come to every man at times, arise, not out of a true analysis of our own station in life but exist to a considerable extent by mere comparison only.

To a very large degree I believe this condition is emphasized by the tremendous strides we have made in the direction of conveniences; for instance, the ease of communication, transportation from one place to another at a great distance, the development of the telephone and telegraph, the cheapness of education and the development of an interminable variety of amusements. These things which were once difficult to obtain, and consequently highly so prized, have become so common that we are more or less regardless and unthankful, and what were formerly considered items of approaching luxury are now deemed, even by the poor, daily necessities. If all these things had been acquired in an orderly reasonable way with an unfailing sense of gratitude for these multiplied blessings, our present social difficulties would not exist, but unfortunately in many cases that is not true. Not much more than a century ago we were a nation of men by stern necessity forced to endure hardships and overcome great obstacles. The marvelous industrial progress since then has brought about remarkable changes, and huge, enormous wealth has been created; fortunes have been built up. I fear, however, that in some cases there has not yet been attained the quiet dignity and sense of responsibility to humanity that the possession of great wealth imposes. But on the other hand, men less fortunate than their brothers in actual possession, but still enjoying great benefits common to all, are manifesting a jealousy of success that asserts itself in violent expressions against the rich as such and is completely unmindful of the progress made toward the improvement of general conditions.

That is not real socialism, although sometimes mistaken for it. But it does perilously resemble anarchy and must be stamped out. Every normal man must be in sympathy with the efforts of what is generally termed the working class (although I don't like that name) to better conditions by which it is surrounded and to obtain reasonable return for effort expended. Every means to that end should be encouraged and the facilities supplied equally to all men to develop inherent qualities. But by giving equal opportunity to learn by furnishing practically free education the state has done all that it can do, and although it sometimes seems harsh and our hearts are warm in sympathy with the distressed, no human theory or plan will ever make for anything but the survival of the fittest.

The labor unions have performed marvels for working people and have become a factor in our civilization, and to their activities may be attributed the abolishment of innumerable abuses, but notwithstanding that, they are in imminent peril of losing, if they have not already lost, public sympathy by a failure to realize and accept the responsibility that must go hand in hand with power. They must appreciate, and it is our duty to force home to them in public and private utterances, that they can no longer insist on recognition as organizations and enter into contracts and expect the other party to be held accountable for violations unless they too accept the same conditions and put themselves into a position of accountability by incorporation. I am convinced that if the several states enacted laws requiring the incorporation of labor unions the number of unfortunate disputes between labor and capital would be very much reduced and the unions would thereafter be inclined to govern themselves by the advice of their own best thinkers. I believe it is the duty of every citizen to strive to bring about this condition, and the sooner that organized labor comprehends the wisdom of it the sooner it will regain popular approval, and the assistance of every just man in the attainment of all worthy purposes.

But the causes of this unrest are not by any means one-sided. There is another point of view, and some abuses which exist and are practiced by employers of large numbers of men and women have their share in the responsibility for this unrestful spirit which prevails. From time immemorial the cry of oppression has rung out over the world. From the very beginning of human history until this day it has never altogether ceased. But happily the occasion for it has been steadily diminishing and what exists in our time is the endeavor to refine the science or art of living and does not arise from any monstrous conditions such as did exist a few centuries ago. But this very endeavor to refine the art of living creates a situation almost as acute as prevailed in former times because men have grown into a fuller realization of the meaning of the word liberty and will not submit to what they think is oppression. Sometimes I feel that we have reached a point where that very liberty is overdone and abused, but, notwithstanding, the tendency of the times when redress is sought for wrongs is to resort to the power of public opinion which finds expression in the ballot, rather than in violence and bloodshed. However, it would be a case of self deception to think that absolute security results therefrom, for if in the days to come the voters of the country should be aroused by the cunning argument of wily office-seekers by appeals to the emotions and passions the result, while not necessarily violent in its attainment, might be fraught with grave peril to our established institutions. So it behooves the employers of large numbers of men and women, the producers of large quantities of goods, to deal justly at all times and thus fortify themselves against any righteous complaint, for only by this means will the vast numbers of workers be satisfied.

But what has all this to do with us? Just what I touched on a few moments ago. Disturbance, unrest, agitation find immediate reflection in business and we live on business. I think sometimes we adopt a wrong standpoint in regard to business. The relation between commerce and banking is so intimate that it has become almost impossible to distinguish the difference, but we must never lose sight of the fact that commerce must be before we begin to operate so that every item which touches commercial welfare vitally affects us and immediately. When, for instance, the manufacturer sends out his salesmen covering the whole land and they find a general reluctance on the part of their regular customers to take on the usual line because there is an undefined feeling of caution prompted by their unrestfulness the effect is immediately shown in a falling off in banking activity and we are enveloped in dull times and no section of the country is exempt from the consequent depression.

If this feeling continues to grow and a sufficient number of voters are persuaded to adopt radical political theories, we will finally be represented in our several legislatures by the most incompetent part of our citizenship. There would certainly be a reconstruction of the political situation. Men who represent, or adopt as expedient, the cause of the unrestful will appeal with increasing cunning and success to the emotions of the multitude with the result that what we have hitherto called conservatism, that is "looking before you leap," will be overcome and we will enter into a period of experimentation resembling real socialism, which I believe will be most unfortunate. If that proves to be the case there will be, besides the depression preliminary to all re-adjustments, the eventual failure of the whole socialistic scheme. This will make for still more re-adjustment and prostration of business during that period.

But I am naturally hopeful. I believe in unbounded possibilities for our country. We are undoubtedly passing through a difficult period, but if we are brave to meet it and have the courage to settle it right, the prosperity which is hovering over us and only waiting for an opportunity will sweep over the land and every one from top to bottom of the social structure will take part in the resulting benefits. Let us see what we have found. A condition of unrest exists,—in some cases undefined but real nevertheless. It is shown in the shifting of political lines, loud complaints about the cost of necessities, disputes between labor and capital and occasionally by attempts at assassination. We have seen that by virtue of our very youth as a nation unusual opportunities have been presented and some men have become very wealthy; but all men, including the stranger who has just landed on our shores, are living, or have the privilege of living, infinitely better than their forefathers; that the

As a result of a recent inspection of the properties of the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railway Company by a representative of the London stockholders, the financial difficulties of that corporation seem in a fair way to be eliminated, for the time being at least. Cecil Braithwaite, head of the committee of the London stockholders and the active partner of Foster & Braithwaite, with Frederick Hurdle and Phillip D. Tucket, London capitalists, returned last Monday from a trip over the Orient lines and they are enthusiastic over the prospect for the development of the road. London is to hear a rosy report of the situation and it is understood that $15,000,000 will be put into the road just as soon as the favorable report is made which, Mr. Braithwaite says, will be the day he reaches London. The fact that the road has been making money under the receivership is taken as an encouraging factor. The committee will report the entire feasibility of connecting all the gaps between Kansas City and Topolobampo, thus saving a haul of several hundred miles for transcontinental freight destined for the Orient, and vice versa. No light was thrown upon the Orient situation in Mexico by the inspection trip, which ended at the Mexican frontier. The English interests propose to complete the Mexican link, but say that it must wait until guerrilla warfare has ceased and construction work can be done with some assurance that it will not be immediately destroyed.

Kansas City Visitors

Haley Fiske, vice-president, and Walter Strabler, comptroller of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York, were guests of Kansas City financiers several days last week and the presidents of fourteen local banks gave a luncheon to the visitors at the Mid-Day Club last Monday. While in Kansas City Mr. Fiske approved loans on several Kansas City buildings, amounting to about two million dollars. Another important visitor to Kansas City recently was Samuel McRoberts, vice-president of the National City Bank of New York. Mr. McRoberts was on his way East after having attended the funeral of his father in Malta Bend, Mo., the old family home. Mr. McRoberts is well acquainted with Kansas City, having been chairman of the board of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company and director in several other important local enterprises.

Death of H. B. Miller of Osage City

Bankers and business men all over the Central West have been saddened by the recent death of H. B. Miller of Osage City, Kan., a pioneer banker and cattle man who was always credited with "knowing everybody west of the Missouri river." Mr. Miller was an exceedingly popular man, of a genial nature, and his high personal character is attested by the fact that he had been urged to run for governor of Kansas many times, but always declined to enter the race. Mr. Miller was born in Cuyahoga county, Ohio, in 1848, and his early life was spent on a farm. At sixteen years of age he enlisted in the northern army and after the war he went to Kansas, locating at Osage City. He engaged in the mercantile business, but saw the necessity for a bank in his home town and founded the Osage County Bank, of which he retained the presidency for more than thirty years. His ranch in Osage county contains about 15,000 acres.

Group 5, Missouri, Meets at Lexington

Group 5 of the Missouri Bankers Association, composed of Lafayette, Johnson, Saline, Pettis, Benton, Cooper and Howard counties, held its annual meeting last week at Lexington, Mo. W. C. Gordon, president of the Farmers Savings Bank of Marshall, and William Hurd, editor of the Missouri Farmer, gave interesting talks on the agricultural phases of banking. These officers were elected: Chairman, C. F. Gilchrist, of the Bank of Leeton; secretary, F. A. Hoefer, of the Commercial Bank, Lexington. On Tuesday, Oct. 29th, Group 11 of the Missouri Association met at Springfield. Two hundred bankers attended the latter meeting and were given a generous reception by local bankers. An interesting program was carried out and the social features were elaborate and most enjoyable.

Placed in Hands of Receiver

The Iola Portland Cement Company, capitalized at $1,000,000, was placed under a receivership by the federal court last week and almost immediately was given over to the bondholders represented by F. R. Bissell of St. Louis as trustee. The change means that the bondholders have entire charge of the plant and that the stockholders are entirely out of it. The Iola Portland company was the first plant in that field, and early in its history accumulated a surplus of $1,000,000. But the price of cement went down and the cost of production went up and the company's assets were wiped out. It is understood that the bonds of the company were held largely by capitalists interested in the Bank of Commerce of St. Louis, but that the cement securities were charged off the bank's books some time ago and are no longer listed among the bank's assets. The foreclosure of this concern marks a further decline in the general cement business of the Southwest, which for a time flourished and offered a very attractive field for investment. A number of other big cement concerns are struggling along in the hope of weathering the financial gale and there is really sound reason for believing that the cement business will yet work out profitably. It is reported that the Iola Portland Company will be operated by the trustee.

St. Joseph Commerce Club Takes Trip

The St. Joseph, Mo., Commerce Club spent several days of last week on a "getting acquainted" trip along the northern connection of the Burlington line into Iowa. More than one hundred representative business men of St. Joseph made up the party, and at every stop there was a reception. The St. Joseph bankers who represented that city's financial interests were: R. T. Forbes, of the First National Bank; J. W. Broadus, of the German-American National; J. A. Greenfield, Jr., of the Stockyards Bank; E. L. Hart, Jr., Bank of North St. Joseph; B. R. D. Lacy, of the Tootle-Lemon National; Walter McLucas of the First National and George A. Nelson of the Burnes National.

Wichita Banker Vindicated

One of the strangest criminal cases in the history of Kansas came to an ending last week with the reversal of a verdict in the United States circuit court at Wichita and a final dismissal of the charge against Levi S. Naftzger, formerly president of the Fourth National of Wichita, of buying and selling stolen postage stamps. It seems almost incredible that a man of Mr. Naftzger's wealth and business and social standing should have been indicted as an accomplice of a gang of postoffice and bank robbers, but that was the charge made against him and upon which he was convicted in March, 1911. Mr. Naftzger had lived in Wichita for many years and was prominent in all the affairs of that city. His family occupied a high social position and Mr. Naftzger was at the head of one of the largest financial institutions of southern Kansas. No shadow of suspicion had ever fallen upon this man. Two years ago John Callahan, the leader of a gang of bold robbers, was caught, and he implicated Frank S. Burt, then chief of police of Wichita, in a series of criminal operations. Burt confessed, and in turn testified that he was the go-between and that he transferred large quantities of stolen postage stamps from Callahan to Naftzger. The people of Wichita were astounded at this revelation, and the testimony was so substantial that it caused the conviction of the banker, who was sentenced to pay a fine and serve five years in the federal prison. An appeal was taken which resulted as stated, in acquittal. Mr. Naftzger is now an

State Bank of Omaha Ready for Business

By the filing of incorporation papers with the Nebraska department of banking, the State Bank of Omaha completed its organization last week and is now ready for business. The capital stock is placed at $300,000, divided into 3,000 shares, the shareholders numbering 238. The largest stockholders are H. W. Huttig, Albert L. Schantz, P. Maginnis and L. J. Svoboda. The directors of the new bank are Albert L. Schantz, Ellery W. Westerfield, I. W. Harris, Albert S. White, J. Q. McPherrin, Arthur Hoover, F. A. High, J. L. Svoboda and John D. Ware. The officers will be: President, Albert L. Schantz; vice-president, Albert S. White, and cashier, J. L. Svoboda.

Central West Notes

Andrew C. Jobes, vice-president of the First National of Kansas City, was re-elected director of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company at the seventeenth annual meeting of the stockholders in Topeka, Oct. 25th. The other directors who were re-elected for a four-year term are: Edwin J. Berwind of New York, John G. McCullough of Vermont and Henry C. Frick of Pittsburgh. Sixty per cent of the 2,800,000 shares of the company were represented at the meeting and President Ripley announced that the company has 31,000 stockholders, a gain of 3,000 over last year. Charles S. Gleed, vice-president of the Pioneer Trust Company of Kansas City, is also a director.

The First National Bank of Wilburton, Okla., failed to open its doors Friday morning of last week and National Bank Examiner Wilcox took charge. The bank carried $106,000 in deposits and was capitalized at $25,000. It is believed that the bank will reopen.

Ward Speelman, who was sent to prison for embezzling the funds of the Merchants National of Topeka, has petitioned for a parole.

The First State Bank of Hewitt, Tex., has been incorporated with a capital of $10,000. The stock is owned by W. W. Woodson, John F. Wright and W. H. McCullough, all bankers of Waco.

L. K. Roberts of Dallas, Tex., has become chief clerk in the Texas department of banking, to take the place of R. E. Chambers, who has resigned to become assistant cashier of the Citizens Bank and Trust Company of Austin.

The following out-of-town visitors were in Kansas City's financial district last week: C. D. Sample, vice-president of the Citizens National of Fort Scott, Kan.; W. C. Harris, president of the Calloway State, Fulton, Mo.; D. H. Harrison, president of the State Bank of Downs, Kan.; H. B. Ernest, president of the First National, Eufaula, Okla.; W. J. Bailey, president of the Exchange National of Atchison, Kan.; A. F. Crowling, president, and U. S. Stone, cashier, of the First State of Stonewall, Okla.; Joseph Wren, cashier of the Avant State, Avant, Okla.; H. G. West, cashier of the Home State, Junction City, Kan.; W. E. Brown, cashier of the George W. Brown & Sons State Bank, Augusta, Kan.; R. W. Cates, cashier of the First National of Independence, Kan., and W. W. Trimmer, assistant cashier of the Continental National of Salt Lake City.

DIRECTORS SUED FOR NEGLIGENCE

D. A. Garfield, receiver of the defunct Albion (Mich.) National Bank, has sued the directors of the First National of that place, which was the predecessor of the insolvent institution. The suit is for the recovery of $2,000 on certain accommodation notes given the First National and is the outcome of an action originally started against M. D. Weeks, a director of the First National, whose defense was that the notes were outlawed. The court decided in the defendant's favor, and as a result thereof the receiver has instituted a pro-

laboring class by concerted, but not corporate, effort, is exerting a wonderful influence on affairs, but by failure to accept corporate responsibility is in danger of widening the breach between classes of men, and creating an acute situation; that it is the duty of every good citizen for patriotic, as well as expedient, reasons, to strive to correct that condition; that men of large means must realize the obligations they are under to humanity and that on the wise adjustment of these several elements depends our own destiny as bankers.

Men engaged in professional life are usually looked upon as expressing the best intelligence in the land. Physicians and lawyers are necessarily specialists. One of the noblest professions in the world, which probably has a more profound influence than any other on public opinion, is represented on this platform tonight in the person of Professor Herrick. As to the banker, he must know his own business well and other people's too, and therefore it becomes our duty more than anyone's to foresee the trend of events and to use every device and argument to guide public opinion into wise channels in regard to this tremendously important matter, and I commend it to your serious consideration.

CINCINNATI CHAPTER

Cincinnati, O.—The Cincinnati Chapter of the American Institute of Bank Clerks has issued a challenge to the Pittsburgh bank clerks for a joint debate on the currency question. The local chapter's debating team also will be sent to Chicago in a few months to try conclusions with the Chicago clerks. T. J. Geisler, secretary of the Central Trust Company, will discuss "Investments" at the meeting of the chapter to be held in the parlors of the Union Trust Company, Tuesday evening. On the evening of November 12th, George B. Mundy will discuss "The Claim in the Attorney's Hands," and A. C. Smith, "The Receiving Teller," while on November 19th, Henry J. Mergler will talk on "The Science of Finance."

IOWA BANKER MAKES OWN ELECTRICITY

Joseph Samuels, president of the Nishna Valley Bank of Riverton, Iowa, employs a Burroughs electric-drive bookkeeping machine in his bank and operates it by electricity made in his own plant. Riverton has a total population of only 583 inhabitants and does not boast either a city water plant or electric lighting station. Mr. Samuels has an up-to-date little bank. He lights it with electricity which he manufactures at his home several blocks away. He uses a gasoline engine connected to a 134 horse power dynamo. He runs this for several hours every day storing up enough electricity to light up his bank and his home, and to run his adding machine.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Sir Edmund Walker, on his way from Winnipeg to his home in Toronto, stopped in Minneapolis, viewed some of the "Made in Minneapolis" week exhibits on the principal retail streets, and studied the famous T. B. Walker art gallery. He said that Minneapolis looks better to him every time he comes. "I saw here to-day," he said, "what I believe to be the finest art collection in the world. It is very beautiful and Minneapolis is to be congratulated upon having it. Canada is very prosperous and so is this country. I am keeping away from business while here and am having a good time just looking around." In the party were John Aird, Toronto, assistant manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce; C. W. Rowley, manager at Winnipeg; R. A. Rumsey, inspector; Frank Patton, manager at Winnipeg for the Dominion Bank; F. L. Hankey, vice-president Northern Trust Company, Chicago. George F. Orde, vice-president of the First National, entertained at luncheon at the Minneapolis Club. F. A. Chamberlain and E. W. Decker were bankers present.

Hill Buys First National at St. Paul

Definite announcement was made by the St. Paul papers Wednesday that James J. Hill had bought the First National of that city. The directors, it is said, have agreed to accept the offer of less than $350 a share. One hundred and seventy-five stockholders will have to be consulted to close the deal. The officers of the bank are given as authority for the report. E. H. Bailey, president of the First, is slated to head the combination of the Second and First Nationals.

Bankers Quoted in Taft Advertisement

Bank men are quoted in a page advertisement for President Taft in local papers. F. M. Prince, president of the First National, said in part: "The country needs Mr. Taft. I think his re-election will be for the best interests of the business man, the merchant, farmer and the laboring man. Mr. Taft's record entitles him to re-election."

Joseph Chapman, vice-president Northwestern National: "We know that under the Taft administration there will be no tinkering with our fundamental laws. With either of the other candidates seeking the presidency we will be experimenting."

J. S. Pomeroy, cashier Security National: "I think it is to the best interest of this country to continue Mr. Taft as president. Mr. Wilson is to be preferred to Mr. Roosevelt. The election of Mr. Roosevelt would be a dangerous thing for this country. I believe the election of Mr. Taft would help continue present prosperity."

Otto Naegle, vice-president Metropolitan National: "I regard Mr. Taft as the logical candidate to succeed himself, in the interests of America and for the best interests of the American people."

W. F. Decker, vice-president St. Anthony Falls Bank: "Taft stock seems to be looking up and I feel hopeful that he will be re-elected."

Merchants National Opens Savings Department

The Merchants National has opened a savings department. President Kenneth Clark and Vice-president G. H. Prince said the advisability of the move had been considered a long time and recent developments in banking circles have had nothing to do with it. Mr. Prince has been investigating the best savings banks with the new move in view. Three per cent will be paid on deposits.

Attend Wisconsin Group Meeting

A. V. Ostrom, cashier of the Northwestern National, and P. G. Leeman, assistant cashier of the First National, attended the Group 5 meeting of Wisconsin bankers at Fort Atkinson.

Information Department Popular

This story is told: The information gentleman in the new coop the Northwestern National has established in the center of the bank floor is there to answer questions. This week two women, dressed to know better, asked whereabouts in the bank to stow an angora kitten they brought with them through the winter for safekeeping while they are in California. By mistake they picked out Joseph Chapman, vice-president, as the information man. He told them the safety deposit vaults are all full, failing to particularize.

West in Thriving Condition

Formerly unproductive valleys have been found growing wheat, by President F. A. Chamberlain of the Security National on a western trip. He said it is plain that Montana farmers are taking advantage of advanced farming methods, and are realizing heavily on their toil. He said also that Seattle, Portland and Vancouver are thriving cities. There is no further sign of apathy in Seattle.

Cotton from South Carolina on Exhibition

Robert I. Woodside, president of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank of Greenville, S. C., who attended the conference in Minneapolis in August of the bankers' committees on agricultural development and education, and who then said that South Carolina is a fine state and that he would send Minneapolis something to prove it, has forwarded samples of cotton in the boll, lint cotton, cottonseed oil and cotton seed meal, which are on exhibition at the Northwestern National Bank.

Going In for Athletics

Teams of fifteen members each from the clerical list of the Security National and the First National Banks have started contests in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. Baseball for indoors, basket ball and swimming count for points.

furnishing plant which it is proposed to construct on 3,000 acres of land abutting the Red Lake river in Minnesota. N. F. Hawley, treasurer of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank, Minneapolis, with W. G. New Bank at Westport

The State Bank of Westport, Minn., is authorized with $10,000 capital. C. M. Sprague is president and Louis Sittko is cashier. The Farmers' State of Currie, Minn., has incorporated with $20,000 capital. Incorporators are Theodore Zimmerman, G. A. Dummett, C. M. Hanson, of Sanborn, Iowa; Henry Paal, F. G. Bank to be Reorganized

Along lines suggested by the state superintendent of banks it is expected the State Bank of Commerce, Winnebago, Minn., will be reorganized. Depositors are expected to get the greater part of their money. Efforts are being made to identify a man arrested in Sacramento, Calif., as H. W. Parker, missing vice-president. It is said the man has between $25,000 and $30,000 on deposit in Los Angeles banks.

NEW BOOKS FOR FALL READING

John Lane & Co., New York, has issued a story by F. E. Mills Young entitled "Grit Ellis." Mr. Young is the author of a number of very successful novels. This latest offering is a story of South Africa, where, as in all new countries, men may go to retrieve the mistakes and the sins of their past lives. Such a man is Grit Lawless, cashiered from the army for cowardice, but redeeming himself afterward by his cool courage and grit. He undertakes to recover some incriminating papers for the English colonel, and does so eventually, after many dangers and failures. His wife, separated from him by eight years of silence and misunderstanding, has followed him to Cape Town. They meet, and the struggle is, on her part, to draw him back to an honorable life, and on his, to resist her efforts through pride and stubbornness. His final success in fulfilling his dangerous mission brings him near death, and she nurses him back to health and reconciliation.

"The Secret of the Clan," a story for girls, is by Alice Brown, illustrated by Sarah K. Smith. Imagine four girls of fifteen or thereabouts, a delightful grandmother with whom they live and who believes that young people should have some secrets and do things their own way, a governess who knows how to dance and how to get up amateur plays, an uncle who wants to appear gruff, but in reality loves the "imps," as he calls his nieces, and you have the fundamentals out of which Miss Brown's wholly absorbing story is built. The secret which the girls have and to which, following the custom of their improvised Indian tribe, they do not admit their grandmother, is the cause of all the trouble and it threatens to be serious trouble for a time. But it comes out happily in the end for every one concerned, particularly for Uncle Terry and the governess. Macmillan Company, New York, publishers.

"The Gulf Between" is from the press of the John C. Winston Co., Philadelphia, and is the dramatic revelation, by one "on the inside," of the married life of a beautiful American girl and an Italian nobleman. With fidelity to both American and Italian character, and with great dramatic power, the story depicts the girl's unrest—her jealousy—the counter-suspicion—the duel—rebellion—flight—and the final heart-driven awakening. One of the strongest novels of the year—a book everyone will read and talk about. This book will help create a better understanding among American girls as to what awaits them when they marry "foreign lords," even under fairly average circumstances.

Among recent works of fiction few possess the enchanting atmosphere which is present in J. E. Buckrose's "A Bachelor's Comedy," even before the close of the first chapter. Succeeding chapters do not belie this early promise of enjoyment, with the result that the last page is read with regret that there cannot be a second fruition of the comedy mingled with thankfulness that the book has come one's way. The Bachelor, filled with the enthusiasm of twenty-five to make his life count materially in the uplift of the world, was appointed vicar of a quiet English village. He was a gentle, timid soul, fearful of causing pain to another, and fortunately his lines were cast among kindly folk. Else there might never have been the story of his love. Published by George H. Doran & Co., New York.

GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON'S NEW STORY

"The Hollow of Her Hand," is the title of George Barr McCutcheon's latest novel, published by Dodd, Mead & Co., New York. The mystery story seems to capture every one sooner or later, and now this popular writer, having exhausted the imaginary kingdoms in Europe supplied with beautiful princesses, is the latest addition to the ranks of mystery writers. It is not an out-and-out detective story, or rather it is a detective story turned wrong side out, and instead of being obliged to follow up the trail we are in the secret and watch the rest of the world on the scent. Further, Mr. McCutcheon has conjured up the unique idea of having the widow of the murdered man rescue and protect the girl who struck the fatal blow. Out of this terrible coil grow, of course, many episodes and circumstances of dramatic value. Morally guiltless though Hetty Castleton may be, she still has committed murder; Booth's attitude toward her savors of the melodramatic. The revenge planned by Sara for her husband's family perhaps may be natural, but it is nevertheless repellent. And yet, somehow, the tale, throughout tensely effective, now and then intentionally scathing, takes firm hold of the heart strings, surpassing, thereby, certain of its highly successful predecessors frankly addressed to the mere emotions. And the end brings happiness.

PRIVATE BANK FAILS

"Gladstone (Mich.) Delta," in discussing the recent failure of the private bank of D. Hammel and Son of that place, makes the statement that the institution has been insolvent for years and that "its owner has been living upon receipts and not upon profits." Assets of the defunct bank amount to $55,000, of which $40,000 is real estate; liabilities total $180,782.

Los Angeles

A state-wide campaign was launched yesterday by the Los Angeles Realty Board against stock-selling corporations which fleece the public through the lure of advertisements promising the investors huge profits. The first step in the campaign will be the investigation of certain concerns in southern California, and plans were perfected this week for the prosecution of fraudulent companies. The real estate boards of San Francisco, Oakland, Sacramento, San Jose and other cities have signified their intention of co-operating.

Merchants National to Have New Home

Among the great building projects assured for the coming year is that of the new home of the Merchants National Bank on the northeast corner of Sixth and Spring Streets. Plans for the structure, which will be twelve stories in height, have just been completed and work of construction will begin immediately after the opening of 1913. It is the intention of those behind the project—and at the head of which are William H. Holliday and Marco H. Hellman, president and vice-president, respectively, of the Merchants National—to make a new record in skyscraper construction; and it is their confident expectation that within a year after ground is broken for the new building, the Merchants National will be installed in one of the largest and handsomest banking rooms in the world.

Bakersfield.—Geo. M. Mitchell, deputy of the state banking department in charge of the affairs of the defunct Kern Valley Bank, is quoted as saying that two more dividends of 10 per cent each will be made possible by the sale of bank property and other assets. This will leave only the Sunset Road Oil bonds and the proposed suit against the stockholders as possible sources of dividends to the depositors.

A branch of the Ocean Park Bank will be established in Venice, and will be opened Nov. 1st. It will be in charge of W. O. Bender, present cashier of the Ocean Park Bank. There is but one bank in Venice at present.

Bakersfield.—The merger of the Bank of Bakersfield into the Security Trust Co., through the purchase of the assets of the merged bank by the trust company, became effective Oct. 21st, when the consolidated banks opened for business in the quarters of the trust company. The aggregate assets are $2,909,829.90, and the deposits $2,554,109.61. The capital is $300,000. The officers are: President, G. J. Plantz; vice-presidents, H. R. Peacock, Dave Hirshfeld and D. L. Brown; secretary, J. A. Hughes; cashier, W. V. Matlack; assistant cashiers, E. B. Duncan and C. Wible.

BANK TO LIQUIDATE

Upon the decision of the directors and stockholders, the First State Bank, Middlesboro, Ky., has gone into liquidation and has been placed in the hands of the Kentucky Banking Commission. All depositors were paid off, and the stockholders will receive about 70 per cent. On account of some business failures in the last few months the bank had lost heavily, and rather than assess the stockholders for the amount of the loss decided to quit business.

NEW TEXAS BANK

The Guaranty State Bank of Mount Selman, Texas, is organizing with a capital stock of $10,000. C. T. Burton is president and H. W. Ferguson, cashier. J. S. Brock is vice-president, with the following named directors: Hood Melton, C. P. Linder, Johnnie Gardner, T. L. Wade, Dr. J. N. Bone, R. R. Warren, J. B. Rowe and J. G. Malcome. A new building is to be erected and the bank will open at an early date for business.

This makes two new banks recently organized in this county, the other bank being the Farmers State Bank and Trust Company of this place, with a capital stock of $50,000.

San Francisco

The San Francisco Chamber of Commerce special train carrying 100 representative San Francisco business men on a trade extension excursion to the northern counties, last Thursday visited the cities of Petaluma, Penn Grove, Glen Ellen, Kenwood, Sonoma and Napa, making a two-hour stop at Petaluma, an hour's stop at Sonoma and spending the evening at Napa, where a reception was given at the Chamber of Commerce in their honor.

The comptroller of the currency has issued charters to the Rideout, Smith National Bank of Oroville, Cal., capital $300,000, which succeeds the commercial department of state bank of Rideout, Smith & Co., and the First National Bank of Walnut Creek, Cal., capital, $25,000.

Redding.—Depositors in the defunct Bank of Shasta County at a meeting recently voted unanimously to recommend to State Superintendent of Banks Williams the acceptance of an offer made by Red Bluff stockholders. Holders of 387 shares expressed willingness to pay $25,280 to be relieved of all stockholders' liabilities. This offer was $5,000 higher than one made a month ago. Bank Superintendent Williams said that if the depositors approved he would ask the superior court for its official approval. This step now will be taken.

The Concord branch of the San Ramon Valley Bank opened its doors for business to-day. Guy E. Green will be cashier, and J. H. Coulter, assistant cashier.

Susanville.—John B. Spalding has been elevated from the position of vice-president to that of president of the Bank of Lassen County, succeeding John Cahlan, who died suddenly a few days ago. F. E. Humphrey has been elected to the board of directors.

WILL PAY TEN PER CENT

Superintendent George C. Van Tuyl, Jr., of the state banking department, announced Saturday that the 3,500 depositors in the failed Carnegie Trust Company will soon receive checks for the second dividend of 10 per cent. Supreme Court Justice Newburger has approved the petition made by Van Tuyl for authority to disburse moneys in the superintendent's hands.

Kilgore, Texas.—The Peoples Guaranty State Bank has been organized here with $15,000 capital. J. F. Gulp, G. A. Erwin, J. W. Brantly, J. F. Reynolds and L. T. Shotwell are interested.

Seattle

Vice-president James W. Spangler of the Seattle National Bank, has been notified of his appointment to the National Commercial Arbitration Committee, created by the National Association of Credit Men, with headquarters in New York. Mr. Spangler is the only member in the Pacific Northwest and the membership is limited. No questions involving fine points of law are to be considered by the committee in its efforts to arbitrate differences in business matters on financial disagreements. The function of the committee will be to determine facts in issues presented for adjustment and so far as possible reduce the volume of business that too often finds its way into the courts unnecessarily. Mr. Spangler has been one of the most active members of the National Association of Credit Men and the Seattle association.

BOSTON BANK MERGER

The merger of the Eliot National Bank with the National Shawmut of Boston has been effected. Some of the directors of the former institution will be invited to go on the Shawmut board. The deposits of the Shawmut on Wednesday of last week were $87,887,210, so that the addition of Eliot deposits will give the Shawmut nearly $98,000,000 deposits. Resources of the Shawmut will aggregate well over $110,000,000. This makes the sixteenth amalgamation for the Shawmut, its original formation in 1898 occurring through the consolidation of ten banks.

Commenting on the transaction, President Gaston, of the Shawmut Bank, says:

"It requires constantly larger sums to finance requirements of modern commerce. Boston, to compete with other cities, must have aggregations of capital in proportion. The Shawmut compares favorably in size and assets with any bank in the United States. The present addition still further improves its position.

"Competition among financial institutions has resulted in a rivalry which affects earning power, especially affecting smaller institutions. Returns of the comptroller show a wide difference in proportionate amounts earned by large and small banks. I believe that poor earnings of some smaller institutions are due to the modern method of offering any inducement to a possible depositor, regardless of the character of his account or its benefit to the institution. A bank ought to add to its surplus annually a fair amount, as protection to stockholders is often overlooked. I believe this is a temporary matter and will probably be rectified in the near future."

ANOTHER MASSACHUSETTS BANK MERGER

Gloucester, Mass., Oct. 28th.—The Gloucester Safe Deposit Company has purchased the business and good will of the City National Bank, of this city. This will make a banking institution with deposits of $4,000,000. The City Bank will be liquidated.

Conway, Ark.—The Farmers State Bank will open for business about December 1st. S. G. Smith of the Bank of Conway and Frank Harris of the same institution are interested.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, Oct. 28th.—Many things combine to make conditions in all lines of business unusually bright throughout the Spokane country. Coming closely after the beginning of activity on the $2,000,000 Davenport hotel is an announcement that the E. H. Stanton Packing Company of Spokane is having plans prepared for a ten-story cold storage plant, costing $100,000, to be built just east of Spokane. The company is preparing to store the ever-increasing fruit and vegetable crops of the Spokane country.

Another announcement of great importance is made by W. T. Beck, president of the Spokane & British Columbia Railway, who gives assurance that the road will be built. This will give Spokane another tidewater connection by way of the Spokane, Columbia and San Poil Valleys and over the Kettle Valley Railway, with connection through British Columbia to Vancouver, B. C.

Contracts have been let by the Idaho Portland Cement Company for construction of a $700,000 plant at Asotin, Wash. The company is financed by Spokane capital.

Clearing of Logged-off Lands

Bankers and investors are interesting themselves in the problem of financing the settlement and clearing of the 2,000,000 acres of logged-off lands in the territory tributary to Spokane. A plan is being considered for the enactment of a state law empowering county commissioners to create improvement districts, the land to be cleared with money raised by assessment.

Frank C. Paine, assistant secretary of the Union Trust & Savings Bank, is advocating the plan. "Logged-over lands near Spokane can be cleared for from $25 to $50 an acre," states Mr. Paine. "There should be no difficulty in selling ten-year bonds to pay for the improvement and the farmer with little capital could afford to go on the land, with assurance of ten years' help from the county."

A bill providing for putting the plan into effect will be introduced at the next session of the legislature and will be given strong support.

Investment Bankers Visit Spokane

Twenty eastern investment bankers passed through Spokane en route to the coast and Powell River, B. C., to inspect at the latter place the large paper plant, a concern in which the bankers hold $3,500,000 of bonds. The party will stop in Spokane October 27th, and will be entertained by the Spokane Clearing House Association. Members of the party are: G. B. Caldwell, vice-president Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago; J. L. Martin, manager Estabrook & Company; Walter A. Graff, vice-president McCoy & Company; Joseph W. Harris, salesman A. B. Leach & Company; Richard Fitzgerald, manager bond department, Hibernian Banking Association; George Leach, A. B. Leach & Company; Joseph W. Harris, salesman A. B. Leach & Company; E. A. Will Discuss Public Lands

Governors of every state in the Union have been invited to a conference in Spokane during the American Mining Congress, November 25th to 30th, to discuss the public lands and Alaskan questions. The call has been issued by Governor Marion E. Hay of Washington, supplemented by an invitation from Mayor William J. Hindley of Spokane. November 27th at the mining congress will be Governors' Day.

Large Realty Transfer

The largest realty transfer of residence property in Spokane was made when L. M. Davenport sold his beautiful home and grounds to R. B. Porter, railroad contractor, for a consideration of $155,000. The home and grounds occupy a tract of four acres on the hill south of the city. Mr. Davenport and his family will live in a suite of the $2,000,000 Davenport hotel after its completion.

Banking Notes

The Spokane Amateur Athletic Club will mortgage its property for $36,500 to retire $22,500 of outstanding bonds, issued to make improvements. Reports of officers show the club to be in a sound financial condition and on a paying basis.

The new Northern Pacific shops and roundhouse, three miles east of Spokane, will be ready for occupancy in sixty days. The improvements cost $500,000. Bids will be opened November 2d on the $3,000,000 grade separation project of the Northern Pacific in Spokane.

J. E. Ferris, of the bond department of the Union Trust and Savings Bank, left for Chicago and New York on an extended business trip in the interests of the bank. He will be absent from the city four or five weeks.

Frank S. Lusk, president First National Bank of Missoula, Mont., and Frank F. Johnson, cashier Boise National Bank of Boise, Idaho, were visitors in Spokane this week.

W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank, who is secretary of the farm educational committee of the Washington Bankers Association, has received the notices to be sent out announcing the assessments levied to carry on the work of his committee. Twenty-five hundred dollars will be raised. Each bank with a capital of $100,000 or less will pay $5. The banks up to $300,000 capital are assessed $10, and those over $300,000 will contribute $20 to the fund.

Silas Rich, formerly a teller in the U. S. National Bank at Salem, Ore., indicted for alleged defalcation, was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. The amount of the alleged defalcation is said to have been $3,000.

Articles of incorporation of the Corvallis (Ore.) State Bank have been filed with the secretary of state. The articles show a capitalization of $100,000. The incorporators are Punderson Avery, John Hyde, Frank Francisco, William Knotts and Thomas Whitehorn.

Des Moines, October 30th.—An interesting decision declaring that the bank deposit certificate is a negotiable instrument, was handed down by the supreme court of Iowa last week. The decision comes as the result of rather a peculiar chain of circumstances. It seems that a poker game was in progress at Cedar Rapids. Ralph Abbott invited Samuel Kushner to "sit in;" Kushner lost all of his money—$58. He wanted to continue in the game so he produced a certificate of deposit for $175 in the Commercial National at Cedar Rapids. A third man in the game raised the money to cash the deposit and the slip was turned over to Abbott. The next day Abbott cashed the certificate in the First National at Iowa City. In the meantime Kushner had gone to the Cedar Rapids bank, told the officials that he had given the certificate to pay a gambling debt for which he could not be held under the law and asked them not to make good on the certificate should it be presented by other than himself. But Abbott had the cash and insisted upon keeping it. Kushner went into court and both the district and supreme courts ruled against him.

Mechanics Savings in New Home

The Mechanics Savings is now in its pretty new home in Des Moines. The new building was thrown open to the many friends of the institution Saturday. Throughout the day there was a constant stream of visitors and Monday the stream was even more so. The new bank is on Fifth Street adjoining the Manhattan Bank in which the institution has made its home since it was organized by Gilger E. MacKinnon some years ago. The fixtures are of mahogany and run the length of the building. At the rear are the bookkeepers and clerks, while in the front is an enclosed balcony which will be used as a directors' room. One of the unique features of the structure is a thoroughly equipped dining room and kitchen, and each day the employees will be served with their meals therein. There is also a shower bath and a gymnasium equipment where the employees may exercise when they feel the need of it. Mr. MacKinnon has always made special efforts to impress upon his employees the importance of co-operation, and in this he has been most successful. The Mechanics Savings has always been conducted as if it were in the hands of a big family and the dining room idea is expected to serve useful purposes along this line.

New Ruling in Iowa Supreme Court

The Iowa supreme court has held that a husband who forges his wife's name to an obligation for payment of money is not committing a crime against the woman. Hence the wife cannot be forced to testify against him. J. I. Molyneaux of Mahaska county was before the grand jury on the charge of forgery. His wife, when shown instruments to which her name was signed along with that of her husband, refused to testify. The courts persisted in their efforts to force her testimony and upon her continued refusal ordered her cited for contempt. Greeks and Servians Withdraw Deposits

Iowa banks, in common with those of other states throughout the country, are feeling the effects of the Balkan situation in the loss of deposits. It has been estimated by Des Moines bankers that fully $20,000 has been drawn from the local institutions by Greeks and Servians. This money is used either to send home to the governments to aid them in financing their armies or to defray the expenses of the foreigners who are starting for their homes across the briny. In Davenport it is estimated that $18,000 has been withdrawn from the banks. Other Iowa cities report similar experiences in varying amounts. The accounts closed in Des Moines are estimated at practically 300.

Des Moines National to Add Third Story

Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National has discovered that the handsome building which that institution completed at Sixth and Walnut a few years ago is not large enough for the tremendously increased business of the institution. Accordingly, architects have been asked to prepare plans for a third story which will be added to the structure probably within the coming few months. It will be uniform with the building as it now stands and will be constructed of white terra cotta. The added room will be turned over to the mail department of the institution which has been trying to do an enormous business within the limited space allotted in the basement.

Death of Mrs. D. T. Denmead

Mrs. D. T. Denmead, widow of the late well-known president of the First National at Marshalltown, died suddenly last week of a paralytic stroke. She was fifty-two years of age and prominent socially. Her death was in some respects similar to that of her husband, who expired suddenly while in Cincinnati June 11, 1911.

Maurice Brown President Iowa Trust & Savings

The story of Maurice Brown, newly elected president of the Iowa Trust & Savings at Dubuque, is one that should prove an inspiration to every boy in Iowa. When Brown began his connection with the bank he was an errand boy. But as his worth became recognized he was constantly advanced. He has filled the minor offices in the institution and now at the age of forty years he is made president of one of the most substantial banks in the state.

Will Appeal to District Court

Trouble is still brewing at Guthrie Center in the Sunday war. Some days ago, A. D. Lemmon, president of one of the banks and a prominent druggist, was arrested and fined because he sold papers on Sunday. The arrest was the culmination of a war which started over the question of Sunday baseball. Last week, he was again arrested and hauled before the mayor. The latter held that it is a violation of the anti-Sunday opening ordinance to have the doors open on the Sabbath even though no goods were sold. Mr. Lemmon announces that he will appeal to the district court.

In Favor of Trained Specialists for Road Improvement

G. L. Tremain, one of the bankers at Humboldt, recently gave a most interesting interview to the Fort Dodge Messenger on the question of road making. Mr. Tremain is in favor of placing the road improvement of Iowa in the hands of trained specialists who will go at the business in a scientific manner that would insure results. Mr. Tremain believes that the governor should name for each county an engineer or person capable of taking charge of the work. This appointee would divide the county into districts. In each district there would be men employed who would work the roads and work them in proper manner. Mr. Tremain favors permanent roads in Iowa at the earliest possible date and regrets that in the many lines in which Iowa has progressed, the state has been slow to develop along the line of highway betterment.

Bank Merger at Iowa Falls

It is stated that a bank consolidation of importance is contemplated at Iowa Falls. The directors of the Home Savings and the Citizens Savings have for a year been working on a merger of these two institutions. A meeting of the stockholders has been called for November 17th. At that time it is anticipated that steps will be taken which will make these two institutions into one. It is planned to make the number of directors nine and the capital stock $50,000. It is said that some of those owning stock have holdings in both institutions and they consider the merger as a move along logical lines.

Creston May Buy Water Plant

E. W. Hart, representing the American Trust Company of Boston, has been conferring with residents of Creston relative to the waterworks company of that city which his company owns. The concern has suggested that the city buy the water plant and this offer was resumed by Mr. Hart at his visit. It is said there is a strong sentiment in Creston on the question and it is probable that the sale will be made.

Will Surrender Forger to Washington State

Secretary Hall, of the Iowa Bankers Association, has been having several experiences with Emery Salyards, alias E. Southern, who was recently returned from Denver to answer charges of forgery of $45 on the Mechanics Savings of Des Moines. Mr. Hall has learned that one of the Tacoma banks has a much better case against Salyards and the penalty in Washington is more severe, hence he has decided to surrender the prisoner to that state. In the meantime, the bank through which it is claimed $5,000 in forged paper passed at Tacoma has been trying to get possession of the 90-horsepower automobile in which Salyards and his wife were going across the country.

John Cavanaugh of the German Savings

Further announcement has been made of the proposed change in officials at the German Savings, Des Moines. It was stated some time ago that John Cavanaugh, well known among the young financiers of central Iowa, had become heavily interested in the institution and was made vice-president. Further announcement is made that at the annual meeting January 4th, he will probably be made president. It is expected that Jesse Wells will retire at that time. Mr. Cavanaugh, it appears, has purchased the 260 shares of the James Watt estate and John Hogan, the popular cashier of the institution, has purchased 100 shares held by C. Huttenlocher.

Files Suit Against Bank

An echo of the famous Mabry swindling cases bobbed up at Council Bluffs in the filing of a suit by James E. McGrath for $13,000, naming the First National of that city as defendant and alleging that he has not received the proceeds from a draft for $10,000 payable to him and lost by him at one of the Mabry lake athletic events five years ago. The petition charges the bank with conspiracy with the Mabry gang, a charge that has been made before but never proved. Officials declare that there is absolutely nothing in the suit and will oppose it with all the powers at their command.

Sioux City

BY JOHN J. BIDDISON

Sioux City banks are beginning to feel the demand of the country loans on crop moving and stock feeding, and this pull may be expected to develop rapidly within the next month, whichever way the market may go. The market situation in this territory is quite the reverse of what it was a year ago. Then it was high priced corn that acted as a deterrent factor in the cattle feeding business. Now it is the high price of feeders. There is the additional fact that corn prices are not yet as low as they might be expected to be in view of the record breaking yield; and, until it does take a marked drop, cattle feeders will be slow about venturing large amounts on high priced raw beer. Bankers, grain dealers and farmers are generally of the same opinion that corn will have to slump when the real movement starts, which it has not done yet on a large scale. The farmers don't need the money and would rather take a chance. When corn sells in large quantities, then feeders will too, and the High Cost of Living bogey in this vicinity may be expected to get a severe jolt. This is not saying, however, that the cost of high living will undergo any material change.

Iowa League of Commercial Clubs Meets

Lack of brains, or lack of common honesty, were named by commercial club secretaries of this state as the principal reason for the rejection of the vast majority of projects hopeful inventors or factory men present to business organizations, in a discussion here at the annual convention of the Iowa League of Commercial Clubs. The discussion arose from the presentation of a paper by C. O. Lamson, of Waterloo, on the relation of banks to industrial development. Waterloo has for several years engaged the attention of other cities of Iowa and near-by states because of the phenomenal record it has made at building up factories and many seekers after information have investigated the Waterloo plan, which in its last analysis is nothing more than a liberal investment of money in new concerns by Waterloo business men, backed by the liberal loan policy of Waterloo banks.

O. B. Towne, of Council Bluffs, voiced a general opinion at the round table, when he asserted that 95 per cent of the propositions that are put up to commercial clubs and kindred organizations are fakes in one way or another. Mr. Towne vigorously asserted that the average factory promoter not only lacks the intelligence to put over his proposition, but the honesty to deserve success. The average inventor, he added, is visionary, with very definite ideas about getting a fortune for his idea, but only hazy plans for putting a factory in going condition. For that reason, many of them end their existence in the bankruptcy courts.

Files Suit for Slander

Brougham Stevenson, former cashier of the Knox County Bank, of Verdigris, Neb., has brought suit against five fellow members of the Odd Fellows lodge of his home town, asking for $25,000 damages for alleged slanderous statements that he had misappropriated funds of the lodge. Charges were placed against him in the lodge and sustained, he says, and he lost his position.

South Dakota State Banks

Public Examiner Wingfield, of Mitchell, S. D., is making a report based on the South Dakota state bank call, issued September 4th, and which will be ready shortly. He is exceptionally well pleased with the conditions he has found in the state banks. A comparison of the June and September calls shows total deposits for September of $55,962,323.13, as compared with $51,934,783.62 an increase in round numbers of 44,000,000. The reserve cash in September was $17,393,046.66, and for June, $14,427,313.71. The undivided profits in September were $2194,568.10 and in June, $1,846,270.78.

D., to be known as the Bare Butte Valley Bank, with a capitalization of $25,000. It is hoped to have the bank in operation within sixty days.

The first dividend checks are being sent out to the depositors of the defunct Meade County Bank, of Sturgis, S. D., which could not stand the disaster of two crop failures and overloans. It went to the wall last January. These first dividends are on a 10 per cent basis. Another similar dividend is expected to be made by the end of this year.

REMARKABLE GROWTH OF A NEW BANK

Monday, October 28, 1912, North West State Bank was seven years old, it having been established as a private bank, under the name of North West Savings Bank, Joseph R. Noel, proprietor, October 28, 1905. The building at the northwest corner of Milwaukee and North Avenues, which it owns and occupies, was not acquired by it until February, 1906. The bank moved from its temporary location on West North Avenue to quarters on the second floor of its own building in April of that year. May 27, 1906, it moved downstairs and occupied quarters on the ground floor, which were subsequently extensively enlarged to care for the requirements of its growing business. It was incorporated as a state bank January 26, 1909,

NORTH WEST STATE BANK BUILDING

JOSEPH R. NOEL
Chicago
President North West State Bank

and began business under the new name (North West State Bank) February 1, 1909, with Mr. Noel as its president, in which capacity he continues to serve.

Though there are nearly a score of banks now doing business in that section of the city, North West State Bank, with one exception, is the oldest northwest side banking institution which has remained under the same continuous control since it was established.

Before he established his bank Mr. Noel thoroughly canvassed the situation in the neighborhood. Among the business men it was almost the universal opinion that there was not enough business in this section of the city to sustain a bank, but Mr. Noel had faith in the northwest side and established his bank as above noted. Viewed with suspicion and almost distrust at the start, and notwithstanding it encountered a few experiences of unusual severity early in its career, this bank has shown continuous and steady growth from the beginning and to-day it numbers over 8,000 customers in all its departments, with deposits exceeding one and one-half million dollars. When it began business in 1905, the total deposits of all northwest side banks then in existence was less than four million dollars. At the present time the total deposits of the banks in this section of the city exceed twelve million dollars.

MATERIAL DECREASE IN COUNTERFEITING

Washington D. C., Oct. 31st.—Counterfeiting materially decreased in this country during the fiscal year 1912.

John E. Wilkie, chief of the United States secret service, ascribing the improvement largely to an era of prosperity, to-day announced in his annual report that the representative value of spurious notes and coins circulated during the year was $39,000, the lowest since 1907.

Counterfeits during 1911 totaled $49,000, exclusive of $156,000 in foreign currency, while the high record year was 1910 when more than half a million dollars' worth of imitations were seized by the secret service.

"It has been noted," said Chief Wilkie, "that any extended period of good times is marked by a decline in the activity of criminals who specialize in counterfeiting. When legitimate work is easily obtained there is less inducement to resort to illegitimate pursuits, with the attendant risk of personal freedom."

There were 324 counterfeiters arrested during the year, while the record of 1911 was 410. Of these, 244 were Americans. Italians led the foreigners with thirty-five. New York headed the list of states with forty counterfeiting cases. Illinois and Pennsylvania tied for second place with thirty-three each, while Ohio had twenty-three cases.

Inability to obtain a sufficient amount of money with which to carry the crops is given as the occasion for the assignment.

WILL CALIFORNIA GO DEMOCRATIC?

Says the San Francisco Chronicle:

The Bull Moose movement in this state is a thing of shame, and the multitude of the honest who were deluded into it are silent in the face of universal detestation and contempt.

And, as it stands to-day, the Taft Republicans will join with the LaFollette Republicans in voting for Wilson as the certain way, not only to rebuke, but to punish, political infamy.

GROUP 4, OHIO

Washington, C. H., Ohio, October 29th.—The annual meeting of Group 4 of the Ohio Bankers Association was held here to-day, 100 bankers from various parts of southern Ohio being present. Chairman O. M. Sams, of Hillsboro, presided. An address of welcome was delivered by Humphrey Jones, president of the Peoples and Drovers Bank, of this city. In his address Mr. Jones talked of the initiative and referendum, taking a strong stand against it. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention. D. L. Spetnagle, of Chillicothe, responded to the address of welcome.

At the banquet A. P. Sandles, secretary of the Ohio Department of Agriculture, urged the bankers to do all in their power to assist the farmers in improving present conditions and methods. He spoke of the importance of farmers and their sons and hired help attending the farmers' institutes that will this winter be held, two in each county of the state.

The Carriage—A Vital Part of the Wonderful Burroughs Visible

Don't be misled by generalities in adding machine advertising and selling. Get specific facts and comparisons on specific points.

Particularly notice the carriage construction, for the carriage makes or mars adding machine convenience and visibility.

The carriage of the Burroughs Visible is so arranged that it gives greater visibility of printing with less effort by operator than any other adding machine in the world.

Note the points of superiority indicated by the arrows.

These are exclusively Burroughs points.

Remember that Burroughs Visible Machines are built in the Burroughs Factory, of the same material, with the same wonderful machine tools, and by the same workmen who have built a reputation for lifetime service into other Burroughs machines.

The Burroughs Factory is not a new one, built just to make this onetype of machine. It has been running 20 years and even the first adding machines turned out are still in use.

The Burroughs reputation and prestige are being built into every one of these machines and every word of the Burroughs Guarantee and of the Burroughs Service pledge goes with every machine.

Taft or Mr. Wilson or Mr. Roosevelt is elected to the presidency, the business public goes on its way, getting and spending and laying plans for new ventures, while trade and commerce are expanding into greater volume than at any time within five years."

IN California, of course, the issue is between Wilson and Roosevelt. Taft was kept off the ticket by the fair (?) minded Johnson and his fellow bull moosers.

REPUBLICANS in California who do not favor Roosevelt must vote for Wilson or be disfranchised. Fine example of the Colonel's square deal when he has the power.

UNSEATING questionable delegates is much less of a crime than the disfranchisement of an entire party in a state.

THE Pacific states are showing remarkable growth in banking resources. In growth of nationals they lead the country, showing nearly half (44%) of the total increase for all the states over a period of four years.

THE south comes second with 29% and the middle west shows 15%; New England and the Eastern states are much below 10%. "New business" representatives will please note.

SAN FRANCISCO, in capital, surplus and undivided profits of nationals, surpasses both St. Louis and Kansas City. It leads, also, Denver, Salt Lake City, Seattle, Spokane, Tacoma, Portland and Los Angeles combined.

W. J. KOMMERS of Spokane, traveling out on a scouting expedition for the Twohy banks, spent a couple of days in Chicago this week. He was investigating the systems of bank management in a number of the leading institutions.

THE previous week had been spent almost entirely in Minneapolis and St. Paul and Mr. Kommers was very much impressed with the efficiency of the organizations there. Altogether he has devoted about one month to this particular subject with a view to preparing a plan for adoption in the Old National, the Union Trust and Savings and in another institution in which Mr. Twohy is largely interested.

THE OLD NATIONAL long has been considered a leader in its field, but this is not quite satisfactory to Mr. Kommers. He wishes to adopt every improved method which is applicable to the banking business in Spokane. In the past ten years, twenty-five young men have graduated from the Old National into other institutions in the Northwest, and it is Mr. Twohy's idea that if he is to continue supplying qualified bankers to other institutions, he must have the very latest banking curriculum.

MR. TWOHY himself was in Chicago on Monday, making a hurried trip to New York on a business matter. He just missed meeting Mr. Kommers at the Continental and Commercial National by a very few minutes.

MR. KOMMERS gave it as his idea that after having investigated the banking systems of some of the smaller places, as well as those of Minneapolis, St. Paul, Milwaukee and Chicago, a continuation of his trip toward the eastern coast was quite unnecessary. He was greatly impressed with the new bank buildings being erected in Milwaukee by the Marshall and Ilsley Bank and the First National.

J. A. WARD of the Cleveland (Ohio) National wrote a funny story about balancing pass books in a bank and it came under the eagle eye of E. St. Elmo Lewis.

MANY of the brilliant thoughts of Mr. Ward were just so many boosts for the Burroughs, and the humorous tale has been illustrated and bound in a vest-pocket edition (2x4 inches) for free distribution.

THE title used is "Reconciling an Individual Account," and the banker who asks for a copy will be well entertained.

THE big, husky captain of the Maroons (Chicago University) is a son of Henry M. Carpenter, one of the new members of the Big Council from Iowa.

IT is reported that as a result of friendly correspondence between Ingwersen and Heinsheimer, the latter will be a candidate this, and Ingwersen next, year, for the presidency of the Iowa Bankers Association.

FRIENDS of the two have been quite active arranging it so that there may be no complications. It was due and coming to Ingwersen, but he did not wish to go out against Mr. H., who is one of the patriarchs of the organization. It isn't likely that any other candidate will appear, and it will go off like Mr. Shade's election this year.

THE administrative committee of the A. B. A. did not meet on Monday in St. Louis, as expected. Col. Farnsworth was called to Duluth on urgent business.

THE new $1,000,000 stock in the Old Colony, at Boston, was taken by the stockholders of record on record time. The distribution price was 150.

EDMUND BILLINGS is president of the reorganized Paul Revere Trust Co., Boston. J. H. Turnbull, formerly with the Federal, and James Jackson, late of Lee Higginson & Co., are vice-presidents.

TO all those papers which thoughtlessly printed "unauthorized" interviews saying he intended to retire, George M. Reynolds, from his retreat at the Marlborough-Blenheim, Atlantic City, has written to say:

"I HAVE no intention whatever, upon the completion of our new building, to retire from the presidency of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago to take the chairmanship of the board. On the contrary, I expect, my present good health permitting, to continue as president and active manager of that bank for many years to come. While I have had a short illness, I am well again and will be at my desk early in November as strong as ever."

BYRON W. MOSER of St. Louis, president of the A. I. B., was presented with a silver loving cup by the chapter boys who landed him in the spot-light.

PITTSBURGH clearings last week were over sixty-seven millions, the record by several.

W. D. VINCENT writes that the "farmers' cocktail," popular at Detroit, was made "official" at the dry farming congress at Lethbridge.

"THE committee of One Hundred," Chicago, after "months of consideration," recommends no one but straight republicans for election, and not all of them. Deneen only on the state ticket. Will that help him? We bet not!

YES, and the neglected candidates cashed up about $2,000 each for "expenses." Probably the democrats and moose did not contribute. Too much McCormick in this way of doing things.

DAVID R. FORGAN, president of the National City Bank of Chicago, will be one of the speakers at the eighth annual banquet of the Canadian Club of New York, which will be held at the Hotel Astor November 12th. Mr. Forgan will speak on "How to Avoid Another Panic."

COL. J. J. SULLIVAN of Cleveland, spoke on "Should National Banks Loan on Real Estate." Every one is agreed that the colonel made a very masterful address, and as is his custom, avoided committing himself.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK of Cleveland has compiled statistics showing the growth of national banks in Cleveland since 1890. From this source it is learned that Cleveland's seven national banks are $31,000,000 richer in deposits than were the fifteen national banks in existence twelve years ago.

MRS. C. E. BATCHELLER, president of the First National at Fingal, N. D., was elected a member of the executive board of the women's congress recently held in conjunction with the International Dry Farming Congress at Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada. Mrs. Batcheller is to represent the state of North Dakota on the board. This is a further tribute to her ability as a business woman, and her work will reflect credit not only upon herself, but upon North Dakota and the organization which she is serving.

NEW YORK papers have announced a big merger including the Fourth, the Mechanics & Metals and the Bank of New York, with James G. Cannon at the head of it. Resources would show the magnificent total of $186,000,000.

MR. CANNON is a far outstanding figure in New York banking circles, engaging in many important things outside of his profession. The Bank of New York is the oldest in the state, having been organized by Alexander Hamilton.

A NUMBER of newspaper men have formed the nucleus of an organization to be known as the "Glacials." One of its objects is to promote the teaching of the history of the Northwest to the school children throughout the country. President Taft will be asked to recommend that one day, to be known as "See America Day," be set apart each year.

THE "Glacials" will include in its membership newspaper men throughout the states. This is one of a number of movements to give greater recognition to the Northwest as a factor in the history of our country. Many of the text-books in history studied in our schools are deficient in this respect. A book has recently been published, however, by Houghton Mifflin Company that gives great attention to this important part of the country.

E. G. McWILLIAM, secretary of the savings bank section, A. B. A., has issued a little tract on "Finger Prints Proven Practical." If you didn't get one, write to 5 Nassau St., New York.

SECRETARY FRANKLIN MACVEAGH said at the Union League Club meeting in Philadelphia that "the so-called Progressive party is perhaps the least progressive party in the campaign."

A DAM BEDE told the same audience which listened to Mr. MacVeagh that "T. R. where he is really known doesn't stand any more chance than a bow-legged girl does in the town where she was raised."

OF course Perkins only is vice-chairman of the membership committee of the Ananias Club, but he handled the rushing business while the Colonel was ill very beautifully.

The CHICAGO BANKER

A Weekly Paper Devoted to the Banking and Financial Interests of the Middle West

NOVEMBER 9, 1912

Entered as Second-Class Matter January 15, 1903, at the

10 CENTS A COPY

George E. Roberts

George E. Roberts, director of the United States mint and former president of the Commercial National of Chicago before its merger with the Continental, is in the city and renewed friendships in the financial district during the week. According to Mr. Roberts, the country is on the eve of great prosperity, growing out of abundant crops. Politics, he declares, will have little effect under these conditions.

J. B. FORGAN SAYS BUSINESS INTERESTS WILL NOT BE AFFECTED

J. B. Forgan, president of the First National Bank of Chicago, sees no cause for alarm in the triumph of the democrats. He says that business already is on too firm a foundation to be disturbed by the change in administration.

MONEY MARKET HELD FIRM

Money in Chicago ruled firm during the week around 6 per cent, although it is understood that a few choice loans were made on a $5\frac{3}{4}$ basis. Funds are fairly abundant, but bankers still believe that crop requirements will call for considerable sums and the rate will not go down much from the 6 per cent basis the remainder of the year.

PEORIA BANKER REPORTS PROSPEROUS CONDITIONS

William C. White, president of the Illinois National, Peoria, Ill., says that business conditions are satisfactory in the Peoria district and that there is a strong demand for money. Mr. White is secretary of Group 2, and one of the popular and well-known bankers of the state. He also is secretary and treasurer of the Peoria Clearing House.

HENRY S. HENSCHEN ON THE ELECTION

Henry S. Henschen, cashier of the State Bank of Chicago, says:

"I do not believe that the election of a democratic president will hurt the business of the country any. I think that the democrats will be inclined to be conservative and not pass any legislation of a detrimental tendency. I am of the opinion that business is on such a firm basis that it will not be disturbed. At any rate, present prosperity should continue for at least six or eight months. It is possible that President-elect Wilson may call a special session of congress in March. Of course, it is difficult to predict as to this. I do not believe that the democrats, however, will do anything which will prove prejudicial to the present good times."

STOCKYARDS SAVINGS BANK

The Stockyards Savings Bank of Chicago has increased its dividend rate to 12 per cent per annum by the declaration of a dividend of 3 per cent for the last quarter.

Nelson N. Lampert, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National, returned to the city this week from Excelsior Springs, Mo.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

WE know a fellow who has been carrying around a lot of Canadian coin ever since the Detroit convention. He's afraid to try to spend it lest the cops working on the New Westminster (B. C.) bank robbery hear about it.

IT was poor arithmetic and perhaps just as poor politics for the moosers to continue to advertise that a vote for Deneen was half a vote for Dunne, while the republicans were charging that a vote for Funk was half a vote for Dunne also.

CAN'T you see the argument implied:—all democrats giving Dunne a full vote and everybody else giving him half votes made it a cinch prediction.

THE Turk paused only for a moment on his way in from Saloniki to remark that "its hard to beat four kings."

SO the McNamaras from their cells in San Quentin are plotting the death of the boss detective, Wm. J. Burns. Really they didn't get the right sentence.

THE Kirby private bank which failed in Chicago on Saturday last creates a new record for such affairs in this city. There were found in the safe, in actual money, $206. For this the "proprietor" was sent to a sanitarium.

THE copper said "He's crazy, sure. No private banker in his right mind would leave any money in the safe when he could just as well take it with him."

J. W. HOOPES of Galveston, secretary of J. Texas Bankers Association, is right glad that we "furnished the country address of G. M. Reynolds so that new arrivals might be reported direct."

IT was a girl and is named "Wilfreda Hoopes" after J. Wilfred, the papa. You know now why everyone in Texas calls him "Fred" Hoopes—it's a part of Wil-Fred—see?

MR. HOOPES wrote: "I appreciate the copy of your great religious weekly, giving in advance Mr. Reynolds' address, so there was no delay in my notifying him promptly."

MR. REYNOLDS is home, got in in time to vote and is "feeling fine." Was at the bank bright and early on Wednesday morning and wishing the new president well.

"THE PENNSYLVANIA BANKER" is the latest of the new ones. It is published in Philadelphia.

DEATH of Eugene R. Hallett, member of the firm of Louis Sloss & Co., San Francisco, is announced. He was an important figure in Pacific Coast financial affairs.

F. W. ELLSWORTH is of the analytic type. He reasons from cause to effect. When asked about the detail of the big railroad wreck in which Fred's car was about the only one not smashed up, he sat down and carefully prepared this:

"THE accident occurred a few miles west of Middlepoint, Ohio, on a level track, and it is difficult to understand what could have been the cause. Incidentally the Cubs won six to five that day."

J. N. DOLLEY as banking commissioner has issued, under his "Blue Sky" law, only 83 licenses to sell securities out of 1500 applications. Some supervision about that.

S. W. STRAUS tells us that interest on money has decreased steadily, until some ten years ago it reached its lowest point. At that time, some railroads and municipalities were able to borrow money on bond issues at as low a rate as 3½%, and sell these bonds to investors at par.

HE calls attention to the fact that during the last few years there has come a reaction. The increased cost of living, the increased demand for capital, and the increased supply of the world's gold, have caused interest rates to increase again. Now, 4% railroad bonds of unquestionable safety are selling well below par. Four and a quarter per cent bonds of New York City are a fraction above 99.

OTTO J. KRAMPIKOWSKI figures that bank clerks waste or destroy on an average five cents worth of stationary per day. They use envelopes and letter heads instead of scratch pads, etc.

"THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK of Wilburton, Oklahoma, failed and the national bank inspector found a shortage of $56,646.06. The bank was considered one of the strongest and safest in that county."

"THE officers were considered the most substantial business men in town; now, it failed and the poor labor depositors' life's savings are exhausted. Compare this to the guaranty state banks of Oklahoma, and decide for yourself which bank is safest for you to deposit your money in."

ABOVE two paragraphs are from the "Sallisaw Star" and show how public guaranty sentiment is kept alive in Oklahoma by the newspapers.

E. G. McWILLIAM of the savings bank section is keeping after the campaign of education feature passed upon at Detroit.

IN Illinois the work is in charge of President Jos. R. Noll of the North West State bank and vice-president of the section for Illinois. Get in touch with him.

THE plan will be to first educate the public in the necessity for thrift and the elimination of extravagance, the start to be made by seeking the establishment of the school savings bank in every city of any size, supplementing same with educational advertising individually or by communities, together with any other methods which, in the judgment of the committee, will be most effective among the people.

MIKE A. BRIGHT and other stockmen are organizing a new bank at the National Stock Yards, East St. Louis.

EDWARD R. TINKER, JR. of Rhoades & Co. has been elected a vice-president of the Chase National bank of New York. He succeeds Albert H. Wiggen, who some time ago was advanced to the presidency of the institution.

SHIPMENTS of currency like prosperity "follow the flag." As Chicago balances increase so must the shipments in crop times.

AT Scutari the Turks again decided it was time to scoot.

THROUGH Miss Editor Riddle of the Texas Bankers Record we are pleased to know that Texas bankers appreciate any courtesy paid Ex-president Hamby. They're a loyal crowd from the Oklahoma line clear to the gulf.

FRANCIS MORRISON, the Cleveland expert, has sent out a booklet showing interior views of the factory where he dopes up the bank ads.

PRESIDENT JOHN D. PHILLIPS of the Illinois Bankers Association has appointed his committee on agriculture, with B. F. Harris chairman, W. G. Edens secretary, and with Shuman, Ward and Gridley to complete the number.

Woodrow Wilson Well Prepared for the Presidency

THE CHICAGO BANKER began to be for Wilson three years ago when he delivered his wonderful address to the delegates of the American Bankers Association convention in Denver. No speaker ever so impressed bankers so well and in every poll of bankers, prior to the election, Wilson was a winner by a large plurality. There is some pride, then, in presenting a summary of Governor Woodrow Wilson's strong equipment to give the American people an administration rivaling any in history. Woodrow Wilson has been schooling himself, perhaps unconsciously, but nevertheless carefully and studiously, for forty years for the exalted office he will assume on March 4th next. There has never been a closer student of American political affairs since Hamilton and Madison. There is nothing about Congress or the White House that will take him greatly by surprise. At the age of twenty-nine he had written a college thesis that showed him to be even at that time one of the keenest analysts of the national legislature the country ever had. And in later years he turned his sharp scrutiny upon the White House and wrote the most informing and illuminating treatise of the powers and limitations of the president that has ever been published.

Aside from these special investigations, his whole life has been a long and exhaustive study of the American people in their social and political relations, as, indeed, were those of his forebears.

His grandfather, James Wilson, was born in Ireland. He emigrated to America about a century ago and settled in Philadelphia. This city was the capital of the United States at that time. One of the leading Philadelphia papers of that period was the "Aurora," Thomas Jefferson's personal organ. James Wilson, being a printer, obtained employment on the "Aurora." Also being a hard-working, thrifty man, he acquired ownership of the paper and became intimately acquainted with Jefferson.

But the rapidly growing West began to cast its spell over James Wilson, and accordingly, in 1820, or thereabouts, he moved to Steubenville, Ohio, where he founded the "Western Herald." He soon became a power in the Democratic party in Ohio, and was known throughout the state as "Judge" Wilson.

Father Began His Career As a Teacher

It was here, amid these surroundings of hardy and vigorous pioneer life, that Joseph R. Wilson, the father of the president-elect, was born and grew to manhood. Joseph R. Wilson began his career as a teacher, first in an academy, then in Jefferson College, then in Hampden-Sydney College. His natural taste, however, was for the ministry, and after careful preparation he stepped into the Presbyterian pulpit. About this time he married

Has been a lifetime student of government and history and their most noted and successful teacher. Duties and powers of the president and of the co-ordinate branches of government completely understood

Janet Woodrow, daughter of the Presbyterian minister at Chillicothe, Ohio. She has been described as a remarkably pretty and charming woman. She was born in Carlisle, England, but her father came to America when she was but a few days old.

Woodrow Wilson was born in Staunton, Va., in 1856. It was during Christmas week, and the cheer of that occasion has never left him. He will be the eighth occupant of the White House from the Old Dominion.

About two years after Woodrow Wilson's birth, his father accepted a call to the pastorate of the Presbyterian Church of Augusta, Ga. This was at that time one of the most influential congregations in the South and the elder Wilson remained as its pastor throughout the Civil War. He was recognized as one of the leading divines of the South.

The elder Wilson did not force the education of his son. He took him on journeys about the city, visiting factories and explaining to him how cloth is made. He also read to him by the hour.

But the boy himself did not learn to read until long after the average age when children are supposed to read. This is rather remarkable when one thinks of the omnivorous appetite for books the president-elect has always had. But when he did learn to read he more than made up for lost time. He is, at the present time, one of the most widely read men in this or any other country.

In the autumn of 1870, the Wilsons moved to Columbia, S. C., and three years later Woodrow, who was then seventeen, began his scholastic career at Davidson College.

Wanted to Be Authority on Government

He devoted all his energy and every faculty he possessed to the furnishing and training of his mind to the end that he might be an authority on government and history of government and be a leader in the affairs of his country. No man ever subjected himself to sterner discipline or worked more steadfastly toward a fixed goal. He first taught himself to write shorthand in order that he might make rapid digests of what he read and heard. He also practiced composition assiduously and extemporaneous speaking that he might be skilled and ready in offhand debate.

In September, 1875, Woodrow Wilson entered the freshman class at Princeton. There were 133 young men in the class. Before the war Princeton had been the most favored northern college by the young men of the South, but after the war their numbers began to fall off, and at the time Woodrow Wilson enrolled only a few of the students hailed from south of the Mason and Dixon line.

The next president is a man who instinctively balks at doing things simply because they have been done before. From his earliest youth he has insisted upon his own personality and individuality. At the time he entered Princeton that institution was just one of the educational mills. Young Wilson refused to sit snugly in the groove and be ground out. He had not been at Princeton long before he found out just what he wanted to do. And that thing was to be a public man; to devote his life to the service of his country.

This determination came with a thrill upon reading in an English magazine a series of articles on the British parliament, presenting in graphic language the dramatic scenes enacted in the British legislature. He never forgot the picture. He hunted up everything in the library he could find bearing upon this subject, and devoured it, and from that day to this has never wavered in his determination to play an active part in the stirring scenes on his country's political stage.

Mr. Wilson began his preparation at once. He subordinated his regular college work to the task of fitting himself for public life.

In those days he was not remarkably ready in extempore speaking. To-day he is without a peer in the nation in the art.

During the first year at Princeton Wilson joined "Whig Hall," the literary debating society founded by James Madison, who also wrote its constitution. Its rival society at Princeton was "Clio Hall," and the annual Lynde debate and extemporaneous discussion, the subject to be given to the debaters a few minutes before the debate was to begin, was the biggest thing in a literary way at the college. Young Wilson very soon established himself as the leading spirit of the "Whig Hall" society and was easily its best debater. To win this annual debate, in which three representatives from each of the two halls participated, was the thing that Wilson coveted most. Each hall selected its debaters by a preliminary contest within its own society—also an extemporaneous affair.

On the evening of the preliminary contest the subject was "Protection vs. Free Trade." The debaters took sides by lot. Wilson drew the "protection" side from the hat, tore up the slip and returned to his seat. He said nothing under heaven could induce him to advance arguments for a thing in which he did not believe. Lynde prize therefore went to some one else.

Wilson did not shine with any great effulgence in his regular college course. He stood forty-first in a class of 122. This was the fa-

His Article on Congress Starts Public Thought

About this time his natural aptitude for leadership began to crop out, and before his first year was over he was universally recognized at Princeton as the leading freshman and one of the master spirits of the entire student body. He later became managing editor of the "Princetonian," and when he was graduated his classmates looked to him to rise higher than any of them. While at Princeton he wrote a searching article on Congress, which at once stamped him as a youth of extraordinary caliber. This article was published in the International Review and in it the young Princetonian pointed out that most of the legislative business of the nation was carried on by small committees behind closed doors. This was the first time the matter had ever been brought home to the people of the country and it started them to thinking.

Wilson made the point that the nation's business ought to be done in the open, ought to be thrashed out in public discussion. Even at that early day he lifted his voice against secrecy. He declared that was the atmosphere in which evil and corruption flourished and that the only remedy was publicity.

After leaving Princeton Woodrow Wilson went to the University of Virginia, that great institution of liberal learning founded by Thomas Jefferson. He spent a year there studying in the law department under the able guidance of Dr. John B. Minor.

At the University of Virginia Wilson was also a leader. He took a more active interest in sports; joined the glee club; he organized a debating society and easily won both the writer's and the orator's prizes. Here also he acquired the reputation of being a great joker. He composed nonsense rhymes and limericks with wonderful facility. And to this day he is fond of a witty limerick.

In this love for wholesome nonsense and his keen, dry humor, Mr. Wilson is very much like Lincoln. He further resembles the great liberator in his perfect simplicity and his democracy.

Young Wilson had taken up the study of law, recognizing it as the most direct avenue leading to a public life. As soon as he had completed his studies at Charlottesville, he went to Atlanta to launch his legal career. He joined partnership with a young man who also had just completed his college work. Renick was his name, and the shingle of "Renick & Wilson" was swung out at 48 Marietta Street.

Gives Up Law, Returns to University

But the young men were strangers in Atlanta. Moreover, there were many lawyers there and moreover again, nearly every one had a relative practicing law.

However, it wasn't so sad as one might think, this waiting for clients to turn up, because, while he is the waiting kind, he invariably works while he waits. And so he found time to elaborate the article he had written while at Princeton, into a book. But he was unable to find in Atlanta the facilities he needed to complete the volume, so in the autumn of 1883 he entered Johns Hopkins University and took up a course in history and political economy under the late Herbert B. Adams and Dr. Richard T. Ely.

In making his investigations Wilson desired nothing but the facts. His researches were prodigious and Ambassador James Bryce found him of great assistance while he was compiling his "American Commonwealth." The result of Wilson's two-year work at Baltimore was his book, "Congressional Government: Study of the Government by Committee."

It was the first account ever given of the way Americans actually do govern themselves. The book met with instant success. It was at once recognized as a final, standard work, and is so recognized to-day.

After receiving his degree at Johns Hopkins, Dr. Wilson was called to a professorship in the new college for women at Bryn Mawr.

However, he took advantage of his vacation that summer to journey to Savannah, Ga., and marry Miss Ellen Louise Azson, the daughter of a long line of Georgia clergymen. In the autumn the young professor and his bride started housekeeping in one of the prettiest towns along what is called the "main line" out of Philadelphia.

The trustees of Princeton, finding the chair of jurisprudence and politics vacant in the autumn of 1890, at once turned to the now distinguished alumnus of Old Nassau and offered him the chair. He accepted with pride and joy.

Becomes the President of Princeton

For the next twelve years, 1890 to 1902, Dr. Wilson lectured to his classes at Princeton, worked on his history, "A History of the American People," and added daily to his reputation at home and abroad. Princeton had never before seen anything like his classes. His lectures were so popular that nearly every student wanted to take his course. It was a daily occurrence for the members of his class to rise to their feet at the conclusion of his lecture and cheer him to the echo until he had passed out of hearing. In 1902 Dr. Wilson was elected president of Princeton. A change was sadly needed in the administrative affairs of the university and the trustees recognized Dr. Wilson as the man to effect it. But he had hardly assumed his new office before he found himself confronted with a situation that was most trying to him.

Princeton had been called a country club for rich men's sons. However much or little it deserves this appellation, the fact remains that it possesses more exclusive clubs than any other great institution in the country. There is a whole street of them and yet their total membership is confined to 350. These clubs are composed exclusively of the two upper classmen. This caddish aristocracy, abhorrent to the American spirit and equally abhorrent to President Wilson had flourished at Princeton for years until that institution was little more than a lounging place for the gilded sons of the rich. Dr. Wilson went in to change the whole thing. He proposed the establishing of the students on quadrangles and "Quads," each one to be composed of a certain number of students from each class, together with preceptors. In other words, he tried to inject democratic spirit into the university life.

But his efforts went for naught. An old graduate of Princeton died and left the college $3,000,000 for a Graduate College, to be built away from the main building, just as the other donor had wished, and because the man was dead his wishes had to be obeyed and President Wilson was defeated.

Is Elected Governor of New Jersey

But his splendid stand for democracy and work at Princeton was not overlooked by the people of New Jersey, and so they called him away from the irksome affairs at the university to be their governor, and thus launched him upon a political career which for brilliance and rapidity of fine achievements is unparalleled in this country. Mr. Wilson was elected governor of New Jersey by a plurality of about 50,000. The platform on which he ran contained much that is called radical and up to this time the governor had been regarded as conservative. But he stood square on the platform and dedicated all his energies and abilities to the carrying out of every pledge contained in that platform.

As a natural consequence he at once found himself opposed by the reactionaries in the legislature, members of his party as well as others. But the masterful manner with which the new governor held the legislators to the party pledges in spite of everything they could do affords one of the most interesting chapters in American politics.

The most serious clash between the will of the governor and the will of the reactionaries in the legislature was over the primary election law, commonly called the Geran act.

Those who have kept an eye on New Jersey politics will recall the dramatic, although quiet, entrance of Governor Wilson into the caucus of the Democratic members of the legislature who had gathered to perform the last sad rites over the Geran act and tenderly lay it in its grave. The governor listened to the funeral speeches of the various members until they had all had their hearing and then he took the floor.

With not even so much as a note by which to guide his thoughts, the governor talked to those lawmakers for three hours. Those who were present say they will never forget that occasion. In even, conversational tones, but with a vibrant, persuasive quality in his voice that thrilled every one, the governor talked the members out of their position and the bill was reported favorably, and thus New Jersey has an election law as advanced as any state in the union.

In all his conflicts with the Democratic members of the legislature, Governor Wilson simply reminded them of the pledges contained in the platform on which they secured their offices, and that it was not their will but the people's they were there to carry out.

If this argument did not suffice to bring them into line, he would offer to go with them into their respective districts and debate the matter before their clients.

Many Reform Measures Are Passed

After coming in contact a few times with such a will and character, the recalcitrant members threw up their hands and told the governor to go as far as he liked—they would oppose him no further. Then the New Jersey legislature, mastered by its governor, proceeded to enact reform measure after reform measure, and before it had concluded its first session under Governor Wilson, it enacted into law such progressive measures as the Corrupt Practices Act, the Employers' Liability Act, a most excellent Public Utilities Act, a Municipal Commission Government Law, which gives any city in the state the right to adopt a commission form of government if it so desires; and the Sterilization or Anti-Procreation Act.

But the fight the governor had with the reactionaries in the legislature was as nothing compared with the one he had with the big bosses as soon as he crossed the personal ambition of Senator James Smith, Jr.

The latter was the biggest bi-partisan boss in the state. He had represented New Jersey once in the United States senate and he wanted to do it again. In the state primary election, however, James Martine had received a large majority of the votes in the state. Smith's name was not on the primary ballot. He had neglected to put it there, thinking that when the time came for the legislature to elect a senator all he would have to do would be to notify that body that he desired to go to Washington and the thing would be done.

But again the governor stepped in with his masterful will. Again he reminded the legislators that the people, at least a majority of them, had bespoken a preference for Martine, and there was nothing for them to do but to ratify the will of the people.

Proclaimed by Admirers for the Presidency

Seeing the attitude of the country toward their favorite, the admirers of Governor Wilson stood up and yelled, "What's the matter with Wilson for president?" The echo of that query spread throughout the nation and encouraging answers began to come back on the echo. And so his candidacy was launched. Dr. Wilson was essentially a young man's candidate.

Many of the old line Democrats opposed him before the Baltimore convention, and leaders, as well as would-be leaders, in his party went to great lengths to defeat his nomination. But his nomination once attained, harmony settled upon the party, all factions became reconciled and worked as a unit for his election.

The president-elect has three daughters—Miss Eleanor Randolph Wilson, Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson and Miss Margaret Woodrow Wilson. These young women, like their father, are simple in their manners and tastes. They are skillful tennis players and horsewomen, and are exceedingly popular among their associates. They have no great fondness for formal society, nor for the limelight. They are modest, amiable, bright young women, who are thoroughly convinced that their illustrious father is "the grandest man in the world."

SAVINGS BANKS OF THE UNITED STATES

Comptroller of the Currency Murray has just had compiled from returns submitted as of June 14, 1912, statistics relating to deposits and depositors in the savings banks of the country.

Special interest attaches to the reports of operation and condition of savings banks, their deposits being chiefly the accumulations of wage earners. The present year's reports from these institutions indicate a large increase over the previous year in savings deposits and in the number of depositors.

The savings banks reported are of two classes; mutual, or those without capital stock, and stock savings, the latter class transacting both a savings and a commercial business. Practically all mutual savings banks are located in the manufacturing centers; that is, in the New England and eastern states, while stock savings banks are in operation in nearly every state in the Union.

Savings bank reports to the number of 1,925 have been tabulated, 630 being from mutual institutions, and 1,295 from stock savings banks. Deposits in these banks aggregate $4,450,822,522 and the depositors number 10,009,804, the average deposit account being $444.64. Savings banks reporting in June, 1911, numbered 1,884, with deposits of $4,212,583,598 to the credit of 9,794,647 depositors, the average deposit account being $430.09. While there has been an increase of only 41

CONCENTRATION OF BANKING POWER

New York, Nov. 5th.—The report of negotiations for the merging of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank and the Bank of New York, which has also become a national banking association, with the Fourth National, whether the contemplated consolidation is to become an accomplished fact or not, is indicative of the tendency to a concentration of banking power, especially in this financial center. It may be alarming to those timid souls who are suspicious of a devouring "money trust" lurking in the purlieus of Wall Street, but it is in keeping with the developments of the time, which require the transactions of business on a large scale. The Fourth National has maintained an exceptional independence and been more than most large banks confined to a strictly commercial banking business, and there will be advantage in an increased capital which will enable it to make larger loans in competition with other institutions that are more given to the support of great combinations.

The tendency to concentration is inevitable, and, while it will increase the banking power under a single control, it has unquestionable advantages for the business interests of the country as a whole. There is a certain weakness in a multitude of small independent banks, which makes effective supervision difficult, and the policy of permitting national banks to establish no branches is of doubtful wisdom. It does not prevent the same men from controlling different banks and exercising a divided responsibility. If such control were in one institution with branches, the power could be better regulated and supervised. Canada has an excellent banking system, of which practically no complaint is heard. No bank can be organized with less than $500,000 capital, but branches may be established anywhere in the Dominion, with a certain apportionment of capital. The number of central institutions has been reduced to about thirty in the whole country, while capital and the number of branches have been steadily increasing.

The process of concentration is likely to go on in the chief financial centers of this country, though small banks continue to multiply. That furnishes one reason for a reform of the system which will unify it, with some general form of association from the members of which a certain power of control may emanate and be exerted upon a central agency, of service to all, instead of having it arrogated to such an extent in the hands of separate institutions or a combination of them which can exercise a power without responsibility except to their own directors. What is now characterized as the "money power" and made an object of suspicion has developed from the need of a concentration which is not otherwise provided for and placed under control.

NATIONAL CITY BANK LETTER

According to the National City Bank of Chicago, the grain movement of the Western states this year has been of the highest importance and insures for the West and Southwest a greater prosperity than the country dared hope for before the authoritative figures as to the year's new crop were given out. The crops also have been so abundant and the demand for money has been so much broader that the banks today are finding it necessary to fortify their cash holdings and strengthen their reserve position. "During the balance of the year, therefore," says the bank in the monthly circular just issued, "money rates will probably rule firm both in this country and in Europe."

Concerning the fundamental strengthen of this country at the present time the bank says: "A rather extraordinary indication of the basic strength has been afforded by the ease with which the American markets have bought back the securities recently sold by Europe. The totals of such sales have been variously estimated at from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000, and from recent developments in Wall street it would seem as if the larger figure were nearer the truth. Had the market a year ago been asked to absorb such a volume of securities there would have been almost certain demoralization. The satisfactory outcome of the operation shows that there was a general belief in the integrity of such investments and in the prospects of continued prosperity."

"PRIVATE" TRUST COMPANIES TO HANDLE LARGE ESTATES

Considerable interest is manifested in the manner in which trust companies have been organized specifically to take charge of large estates. Andrew Carnegie has organized the Home Trust Company, which is located in Hoboken, N. J., and managed by R. A. Franks. This institution is devoted solely to the administration of the Carnegie properties and investments. It attends to disbursements and all financial details growing out of Mr. Carnegie's large endowments.

A similar company is the Westminster Company, which is generally known as the "Green Trust Company." All of Mrs. Hetty Green's financial and realty operations are conducted through the medium of the Westminster Company. The Green family is owner of a large number of shares of the Columbia-Knickerbocker Trust Company, Seaboard National Bank and the Chemical National Bank.

State Banking Commissioner William H. Smith of Pennsylvania has issued a call for condition of state banks and trust companies, as to condition of business, November 2d.

HULBERT SEES NO CAUSE FOR ALARM IN WILSON'S ELECTION

Edmund D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company, when interviewed this week concerning the election of Governor Wilson to the presidency, said:

"I do not believe that the business interests of the country need have any apprehension as a result of Governor Wilson's election. It had been expected for some time that the democratic party would be successful this year, and if there had been any misgivings on the part of the business interests of the country it would have been manifested previous to this time. If the democrats do pass any legislation which will hurt the business interests, it will be something which is totally unexpected."

BANKERS TO DISCUSS BILLS OF LADING LEGISLATION AT ASSOCIATION OF COMMERCE MEETING

At a meeting of the members of Subdivision II, banks and bankers, Chicago Association of Commerce, held on Wednesday of this week at the LaSalle Hotel, it was voted to ask Chairman Gore of the ways and means committee to provide a program that will be of interest to the banker-members of the Association of Commerce, at some ways and means committee meeting in the near future. Chairman Gore responded to the members of the bankers' committee that they could have next Wednesday, November 13th, and it was decided to discuss the subject of bills of lading legislation. Chairman W. G. Edens of the bankers committee was appointed to invite Clay H. Hollister, vice-president and cashier of the Old National, Grand Rapids, Mich., and chairman of the bills of lading committee of the American Bankers Association, and J. F. Hagey, assistant cashier of the First National of Chicago, to make addresses at the next regular Wednesday noonday luncheon at the LaSalle Hotel, November 13th. There are about 160 Chicago bankers who are members of the Association of Commerce, and it is intended that non-member bankers shall also be invited to this luncheon as the guests of the member-bankers. The committee consists of W. G. Edens, assistant secretary Central Trust Company of Illinois, chairman; W. G. Schroeder, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial National, vice-chairman; Henry Henschen, cashier of the State Bank; L. H. Grimme, cashier of the National City Bank, and H. R. Kent, cashier of the Fort Dearborn National.

Mr. Hollister has been at the head of the bills of lading committee of the A. B. A. for a number of years and is well qualified to present the subject. Resolutions endorsing the Pomerene Bill as it passed the senate were adopted by the American Bankers Association in convention at Detroit after the report by Mr. Hollister as chairman of the bills of lading committee. Mr. Hollister is an experienced and capable banker, a forceful speaker and thoroughly familiar with the subject as it has been presented to the congress of the United States. Mr. Hagey is a lawyer connected with the First National and will handle the subject in an attractive manner.

As the railroads are greatly interested in this subject, a special effort will be made to induce the railroad members of the Association of Commerce to attend this meeting. It is understood that an effort will be made to have the Pomerene Bill, which passed the senate, taken up by the house at the short session of congress, which will convene in December, and an organized attempt made to pass this bill, or such a bill as may be agreed upon by the interstate commerce committee of the house. The general use of bills of lading for banking and financial purposes has made it imperative that there should be some national legislation on this subject, and no other subject in which bankers are interested seems to be so favorably before congress. Consequently it is deemed advisable to push this matter, which it is hoped will receive favorable consideration.

NEW ISSUE BY HARRIS TRUST

The Harris Trust and Savings Bank is offering investors, to net approximately 4.90 per cent, $150,000 Montreal Tramways Company first and refunding mortgage 5's. These bonds mature in 1941 and are in denominations of $500 and $1,000. They are optional, however, at 105 and interest on any interest payment date.

Local bond houses are selling and offering investors more and more of the public utility securities of Canadian cities. The market for such securities to the present has been somewhat limited in this part of the West, but it is said the bonds are looked upon with great favor by investors. Management of Canadian corporations is considered excellent as a rule, and governmental restrictions favor the investor.

By C. C. Burford

The best of business feeling prevails over the state and in spite of the fever heat of excitement which some localities experienced during the campaign, there is a general idea of prosperity and of good times to follow. There has never been a period when the business of the country was on a better basis than it is at the present time and with the corn fields of Illinois yielding a large crop there is every indication that the best of business conditions will be experienced with the coming of the Christmas season and throughout the winter months.

Bank Robbery at Cheneyville

The Bank of C. C. Harlan and Company of Cheneyville, a few miles east of Hoopeston, was entered by blow-up men who were, however, fortunately frightened away before they secured any booty, although they blew the outer door off the safe. The theft of a horse and buggy in the neighborhood probably explains their escape. Cheneyville, in northern Vermilion county, is but a few miles from the villages of Stockland and Goodwine, in Iroquois county, where burglars have also visited the banks. That neighborhood seems to have had more than its share of calls from yeggmen recently.

Some Good Bank Advertisers

The Farmers National of Springfield is one of the good advertising banks of Illinois. With deposits of $2,250,000 and with resources of $2,850,000, the Farmers National is one of the strong banks down state. George E. Keys, one of the assistant cashiers, is well known to Illinois bankers and especially to those who attended the convention of the Illinois Bankers Association, held in Springfield in 1911, as he was then active in the entertainment of visiting bankers.

The First National of Kankakee, of which bank K. Len Small is the president, is also a good advertiser and savings accounts are especially emphasized. The bank now has 4,000 savings depositors and asks the newspaper reader, "You intend to save—Why not begin this week?"

Thirty-seven Years in One Bank

M. W. Busey, president of Busey's Bank of Urbana, observed Friday, November 1st, as the thirty-third anniversary of his purchase of a partnership in the bank of which he has been president for many years. As he had been with the bank for four years previous to acquiring a partnership, Mr. Busey has spent thirty-seven years in one bank in one town. In all these years his office hours have been close and his vacations short. Mr. Busey has attended many of the national, state and group conventions of various bank associations and is widely acquainted with Illinois bankers. He has served as a member of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association.

Wheeler to Speak at Peoria

Harry A. Wheeler, vice-president of the Union Trust Company of Chicago, has been secured to address the Peoria Association of Commerce December 9th, according to an announcement by Douglas H. Berthard, chairman of the ways and means committee of the Peoria body. Peoria bankers and business men are fortunate to secure the services of Mr. Wheeler, and one thousand business and professional men will hear the address and will attend the banquet to be held in connection with it.

Mr. Wheeler, besides being a prominent Chicago banker and having served the Chicago Association of Commerce as president, is now the president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which was organized by President Taft last March in Washington.

John R. Trevett

was elected a trustee of the University of Illinois on the democratic ticket at the election Tuesday, November 5th. There is a feeling of genuine satisfaction by all parties with the election of Mr. Trevett as he has been an able banker and business man for forty years, and is well qualified to aid in caring for the University. Mr. Trevett is another banker who has remained in one bank and in one locality for a business life-time, as he entered his bank when a young man as a clerk. Later he became a partner in the business and has been associated with his present partner, Ross R. Mattis, for twenty-five years or more. The business was established by the late A. C. Burnham in 1861, who was well known to the older bankers of the Middle West as an able investment banker. The Trevett-Mattis people occupy one of the most modern banking rooms in the state, recently erected and occupied.

Danville Banker Mourns Father

M. E. King, president of the Second National of Danville, is mourning the death of his father, Austin King, Sr. The deceased was more than eighty years of age and had resided at one street number in Danville for forty-nine years. He was a native of Ireland and came to America in 1847.

Commercial Students Form Organization

The commercial students of the University of Illinois, including many of the young men taking various courses in commerce in that institution, have formed a club for the purpose of better acquaintance and for securing speakers of state and national reputation to address them. A number of bankers, manufacturers and business men will be invited to speak to University audiences under the auspices of the Commercial Club. John M. Glenn, secretary of the Illinois Manufacturers Association, will be the first speaker November 13th.

Work on the new Commerce Building at the University is being rapidly pushed to completion and the authorities expect to occupy the building about February 1, 1913. The University of Illinois is developing a department of business training of exceptional merit.

Hoosier Business Men to Visit Illinois

Members of the Indianapolis Trade Association will visit various towns and cities in Central Illinois, November 12th, 13th and 14th, when they will make a trade-boosting tour of a dozen of counties. The trip was originally planned for September but it was necessary to postpone it and the members say that they are glad that it was, as more men can take the trip now. Jobbers and manufacturers of Indianapolis are to compose the party.

They will leave Indianapolis on the Peoria division of the Big Four stopping at Danville, Urbana, Champaign, Bloomington and intermediate points, thence south to Clinton and Decatur and thence west to Springfield. From the capitol city of Illinois the Hoosiers will go south to Taylorville and Pana, and striking the St. Louis division of the Big Four will proceed eastward, stopping at Shelbyville, Mattoon, Charleston, Paris and intermediate points and proceeding into Indianapolis.

Indianapolis is rapidly becoming a competitor of Chicago for the business of Central Illinois and while the people of Illinois are of course more partial to Chicago yet the capitol city of Indiana is making rapid strides as a banking, jobbing and manufacturing center.

Illinois Notes

The banks of Peoria closed November 5th, election day. Very few banks over the state closed that day, however.

Leslie Small, of the First National of Kankakee and a son of President K. Len Small of that institution, was recently married to Miss Grace Burrell of Chicago. They will reside in a new home in West Kankakee near the country home of the groom's father.

Newton C. Dougherty, formerly a Peoria banker and superintendent of the schools in that city for many years, is not out of trouble, although he has served a term in the penitentiary at Joliet for embezzlement. Mr. Dougherty recently went from Chicago to Peoria and gave bond of $12,000, furnished by the National Surety Company of Chicago, on the charge of forgery on fifteen indictments.

The new bank at Muncie, a village near Danville, identified itself with its customers when the officers gave a public reception to the people of the community and talks were given outlining the relation of the bank to the community. This is the first bank for Muncie.

The Chicago and Alton Railroad Company states that the month of October was one of the banner months for their company in both passenger and freight business. All railroads will be busy during the next three months transporting the corn crop and about the only shortage which bothers them is the car shortage. There will be no idle grain cars this year.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS RETURNS FROM EAST

George M. Reynolds, president of the big Continental and Commercial National, returned to the city on election day. Mr. Reynolds has been in Atlantic City and in the East recuperating from his recent illness. He was back at his desk at the bank on Wednesday and was looking fine, as a result of his vacation. He was unable to vote in the election owing to the fact that he was ill on registration day. He states it as his opinion that the change of administration at Washington will not have any bad effect upon the present period of prosperity which the country is enjoying. Mr. Reynolds returned to Chicago via New York and his opinion is based upon what he learned there and what he knows of conditions here. He says that the prospect of a change in administration had not been looked forward to with any apprehension on the part of the business interests of the country. Congress, which will be controlled by the democrats, will not meet until December, 1913, so that even if the democrats were disposed to enact legislation prejudicial to present prosperity, such laws would not be passed for some time and in the interim the country would continue to enjoy the good times prevailing now. Mr. Reynolds, however, does not believe that the democratic congress will manifest any such an inclination. He says that next year, unless there is a crop failure, conditions equally as comfortable as those now prevailing will exist.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

The attitude of Milwaukee bankers on the recent election as concerning business conditions, both before and since Tuesday's developments, is well summed up in the Digest of Trade Conditions published a few days ago by the Second Ward Savings Bank, of which Joseph Uihlein, general manager of the Schlitz Brewing Company, is president. Says the statement:

"Within a few days the votes will have been cast which will decide who is to occupy the president's chair for four years. While each one of us is vitally interested in the outcome and each has his favorite among the candidates, it is reasonably sure that business will continue in its present healthy condition, regardless of which of the three candidates is successful. It might be that the election of one candidate over another would be better for general business conditions, but the effect would be merely a degree of prosperity, as prosperity is already assured us for some time to come.

"We have arrived at the threshold of the presidential election with constantly increasing business instead of the usual persistent dropping off from month to month just before the general election."

$3,000,000 Capital

The increase in the capital of the First National Bank from $2,500,000 to $3,000,000, voted by the stockholders last July, went into effect this week. The increase in the capital, together with the doubling of the $500,000 surplus, gives the bank the largest working capital of any institution in the middle west outside of Chicago and with the exception of the Northwestern National and First National of Minneapolis.

Court Ruling Forbids Intervention

The Milwaukee branch of the federal court has denied permission to three stockholders in the Allis-Chalmers Company to intervene in the suit of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago to foreclose a mortgage on property of the company. The three stockholders concerned, Nathan Eiseman, William H. Timlin, and Walter Gold, charged that the proceedings were brought to crowd out small stockholders.

Gain in Bank Clearings

Milwaukee's bank clearings for October, according to Dun's report this week, show a gain of $3,545,976 over those of October, 1911. The clearings last month totaled $66,022,728, as against $62,446,752 the previous year.

Oliver C. Fuller Honored by Country Club

Oliver C. Fuller, president of the Wisconsin Trust Company, was elected president of the Milwaukee Country Club at the annual meeting Monday night. Mr. Fuller was prominently identified with the building of the palatial new club house recently completed northwest of the city, on the upper Milwaukee river.

COMMITTEE APPOINTMENTS FOR ILLINOIS ASSOCIATION

It is understood that President J. D. Phillips of the Illinois Bankers Association has about completed his committee appointments. Of course, as Mr. Phillips stated at the convention of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association held in Peoria the day following the bankers' convention, it was his intention to reappoint S. E. Bradt of DeKalb as chairman of the good roads committee. Mr. Bradt has made an excellent start in this work for the bankers of the state. It is possible that O. P. Bourland of Pontiac, Stewart L. Crebs of Carmi, George L. Stimson of Washington and M. O. Williamson of Galesburg will make up the rest of this committee. This is a good, strong committee with a wide state acquaintance, and it may be expected that the good record made last year will be duplicated this year.

ELECTED VICE-PRESIDENT OF UNIVERSITY CLUB

Edmund D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company, was elected vice-president of the University Club of Chicago at an election held on Saturday last.

TO MAKE GOOD ROADS TALK

Illinois State Teachers Association will meet at Peoria, December 26th and 27th. John D. Shoop, assistant general superintendent of Chicago schools and president of the Illinois State Teachers Association, has invited W. G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois and president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, to appear before the county superintendents section as well as the entire association on the afternoon of December 27th, and discuss the subject of road improvement in Illinois.

On Thursday of this week Mr. Edens addressed the members of the Chicago Engineers Club at their clubrooms, 314 Federal Street on the subject of "Co-operation, the Key to Success in Road Improvement."

Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh bank clearings for October were $267,768,219, the largest for any month in the history of the clearing house. The total for the ten months of 1912 is only $5,000,000 smaller than the high record, which was established in 1907.

The Peoples National of Pittsburgh in its monthly review issued November 1st, says:

"No man in the Pittsburgh district has any doubt concerning the actual state of trade, and very few have any doubt that present favorable conditions will continue for a long time to come, with here and there the usual normal reactions. It was pointed out several months ago that improvement started earlier in Pittsburgh than in other parts of the country, and it was under full headway here while some other sections, especially in the West, were unable to see any positive sign of change for the better. The explanation was that the railroads came into the steel market early last spring for new equipment, track supplies, etc., while other commercial centers were holding back on account of the then unfavorable crop outlook.

"The events abroad last month render necessary some modification of general money market forecasts in the United States, but, as far as Pittsburgh is concerned, there is no reason to change the opinion that, while rates are likely to hold firm around 6 per cent for the remainder of the year, there will be ample funds for all legitimate needs. At the present time and for months past, the activity in this district is, and was, of a purely commercial and industrial character, and fortunately the money market is not complicated by speculative operations of any kind. On the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange there has been a subsidence of the healthy activity which prevailed in the early part of the year. Therefore, no special or unusual demands upon the local money market are to be anticipated and banking credits will be ample to meet general trade requirements."

INVESTMENT BANKERS ARE ACTIVE

Preparations for the convention of the Investment Bankers Association of America, which is to be held in New York November 21st and 22d, are going forward satisfactorily. This association is getting a good start much earlier in its history than most organizations of its class. A pamphlet has been published giving a full report of the organization meeting held August 8th, with the constitution and by-laws. The programme of the coming convention has not been perfected in detail, but enough has been done already to insure two full days of business and pleasure. The action of the committee on municipal bonds will prove important. This committee, in connection with representatives of well-known dealers, has taken steps to organize bureaus where certified copies of the legal papers connected with issues of municipal bonds can be deposited, the arrangement making it unnecessary for dealers or investors to call for certified copies of the papers accompanying the securities.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis, Nov. 6th.—It is understood that the Reclamation Federation which met in Chicago recently for a conference as to its future, will meet in St. Louis in March, 1913, at the same time the National Drainage Federation meets here. The Reclamation Federation is composed of 400 of the leading moving spirits in financial and commercial circles in the United States. Their purpose is to furnish material aid for the reclamation of the waste lands of the United States and for the preservation of the forests and the establishment of drainage reservoirs. The purpose of meeting in St. Louis is to attempt the consolidation into one powerful body of all the organizations which are working for these same ends. Included in these are the National Drainage Congress, the National Irrigation Congress, the Dry Farming Association and six other bodies of lesser membership, and to get them all to working cohesively for the same ends. It is now believed by the officers of the St. Louis Conventions Bureau that all of these organizations will meet jointly in St. Louis next March, at which time the negotiations for consolidation will be brought to final settlement. The attendance at all of these joint and concurrent meetings is expected to bring more than 10,000 delegates to St. Louis, and one of the propositions which will be considered will be the establishment of a general headquarters for the joint organization.

Trust Company Suit Ends

Attorneys for the West St. Louis Trust Company and Ben E. W. Ruler, in a suit brought against Conway Elder, Jacob Maurer, Charles G. Vens and Dennis O'Leary, stockholders, have moved a dismissal in Circuit Judge Shields' court. The court ruled the suit might be dismissed when costs amounting to $32.20 were paid. In a statement officials of the concern say the suit was found to be the outgrowth of mutual misapprehension. The defendants in the suit have sold their stock in the trust company to the plaintiffs and have withdrawn as directors. Mr. Ruler has been elected president to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Elder. The matter came before the courts when an injunction was asked to restrain Ruler from acting as president.

Group 8 at Jefferson City

Group 8 of the Missouri Bankers Association which held its annual meeting recently at Jefferson City, devoted nearly all of its discussion to farming and general agricultural development. The bankers of Missouri, President R. R. Calkins of St. Joseph says, have actively enlisted in the back-to-the-farm movement and are doing all they can to arrest the tide of immigration from the farms to the cities. The problems discussed ranged from the proper selection of seed corn to the preparation of the soil, its fertilization and crop rotation. W. C. Gordon, cashier of the Farmers Savings Bank at Marshall, is in charge of the farm movement. The organization has appointed in many of the counties of the state one of its members as county farm adviser, whose duties are to bring about close and co-operative relation between the farmers and bankers.

John E. Swanger, state bank commissioner, addressed the bankers. He complimented them upon the flourishing condition of Missouri banks and the absence of any disastrous failures during the last eight years. W. W. Gillum of Barnett was elected chairman and T. A. DuBrouillet of Linn secretary.

St. Louis Banker Killed in Hotel Fire

W. C. Douglas, a director of the St. Louis Union Trust Company, and identified with several other corporations, was burned to death in a fire which destroyed the Berlin Hotel, an exclusive family hotel in the West End district of St. Louis.

Banker Proves a Friend

After traveling one thousand miles to Georgia in order to overtake an employee whom he charges with a shortage of $4,000, J. J. Gottler, a St. Louis Banker, has recovered $3,000 and left the embezzler with $1,000 to start life anew. Mr. Gottler states that his employee, whose name he refuses to give, had so manipulated his accounts that he was $4,000 ahead. This money he placed to the credit of his wife and then skipped. The wife, however, was more honest than her husband, and she told Mr. Gottler where he could find him.

Death of Former St. Louis Official

Word has been received at St. Louis of the death of Horace W. Clarke at Frederick, Md. Mr. Clarke was a son of James C. Clarke, at one time vice-president of the Erie railroad, later president of the Illinois Central, and then of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. He was well known in St. Louis, where his brother, Charles S. Clarke, resided as general manager of the Mobile and Ohio, and later vice-president of the Missouri Pacific-Iron Mountain. He also resided here himself while connected with the St. Louis division of the Mobile and Ohio. He was vice-president of the International and Great Northern and later of the Denver and Rio Grande, both Gould lines.

New East St. Louis Bank

Commission men at the National Stock Yards, East St. Louis, have announced that a new bank for the Stock Yards is assured, and that it will be in operation by January 1st. The new institution will be called the Drovers State Bank, although it will afterwards be changed to a national bank. It will be located on St. Clair Avenue, just outside the arched entrance to the Stock Yards. Although it will bid especially for the patronage of the stock yards and commission men, the new bank will also solicit deposits from East St. Louis business men. Mike A. Bright, general manager of the National Live Stock Commission Company, and a veteran stock man, will be the president of the institution, it is said by other commission men. The new bank will have a capital of $200,000. About $125,000 of this amount has already been subscribed and paid in. The remainder of the stock will be sold to country bankers in Missouri, Illinois, Arkansas and Texas and to wealthy stock raisers. Commenting upon the future of the new institution, Mr. Bright cited the fact that East St. Louis has a population of nearly 70,000 and only three banks. It is the only city of its size with but three such institutions.

Cashier Missing; Bank Funds Short

H. M. Smith, appointed cashier of the State Bank of Holstein, Mo., in the latter part of August, and shortly after the bank had been organized, is missing, along with $7,535 of the bank funds. Smith was formerly a grocery clerk in St. Louis, and prevailed upon some business men of his acquaintance to inaugurate a bank at Holstein, a rich farming district near St. Louis, where a bank was much needed. He was given the position of cashier and furnished a bond in the sum of $5,000, issued by the National Surety Co., of St. Louis. Warrants have been issued for his arrest, charging him with embezzlement.

town of Santa Maria, Tex., to which the San Benito & Rio Grande Valley Railway was recently completed, has been perfected. N. W. Astin, formerly of St. Louis, will become president of the new bank and will be actively identified with the institution. The capital stock will be $10,000.

CHICAGO PRIVATE BANK CLOSED

The Kirby Savings Bank, at 5019 South Ashland Avenue, was closed when its proprietor, Dr. William T. Kirby, was adjudged insane by the county court and committed to the North Shore Health Resort in Winnetka. The Central Trust Company was appointed receiver by Judge Landis to assume charge of the affairs of the insolvent institution. Assets discovered amount to $856, of which $206 is cash; liabilities total $150,000. It is reported that the wife of the banker-physician, at whose request he was examined as to his sanity, has asserted that she will make good all claims against the bank. She is connected with a Waukegan family which is reputed to be very wealthy.

Possession of the defunct bank was effected by the receiver only with the assistance of the police; a woman reported to be the owner of the building endeavoring to prevent its seizure by means of a double-barreled shotgun. The cashier of the bank, who is a relative of Dr. Kirby, is but seventeen years old. He was arrested on a charge of passing a worthless check for $1,000 on the Slavic-American Bank, as agent for Dr. Kirby. His case has been continued till Nov. 15th. When the proprietor was adjudged insane, young Kirby closed the bank. When Mr. Vowell, representing the Central Trust Company, took possession, the boy opened the vaults for him.

If the banker-physician has been adjudged insane, as has been reported, it would seem that there is nothing for the receiver to do, for the estate would have to go through the probate court. The claims of depositors are not preferred claims; they simply are general creditors of the bank. In view of the fact that the assets bear such a small percentage to the liabilities, it doesn't look as though the depositors would be able to realize much on their claims. About the only hope they have is to rely upon the promise of the banker's wife to reimburse them for their losses.

This deplorable state of affairs is but additional evidence of the great necessity for supervision and inspection. It truly is too bad that

Illinois persistently refuses to commit herself to progressive principles along these lines. With supervision and inspection the insolvent condition of the bank would have been discovered in time to save a considerable amount, at least, to the depositors. It is pretty hard on people to have their life's savings swept away at one swoop, simply because the state refuses to pass such legislation as would operate to preclude such a contingency. In view of the almost daily examples of the evils of unsupervised banking, it is difficult to see how anyone can be opposed to supervision. A few more horrible examples and the public will rise up in arms and demand that drastic legislation be passed. It is urgently to be hoped that the efforts of the city council in this behalf and of the various public-spirited organizations throughout the state will be successful in securing supervision and inspection of all forms of banking in the state.

Editorial from Chicago Daily News

"Depositors in the Kirby Savings Bank, 5019 South Ashland avenue, Chicago, which closed its doors last week, are threatened with the loss of practically all the funds they had intrusted to the institution. The deposits in the failed bank are reported to have amounted to about $30,000, most of the money being the savings of persons of small means. Search of the vaults by the receiver disclosed only $852 in cash and notes. The assets of every sort apparently represent only about 3 per cent of the liabilities.

"The Kirby Savings Bank is a 'private' institution. It was conducted by a physician, who may or may not have had some knowledge of banking methods. Regardless of his fitness or unfitness to run a bank, he was free to put up a sign and invite deposits, no supervision or inspection of any kind being applied to the concern by the public authorities. Illinois is one of the very few states in the union in which banks may exist and take in funds from depositors without submitting to any public control whatever. Therefore, the Kirby Savings bank, with an insane man for proprietor and a youth for office force, went its way to destruction.

"National banks, subject to regulation by the federal authorities, and state banks, subject to state supervision, sometimes fail, but not often. When they do fail the results are not nearly so disastrous as are those attending the failures of unsupervised private banks. The percentage of assets to liabilities is usually large. Had the Kirby bank been subject to inspection its rickety condition would have been discovered long before its collapse.

"It is a disgrace to Illinois that the state permits persons of all sorts to engage in the banking business without any supervision whatever. Unsupervised banks must cease to exist in this commonwealth. Thrifty residents of Chicago have suffered much from wildcat banking. This community should unitedly demand of the next legislature a law that will effectually eliminate this evil."

An effort has been made to dismiss the bankruptcy proceedings and to remove the receiver, which was denied by Judge Landis. An attempt also has been made to have the administration of the estate turned over to the conservator. It has been insinuated that the effort to have the banker-physician adjudged insane by the county court was made for a purpose and that $75,000 was withdrawn from Kirby's bank during the three days prior to the time that he was adjudged insane. Judge Landis has received numerous requests from depositors not to turn the property over to the conservators.

Philadelphia

Bank clearings in Philadelphia during last month amounted to $772,893,000, so were 24.1 per cent larger than similar exchanges for October of last year, and established a new high record for a month's business. This phenomenal progress, local bankers said, was a true index of the enormous volume of general business passing through this market. It should be stated, however, that the large trust companies now transact business direct through the clearing house, whereas a year ago they were not members, but as these institutions deposited checks with their clearing house representatives for collection even at that time, the difference the change would make would not detract from the significance of the record.

IMPROPER USE OF BANKING AND TRUST COMPANY TITLES

The promiscuous use of the words "trust company" and "bank" by individuals and associations of individuals in whose make-up the virtue of honesty is at the best but fragmentary, suggests the urgent necessity of some sort of remedial legislation, the object of which shall be to limit the use of these appellations. A trustee acts in a fiduciary capacity; the duties which devolve upon him in such a capacity ought to receive his very best attention. In other words, the relation which exists between him and his "cestui que trust" is of a very confidential nature. The duties of a trustee are such that they must receive his personal attention. Indeed, it is a familiar principle of the law that the duties of a trustee cannot be delegated, except in so far as they are ministerial in their nature.

In these modern days incorporated trust companies have assumed to a large extent the functions which formerly were performed by individuals. Nevertheless, the same duties and obligations are incumbent upon them as are applicable to individuals acting in similar capacities. This brief statement of the principles relating to a trust relation emphasizes the importance of having high-class people perform such duties. No difficulty in this connection is experienced in the cases of the strong, influential trust companies operating in this country. The men connected with them are men of the highest moral character and attainments, men who have had much experience in financial matters, and whose judgment and integrity are unimpeachable; and, in addition, the corporations engaging in these enterprises usually have a large amount of capital back of them.

How different is the situation in the case of some individuals essaying to act as trustees? The men sometimes connected with these undertakings frequently are of questionable character, having little or no financial experience, and whose judgment cannot be depended upon, and practically always they have but slender capital with which to operate.

It might be well in this connection to point out some of the provisions of the Illinois statute relating to trust companies, and to show the utter fallacy of compelling strong corporations to submit to stringent regulations, while irresponsible individuals are absolutely exempt simply because they have not complied with the formality of incorporation.

In all cities and towns of less than 100,000 inhabitants, trust companies are required to deposit $50,000, and in all cities and towns of 100,000 inhabitants or more, $200,000, with the auditor of public accounts, said deposits to be for the benefit of the creditors of the company, and to consist of government bonds or municipal bonds of the state, or of mortgages in improved and productive real estate in the state, being first liens thereon, and the real estate being worth at least twice the amount loaned thereon. In the event that it shall appear from the annual report of the company that the value of the personal property and cash held by it exceeds ten times the amount of the deposit, the auditor can compel such company, if in a city or town of 100,000 inhabitants or more forthwith to increase the deposit to $500,000 in the securities above mentioned; or, if in a city or town of less than 100,000 inhabitants, forthwith to increase the said deposit to $125,000, in such securities.

In addition to the above provisions for the security of creditors, the law further provides that each trust company during the month of January of each year shall file with the state auditor a statement under oath of the condition of such company on the 31st day of December, next preceding and exhibiting the following items:

(a) The assets of said company, specifying: First, The description and market value, or as nearly as may be, of the real estate owned by such company.

Seventh, The amount of stocks and bonds posited in banks to the credit of said company, specifying in what banks such deposits are.

Third, The amount of cash in the hands of agents and in the course of transmission.

Fourth, The amount of loans secured by mortgages and bonds, constituting a first lien on real estate, on which there shall be less than one year's interest due or owing, and the amount of such interest.

Fifth, The amount of such loans on which there shall be more than one year's interest due or owing and the amount of such interest.

Sixth, The amount due the company on which judgments have been obtained.

Seventh, The amount of stocks and bonds of this state, and of the United States, of any incorporated city in the state, and of any other stocks and bonds owned by such company, specifying the amount, number of shares and the par and market value of each kind of stock or bond.

Eighth, The amount loaned upon the pledges of securities, with a statement of the securities so held by such company, and the par and market value of such securities.

Ninth, The amount of all other assets of such company, including accrued interest not enumerated above.

(b) The liabilities of such company, specifying:

First, The capital stock paid in.

Second, The surplus on hand.

Third, The undivided profits.

Fourth, The deposits held by such company.

(c) A list and brief description of the trusts held by such company, the source of the appointment thereto, and the amount of real and personal estate held by such company by virtue thereof, except that mere mortgage trusts wherein no action has been taken by such company shall not be included in such statement. The said report shall also be in such form and contain such statements, returns and information as to the affairs, business condition and resources of the corporation, as the said auditor of state may from time to time prescribe or require.

Provision also is made in the statute for examination of the affairs of the said trust company, also for publication of the said report.

It will be noticed from the above statement of the law that the interests of creditors are pretty thoroughly protected. The state of Illinois has enacted a law so comprehensive in its scope and has made it applicable only to corporations engaged in doing a trust company business, organizations with large sums of money at their command and officered by men of high standing and reputation; and yet it has seen fit to say not one word about individuals and partnerships engaged in similar undertakings, the very persons whom it ought to have been the design of the legislature to include.

One seldom, if ever, hears of a trust company violating its obligations, and it seems almost a travesty on justice to compel incorporated trust companies to submit to the provisions of the law as above set forth, and render irresponsible individuals and copartnerships immune simply because they are not incorporated. It is greatly to be deprecated that Illinois, occupying the position which she does among the states of the Union, has seen fit to permit such a state of affairs to exist. Many of the concerns which purport to conduct a trust company business in reality are doing nothing of the sort, but are loan concerns or engaged in the promotion of stock-selling ventures. It is high time that some effort be made to restrict the use of the words "trust company" to corporations engaged in that business and to afford to the public some relief from the unscrupulous individuals who, as a result of inadequate laws, are enabled to prey upon the people.

The facility with which the words "trust company" can be used is equally true in the case of the word "bank." There is absolutely nothing in the Illinois law prohibiting any person or persons who so desire from calling himself or themselves a bank and painting it in conspicuous letters on the window of the the place of business. Then the "banker" can accept all the money people are foolish enough to give in, such people in many cases being ignorant foreigners, and who, when the crash comes, are unable to comprehend why it is that they are unable to get their money back. Here, again, the same technical distinction as regards incorporation exists. The incorporated bank is compelled to submit to periodical examinations, publish reports, etc., while the bankers who are not incorporated, and who do not pay any taxes, are permitted to have a free hand, and to operate without any kind of supervision or inspection whatever.

This calls to mind the case of a private banker who recently failed in a state adjacent to Illinois. Investigation of the affairs of his "bank" disclosed the fact that for ten years the institution had been insolvent, and that the proprietor had been defraying his personal expenses out of the money he had been receiving as deposits.

Fortunately, the public has become pretty well aroused and is protesting vigorously against the evil to which it has been compelled to submit; and this spirit of popular indignation also is reflected by the press. Remedial legislation is being advocated by private bankers as well as by those who are incorporated. The better class of private bankers are heartily in favor of the proposed law. Those who are honest have nothing to fear, and will welcome the opportunity of taking the people into their confidence and revealing the true condition of their banks. It will have a tendency to increase their business greatly, for the public will know of the strength of the institution in which it is placing its money, and will be further reassured by knowledge of the fact that the bank is under the supervision and inspection of the state. The dishonest private banker has every reason in the world for opposing supervision. He is just the fellow who ought to be legislated out of business, and some of the harrowing scenes incident to failures thereby obviated.

The object of individuals in using corporate titles is to convey the impression that they are corporations and to instill in the minds of the public the prestige, stability, etc., which one ordinarily associates with a trust company or a bank. There is no reason on earth why Illinois should be the least bit backward about correcting the abuses which have sprung up under its law. Statutes similar to the legislation which now is being advocated have been passed in numerous states of the Union. If Illinois is to be classed as a progressive, up-to-date state, it is time that she pass a law restricting the use of the words "trust company" and "bank" and compel all banks within the state, except national, to submit to periodical examinations, and supervision and inspection, and thereby remove the impediment to her progress which exists as a result of the loose methods now in vogue.

PROSPEROUS CONDITIONS IN SOUTHWEST

Business conditions in the Southwest, as revealed by the current monthly financial letter of the Mechanics-American National of St. Louis, are very encouraging, indeed. There is a good, healthy demand for money at good rates, and no trouble has been experienced by the banks in financing the crop movement. The increased activity in all lines of business, and the great progress and steady gains over last year which have been made in the shoe, hardware, furniture and clothing lines in St. Louis, all have contributed to the general feeling of optimism which is prevalent in that section of the country. It is difficult to predict what effect the result of the recent presidential election will have upon business and financial conditions. The situation has been peculiar this year in that politics has not influenced business conditions. Even the agitation of tariff revision has caused much less agitation than usual, and in quarters where alteration of schedules must force radical readjustment, there has been less disturbance than ordinarily. The country now is experiencing a period of great prosperity, the good times being confined not to only one section, but prevailing generally. It is believed that the coming winter will see improvement all along the line with increased earnings for the railroads and a much larger margin of profit for the average mercantile establishment. One of the dangers to be feared is that people may develop the speculative fever. However, the country is just recovering from the effects of the panic of five years ago, and all of the money which has been loaned by the banks has been used for legitimate business undertakings, so that speculation throughout the Southwest is at the lowest level which has been seen at this season for more than fifteen years. Farmers in territory contiguous to St. Louis are far more prosperous than they were a few years ago. They have learned much about business since the panic and realize the necessity of setting aside a surplus fund. They also have learned more about farming. As the work undertaken by the government and the state bankers' associations to acquaint the farmers with improved methods of land cultivation and more scientific methods of farming, progresses, there will be some headway made toward reducing the high cost of living in this country.

COMMENDS PHILIPPINE ROADS AND SCHOOLS

Dr. Francis W. Shepard, professor of American History at the University of Chicago, in an address before the ways and means committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce at its regular Wednesday noon-day luncheon this week, praised Philippine roads and the school system now in vogue there. The roads are divided into sections, each of which has a caretaker who keeps them up, somewhat the same as a section hand does on a railroad. There are six hundred thousand Philippine school children, about eight hundred of the teachers being Americans. Wonderful progress has been made along educational lines in the islands since American occupancy. The cost of educating the children is only 47 cents per capita per annum.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

BOSTON CHAPTER

The Boston Chapter of the American Institute of Banking held its third meeting of the season at the City Club last week. President Robert H. Bean presided. Following the dinner the members listened to an extremely interesting talk on "European Methods of Financing Farms," by Alfred L. Aiken, president of the Worcester County Institution for Savings. Mr. Aiken spoke particularly of German financing ideas and considered their applicability in this country. He also mentioned the possibilities along these lines as set forth in the message sent to the governors of all the states by President Taft a short time ago.

LOUISVILLE CHAPTER

The Louisville Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, which has always been recognized as one of the most active of the organizations composing the national body, has begun its winter's work under favorable auspices. Leon P. Lewis, who is a member of the faculty of one of the local law schools, will deliver a series of lectures during the winter on commercial and banking law.

SAN FRANCISCO CHAPTER

The San Francisco Chapter's announcement for the season 1912-13 gives promise of continued activity. The program will include the following lectures: Professor H. Morse Stephens of the University of California; Professor Thomas H. Reed of the University of California; Professor Maurice E. Harrison, lecturer in the University of California; Professor A. C. Whitaker of Leland Stanford University; Robert W. Harrison, Hastings Law College.

The addresses for the season will be delivered by Frank B. Anderson, president of the Bank of California, N. A.; F. L. Lipman, vice-president of Wells-Fargo Nevada National; James K. Lynch, vice-president of the First National of San Francisco; Max Thelan, attorney for the California Railroad Commission; Col. Charles E. Woodruff, medical corps, U. S. A.; Hon. Duncan McKinley, surveyor of customs at San Francisco, Cal.; Robert M. Welch, vice-president, Savings Union Bank and Trust Company of San Francisco; John D. McKee, vice-president of the Mercantile National; G. K. Weeks, with N. W. Halsey & Co.

Papers will be read by F. C. Mortimer, cashier First National; Russell Lowry, cashier American National; W. F. Duffy, auditor Anglo and London-Paris National; D. L. Clarke, assistant secretary, Savings Union Bank and Trust Company; Victor Palmer with First National; W. F. Hovey with First National; William A. Day, assistant cashier, Savings Union Bank and Trust Company; H. Choynski, assistant cashier, Anglo and London-Paris National; John Clausen, manager Foreign Exchange Department, Crocker National.

Classes in banking and finance will be conducted on Wednesday afternoons at 5:15 o'clock for members desiring to obtain Institute certificates, and the Law lectures will be held on Friday afternoons at 5:15 o'clock.

A charter has been issued to the First National Bank of Reedy, Reedy, W. Va., capital $25,000.

The Institute and Its Work

The American Institute of Banking Section of the American Bankers Association is devoted to the education of bankers in banking and the establishment and maintenance of a recognized standard of education by means of official examinations and the issuance of certificates of graduation. To qualify students for official examinations for Institute certificates, which are termed final examinations, the Institute provides a standard course of study in the form of serial lesson pamphlets and collateral exercises. No additional text-literature is required. The course of study thus provided covers the theory and practice of banking and such principles of law and economics as pertain to the banking business, and requires at least one hundred hours of class or correspondence work under approved instructors. In suitable cities bank employees are organized in chapters for educational work in accordance with the class method of instruction. Students outside of city chapters are associated in the Correspondence Chapter and provided with instruction by mail. Chapter organization and education are thus made uniform and universal.

PART I.—Banking.—The first part of the course thus adapted alike to chapter classes and correspondence students considers the subjects of "Wealth and Money," "Banks and Banking," "Bank Accounting," "Loans and Investments," "Clearing Houses," "Trust and Savings Institutions," and a final examination reviewing the foregoing lessons in banking.

PART II.—Law.—The second part of the course considers commercial law in general and banking law in particular, with special reference to negotiable instruments. The lesson pamphlets pertaining to law cover the subjects of "Laws of Contracts," "Agency and Trusteeship," "Sales and Bailments," "Partnerships and Corporations," "Insolvency and the Bankruptcy Law," "Negotiable Instruments," and a final examination reviewing the foregoing lessons in law.

Correspondence Chapter

Outside of study classes in city chapters, equally effective instruction is provided by the Correspondence Chapter. In correspondence instruction each student is supplied with the serial lesson pamphlets and collateral exercises. The exercises in connection with each lesson are to be submitted to instructors whenever done. The work of students thus produced is corrected and returned with such criticisms and suggestions as may be helpful in each case. Average students get little benefit from books alone. What most of them need is a teacher to direct and encourage them. The usefulness of a teacher is not so much to impart specific information as to stimulate the ambition and interest of students and to systematize and verify their work. The correspondence method of study lacks the inspiration of social contact, but the personal relationship established between students and instructors stimulates ambition and the fact that all lessons must be written insures thought and thoroughness. So far as actual acquirements of knowledge is concerned the advantages of the correspondence method of instruction fully offset its disadvantages. The cost of correspondence instruction thus provided, including lesson pamphlets and all serial as well as final examinations, is $15 for Part I pertaining to Banking and $15 for Part II pertaining to Law. Payments for each of the two parts may be made separately. One-third reduction from such rates is made to individual students who are employees of institutions that are members of the American Bankers Association.

Combination Instruction

The class method implies the personal association of students under the direction of an instructor. The correspondence method provides for the individual instruction of students from the general office of the Institute. A combination of class and correspondence methods is expedient where duly enrolled correspondence students can meet informally and discuss the lesson pamphlets among themselves. Under such circumstances no instructor is required as the examination in connection with each lesson pamphlet, as well as final examinations, are conducted by the Institute direct. In this way students get the advantages of personal association and the thoroughness of correspondence instruction. The cost to individual students of such an arrangement is not much if any more than the cost would be under a suitable instructor. While correspondence instruction is provided practically at cost, a reduction of ten per cent in tuition fees will be made for combinations of five or more students. The success of chapters in large cities has created the erroneous impression that the Institute is solely a city chapter proposition, and it is therefore only natural that ideas of Institute work should run in chapter channels. There is a certain glamor about the organization of a chapter in imitation of such associations in large cities, but if the motive is education, and not some sort of sociability, unexcelled results are obtained from combination class and correspondence instruction. The simple and thorough method of instruction thus provided requires work, but in modern banking, as well as in modern banking education, work is something to be welcomed rather than avoided.

AGGREGATE RESOURCES OF ALL REPORTING BANKS (NATIONAL, STATE, SAVINGS, PRIVATE BANKS AND LOAN AND TRUST COMPANIES) AS OF JUNE 14, 1912

Comptroller of the Currency Murray has completed a consolidated statement showing the principal items of resources and liabilities of all reporting national, state and private banks in the country.

Reports from the banks operating outside of the national system were obtained through the courtesy and assistance of the various state banking departments and by correspondence with individual banks.

The reports submitted by the banks show their condition at the close of business June 14, 1912. The banks reporting number 25,050, viz., 7,372 national banks, 13,252 state banks, 1,925 savings banks, 1,091 private banks and 1,410 loan and trust companies, being 658 more banks than reported last year. There are about 3,950 banks, chiefly brokerage concerns, with an estimated capital of $79,000,000, from which no reports can be obtained.

A summary of the reports of condition submitted by all these 25,050 banks as of June 14, 1912, shows resources aggregating $24,955,000,000 against $23,631,000,000 reported by 24,392 banks in June, 1911. Loans and discounts aggregate $13,926,000,000 against $13,046,400,000 in 1911, cash in bank, $1,572,600,000 against $1,554,200,000 in 1911, capital $2,001,800,000 against $1,952,400,000 last year, and individual deposits $17,012,000,000 against $15,906,300,000. The increase in these items during the year is as follows: loans and discounts, $879,600,000, cash in bank, $18,400,000, capital, $49,400,000, deposits, $1,105,700,000 and aggregate resources, $1,324,000,000.

The following table shows the number of reporting banks and their principal items of resources and liabilities for the fiscal years 1911 and 1912, together with the increase during the year:

Indianapolis

Excavation has been begun on a two-story brick bank and apartment building at the north-west corner of Washington street and Whittier Place for the Irvington Bank, a new institution. Brick is to be used in the general construction and the design of the building is in the colonial style. The building may be ready for occupancy within ninety days. The cost will be approximately $15,000. The banking quarters and a single storeroom will occupy the ground floor and two apartments will be on the second floor. The banking room will have a basement vault, with accommodations for the bank funds and also private safety deposit boxes.

The Irvington Bank was incorporated seven months ago. Virgil E. Bolyard is president, Robert I. Marsh, vice-president, and Jesse F.

Evans, cashier. It has experienced a gain in resources of $19,432.81 in less than three months, according to an official statement issued by the company.

Last month seventy-five new accounts were opened at the Indianapolis postal savings bank, making the total number of accounts opened since the bank was established 1,733. The number of accounts closed during the month was sixty-six, and the total number closed since the bank was started was 859, leaving 877 accounts now open. There were 469 deposits during the month, representing $11,333, and there were 198 withdrawals, representing $5,861. The amount remaining on deposit at the close of last month was $86,605.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY

New York, November 4th.—James T. Wood, vice-chairman of the executive committee of the defunct Northern Bank, surrendered himself in court to-day and pleaded not guilty to an indictment returned Friday charging him with having made a false report to the state banking department regarding a Northern Bank credit of $208,000. He was held in $2,000 bail. Joseph G. Robin, now in the Tombs awaiting sentence for wrecking the Northern Bank, of which he was the head, was a witness before the grand jury which indicted Wood.

MAY NOT USE WORD "BANK"

In an opinion, Attorney General Carmody holds that a private banker, not subject to the supervision of the state superintendent of banks, nor required by law to report to that office, and organized after May 23, 1885, may not use the word "bank" in connection with his business.

Omaha

For the month of October, 1912, the bank clearings in Kansas City were larger than any previous month in the history of the Kansas City Clearing house. The total was $280,578,853 which was $36,368,443 larger than the figures for October, 1911, showing an increase of 14.9 per cent. The comparison is all the more significant because the two big banks now merged into the Southwest National Bank of Commerce were doing business separately a year ago. The total bank clearings for the year 1912 promises to make a new record and will probably exceed 2¾ billion dollars. The greatest Kansas City clearings before this year were 2,634 million dollars in 1910. The figures in 1911 were 2,578 millions. Omaha also has made substantial gains for the month of October and, in fact, all of the cities of the Central West territory are doing a heavy clearing house business and other records may be broken for 1912.

Group 11 at Springfield

Of the group meetings held in Missouri thus far this season, that of Group 11 at Springfield, October 29 and 30 was notable both because of its excellent attendance and because of the unusually good program carried out. More than 150 bankers, many of them from points outside the group district, were present and problems and conditions of banking were discussed by recognized authorities. One of the most interesting of the banking topics was the matter of overdrafts. The banks of Springfield were found to have solved this difficult problem through their local clearing house and the overdraft is practically eliminated there. G. A. Mueller, cashier of the Bank of St. James, led the discussion and was followed by President E. J. Green of the Bank of Mountain Grove and H. H. Smith, of the Bank of Rolla. "Past Due Paper" also evoked earnest discussion in which most of the delegates took part. At the election of officers Frank H. Wright of Springfield was chosen chairman of the group and George Sheldon of Dixon was made secretary. Among those who attended this meeting were: M. P. Sturtevant, St. Louis; Jerome Thralls, Kansas City; Phil S. Kidds, St. Louis; W. S. Fallis, Kansas City; C. C. Jones, Kansas City; T. Howe Steele, Hartville; O. W. Burgess, Willow Springs; H. R. Organize Mutual Savings Association

The employes of the Fidelity Trust Company of Kansas City have organized among themselves the Fidelity Mutual Savings Association and so thoroughly has the plan worked out that several other Kansas City banks and business houses are arranging to do the same thing. Each member of the association is permitted to deposit in the treasury of the association not less than $3 nor more than $15 per month. The amounts saved are represented by shares and the money is invested by three trustees, chosen from among the employes, and to the interest earned on the investments the Fidelity Trust Company will add from time to time by way of a bonus. The advantages claimed for the plan are that it affords a method of saving regularly a certain predetermined amount, that it develops capacity for, and interest in, the making of investments, and that it makes more obvious the solidarity of interest of the men and women who are employees of the company.

Edward Dickinson To Be President of Railway Company

Following the announcement of the reorganizing of the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railway Company, is the news that the new president of the company will be Edward Dickinson, now vice-president and general manager. It is understood that Mr. Dickinson is the choice of the British stockholders who are now ready to put 15 millions of new money into the road and refinance the entire property. Mr. Dickinson has been identified with the road for several years and when a receivership of the property seemed inevitable he was retained on the understanding, so it is said, that he would head the enterprise later on. Mr. Dickinson is a thorough railroad man and has had several important offers recently, but has refused them all. He is wholly devoted to the Orient road and says that it is destined to be the best paying trans-continental road in the country.

Central West Notes

William S. Watson, president of the First National Bank of Macon county, Mo., died last week at his home in Bevier. He was 86 years old and has lived in Macon county for more than fifty years and was largely interested in coal mines.

J. Beal Sneed, who has been in jail at Amarillo, Tex., since the shooting of Al G. Boice last September, is now out under $20,000 bond. As Sneed is one of the richest bankers and cattle men in Texas the amount of the bond was of little consequence.

Clyde C. Wilcox, accused of embezzling $2,704 from the State Bank of Bancroft, near Seneca, Kas., is thought to be under arrest at Vallejo, Cal. A warrant for Wilcox' arrest was issued October 11.

Group 5 of the Kansas Bankers Association will meet in Great Bend, Kas., November 13. About 150 bankers are expected to attend.

The Guaranty State Bank of Mount Selman, Cherokee county, Tex., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000.

Four young men held up and robbed a Missouri Kansas and Texas passenger train at Wirth, Okla., last week and secured about $25,000 in currency from the express safe. One of the parcels of money taken was one which contained $4,000 in small bills and another contained $3,500 which were being shipped from the Southwest National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City to Greenville National Bank, Greenville, Tex. The shipment was duplicated next day.

ORGANIZATION OF NATIONAL BANKS

During the month of October, 1912, 26 applications to organize national banks were received. Of the applications pending, 7 were approved and 2 rejected. In the same month 15 banks, with total capital of $675,000, were authorized to begin business, of which number 13, with capital of $325,000 had individual capital of less than $50,000, and two, with capital of $350,000, individual capital of $50,000 or over.

On October 31, 1912, the total number of national banks organized was 10,285, of which 2,857 had discontinued business, leaving in existence 7,428 banks, with authorized capital of $1,053,670,435, and circulation outstanding, secured by bonds, $727,169,316. The total amount of national-bank circulation outstanding was $749,348,859, of which $22,179,543 was covered by lawful money of a like amount deposited with the treasurer of the United States on account of liquidating and insolvent national banks and associations which had reduced their circulation.

MONEY TRUST INQUIRY TO REOPEN

Word has been received in Chicago that Chairman Pujo of the house committee on banking and currency will return to Washington in a few days and will immediately take charge of the money trust investigation. A number of subpoenas issued by the committee have been served, although it is impossible to obtain an accurate list of the witnesses called and the dates set for their appearance. It is understood that the list of witnesses is practically the same that was published earlier in the summer when the subpoenas were sent over to the district attorney in New York.

GEORGE B. CALDWELL RETURNS FROM VANCOUVER

George B. Caldwell, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, who, with a number of other bankers, recently made a trip to Vancouver, B. C., to inspect the property of the Powell River Company, returned to Chicago this week. He says that Vancouver and Portland are looking better than are Seattle and Spokane, and that all are on a very much better basis and more optimistic than they were when he was in the Northwest two years ago. This is due largely to a revival of the market for logs and lumber. There is an improvement of from $3 to $4 per thousand. The Northwest this year has had larger crops than heretofore and the farmers are all doing well. The grain crop in the Pelous country, which is in the eastern part of Washington, around Spokane, is the largest in its history. Some of the grain is in the shocks in the fields yet, and will be thrashed when they can secure a sufficient number of cars to handle it. In Montana and Idaho the towns are all growing rapidly and the people are prosperous and contented. This is particularly true of Missoula and Billings. Everybody in the party was well satisfied with the trip to the property of the Powell River Company, which is about eighty miles north of Vancouver. About two millions of the two and one-half millions worth of bonds have been sold to dealers. This property is owned by the Brooks, Scanlon Company of Minneapolis, the largest operators on the Pacific Coast as well as in the South.

INSOLVENT BANK TOOK FUNDS

Memphis, Tenn.—L. T. Ward, cashier of the Bank of Collierville, Collierville, Tenn., at the time of its suspension September 28th, has been arrested on a warrant charging that he received deposits when he knew the institution was insolvent. Following the closing of the bank a general creditors' bill was filed, alleging that the bank was without cash resources as the result of defalcations. The bill stated that the assets were $135,000 and the liabilities $136,000, about $60,000 of which was due depositors.

BLUE ISLAND STATE BANK

Blue Island (Ill.) State Bank, organized by Messrs. J. M. and C. H. Lobaugh, respectively president and cashier, in September, 1911, and which began business the first of this year, is making satisfactory progress in the development of its business. The various industries located at Blue Island are flourishing, and the population is increasing each month, so that it is now around ten or twelve thousand, a community which easily can support two banks.

MICHIGAN BANK SHORTAGE MADE GOOD

A shortage has been discovered by National Bank Examiner H. E. Johnson in the First National Bank, Manistee, Mich., amounting to $44,000, that amount having been taken by John W. Sibben, assistant cashier of the bank, through manipulation of the certificates of deposit register. The defalcation has extended over a period of fifteen years. The money is stated to have been lost through stock speculation in Chicago. The amount of the shortage has been entirely made good, and the bank will, therefore, lose nothing.

NEW SAVINGS BANK ORDER

Savings banks in New York State are not authorized to prefer deposits of postal savings banks or of court funds through a pledge of collateral securities, guaranteeing the payment of such deposits, according to an opinion by Attorney-General Carmody. He also holds that savings banks cannot guarantee a fixed rate of interest on such funds.

BANK INCREASES CAPITAL STOCK

First National of Modesto, Cal., has increased its capital stock from $100,000 to $200,000. Officers of the bank are as follows: W. N. Steele, president; E. C. Peck, vice-president; G. R. Stoddard, cashier, and J. A. Dunn and L. B. Carpenter, assistant cashiers.

CANADIAN BANK MERGER

The absorption of the Bank of New Brunswick by the Bank of Nova Scotia, recently rumored, has been confirmed. It has been announced that terms have been agreed upon between the banks and that the necessary meetings of shareholders to ratify the arrangements will be called in due course. The terms are that shareholders of the Bank of New Brunswick shall be given share for share, together with a bonus of $10 per share. This amalgamation will send the Bank of Nova Scotia up to about the fifth place among the Canadian banks in point of assets, their total being increased to practically $80,000,000. It will also probably result in the closing of a certain number of bank offices in the Maritime Provinces, where up to the present the two institutions have been competitors.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

The din of advancing prosperity is heard in the Northwest through reports from various sources, indicating that everything is full up—granaries, banks, railroad cars, private hoards of money, order books of traveling salesmen, deposit accounts, etc. St. Paul bank clearings are a straw in the wind. On the day before election they reached $2,886,013, the highest in 1912, and one of the highest in the clearing house history. The $3,000,000 mark has been reached only a few times. On September 3d, the day after Labor Day, the total was the only close approach to the November record. A year ago November 3d, the clearings were $2,314,176. It was the twenty-first consecutive day that the clearings had passed the $2,000,000 mark. Clearings for October totaled $60,907,170, and for the year they are $468,638,618, a gain of $35,071,271. The city has only $63,935,900 to make up to reach the total record for last year.

Bankers Interviewed

President E. H. Bailey of the First National said: "The big increase for October shows far greater business activity than a year ago. The remainder of the year should also show a good gain." W. A. Miller, vice-president First National: "Jobbers and other large business houses are doing 10 to 50 per cent more business than in 1911. The clearings fail to do justice to St. Paul, as a business city, because many large accounts are not carried to the clearing house." Kenneth Clark, president Merchants National: "A great commercial activity is seen in the clearings for October. Conditions should continue good a long time." George H. Prince, vice-president Merchants National: "The showing is greater than any one anticipated, and there should be still a greater natural expansion." A. L. Alness, president Scandinavian American Bank: "All of our customers report big increases. I never saw the situation in the Northwest looking so good." J. R. Mitchell, president Capital National: "I expect to see greater increases because commercial activities are becoming greater each day. Next year should be even better." W. B. Geery, vice-president: "Practically every business house in St. Paul is better off than a year ago. We should enjoy one of the longest periods of prosperity we have ever known in the Northwest." Ben Baer, president American National: "Country banks report an enormous increase in deposits. Everybody in the Northwest feels cheerful."

Foresee Unprecedented Prosperity

Freight receipts and shipments from Twin City terminals indicate unprecedented business in sight. The Association of Commerce report for St. Paul alone shows 21,482 cars received in September and 14,422 shipped out. Cattle totaled 2,312 car loads, a gain of 1,029 cars.

For October, the Minneapolis bank clearings were $147,711,583, the second largest month in the city history. A year ago these were $122,274,359. For the fifty-one business days of the crop year, ending October 31st, the total receipts were 51,938,510 bushels. Never before has 50,000,000 bushels been received so early in the crop year in sixty days after September 1st. G. H. Tunall, chief deputy grain inspector, predicts that the record will be passed this year by 35,000,000 bushels. Minneapolis railroad agents report business better than ever before.

The Security National Bank review for October says: "The prosperity of the country is real and the condition of business satisfactory. The greatest business activity is found in the states touching the Great Lakes and the Pacific coast."

On Board Northwestern National

Mr. Decker was succeeded a year ago on the board by J. A. Latta, vice-president of the Northwestern National, who remains on the board. Other bank members of the board are: F. A. Chamberlain, president of the Security National; C. T. Jaffray and A. A. Crane, vice-presidents of the First National; T. B. Janney, president of the Farmers & Mechanics Savings Bank.

Believe Hill Will Acquire First National

Expectation continues that James H. Hill, recently purchaser of the St. Paul Second National, will get the First National by January 1, 1913. The First recently acquired the Northwestern Trust Co. President E. H. Bailey says he cannot say who the would-be purchaser of the stock is. He says that under the terms of the offer the shareholders are to get $335 for each holding. The board and resident shareholders have already agreed to the deal. The capital of the First is $1,000,000. The book value is 228, the latest quotation $278 bid and $290 asked. On the basis of the sale Mr. Hill is pay $50,000 bonus, or on the basis of the book value, $1,070,000. Mr. Bailey said that with the Trust Company, the bank will be able to protect interests of stockholders by negotiating farm loans and financial work a national bank can't do.

gridiron election day. Instead of taking base opportunity of not working on a legal holiday, they spent the forenoon laboring back and forth across the field. Former high school and college players were on the two teams. On Thanksgiving Day picked players from the two Twin City bank chapters will play a game of football.

Were in Minneapolis

C. W. Folds and J. F. McCarthy of Chicago attended the "Made in Minneapolis" exhibition last week and then went over to Stillwater to attend the sale of the Northwestern Thresher Company to M. Rumley & Co. The Chicago men retire as directors of the old company.

John T. Baxter Honored

John T. Baxter, vice-president and counsel, has been elected president of the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company, Minneapolis, to succeed L. K. Thompson, resigned after seven years, as first president. E. W. Decker, president Northwestern National bank was made director to succeed Mr. Thompson.

Twin City Bankers Club Meet

The Twin City Bankers club had its regular fall business meeting Thursday night at the Minneapolis club. E. H. Bailey, St. Paul First National, is president.

J. F. Wathey in Pioneer Press

Conservatism carried to an extreme point may have caused to be neglected lines of progress by St. Paul banks that are now to be developed, writes J. F. Wathey in the Pioneer Press. What is to be done to stir things up Mr. Wathey outlines as follow: "Methods for increasing the city's money supply and new deposits to be made objects of study; closer relations with rural banks in the Northwest to get deposits now carried in the East; one institution contemplates a savings department; trust companies are being projected; new methods for increasing facilities for handling business."

WYMORE (NEB.) BANK HAS NEW CASHIER

Wymore, Neb.—Jacob Halderman of Iola, Kan., who has purchased a controlling interest, succeeds Floyd High as cashier of the Farmers & Merchants bank. Mr. Halderman comes from the vicinity of Pawnee, Neb. He was bank examiner two years but of late he has been interested in an ice plant in Iola. Mr. High goes to Omaha as cashier of the recently organized state bank.

BANK CHANGES AT GREAT FALLS

At a recent meeting of the directors of the First National of Great Falls, Montana, Mark Skinner tendered his resignation and it was accepted. Mr. Skinner resigned from the First National to accept a position with the Commercial Trust & Savings Bank. Mr. Skinner's former position will be filled by W. A. Brown, who will have for an assistant S. J. Moore. Both Mr. Brown and Mr. Moore have been with the First National for over ten years.

Springfield (Ill.) Correspondence

Preparations are under way for the third annual meeting of the McHenry County Federation of Bankers at Woodstock. All the bankers of the county will be entertained by the Woodstock bankers in the Odd Fellows' Temple. The visiting bankers will be invited to a dinner, after which regular business will be fully discussed.

New Blue Mound Bank Open

The new state bank of Blue Mound was opened for business last Wednesday morning, October 30th. The cash deposits the first day were reported to be $20,000. The new institution received its charter from the state, October 29th. J. A. McClure is cashier. The other officers are: C. H. Moomey, president, W. O. Matthew, vice-president. Directors—E. W. Crow, Wm. Hartwig, A. C. Zeigler, C. H. Moomey and W. O. Matthew.

Deposits Money For 250 Years

Adolph Melzer, wealthy retired soap manufacturer, has presented to Mayor Heilman, of Evansville, and the city council, a certificate of deposit for $1,000 which is to remain in bank for 250 years and draw compound interest. At the end of that time it will amount to $19,956,400. The money is to be used two and a half centuries from now for public improvements which he believes the city will be unable to make from its own money because of debts. Mr. Melzer plans to distribute all of his wealth to other cities by making endowments for public improvements to be made in the distant future.

Woodstock State Bank Will Move

At a recent meeting of the stockholders of the McHenry County State Bank, Woodstock, it was decided to purchase the old Whitson property on the east side of the public square to be fitted out as an up-to-date banking house. The present place, with their rapid growth, has proven to be too small and this step was found to be necessary.

Adopt Trustee Method

The trustee method of settling the affairs of the defunct private bank of Brown & Co., in Blue Mound, has been definitely adopted and the trustees are now in control of the property. They are John B. Beckett, George D. Miller and Ezra W. Crow. At present they are engaged in making collections due the institution and already have sold some of the corn and wheat belonging to the company. This week they disposed of the stock and machinery on the Brown farm. It was expected that the proceeds of the sale would be between $3,000 and $4,000.

Bank Withdrawing From Business

The Olney Trust & Savings bank, organized by H. R. Fields last August, is withdrawing from business. Depositors have been notified to call for their money and the affairs of the bank are being settled up. The safe and office fixtures will be taken over by Mr. Fields and will be taken to Belmont, Wabash county, where Mr. Fields will personally take charge of a banking business.

The Olney Trust & Savings was organized rather suddenly last August with the announcement that in a short time the bank would organize under the state law. The officers were William Parker of Parkersburg, president, H. R. Fields, vice-president, and J. S. Brown, of Bridgeport, cashier. No statement is given as to the cause of the closing of the bank. It has been reported that local interest was not sufficient to encourage Bridgeport investors into taking a large portion of the capital stock of $50,000 to enable it to organize under the state law.

Crystal Lake Bank Change

A change has been made in the control and management of the State Bank of Crystal Lake, by which James R. Jackman retires from the presidency of the institution and is succeeded by Fremont Hoy of Woodstock. Clarence F. Hoy, who for some time past has been identified with the Bank of Huntley, has been named as vice-president. Lynn Richards, who some months ago retired from his position as deputy circuit clerk at Woodstock to accept the position of cashier at the Crystal Lake Bank, will continue in that capacity. The change of control was brought about by the sale to Mr. Hoy and his associates of 140 shares of the bank's stock. With the resignation of the old directors, a new directorate has been formed, so that a complete reorganization has been brought about. The new board of directors consists of Fremont Hoy, Fred L. Colby, E. A. Nelson, Lynn Richards, J. R. Jackman, Clarence F. Hoy and Fred B. Bennett.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, Nov. 4th.—The Spokane Clearing House Association entertained a large party of Chicago, Minneapolis and St. Paul bankers October 28th, giving a banquet in the evening. George B. Caldwell, president of the American Investment Bankers Association, made a short address, saying:

"We are looking for safe and sane investment of the funds that are entrusted to our care, and we are looking to the acquaintances formed at this time to put us in the way of such. The western field offers attractions because of higher rates and the good securities offered, and eastern capital is ready for safe and sane propositions in the West. We realize the industrial development that must come to Spokane, and all conditions are right excepting the money. The East has the capital, and good profits from sound investments in the West will make that capital available."

First Contract for Hotel Awarded

The first contract for the $2,000,000 Davenport hotel in Spokane was awarded to the Engineering Construction Company of Spokane, for approximately $37,960. The contract includes excavations for and erection of the basement walls, curb walls and foundations. The work is to be completed in one hundred days, the site being now cleared of buildings. Every foundation in the big hotel, which will be one of the finest in the West, will go to rock, soundings having disclosed rock at depths varying from eighteen to forty feet. The Davenport hotel is financed and managed by a group of Spokane capitalists, prominent among whom is Louis M. Davenport, a pioneer Spokane restaurant man. In August a bond issue of $750,000 was taken by a St. Louis banking house, and the balance of the $2,000,000 is furnished by Spokane men.

Harvesting Grain

After harvesting a splendid crop of grain in the Spokane country, farmers are again aided by fine weather conditions for fall-sown wheat. Heavy rains in many sections have given the new crop an excellent start, while in many instances a year ago the start was far from good on account of the dryness of the soil. Reports continue to show that grain is going rapidly to market where the harvest was near normal. In Montana the movement is not so pronounced on account of the lateness of the season. Only in the north part of the Big Bend country of Washington and in south Idaho is there evidence of grain being held. Estimates for the Pacific Northwest show that 40 to 70 per cent of the grain has left the farmers' hands, and indications are that the movement this year is heavier than last.

Plan to Eliminate "Middlemen"

Officers of the Farmers Educational and Co-operative Union, with the aid of other farmers' organizations and bankers, are working out a plan to eliminate "middlemen" in the famous Palouse country (immediately south of Spokane) by organizing a $500,000 co-operative farmers' company to establish a chain of stores and banks. It is proposed to have all stock owned by men directly interested in agriculture, and the Farmers State Bank of Colfax, Wash., is to underwrite the stock and finance the proposition. Farmers and bankers have been quietly formulating the plan for two years, and are about prepared to proceed to organize by having 5,000 farmers take $100 worth of stock. The success attained by Palouse farmers in conducting co-operative grain warehouses gives them confidence in launching the larger plan.

Will Erect Public Stadium

Between three and four acres of land just below the falls of the Spokane river, and within five minutes' walk of the heart of the city, have been purchased by the Spokane park board as a site for a large public stadium. The land was brought from the Spokane & Inland Empire Railroad Company for $25,000. When built, the stadium will be the scene of large public functions.

Banking Notes

Spokane County Treasurer Zach Stewart is collecting half a million dollars, the second half of the county taxes, which become delinquent December 1st.

R. Lewis Rutter, vice-president of the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company, has returned from a trip to Ellensburg and Goldendale, Wash. He reports unusual prosperity in those districts.

Representatives of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad recently visited the Wenatchee Valley in central Washington to investigate conditions prior to taking over the Wenatchee canal. A plan considered by the visitors contemplates putting water on between 7,000 and 10,000 additional acres. In the party were: P. M. Benedict, secretary to President Darius Miller of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy; Clark R. Fickes, engineer; E. A. Howard, a large land holder of Nebraska, and H. B. Scott, William Carson and C. E. Perkins, Jr., stockholders in the railroad, and bankers of Iowa.

Connor Malott, head of the mortgage department of the Spokane & Eastern Trust Co., has gone to New York and New England on a business trip.

D. W. Twohy, president of the Old National, is in New York.

P. P. Weber, president of the First National of Kellogg, Idaho, was a visitor in Spokane this week.

Seattle

Bank clearings for last month were $8,194,242.42 larger than for the same month last year, as shown by the statement of the Seattle Clearing House Association. The total clearings for October, 1911, were $50,757,497.20, as against $58,954,742.62 for last month. Clearings for the fiscal week ending were $12,492,397.49, as against $11,080,278.18, or a gain of $1,412,119.01 over 1911.

The Chehalis County Bank at Aberdeen has changed hands. George F. Nyere, its president, and his associates, purchased the interest of W. J. Patterson, head of the Hayes & Hayes Banking house, and his associates, giving Mr. Nyere control. Mr. Nyere, while he has been president of the bank for the past year, owned little stock. He was formerly in the banking business in Portland.

R. F. Parkhurst, formerly assistant cashier of the First National of Seattle, who was convicted in 1909 of embezzling $50,000 from the bank and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment, has been paroled and will take a position with a business house in Seattle. Parkhurst's record in the Federal penitentiary at McNeil's Island has been flawless and most of the money he took has been restored to the bank.

SEATTLE NATIONAL ON NORTHWEST

In its October issue of "Bank Trade and Crop Bulletin," the Seattle National takes this roseate view of Northwest conditions:

"There has been no walking backwards in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. There has been no looking backwards by an exhausted people in an exhausted country. Here, work has invigorated and not exhausted. Here, development has replenished and not emptied. Here, thought has been on the days that are to come and not on those that have passed away. Nor have the people of this great commonwealth ever stood still. Theirs has been a progressive life; theirs a progressive religion. 'Move forward' has been the command. Restless, energetic, work-loving, they have unyieldingly struggled, suffered, sacrificed for what they have achieved. They have experienced the weight of burdens that always distinguish a new and growing country and masterfully have solved the problems which from time to time have confronted them."

The issue illustrates and describes the great dock and terminal system which has been projected for Seattle's harbor.

EDMONTON NEWS

Edmonton, Alta., Nov. 4th.—Bank clearings in Edmonton for October totaled $21,310,359, as against $12,583,000 the same month a year ago, and $17,702,793 in September, 1912. The total for the first ten months this year is $174,801,701, as compared with $93,119,785 for the same time in 1911. This is the first time in the history of the city that the $20,000,000 mark has been passed in any month. It is due to normal increases in business, only a small percentage being represented by real estate transactions.

Customs house receipts for October amounted to $132,000, as against $72,250 for the same month a year ago. The total for the first ten months of 1912 is $1,230,834, as compared with $555,138 for the same period in 1911. There are also increases in stamp sales and other postoffice business. Building operations during October involved a total expenditure of $888,950 as against $389,650, the same month in 1911. The total for the first ten months of 1912 is $13,162,892, as compared with $3,927,753, the same period in 1911. For the fiscal year ended October 31st, the expenditure for buildings amounted to $13,297,847.

Advance reports from the heads of the several departments having charge of the public utilities in Edmonton for the fiscal year ended October 31st show gains over 1911. The electric light department estimates its surplus at $75,000, while the telephone department has a balance of $6,000, despite heavy capital charges. The street railway department will have a deficit of about $15,000, due largely to extraordinary improvements and a higher wage schedule. The water works department, which reported a deficit of $18,000 in 1911, expects to cut this down to less than half that amount for 1912. Other departments show substantial gains.

The municipality has expended a large amount of money for improvements and betterments in the last twelve months, and it is estimated that between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000 will be required during the fiscal year beginning November 1st. The city is rushing its building work. Commissioner Chalmers has entered into an agreement with the Edmonton local of the Bricklayers and Masons International Union to import craftsmen and pay their transportation from outside points. The local union guarantees that the men will remain in the city's employ until the work is completed. The prevailing scale for bricklayers is 75 cents an hour, nine hours constituting a day's work. In some instances contractors are paying 80 cents an hour, with 50 per cent added for overtime.

Wholesale and retail merchants in Edmonton report large increases in business this year over 1911, and architects and contractors say they are two years behind in their work. It is estimated that building operations in Edmonton will amount to between $20,000,000 and $25,000,000 next year.

Managers of banks say there is a steadily increasing demand for money for buildings and business extensions, and mortgage houses report there is no difficulty in handling loans. Outside capital continues to come in for investment purposes and on the whole every prospect is that the coming year will show larger gains than were made in 1912 over 1911.

Grain is moving steadily and heads of traffic departments are bending every effort to avert blockades. The weather is all that could be desired to facilitate shipping. The grain crop was the largest in the history of the district, and the quality of wheat, oats and barley is higher than in previous years.

There is also much activity in the country districts, where raw lands are being prepared for cultivation. More than 5,000 homesteads in the Edmonton district have been entered since the beginning of the year. This means an added rural population of at least 20,000, in addition to which fully 3,000 farms have been bought outright by homeseekers. The city market also maintains a healthy tone.

Construction work is progressing on the various lines of railroads out of Edmonton, and new territory is being tapped. Manufacturing plants are being established in Edmonton, and in towns throughout the district, and existing factories are being enlarged to meet trade requirements.

R. Mason, a capitalist of London, Eng., who is in Edmonton with Dr. J. E. Cox, also of London, said in an interview here on November 1st that with the exception of trust funds practically all available money for investment purposes is being transferred to Canada from Great Britain to escape the heavy burdens imposed by the Lloyd George financial plan. Mr. Mason already has invested several hundred thousand dollars in western Canada and expects to largely increase his investments during the present visit in Edmonton and central Alberta. Mr. Mason says he is convinced there is no better field for investment in the world than Canada. His policy is to buy only inside business properties which, he finds, pay the best returns. He pays cash for all he buys, thus eliminating the interest charges, and he declares that by selling on terms he has been able to realize his full purchase money in the majority of cases on the first installment.

W. A. Wright, assistant manager of the Imperial Bank of Canada at Vancouver, and formerly inspector, has been appointed assistant manager of the Bank of Edmonton. The growing importance of Edmonton and the large business the Imperial bank does in this city has induced the head office to appoint an assistant to G. R. F. Kirkpatrick, who has been manager since the branch was opened nearly twenty-two years ago. When Mr. Kirkpatrick opened the bank in Edmonton, it was the only branch of a chartered bank north of Calgary, and the whole banking business of the country was transacted by himself and one assistant. To-day this bank has in the Edmonton main office and branches a staff of fifty.

San Francisco

In its financial letter of October 25th the American National of San Francisco says:

"In wholesale lines, trade is generally better than it was at this period last year. The business of the telegraph companies also shows a substantial increase. Some complaint is heard in retail circles, where trade in fall and winter goods has been retarded by the warm, bright weather prevailing all through the month. Collections are slow in some lines. Bank deposits have increased during the past two months, due mainly to increases in loans, and there is a very active business in foreign bills of exchange, incidental to fall shipments of fruit and grain.

"The abstract of reports made to the controller of the currency by the national banks on September 4th, shows a very satisfactory condition in the reserves held by the banks. The percentages are fractionally higher than they were on September 1, 1911, showing that the banks were well prepared to meet the unusual demands of the harvest season. Of the 797 millions of national bank resources in the Pacific states, nearly one-third is found in San Francisco alone.

"The harvest season is progressing satisfactorily in California, and the returns to growers, though perhaps falling short of last year's figures, will be quite large. The California barley crop is estimated this season at from 450,000 to 475,000 tons, as compared with 518,000 tons in 1911. Prices have ranged lower than last year, and the exportation has been mainly in the direction of Europe. The 1912 wheat crop in this state is put at 175,000 to 200,000 tons, as compared with 228,000 tons in 1911. The shipments of fresh deciduous fruits, reported by the California Fruit Distributors, were 11,625 cars to October 16th, as compared with 10,405 cars to the same date last year. It is probable that the season will close with total shipments some 500 carloads less than the record of 1911, the decrease being almost wholly in grapes. In dried fruits the output promises to be very heavy. Indications are that the 1911 pack of prunes, amounting to some 95,000 tons, will be equaled if not surpassed this year. Raisins will probably reach a higher total by 10 or 15 per cent, the outlook being for the largest crop in the history of that industry. Both prunes and raisins are being sold on a much lower basis than in 1911, and the growers will not profit so largely as they have done in the past two years. Coincident with the marketing of deciduous fruits, the new crop of citrous fruits is beginning to move. Orange picking has already begun in Tulare county, and within another month the golden fruit will be pouring into Eastern markets to supply the holiday requirements. The outlook in this industry was never more promising, and those in close touch with the situation predict that shipments of oranges, lemons and grape fruit from California during the coming season will total 53,000 carloads, as compared with 40,000 last year, and 46,394 in the record season 1910-11."

Sacramento.—Notable increase in the financial transactions of the state during the last two years is shown by State Treasurer Roberts in his biennial report for the period ending June 30, 1912. During the biennial period covered in the report the total receipts (exclusive of transfers) were $39,323,132.21, exceeding the receipts of the two previous years by $3,736,767.68, and the payments (exclusive of transfers) were $36,620,818.17, exceeding the payments of the two preceding years by $930,627.50. The receipts exceeded the payments by $2,702,314.04. The balance on hand in the State Treasury June 30th was $9,903,533.86, while on June 30, 1910, the balance was $2,702,314.04 less or $7,201,219.82. There has been a large increase in the amount of State funds deposited with banks authorized under the provisions of the State Deposit Act. On June 30, 1908, the end of the first year under the act, the deposits aggregated $3,668,150 in 82 banks; on June 30, 1910, $5,636,000, in 151 banks; June 30, 1911, $5,435,990 in 150 banks, and on June 30, 1912, $8,733,360 in 195 banks. The amount of interest earned on deposits has increased, and the average interest rate has also increased. The total interest collected at the end of the 60th fiscal year, June 30, 1908, was $87,733.87; on June 30, 1910, $101,915.99; on June 30, 1911, $102,950.35, and on June 30, 1912, $163,412.60.

Sacramento.—The Capital National has taken steps to build a handsome six-story bank building to cost about $150,000. Half of the first story will be used for bank purposes and the other half for stores. The remaining five stories will be devoted to offices. The building will be modern in all its appointments. The structure will be finished in brick, the same as the present building, and terra cotta columns and ornamentations to match. The first story of the present structure will be retained.

C. M. Buck has resigned as president of the Citizens National, Faribault, Minn. He is succeeded by H. F. Kester, who was vice-president. Mr. Buck has sold his interests in the bank to the present directors.

Cordova, Tenn.—The Bank of Cordova has been organized with $20,000 capital. Its officers are: W. G. Allen, president; J. B. Ellis, 1st vice-president; W. M. Lurly, 2d vice-president, and A. F. Falls, cashier. The bank will erect its own building.

Millwood, Ga.—The Millwood Bank has been organized here.

Des Moines, Nov. 6th.—If any city can produce more new bank buildings in a single year than Des Moines, we would like to know about it. Four new structures are now in process of completion and will be occupied within the coming fortnight or so. In fact, the Mechanics Savings is already in its handsome new building and President Gilger E. MacKinnon is wearing a most expansive smile as he sits in his mahogany-trimmed office and greets his many friends. Just across the street, the Central State is finishing a building that will perhaps be the finest bank building in the state. It has not been opened for inspection, but those who have been permitted to peep within declare that this building is going to surprise the natives. In East Des Moines, the Home Savings is getting ready to move into its new quarters and the Iowa Trust & Savings is likewise preparing to stow itself away in the beautiful new six-story Teachout building. Of course each bank will have a formal opening, and it is said that the rivalry as to which will give away the finest souvenirs has reached such a stage that one banker is considering twenty-dollar gold pieces as souvenirs when his opening is held. Just to keep up the interest in new bank buildings, the Des Moines National announces that it will add another story to its new building within a few months, and the German Savings is planning a new structure following the passing of the controlling interest to John Cavanaugh and John Hogan, two aggressive young financiers. Des Moines banks are booming and prosperous.

Increase in Capital Stock

In addition to its announcement of another story to its building, the Des Moines National, through President Arthur Reynolds, announces a probable increase of capital stock from $500,000 to $750,000 on January 1st. This institution has made remarkable progress and the deposits are now nearly $6,500,000. This is an increase of a million dollars in the past year. The directors have not taken definite action toward this capital stock increase, but it is regarded as certain to come when the annual meeting is held.

Forger Given Seven Years

Bankers over the country will doubtless be pleased to know that Charles E. Baldwin is now serving a seven years' sentence in the penitentiary for working a neat forgery on the First National at Hawarden, by which he secured $3,300. Mr. Baldwin was captured at Vancouver, returned to Hawarden and sent up. When he first arrived in Hawarden he told the people that he was a traveling man heavily interested in an estate at Brooklyn, N. Y. He forged the name of the Brooklyn Trust Company and of the judge of the probate court in that city to a statement showing his connection with this estate. Then, while he wormed his way into the good graces of the financiers in Hawarden, he managed to borrow sums totaling $3,300 before he skipped.

On Trail of Clever Forger

Secretary P. W. Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association is making frantic endeavors to locate the chap who is traveling through the East, registering as Earl Dunbar from Des Moines and passing checks without number on the Iowa National of this city, in which he has not a cent and never did have. Occasionally he varies the performance by signing his name as John M. Boyd. Thus far he has secured something like $1,000 and the A. B. A., while on his trail, has not landed him at this writing. Dunbar has his wife with him, it seems, and he has been working at Portland, Me., Boston, Hornersville, N. Y. and other eastern points. He formerly served time, according to information received by Mr. Hall, and it is said that one of his victims is a philanthropically inclined woman at Portland who advanced him $20 when he was released from prison. A few days ago, Dunbar and his wife visited this woman, thanked her, told her what a fine business he had developed at Des Moines, gave her a bogus check for $50 in payment of the $20 she advanced him when he was freed and ended by securing her endorsement to a bunch of other checks which he cashed in Portland before "blowing the burg." The $30 excess of the $50 check which Dunbar gave the woman was to be used by her in helping out other poor victims such as Dunbar had been. This fellow seems to have unlimited nerve, Secretary Hall says.

Bloodhounds Trace Bank Robber

Bloodhounds have often been used in Iowa to track bank robbers, but the dogs were used successfully at Gilbertsville the other day to run down the parties who had thrown a big stone through the plate glass window of the German Savings of that city the preceding night. When the bankers reached the place the next morning they determined to capture the guilty parties if possible. Accordingly the sidewalk was covered with planks and dogs at Springfield, Ill. were summoned. Upon their arrival the walk was uncovered and the dogs were quick to take up the trail. They ran through streets, alleys and back yards until they struck a road leading to the country. This road was followed for two and a half miles, when the dogs went into a stable, smelled a buggy and two horses, then took to the corn fields. They led the officers to a man who was husking corn, then they stopped. The man was taken back to Gilbertsville, where he confessed to the act and said that his only excuse was too much liquor aboard on the preceding night.

Gain in Clearings

Des Moines bankers found the month of October most satisfactory. The clearings for the month totaled $23,563,545.71. As compared with the clearings for the corresponding month last year, this is a gain of $4,497,920.49. For the final week of the month the clearings totaled $4,583,314.47, an increase over the clearings for the corresponding week last year of $733,679.80.

Will Investigate Question of Assignment of Wages

An interesting point involving the question of assignment of wages has been taken to the supreme court by the Milwaukee railroad, which seeks a ruling. G. W. Vanlaningham, a short loan agent, claimed $4 on an assignment of wages of A. A. Smith, a brakeman. In the lower court, the loan agent won out, but the railroad wants to know more about such affairs. The outcome will be of interest to all railroads, as they have strict rules relative to the assignment of the wages of the employees.

Case Settled by Bank Paying

An echo of the case of L. R. Hough, once a packing house magnate in Des Moines who failed at the business, was up for a hearing in the courts at Des Moines, but settled out of court. Alex G. Buchanan & Sons sued the Century Savings of Des Moines for $8,796.69, alleging that Hough bought stock from the plaintiffs at Kansas City, shipped it to Chicago and deposited a draft on the Chicago firm in the bank with the bill of lading. He would then check on the draft to pay Buchanan. The question arose when Hough failed, whether the draft on the Chicago firm represented actual cash in the bank. The bank refused to recognize his checks because of his insolvency. The case started in for a ten days' session, but was settled by the bank paying Buchanan $250.

Farmers Savings at Colo

Senator A. B. Cummins took an active part in the laying of the corner stone of the new Farmers Savings at Colo one day last week. The senator was campaigning in Story county with Judge S. F. Prouty, candidate for re-election to congress and a close personal friend of the senator. The directors of the bank seized the opportunity to pull off a very interesting program and Senator Cummins in a very brief address laid the stone. There are sixty-six stockholders in this institution and they include the best known farmers and business men in that section.

Forger Up for Trial in Tacoma

E. DeSalyards, captured in Denver on charges of forging a check for $45 on the Mechanics Savings at Des Moines, is now at Tacoma, where he faces a charge of much more serious import, brought by a bank of that city. It has been discovered that DeSalyards once did time in Iowa, or at least that is the information in the hands of Secretary Hall of the I. B. A. He has relatives at Lake Park. His wife is at Mason, Wis., where she is staying at the home of a sister. DeSalyards went under the name of E. Southern in Iowa. His picture is being sent broadcast.

Get Burglary Insurance

Secretary Hall of the I. B. A. is sending out a grist of blotters designed to call the attention of bankers to the necessity for burglar insurance. As Secretary Hall is representative of a company and the commissions derived from selling insurance in the concern go to the protection fund of the association, he urges all members to bear him in mind in placing this class of risks.

BY JOHN J. BIDDISON

Ugly stories that have not yet the warrant of official statements are out following the disappearance a week ago of Peter Lutz, cashier of the bank of Zell, S. D., a small town near Faulkton and Redfield, S. D. Lutz left town a week ago, driving to Redfield, and no report of him has been heard since that time. An investigation of his accounts was made Saturday by a state examiner and no statements were given out, though unofficial stories hint at a shortage of about $12,000. It is reported in this connection that the shortages are covered by forged notes and manipulation of certificates of deposits.

BANKS NOT FOR DIRECTORS

Albany, N. Y.—That the statutes of New York do require a director of a trust company or a bank to administer diligently and honestly the affairs of the institution with which he is identified, and that an indictment for such a failure can be sustained, was the decision last week of the Court of Appeals in the case of Charles J. Knapp of Deposit, charged with having wilfully neglected his duties as a director of the Binghamton Trust Company.

Knapp was a member of the private firm of Knapp Bros., and the specific charge was that he obtained a loan of $2,500 for his firm from the trust company, of which he was a director, when he knew the firm was insolvent. The question came up on demurrers to an indictment for violation of section 297 of the penal law. The opinion of the court, which was written by Judge Vann, said:

"The first count of the indictment must fall because there is no statute which requires the directors of a trust company to diligently and honestly administer its affairs. The common law requires it, but this count is for the alleged violation of a statute and it cannot be upheld, unless facts are set forth showing that a statute has been violated. Mindful of this necessity, the people try to make a statutory command out of the promise made by a director in the oath of office which he is required to take and file before entering upon his duties. As said by the Appellate Division: 'The defendant is charged with the commission of a crime because he lawfully omitted to do what he said he would do when he took his oath of office as a director.' A promise through an official oath to diligently and honestly administer the affairs of a corporation is not a command by the legislature to thus administer them, so as to meet the requirements of Section 297 of the penal law. Promise to do or to omit is not a command by the legislature to do or to omit, even when the form of the promise is prescribed by statute.

"Although it is the duty of directors to so administer, the duty is not created by statute, but springs from the common law. The question is not whether the defendant violated his oath, but whether he lawfully did an act expressly forbidden by law or lawfully omitted to perform a duty imposed upon him by law, which means an act required or forbidden by statute. The wrong done was a failure to obey some statute when no statute commanded obedience.

"Stringent restrictions are placed about the directors, so that when acting both for the bank and for one of themselves at the same time, they must keep within certain prescribed lines required by the legislature as essential to safety in the banking business. Hence, when the legislature commanded that loans exceeding in the aggregate one-tenth of its capital should not be made by any trust company to any director directly or indirectly' it intended to include such transactions as the one here involved. It did not mean to limit prohibition to a director borrowing in his own name and not as a member of a firm."

In touching upon the liability of Knapp and holding that he must stand trial on three counts of the indictment, Judge Vann says:

"Banking institutions are not created for the benefit of directors. While directors have great powers as directors they have no special privileges as individuals. They cannot use the assets of the bank for their own benefit, except as permitted by the law. Stringent restrictions are placed upon them, so that when acting both for the bank and for themselves at the same time, they must keep within certain prescribed lines regarded by the legislature as essential to safety in banking business."

According to the indictments, the firm of Knapp Brothers were indebted to the Binghamton Trust Company for over $24,000.

CALIFORNIA STATE BANKING REPORT

In the third annual report of the state banking department to the governor, just made public, Superintendent of Banks W. R. Williams made a number of important recommendations. One of the most important is that suggesting that a more liberal policy should be adopted by permitting loans to firms, partnerships, companies and corporations in which directors, officers and employees of commercial banks are interested. Mr. Williams says many of the infractions of the law have their source in illegal burdens which were assumed by the banks before the present bank act became operative. For violations of comparatively minor provisions of the law he advocates fines instead of prosecution for misdemeanor. For major offenses, which jeopardize the stability of institutions, the penalties should be in the category of felonies. A solution is proposed for the problem that confronts banks holding bonds now illegal for bank investment under the State banking act. After referring to the law which provides that banks shall rid themselves of these investments gradually, but sets no date when all such investments shall have been worked off, Williams recommends that the law be so amended that all of the investments which were legal when made but which may have become illegal be eliminated within five years by writing off at least 20 per cent of the original book value of the unsold part every year until the full amount has been retired. He declares that this will not inflict any injury nor will it expose either the stock market or the banks to danger.

Other recommendations made by Williams are: That the sale of corporate stock be safeguarded; that the law barring a director of a banking institution who hypothecates his stock from ever being a director again be amended to provide a reasonable penalty; that school banks be fostered; that the so-called immigrant banks be regulated and brought under State supervision; that a maximum for a savings bank loan may be fixed; that the capital of savings banks be required to keep pace in some ratio with their deposits when the deposits exceed $10,000,000; that a new classification of banking corporations be made according to the population of the localities in which they are doing or desire to do business, and that the capitalization be based upon this classification; that expert investigation of every security which a savings bank may accept as an investment be provided by the state, the applicant seeking to receive favorable consideration of its securities to bear the expense.

Williams would have the state supervise strictly all persons offering securities or investments of any character, and punish by heavy fines anyone doing any form of banking illegally. National banks which are acting as depositaries for the funds of state banks must obey the state code,

Williams declares, and national banks that seek to accept funds in a savings department are warned that they cannot, under the state law, advertise as savings banks.

During the fiscal year 37 new state banks were organized and 16 branch offices of existing banks were established. Four commercial banks added new departments. Seven savings banks did likewise and four trust companies added departmental banking business. Nine state banks changed their names, eight state banks voluntarily liquidated their business, and paid their depositors in full, nine went into the national system and two nationalized their commercial departments.

TEXAS BANKS IN GOOD SHAPE

Austin, Texas, Nov. 4.—In his annual report for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1912, B. L. Gill, commissioner of insurance and banking, makes a number of important recommendations. Commissioner Gill recommends that the salary of the commissioner should be materially increased, "in order that the administration of this department may be elevated to a high standard and a more permanent basis." The commissioner believes that by constant change of commissioners a chaotic condition of affairs is created.

"This should be a business and not a political arm of the state government," declares Mr. Gill. "Scarcely an individual in Texas but is more or less directly affected by this condition and it is to be hoped that the next legislature will be broad enough to see the necessity for this recommendation." He points out that the salary of $2,500 now paid the Texas commissioner is the smallest of any state in the Union.

Commissioner Gill also recommends the application of civil service rules to all employees of this department, in order to give it that permanency good business results demand. He calls attention that this rule has been followed out by him during his administration. The commissioner does not recommend the segregation of the insurance from the banking department, he believes that with an efficient chief clerk at the head of each department that it could be more economically managed with one commissioner, provided the salaries are made sufficiently attractive to obtain efficient men. He recommends that an appropriation be made for the employment of a special attorney to look after the legal affairs of these combined departments.

Many Legal Questions Raised

"This department has grown so rapidly that this has become an imperative necessity," says the commissioner. He points out that so many technical questions arise that must be referred to the state's legal department that the department now occupies most of the time of one of the assistants in the attorney-general's department.

Commissioner Gill declares it is a mistake to permit the organization of state banks with a capital stock of less than $25,000, unless a provision is added to the banking law, giving the commissioner and banking board more authority than they now have. He points out that while a very large number of the smaller banks are well managed and prosperous most of the troubles of the department come from these smaller institutions.

"So while I do not desire to arbitrarily go on record as opposing the small bank, I do think to make the minimum capital larger would prevent many of the evils caused by the ease of organization, and this even could be largely corrected by giving the commissioner and banking board larger discretion in granting permits when in its judgment the real need for a bank does not exist."

The commissioner favors an amendment to the banking law preventing any officer, clerk or bookkeeper of such banking institutions acting as proxy, and that no shareholder whose liability is past due and unpaid shall be allowed to vote. Mr. Gill believes that the law should be so changed as to place private banks under the jurisdiction of the department or some other delegated authority.

Opposed to Overdrafts

Recommendation is made for the repeal of subdivision II, section II, chapter 10, acts of the first called session of the twenty-ninth legislature relating to the powers of trust companies to make bonds, "as it is a menace to such bank and trust companies and absolutely a dangerous provision." The commissioner also recommends that the law should also be so amended as to provide that no trust company shall be organized with a capital stock of less than $100,000 in cities having a population of 20,000 or more. Such an amendment would place the banks on the same footing as the trust companies.

It is pointed out that with the co-operation of the national comptroller of currency, a strong effort has been made during the year to discourage overdrafts with most encouraging results. The commissioner says it is a dangerous practice. "A law forbidding overdrafts entirely would be recommended," asserts Mr. Gill, "but for the fact that the state banks might be placed at a disadvantage with other banks unless such law should be passed by other systems."

As an indication of the wonderful growth of the state banks and state bank and trust companies in Texas since the banking law has been in operation it is shown that when the first call for a financial statement was made on September 30, 1905, 29 banks reported with total resources of $4,341,886.94, while at this time the report discloses there are 728 banks and trust companies in operation with resources aggregating $113,474,191.62. During the past fiscal year 77 banks and trust companies have been permitted with aggregate capital of $3,169,000, as compared with 109 banks and trust companies passed by the state banking board for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1912, with an aggregate capital of $2,522,000.

"This comparison is encouraging," declares Mr. Gill, "to the department, since it shows that the average capital of banks organized for the first period is $23,137.61, and those admitted for the past year average $41,157.14." It is shown that during the fiscal year just ended 45 banks increased their capital stock $772,500; five trust companies increased their capital stock $445,000, making a total increase of $1,217,500, less four banks that decreased their capital stock $60,000, leaving a net increase of $1,157,500. From August 14, 1905, when the first banking corporation under the law was organized and chartered, to September 1, 1912, it is shown that 752 banks with a capital of $17,242,500 have been authorized, making a total of 839 banks and trust companies with a total capital of $31,157,500. During that period 25 banks and trust companies with a total capital of $5,235,000 have liquidated, and 86 state banks with a total capital of $1,375,000 also liquidated. The total capital, surplus and undivided profits of the 728 banks and bank and trust companies now in operation is $33,961,890.17. There are also 18 banks maintaining savings departments with total deposits of $1,706,417.34. With the exception of six banks, all liquidations have been voluntary. The balance to the credit of the depositors guaranty fund on August 31, 1912, was $599,317.75, against a balance of $495,685.67 on August 31, 1911. It is also shown that the total number of banks taking advantage of the bond system of protecting its depositors is 53, and the bonds aggregating $5,581,000, against 45 for the preceding fiscal year, when the bonds reached $4,281,000. The total expenses of the 15 state bank examiners for the fiscal year, including salaries and compensation, and traveling expenses of the commissioner reached $59,416.02, and office expenses, stationery, etc., $1,060.57, making a total of $60,477.50, while the examination fees for the same period aggregated $60,477.50.

Better Banking Required

The commissioner observes that it has been necessary in numerous cases to require the resignation of certain officers and directors of state banks for repeated violations of the laws, or for incompetency, and every possible care has been exerted in passing upon the character and qualifications of officers in new banks.

"One of the regretful conditions that exist in our state bank system," declares the commissioner, "is the prevailing idea that any one can run a state bank, even without any previous experience, and also that anybody can get a permit to start a bank without reference to financial responsibility, character or qualifications, but this is gradually disappearing as applications are filed and requirements shown.

NATIONAL CITY, NEW YORK, CIRCULAR

The National City Bank circular for November calls attention to the large increase in the proportion of manufactured exports from this country to total exports. Since 1880 the value of these exports has increased $900,000,000, or 730 per cent. They now form 47 per cent of all exports, whereas they were only 14.8 per cent of all in 1880. Foodstuffs constituted about 56 per cent of total exports in 1880, but represented only 19½ per cent for the fiscal year 1912. The census figures of 1910 showed an increase of but 11 per cent over 1900 in the persons engaged in farm work and an increase of 30 per cent among those engaged in manufacturing enterprises.

MICHIGAN BANKER DEAD

Ovid, Mich., Nov. 5th.—Marcus L. Taft, vice-president of the State Savings Bank, died at his home Sunday from heart trouble. Mr. Taft was born in New York, Oct. 15, 1839, and came to Michigan when he was seventeen. He located on a large farm near this village. BANKER GETS SIX YEARS

Raton, N. M., Nov. 4th.—A. Probert was sentenced to from six to eight years in the penitentiary to-day at Taos, N. M., on a charge of embezzlement. Probert was convicted of embezzling $500 from Roya Clifford while president of the State Savings Bank at Taos. The bank was closed a year ago following an investigation by State Examiner John Joerns.

He was convicted on a charge of embezzlement at Waupun, Wis., in 1895, and was sentenced to two and a half years in the Wisconsin penitentiary. Subsequently Probert, who was known here as C. P. Davis, is said to have established banks at Niles and Eau Claire, Mich.

UNLOOKED-FOR TONNAGE OF WHEAT

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 4th.—Transcontinental railroads are receiving an unexpected east-bound tonnage by a sudden purchase of nearly a million bushels of forty fold and other varieties of Washington soft wheat, by the millers of Tennessee and other states east of the Mississippi. The purchases result from shortage of soft wheat there. Buyers paid 2 cents or more above coast export prices. Other milling concerns are investigating the situation, with the view to buying 3,000,000 bushels or more. Pacific Northwest farmers have sold 80 per cent of their crop. Ninety per cent has been delivered to warehouses.

Benjamin J. West, Sr., Belleville's oldest and most highly respected citizen, who has been making his home for some years with his son,

B. J. West, Jr., of Minneapolis, Minnesota, passed away at the home of his son, Tuesday morning, according to information received in Belleville. Mr. West formerly was engaged in merchandising, banking, and farming in Belleville. When he was seventy-five years old he retired from active business. In 1900 his wife died and he then moved to Minneapolis, which he had visited first in 1862, to make his home with his son, Benjamin J. West, Jr.

Plan Large Corporation

Henry D. Sexton, president of the Southern Illinois National, and Fred Hottes, merchant, have admitted they are actively interested in an effort to organize a $350,000 company to take over the East St. Louis plant of the Republic Iron and Steel Company and revive the iron industry in East St. Louis. Three months ago the Republic Company decided to devote all of its iron to the manufacture of steel and closed its iron mills in East St. Louis. More than 1000 men were thrown out of work and a pay roll of nearly $1,000,000 monthly was stopped. Thomas Cunningham of East St. Louis and H. C. Large of St. Louis, superintendent and assistant superintendent, respectively, of the East St. Louis plant, began an effort to organize a company to continue the iron mill in East St. Louis. They were unsuccessful in their efforts until a few days ago, when Mr. Sexton and Mr. Hottes became interested in the project. Mr. Sexton said the organization of a new company seemed certain, and predicted the mill would be in operation in a short time. The Republic Iron and Steel Company had ordered the dismantling of the East St. Louis plant, but withdrew the order when it was informed local men were preparing to reopen the plant.

George Woodruff Addresses Steel Workers Club

George Woodruff, president of the First National at Joliet, in an address before the Steel Workers Club last week, urged young men to work hard and persistently and study the chances offered at Joliet. Persistency and confidence, he declared, had nothing to do with "big-headedness," calling the latter a destroyer of chances for success. "Fixed purpose plus persistency equals success," he said.

For Valuable Records

Banks cannot afford to jeopardize the preservation of their records by the use of books and ledgers made of cheap paper. That is why most leading banks specify the use of

for their record books, ledgers and loose leaf systems. Never discolors or weakens from age. Its strong texture stands hardest usage and won't tear out of loose leaf systems. Its perfect writing and erasing surface is an aid to neat work. Brown's Linen Ledger Paper is Uncle Sam's Standard.

It is made of pure white rags—not of colored rags as are ordinary ledger papers. That's why Brown's is superior—no strong chemicals in it which weaken the fibre, make the paper grow dingy, turn yellow at the edges and pull away from the book bindings.

E. L. GRONDAHL IN TOWN

E. L. Grondahl, president of the State Bank of Seattle, Wash., called on Chicago banking acquaintances recently.

FOR the good roads he has reappointed S. E. Bradt chairman, and with him are Borland, Crabb, Stimson and M. O. Williamson.

BOTH of the important committees thus retain hard-working, experienced members and the good work will be kept up. President Phillips is to be congratulated on being able to hold them in the service.

WE have a swell dinner coming from B. F. Harris. Are you in on it? Andrew J. Graham and W. D. Edens already are invited.

THE self-constituted advisory organizations, such as committees of one hundred, voters leagues, etc., all of them more or less partisan schemes when the light is let in, probably will suspend their arduous but ill-appreciated labors in Chicago for a while.

THE trick might be operated again with profit after a rest of ten or twenty years.

OUR latest copy of the "Pennsylvania Banker" contains a summary of the Detroit convention and a lengthy historical sketch of the Reading Railroad. Typographically, it is fair to look upon, and comes at "one dollar the year."

HAVE you received "at home" cards from Mr. and Mrs. Richard L.? No! Kindly see bulletin 4-II-44 for particulars.

NATIONAL LUMBERMAN'S at Muskegon has had its charter extended.

PHOEBE M. RIDEOUT is the president of the new Rideout Smith National, at Oroville, Cal.

FRANK W. FOLEY, at Dollar Bay, Mich., is organizing a new national bank.

BULL MOOSERS are a queer lot. Two McCormicks elected to office for which plainly they are not qualified by legal residence in the state. Now they come, with a balance of power in the state legislature, offering to make a deal, with either republicans or democrats, for one of the United States senatorships. That's easy. Let the democrats and republicans unite and take both places. The McCormicks can wait.

"THE result of the vote is what has been indicated plainly enough for the last three months. If Governor Wilson is as smart as I think he is, he will give the country a good administration, and I do not see any possibility of any trouble on account of the tariff for more than a year at least."—G. M. R.

FOURTH NATIONAL, New York, issued a very reassuring letter, discounting the election in advance and pointing out the cash benefits which the big crops must bring to the country.

BIG work is being done to make New Jersey checks par in New York. Charles L. Farrell of Newark can then begin to put on Metropolitan airs at once.

IN three years Fred I. Kent has extended the A. B. A. travelers' checks around the world $36,000,000 worth. He was playing from scratch, too.

WE'RE just a little wary of the "banking paper" which carries too much railroad news and a lot of hotel ads.

FINANCE is doing good work over in Ohio for the adoption of a "Blue Sky" law.

DEMOCRATS in nearly every state can pick up a few live, ripe issues this year. In Illinois the papers and the public unite in asking both a "Blue Sky" law and a bank supervision act. Why not? The party profit would be 1,000 per cent.

ATTORNEY GEN. HOGAN of Ohio decides that constitutional amendment 34, putting private banks which use the words "bank" or "banker" under state supervision, is not automatic, but requires an enabling act. More delay!

HOGAN also decided that "where the capital stock of a state bank is but half paid in, the holders have double liability on double the amount of stock they own."

NEITHER one of these decisions will get any applause from us. Turned about completely they would.

IF you want to start a rumor in Chicago that Charles G. Dawes is going to gobble your bank, all you have to do is to cause a sudden soaring in prices of your stock. The dailies will do the rest.

JOHN FLETCHER, like T. R., has become a contributing editor. He has quite a piece in the current Northwestern Banker and, naturally, it's all about Iowa prosperity. And why not? They even raise bankers out there. Eh! John?

THIS is the feast time of the year,
When plenty pours her wine of cheer,
And even humble boards may spare
To poorer poor a kindly share.

—Emerson De Puy.

C. B. MILLS and his Iowa-Illinois syndicate are said to have taken over three banks during the week. They buy 'em in bunches now. Yes, and if you want to buy they'll sell you one.

THE Marquette (Mich.) Mining Journal, in treating of the Hammel private bank failure at Gladstone in that state, uses some very vigorous language. It says:

"THE private bank is an anachronism. In a certain sense it operates under false pretenses, despite a state law passed a few years ago with the intent of making it certain that every private bank shall show its character. There are still many depositors in private banks who do not realize their unregulated character, as compared with other banks, and who place their money in them in the belief that they are institutions subject to inspection by some government agency, and are, in that measure, guaranteed."

THE merger of the Eliot National Bank with the National Shawmut Bank brings the deposits of the latter institution well above $90,000,000. Stockholders of the Eliot National receive $280 a share for their holdings, $40 a share above book value.

FRIENDS of J. H. Johnson, president of the Peninsular State at Detroit, will be pained to learn of the death of his wife last week.

IF the bull moosers in the legislature are smart they will cut out McCormick, Funk, Merriam, et al, and unite on B. F. Harris. They can make a deal with the regulars on such a man for the Lorimer succession without hurting anyone's feelings. He would be the goods.

IF the new president wants a new comptroller of the currency, Illinois democracy lines up behind Shuman, who gave sterling service at the western headquarters and who is a good banker, a sound progressive democrat and a citizen of the first rank.

NEXT thing in order is for moose papers to get back their lost subscribers—and advertisers. Did you notice the famine?

THE Mid-West Bank at Sioux City is making good use of the travelers' booklet gotten out by the Bankers' Trust, New York, to boom the sale of A. B. A. travelers' cheques.

W. R. NIGHTINGALE of the First National, Crescent City, says "THE CHICAGO BANKER is so newsy that reading it is almost like being a city banker."

AS Joseph Chapman would say, the Princeton tiger showed much greater efficiency than the Tammany tiger this time. Perhaps keeping the boy on the farm will be easier now.

TRULY Brother Schafer "done noble" in his attempts to land his friend McCormick in a good fat job. Didn't Brother McCormick "organize" to keep the hackmen away from the immigrants at the railway stations in Chicago? Of course Mr. Schafer's Transfer Company should have the business.

CASHIER.

WESTERN IRRIGATION PROJECTS WORKING OUT

The easterner knows that securities of all kinds—including irrigation bonds—were hard hit by the panic of 1907, and harder hit by failure of a great banking house in Chicago which made a specialty of irrigation bonds. Failure of that house was in no wise its own fault, but solely owing to the market being hurt by the speculative "wildcatter." Eastern banks passed word to their clients to look into all irrigation projects carefully before buying either bonds or lands. One may have heard of the land-boom campaign waged for benefit of widows, orphans, stenographers and city clerks, with a view to selling as irrigated land at top-notch prices lands high above the ditch line. Our easterners may also have heard the warning by one of the big railways—that if all the fruit lands alleged to be set out in trees were bearing, not all the cars of all the railroads could carry the fruit to market.

But the westerner also knows that, in spite of the panic of 1907 and sudden slump in bonds, more land has gone under irrigation in the West since the slump than before. Speculation and "wildcatting" were stopped by the slump. Genuine waters in genuine ditches were not. The southwestern farmer is so busy cutting five crops of alfalfa per acre each season, worth $50 to $60 an acre, so busy grubbing Bermuda onions that yield 60,000 pounds to the acre, worth two cents a pound, so busy trucking $8,000 net off 19 acres in vegetables—that he hasn't time to expend much sympathy on the scatteration of a lot of "wildcats" or on the howls of the victims. More water is flowing in the irrigation ditch to-day, more profit coming from the irrigation farm, than before the collapse of the land and bond boom.

Since then the largest irrigation area known to the world has been launched in California, covering 5,000,000 to 7,000,000 acres. Arizona promises to be a second citrus grove. New Mexico already has 750,000 acres under ditch, has plans and water sufficient for 4,000,000 more, and within ten years will have under irrigation an area equal to Delaware and Rhode Island.

Collapse of the boom has worked direct good in two ways. Southwestern states have enacted drastic provisions against "wildcatting." The irrigation promoter must file with local authorities a bond, to be forfeited if he fails to carry out his project. As this bond is a proportionate percentage of estimated cost, capitalizations inflated only to sell have been effectually stopped.—A. C. Laut.

NOT CONSIDERING A MERGER

New York.—Herbert L. Griggs, president of the Bank of New York, has issued the following statement:

"Referring to the reports in last week's papers as to the proposed amalgamation of our institution with other banks, we wish to say that there is no basis whatever for such reports so far as the Bank of New York is concerned, and that there are no negotiations whatever for the merger of our bank with any other institution being considered by us."

D. R. FORGAN BELIEVES THAT PROSPERITY WILL CONTINUE

D. R. Forgan, president of the National City Bank of Chicago, was in New York this week on business. While there he spoke of the possible effect of the change in administration at Washington upon conditions. He believes that the present prosperity will continue, and that President-elect Wilson is too safe, sane and shrewd a man to inaugurate any fundamental change which might bring down adverse criticism upon the party. Mr. Forgan said: "Such a move would be suicidal to the democrats, and I believe that Governor Wilson's promise in regard to tariff revision will be carried out—that is to say, that it will be a gradual reduction down."

FRAME COMMENTS ON LANDIS

President Andrew J. Frame of the Waukegan (Wis.) National, has this to say on the question of bank supervision in Illinois:

"I noticed in the Chicago papers yesterday that Judge Landis had thrashed the Illinois Bankers Association for its disapproval of a good banking law in Illinois. I say he is justified therein. It is a disgrace to the state of Illinois that they should allow these fraudulent concerns to do business, and the reflection is not only on the state of Illinois, but it disgraces all the banks of the nation. Illinois should get into line at the next session of the legislature, and I believe it will. This nasty little failure that has just occurred will have a strong influence in that direction."

LIVE STOCK EXCHANGE NATIONAL

Some of the principal stockholders in the Live Stock Exchange National Bank of this city evidently expect an increase in the dividend rate to 12 per cent on Jan. 1st. The present rate is 10 per cent. Soon after the present bank took over the old National Live Stock the dividend was advanced to 12 per cent, but the rate did not hold. The price of the stock has advanced recently to 265 bid.

LARGE NUMBER TO ATTEND INVESTMENT BANKERS BANQUET

President Caldwell, of the Investment Bankers Association of America, states that arrangements have been made by the committee in New York City to take care of 500 guests at the banquet to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria November 22d.

PURCHASES FARWELL TRUST BUILDING

LaSalle Street Trust and Savings Bank has purchased the Farwell Trust Building at the southwest corner of LaSalle and Quincy Street for $500,000. The lot is 38.8x60 feet and is occupied by a twelve-story office building, which will be remodeled immediately. When the alterations are completed, the first and second floors will be used by the bank. The sale was negotiated by Edward A. Wanner. Elbridge Hanecy looked after the details for the bank and Defrees, Buckingham, Ritter, Campbell and Eaton for the seller.

New President Irving National, New York

ROLLIN P. GRANT
NEW YORK

MR. GRANT is on the sunny side of the 40-year-street, but is nearing the crossing. He has been the active vice-president of the Irving for five years and has been in the bank since it had two millions only in deposits. Part time he has been cashier, and he knows the duties in every department of the bank. He and Mr. Pierson have been in perfect agreement and his selection and election were unanimous. Early in January the Irving hopes to be in the magnificent specially constructed banking rooms in the new forty-five story Woolworth building. Mr. Grant has a most engaging personality and a very wide acquaintance. In the west he is intimately and favorably known to leading bankers.

WANTS WORD "TRUST" PROTECTED

The following extract from a letter from President Lyman H. Dinkins, of the Interstate Trust & Banking Company, makes a valuable point. He says:

"I have read with keen interest your editorial on the improper use of banking and trust company titles. For several years I have been a member of the committee on protective laws of the trust company section and we have succeeded in having necessary legislation passed in most of the states. I attach hereto copy of the bill which has been approved by the protective laws committee."

E. D. Hulbert, of the Merchants Loan & Trust Company of your city, is a member of the committee. I would be glad to have you follow up your editorial from time to time with additional arguments, so that the Illinois legislature will be disposed to give heed to Mr. Hulbert's request for the enactment of the attached bill.

Following is a copy of the approved bill, being a copy of the Vermont statute and as passed in Pennsylvania, Virginia and Louisiana and up for passage in Georgia:

"An act restricting the use of the word 'Trust' as part of a name or title; prohibiting advertising or doing business as a trust company, except by corporations under the supervision of the state bank examiner; and providing a penalty for violations thereof."

"Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., that no corporation shall be hereafter chartered under the laws of Vermont with the word 'trust' as a part of its name except corporations reporting to and under the supervision of the state bank examiner; nor shall any corporate name be so amended as to include the word 'trust' unless the corporation be under such supervision."

"Section 2. No person, firm, association or persons or corporations, except only corporations reporting to and under the supervision of the state bank examiner of this state shall therein advertise or put forth any sign as a trust company, or in any way solicit or receive deposits or transact business as a trust company, or use the word 'trust' as part of his or its name or title; provided that this act shall not be held to prevent any individual as such, from acting in any trust capacity as heretofore. Any violation of any provision of this section shall constitute a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof the offender shall be fined in a sum not exceeding $500, for each offense."

G. W. CURTISS IN TOWN

G. W. Curtiss, president of the Dime Savings and Trust Company of Peoria, Ill., was in the financial district this week. He stated that business conditions around Peoria are satisfactory, with good prospects for the future. Mr. Curtiss also is president of the Peoria Clearing House and is well and favorably known to Illinois bankers.

U. S. Treasurer McClung's resignation will call for counting of one and a quarter billions in money and securities. Will require about three months time, as he does things leisurely.

JUDGE LANDIS' twenty-nine million dollar fine may have been a trifle excessive, but when it comes to handling a private bank failure he's the real goods.

PROBABLY the Kirby frame-up and the Jack Johnson bond fake would have gone through any but a federal court in Cook county. Innumerable jobs of the kind are freely quoted.

TR. didn't get all of the sanitarium votes. Some of them went for Debs. Pardon us, too, for reminding the chief bull moosers that their "Doctor" Wilson and their "Professor" Wilson and our and the people's Governor Wilson are one and the same.

WE propose George Harvey of New York for chief of the weather bureau in the Wilson cabinet. He's the head "forecaster" from this point of view.

COLONEL and Mrs. Robt. J. Lowry of Atlanta were receiving telegrams all day Tuesday, the occasion being their golden wedding anniversary. A state-wide reception was held at the Capital City Club. Colonel Bob barred the presents.

LASALLE STREET TRUST & SAVINGS has bought the Farwell Trust building and will occupy it as soon as the banking room can be remodeled.

PUJO wasn't re-elected to congress. He can be spared.

"ROOSEVELT started out to wreck the republican party because it refused to nominate him in Chicago. I have no doubt he will start fulminating again as soon as he thinks of something to say. He will no doubt be a candidate for president again in 1916."—Shelby M. Cullom.

"THE stock rise was deceptive," says one of the daily papers which had for itself the chief part in circulating recent bank consolidation rumors which it now declares "off." The banks did not deceive the buyers; it was the press. Rumor mongers are dangerous.

YOU may have noticed that the consolidations and mergers which really happen rarely are touted in the dailies. That is a good way to kill a deal—or to mislead innocent purchasers.

WILSON is right in insisting that what we want is more prosperity—and that the way to get it is to give more men a chance to put their ambition and intelligence into the building of the cities and the subduing of the earth. He understands that the right way to find prosperity is to equalize opportunity.

IT is very kind of the moose papers to be so solicitous about the cabinet and the extra session. How to get back lost readers and advertisers might be a substitute worry.

TAFT says republicans should "close up ranks" and some say they should close up shop. Better include the G. O. P. in all your future political calculations for safety.

IT'S rather mean of Governor Deneen not to call a special session and give the outgoing jack-potters a last chance. There may be people foolish enough to want to "put over" something in a hurry at a fair price.

VICE-PRESIDENT ALEXANDER ROBERTSON of the Continental and Commercial National is back at his desk, greatly improved by his vacation.

WARE & LELAND say "a democratic victory was expected, and any direct results therefrom marketwise were naturally discounted long in advance. Everything points to continued prosperity in the United States, irrespective of conditions or local disturbances."

IN general this leading firm advises conservatism in every way and believes that commitments should be kept down to the lowest, and advantage should be taken of strong spots on which to realize on profitable transactions. They think underlying conditions will warrant higher markets, for the moment, owing to the foreign situation and also in view of a necessary money stringency, consistent with increased business, stocks should only be bought on sharp drives in a most conservative manner.

ONE private bank in Illinois is not afraid of publicity. The Farmers and Merchants at Hillsdale, near Rock Island, prints a full sworn statement at every state call. Reports paid in capital of $10,000 and nearly $20,000 in surplus and earnings. Deposits are $192,000.

OUT at the apple show in Spokane every visitor gets a piece of apple pie. That would be a good stunt to pull off at the next agricultural conference in Kansas City. Apple pie is a national institution.

NEW national bank notes will have no numerals on the back. Easier to count, and much easier to counterfeit. Neither will there be numerals on the four corners.

A WRITER in the London Bankers Magazine states in a detail article that to have a cheque cashed with less than six hours' delay in a Paris bank, is to be in great luck.

WHEN J. J. Sullivan (Colonel) of Cleveland was asked his opinion of "the commercial and industrial outlook" this is what the Colonel said:

"I am quite convinced that in God's good time our country will become the controlling world-power, holding the scepter of the sea, reigning in mighty beneficence, going on, and on, and on, in the fulfillment of our mighty destiny, surmounting every difficulty, conquering every foe, preserving intact the principles of liberty and of law, and maintaining alive and undimmed the hope and promise of humanity."

NOW, would you "buy" or "sell" on that?

SECRETARY BOWMAN of Kansas has issued group programs (consecutive dates) and has engaged a special car called the "Circuit Rider" for the grand round-up. Time to get in is "early."

Touches upon proposed banking and financial legislation by congress

WASHINGTON LETTER

By R. A. ALBERTSEN

Relates to administrative and department matters interesting to our readers

Washington, Nov. 14th.—Official circles here vibrate with the meaning of the victory shown by the returns for Wilson and as to the possibility and advisability of a special session. The New England protective districts all went democratic. A prominent authority says: An extra session will be called and the tariff settled for once and for all. If this were not done, it is said, business would have cause to be in fear and trembling until some final disposition is made of the tariff. It is said that close friends of Governor Wilson have talked with him since victory of Tuesday, and they found that the president-elect intends to call congress in extra session next spring and get tariff revision out of the way. He does not intend to wait until the regular session in December, 1913, to have revision undertaken.

It is pointed out that tending strongly to confirm the idea that there will be an extra session called is the fact that Majority Leader Underwood of the house has since the election come out with a statement saying he favors an extra session to revise the tariff. It is known that Governor Wilson and Mr. Underwood in recent months have conferred on the tariff and found themselves in close accord. It is also significant that politicians are declaring that Mr. Underwood does not desire to take a cabinet position, but that he prefers to remain in the house at the head of the ways and means committee. He believes that he has more opportunities here to do effective work. With this point firmly established the country can easily estimate the temper of the tariff bills which may be passed at the extra session next spring. First will be taken up the cotton and the wool bills, then the steel and the chemical bills and the sugar tariff. These, it is expected, will be pretty much like the Underwood bills reported to the house last winter and which failed to become a law.

Heavy Democratic Responsibilities

Though the huge proportion of the electoral vote which is to go to the democratic ticket when the electoral colleges send in their returns in December makes the election look like a "landslide" or a "tidal wave," a sober examination of the popular vote, so far as incomplete returns reveal it, indicates that the result was not a real democratic victory. It gives the party a magnificent opportunity, but with that it carries an impressive warning. A fairly close estimate can now be made of the vote for electors in all the important states, and it is clear that the combined vote of the republican and progressive parties greatly exceeds that of the democratic party. It considerably exceeds that for the republican ticket in 1908, while it remains doubtful whether the democratic vote is in excess of that cast four years ago by as great a ratio as the increase in the total vote. Fairly accurate calculation is made from returns which give a total of about 14,000,000 votes—probably seven-eighths or more of what the final aggregate will be,—and this indicates about 2,000,000 plurality for the Taft-Roosevelt poll over that for Wilson. In such states as Massachusetts, Connecticut and New York, and even Wilson's own state of New Jersey, the margin is wide. In Illinois and Pennsylvania it is enormous. It is large in Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, and it runs through practically all of the states heretofore rated as republican.

Curing a Boy of Laziness

A judge of the District of Columbia juvenile court has sentenced a boy to take a cold bath every morning. The youth was taken to court by his father, who complained that the boy was so lazy it almost required the aid of horses to drag him from bed in the morning and that he was usually so "tired" that he would not dress for school. Then the court handed down the dictum that what the culprit needed was a cold tub every morning whether he liked it or not, and to stay in it until he was thoroughly awake.

If the lad had been detained somewhere where the cold bath treatment could be administered by force the cure would undoubtedly be effective; but as he was, on the contrary, turned over to his father after sentence, it is to be feared it will be a suspended sentence. A lazy young incorrigible who will not get up when told by his father is certainly very unlikely to step out of his warm bed into a cold tub at the same parental request, even when fortified by the decree of an absent judge; and, judging by the parent's appeal to the court, the father does not have stamina enough to throw him into it. If he had, he would not have needed to go to court.

Parceling Out the Offices

When Governor Wilson assumes the presidency he will find all the fourth-class postmasters under the civil service rules. For this relief he is indebted to President Taft. There will, of course, be some pressure for place, and there will also be, as there ought to be, some changes. But we shall see nothing of the old rush. Practically all the subordinate administrative positions are now within the classified service. Not only is this so, but public opinion is strongly favorable to the new order. The people of the United States do not wish to see their president waste his time and energy in the work of distributing patronage. Few of them care who fill the offices as long as official duties are properly performed. The democratic administration has many problems to solve, and a great deal of very important work to do. Governor Wilson was elected because it was believed that he was peculiarly qualified to deal with those problems and to do that work. He was not chosen to be a mere appointing machine, as he no doubt understands. The democratic party as a whole earnestly desires that its first administration in twenty years shall be a success. It will be judged, not by the number of men it appoints to office, but by the quality of the service that it renders to the people. If the democrats really have the welfare of the country at heart they will look beyond the next four years, and try so to strengthen their party in the confidence of the public as to make it a formidable factor in 1916.

R. M. La Follette Republican Leader

After the fourth of next March, Senator Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, will be the republican leader in the senate. His friends look to him to point the way for a reorganization of the party on a basis that will bring back to it most of the voters who went with the new party this year. The Wisconsin senator remained regular through the political storm which started last spring and ended with the election of Wilson. He refused to join the new party for two reasons. He believed that Theodore Roosevelt was not a progressive at heart and he believed that the reforms for which he (La Follette) had been fighting for years could be brought about through the republican party. He still insists that the republican party can be made an instrument of great good, and his great task now will be to bring about a reorganization of the party that will make it a party that will have to be considered in the congressional and state elections in 1914, and in the presidential election in 1916.

Want Anti-third Term Amendment

A leader in the house here thinks that it is plainly the duty of the next congress—and it were better if this congress should do it—to pass a resolution to submit a constitutional amendment forbidding a third term—one worded so that there will be no "third cup of coffee" about it. The status of the attempt already made is this: February 1st, this year, a resolution was introduced in the house by Representative Slayden, patterned after the one aimed at Grant in 1874, that it be "the sense of this house that third terms of presidents are unwise, unpatriotic and contrary to a republican form of government." February 5th the resolution was temporarily withdrawn for the lack of a second. Representative Norris, insurgent, of Nebraska, demanded a formal second and so caused the withdrawal. The same day Representative Higgins introduced a resolution proposing a constitutional amendment prohibiting a third term and making the single term six years. The next day the question of a second to Slayden's resolution was sprung, when the Republicans hurriedly determined to refrain from voting on it.

Aldrich Plan Thought to Be Dead

The Aldrich currency bill bids fair to be a bone of contention in both houses during the December session of congress. Although strongly recommended by the monetary commission, of which former Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island was chairman, the currency bill received no attention from either the senate or the house during the session immediately preceding the recent campaign. Its friends thought it most expedient to lay it aside until after the election, but the expectation is that it will be pressed during the short session, and the report is current at the capitol that there would be an effort to reorganize the house committee on banking and currency so as to insure favorable action by that committee early in the next congress in case of its non-success this winter.

New Chairman to Succeed Pujo

Opposition to the bill is more pronounced in the house than in the senate, and it is understood that Chairman Henry of the house committee on rules would exert the influence of his position to the utmost to prevent the bringing in of a rule for the consideration of the measure unless it should be recommended by a house caucus. His position is that because of the attitude of the Baltimore convention the bill should not be acted upon by the house without the positive approval of a majority of the democratic members, given in advance of such action.

Opponents of the bill are already lining up for Representative Carter Glass of Virginia as the next chairman of the banking committee. The chairmanship now is held by Representative Pujo of Louisiana, but he will not be a member of the sixty-third congress. Mr. Glass now holds second place on the committee, but it is expected that he will be antagonized by the supporters of the Aldrich bill.

RIVER-TO-RIVER ROAD

The river-to-river road in Iowa, having a mileage of nearly three hundred and eighty miles from the Mississippi to the Missouri, was the desire of J. W. Eichinger of the Des Moines Daily Capital to perform a newspaper feat. Any man who can transform an Iowa dirt road to a nearly perfect highway three hundred and eighty miles long, and at a very slight expenditure of money, has grasped a new idea in road building. This road from Council Bluffs to Davenport is said to be a success, and is commanding the attention of the entire country, and should be an example to Illinois farmers and bankers of what can be accomplished with a persistent demand for systematic dragging of our earth roads.

IMPROVING THE ROADS IN ADAMS COUNTY

Harvey C. Riggs, vice-president and cashier of the Mercantile Trust and Savings Bank of Quincy, Ill., and a former Missourian, has great confidence in the ability of the people of Illinois to substantially improve wagon road conditions by systematic and careful dragging of the earth roads. His former residence in Missouri, where road conditions were bad, brought him in touch with D. Ward King of Maitland, inventor of the split-log drag; so that when he settled in Quincy and found that the farmers of Adams county, as well as the merchants in the towns and cities, were suffering several months each year from inability to get about on account of the condition of the roads, he immediately started to organize the commercial interests of Adams county in behalf of better roads. Through the help of the Quincy newspapers the attention of the people of Adams county was attracted to what it was proposed to do in the way of road work in the county. In the first place, Mr. Riggs personally bought some split-log drags. He took them into the country, hired teams and had the roads dragged. The progress was slow at first and it seemed as if it would be impossible to convert anybody to the use of the split-log drag. However, they kept at it and in a year or two changes began to be apparent to people going over the roads which had been dragged. After a while the farmers became interested and began dragging their own roads. About that time, D. Ward King happened to be in Quincy, and in discussing the subject he recommended the use of light weight drags drawn by horses, instead of the heavy drags which were in use and usually required four horses for drawing. During Mr. King's stay in Quincy, the merchants and bankers were brought together, and he talked to them on the subject of road improvement by use of the split-log drag. It was brought out at these meetings that ordinarily in the state of Illinois, and in most of the adjacent states, the farmers pay the road tax and do the road work, and that is not as it should be. As a result, the farmers frequently do not feel friendly to road improvement. They say that the people of the cities have all the pleasure of the roads with their automobiles, buggies, etc., and that they do not contribute their part towards building and maintaining the roads. Therefore, Mr. King reasoned that it would help to create a better sort of atmosphere for road improvement if the town people would show some disposition to assist in the matter of road improvement. Mr. King also suggested that the town people get together a purse of a few hundred dollars by subscription and offer a series of cash prizes for various sections of road maintained by dragging. This recommendation was followed and $865 raised. As a result, it was shown that almost every township in Adams County had entered one or more stretches of road for the prizes, and therefore splendid demonstrations were made of the use of the road drag, and the result was that it was impossible to drive in any part of Adams County, without finding a great many well dragged roads.

At the time these roads were dragged it was found that Adams County had from 100 to 150 miles of road which had been dragged occasionally. At the end of this campaign there were 500 miles of road well dragged, and at the present time there are a thousand miles of road in the county which have been dragged more or less. In addition to offering the plan of prizes as followed in Adams County, good results have been obtained from the establishment of marked roads or trails leading to various points from Quincy. The plan followed is to get the people in the towns to contribute enough money to pay for the marking, and to have at least a similar amount of cash in the treasury to be used in cases of emergency, or some other expense where the money cannot be had from the tax levied for road work.

The efforts of the bankers and merchants of Quincy, under the direction of Mr. Riggs, have been along the line of co-operation with the farmers and road commissioners, the giving of advice and the offering of prizes and the furnishing of small sums of money in addition to the levy for road work. This has brought about a good feeling between the farmers and the highway commissioners, and the members of the board of supervisors and the people generally of Adams County. While it has not produced what might be termed model roads in other parts of the country, it has awakened the interest of the people in better roads, and they have by dragging greatly improved their condition. The Adams County board of supervisors have

Geographical Distribution

In purchasing railroad bonds the question of the territory served is of the utmost importance, for upon this depends the character of the traffic received and hence the revenue of the company. Diversity of traffic underlies a diversified investment. The larger the territory, the more diversified the traffic, and therefore the more stable the earning power.

We offer three railroad bonds, each well secured and in combination making a well-rounded investment, at prices to yield an average income of over 5¼%. The traffic of these roads is derived from three widely separated sections of the country.

endorsed comprehensive plans for state road improvement, and have asked their senators and representatives to use their votes and influence in favor of the enactment of such legislation as will improve road conditions.

The success of the Adams County plan prompts us to print a list of the gold prizes offered by the bankers and merchants of Quincy, with the hope that it will stimulate other groups in other parts of Illinois to take up this work and see if an advance cannot be made in road improvement and maintenance in Illinois.

Following is the list of prizes which were offered: For the best five-mile stretch of road, 1st prize, $150; 2d prize, $75; 3d prize, $50. For the best three-mile stretch of road: 1st prize, $75; 2d prize, $50; 3d prize, $25. For the best two-mile stretch of road: 1st prize, $50; 2d prize, $25; 3d prize, $15. For the best one-mile stretch of road: 1st prize, $35; 2d prize, $17.50; 3d prize, $12.50. For the best one-half mile stretch of road: 1st prize, $25; 2d prize, $15; 3d prize, $10. All competitors were required to give notice in writing of their intention to compete for the prizes; two or more persons were allowed to compete jointly on any stretch of road.

Those who attended the group meeting held at Jacksonville last June will remember that the talk on the subject of road improvement, made by Mr. Riggs, was one of the numbers which stirred up the greatest interest and enthusiasm, and it is to be hoped that the bankers of the state will see to it that this subject is considered at all of the meetings which are held during the winter in this state, such as farmers' institute meetings, of the granges, county conferences, school and teachers' associations, and the commercial and manufacturing clubs. The Illinois Highway Improvement Association has formulated a plan for legislative action and this association should be given support by the bankers, farmers and business men of the state, in its work in co-operation with other organizations in the state for legislative action. It is deemed necessary to get away from our present haphazard system.

CANADIAN ROAD ENTHUSIAST IN TOWN

H. Maxwell Clark, an Englishman of Montreal, Canada, organizer of the Canadian Highway Association, visited Chicago last week. Mr. Clark came here in behalf of the proposed Chicago branch of the Canadian highway. Their plans contemplate building a government-aided highway from Cape Breton on the Atlantic to Alberni on the Canadian Pacific. Mr. Clark says that the Canadian government has appropriated a million dollars to start the work in Canada, and he is hopeful that when the branch from Montreal to Windsor, opposite Detroit, is finished, the people of Michigan and Illinois will see to it that the branch is continued from Detroit to Chicago and thence to Des Moines, using the river to river road which now is developing between the Mississippi and the Missouri, and intersecting at Des Moines the proposed road from Minneapolis to Kansas City, and north of Minneapolis, tapping the Canadian highway at Winnipeg. The proposed Canadian highway will pass through Quebec, Montreal, Hamilton, Windsor and Ontario, and from Detroit it is hoped to select the most available and shortest of the existing roads. Mr. Clark while in Chicago conferred with the members of the board of trade, the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Chicago Automobile and Motor Clubs. Before leaving Chicago he selected Allen S. Ray, chairman of the good roads committee of the Chicago Motor Club; W. G. Edens, president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association and Richard J. Finnegan, secretary of the highway improvement association as honorary members of the Montreal to Chicago Canadian Highway Association.

LEGISLATORS FAVOR PRIVATE BANK BILL

A keen rivalry exists among members of the Illinois legislature as to who shall have the honor of introducing a bill abolishing private banks in Illinois. Representative Joseph C. Blaha of the nineteenth senatorial district was the first in the field with the announcement of a bill directed against private banks. He has prepared a bill which prohibits anyone from doing a banking business without first becoming incorporated and complying with the banking laws of the state. Senator Samuel A. Ettelson also expects to present a bill, which will provide for placing all private banks under practically the same restrictions as state banks, the owners of such institutions to obtain certificates from the state auditor and to permit state bank examiners to investigate their affairs at stated periods. A minimum capitalization of $50,000 is to be required and violations of the act are punishable by a fine of $100 a day. In addition to this there is the bill recommended by the Dawes committee.

PARIS BANKER STEALS TWO MILLIONS

Augustin Max, known throughout France as "The Blind Banker of Paris," has created a sensation in Paris financial circles by surrendering himself to the police and confessing that he has misappropriated $2,000,000 of his clients' money. He declared that he had invested the depositors' funds in copper and nickel mines in New Caledonia. The enterprises were complete failures. Max had enjoyed the highest reputation in banking circles in Paris. He said that he had decided to commit suicide, but was persuaded by his family to give himself up to the police.

TO REOPEN PUJO MONEY INVESTI- GATION

Washington, Nov. 15th.—In response to the summons of Chairman Pujo, the members of the House committee on banking and currency are rounding up here for a meeting to complete plans for the future course of the investigation into the so-called money trust. The hearings will be resumed at an early date. Some of the hearings will be held in this city and some will be held in New York.

Subpoenas already have been issued for the witnesses to be called early in the hearings. John D. Rockefeller, J. Pierpont Morgan, George H. Baker, George W. Perkins and practically every other financier prominent in New York banking circles are expected to be questioned by the committee, in its efforts to discover whether a small group of rich men has a controlling grip on the finances of the country.

JOHN McHUGH OF SIOUX CITY

President John McHugh of the First National, Sioux City, Iowa, has been in the city most of the week. He was accompanied by Mrs. McHugh and daughter. Fall shopping and the theatres took up most of their time. Mr. McHugh was delighted to find President Reynolds of the Continental and Commercial so greatly improved.

SOUTH DAKOTA'S "UNFAIR SALES" LAW

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14th.—A decision of the United States Supreme Court to-day that it was not necessary to hear arguments in favor of the constitutionality of the South Dakota "unfair sales" law is taken as an indorsement by the highest tribunal in the land of the constitutionality of the plan of President-elect Woodrow Wilson to destroy unjust competition in the nation. In his campaign for the presidency, Governor Wilson advocated a federal statute that would send monopolists to jail for underselling rivals in order to drive them out of business. The decision to-day is in support of a state law that makes it a crime to sell a commodity in one community cheaper than in another with the intent to destroy competition.

"THE FLYING SQUADRON"

Gus H. Mueller, vice-president of the Fletcher-American National, Indianapolis, president of the Flying Squadron of America, an organization composed of the traveling men and transit men of the big city banks, reports that he is having favorable responses to the call for the first meeting of the Squadron, which will be held at the LaSalle Hotel in Chicago, December 14th. He says it is their plan to provide a good program and to serve a useful purpose in the banking world.

SOUTH CAROLINA AGRICULTURAL COMMITTEE

Robert I. Woodside, the chairman of the agricultural committee of the South Carolina Bankers Association, has sent out a letter telling the purpose of the committee. It is not the intention of the bankers to undertake to become educators of the farmers, but it is their purpose to emphasize the practical educational ideas which are already in force throughout this country. It is their purpose also to co-operate in every way possible in the betterment of agricultural conditions and to develop scientific farm management, pointing out the superior advantages of intensive farming and the proper diversification of crops. While some will ask why a banker should be so interested in this subject, it can readily be seen by going to the bottom of the question that there is not a banker in any city or town whose prosperity and that of his stockholders and depositors is not entirely dependent upon agriculture in the final analysis. Most assuredly the banking interest, as well as the business interest generally, is greatly concerned in the agricultural progress of our state as well as that of our country. There is no greater factor for prosperity than good crops, and there is no surer method of increasing the wealth and well-being of the Commonwealth than by increasing the yield per acre of our staple products. Our work is that of spreading the gospel of good farming.

THE BULL MOOSE PRESS

No doubt the bull moose contemporary newspapers have had a hard time of it in this campaign. They had to say what they could, and since that was not much, perhaps the best they could do was to holler all the time. They have at least done that. Those in these parts have hollered very wonderfully, and must be thankful to stop. We don't remember such a provision of editorial mush as has been set out by the Evening Mail, of this place, and the Boston Journal. It is to hope that these contemporaries, without any long stay in the psychopathic ward, will be able to reclaim themselves from the wallowings to which circumstances have constrained them, and become rational again. This hope is favored by the report published last Saturday that a straw vote of sub-editors and reporters in the Evening Mail office gave fourteen votes to Wilson and four to Roosevelt.

Some of the western bull moose papers, such as the Chicago Post and Brother Nelson's paper in Kansas City, and other habitually progressive journals, did better, operating with much less evidence of determination to capture the entire sanitarium vote.

Our neighbor the Outlook has come through the campaign alive and, judging from the occasional corpulence of its advertising section, not unthrifily.

Friends, as the Colonel says—friends, the crops are good; there is something to be had by persons who can earn it. Come back now to business—the business of talking sense. No more coffee, Grandbrother Abbott!—Harper's Weekly.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

By C. C. Burford

The corn crop of the state is being rapidly gathered or "shucked" and before many weeks there will be large deposits on the credit side of farmers' bank books. The crop this year is a large one, but there are some indications that the bumper crop conditions probably reported will be modified some, both in quantity and in quality. However, a large and valuable crop will be marketed and already the cry of a grain car shortage is being heard in every town. There will be but few idle grain cars this year. Bankers report the best business conditions and the constant flow of checks moves on as majestically as a large river. There are no indications of slack times and the pre-election fears of hard times are in no wise being realized. The merchants of the state are looking forward to a large and satisfactory holiday and winter trade.

Death of Mount Vernon Banker

Sidney B. Ham, vice-president of the Ham National of Mount Vernon, is dead, and his death removes a younger banker who was well known in southern Illinois. Mr. Ham was but thirty-eight years of age. He was prominent in lodge circles. The Ham National is one of the oldest and best known in the southern part of the state and the business opportunities of the deceased were of the best.

McKinney Still a Republican

James McKinney, congressman from the Fourteenth Illinois district and a former president of the Illinois Bankers Association, though defeated in the democratic landslide a few days ago, states that he is a republican yet, and that he does not believe that the work of the party is over. He says that he sees as great need for republican principles in the future as in the past. Mr. McKinney was an Aledo banker when he was president of the Illinois Bankers Association. He will soon go to Washington for the short term of congress.

Indiana Bankers Visit Central Illinois

A number of Indianapolis bankers accompanied the party of jobbers and wholesalers who made a trade-boosting trip through the central eastern part of the state November 12th, 13th and 14th, which was spoken of at some length in last week's issue of the CHICAGO BANKER.

Indianapolis bankers with the party were Andrew Smith, vice-president of the Indiana National and secretary of the Indiana Bankers Association, W. F. C. Golt, vice-president of the Fletcher-American National, Mord Carter, vice-president of the Continental National and Harry B. Wilson, vice-president of the National City Bank.

The Indianapolis bankers "scattered" to the different banks when they arrived in towns and cities included in the jaunt and made many warm friends of Illinois bankers. The newspapers in various cities have spoken of the trade-boosting excursion in the highest terms and one paper described the visitors as a "fine-looking lot of men." While but few banks in Illinois carry Indianapolis accounts, yet the live bankers of the capital city of Indiana are determined that more shall do so in the future. Illinois bankers extended a glad hand of commercial fellowship to the Hoosier bankers as they were called upon and fully appreciated the spirit of "Let's get acquainted" which was the slogan of the Indiana delegation.

Champaign Bank Incorporates

Announcement has just been made of the incorporation of the Illinois Title and Trust Company of Champaign into a state bank, to be known as the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank of Champaign. There will be no change in the officers or in the location and the business will be conducted in the future as in the past. The bank was organized in 1902 and a large and growing business has been built up under the co-partnership plan, but the officers feel that the work can be better carried on in the future as a state bank. This bank was the first in Champaign to establish a savings department and many thrifty people in that city have been aided by the bank. An abstract business of no small importance has also been a feature of the bank and will be carried on in the future by the officers, but outside of the jurisdiction of the bank.

Virgil W. Johnston, who has been with the bank since its establishment, is the president. Mr. Johnston came to Champaign as an abstracter and later went into the banking business. Fred Collison, one of the vice-presidents, is president of the First National of Rantoul and of the First National of Thomasboro, both of these towns being near Champaign. He is a large land-owner. W. W. Stern, also a vice-president, comes from a family long identified with the mercantile business of Champaign. E. M. Venum is the cashier, B. C. Weaver is assistant cashier, and George R. Shawhan is manager of the savings department.

Mr. Johnston is very optimistic regarding the future of his city and of the bank, and believes in the growing prosperity of both. He recently said in reference to the future work of the bank, "We are just on the edge of our business."

Farm loans are a prominent feature of this bank's business. The capital will be $150,000, which amount is equaled or exceeded by very few banks in towns the size of Champaign. A surplus will also be carried. Continental and Commercial National is the Chicago correspondent.

The bank moved about a year ago into its newly remodeled room which has been described before in THE CHICAGO BANKER. The fixtures are of white marble and bronze and the vaults and the safety deposit boxes include every feature known to present-day banking. The mural decorations are most unique; a large painting at one upper end of the bank, entitled "Play," pictures a football game between the University of Chicago and the University of Illinois. Another, entitled "Work," shows a harvest field in Illinois with three large horses drawing a binder and Professor Cyril G. Hopkins of the University of Illinois, well known to Illinois bankers, directing the work. These two pictures, representing the educational and agricultural work of the community, are unique and typical of the locality and are much admired by the customers of the bank. The "Work" picture is reproduced in this issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER.

Illinois Notes

Springfield's bonded indebtedness has been decreased $32,000. The total bonded indebtedness of the city is now $762,500.

The First National of Gibson City is one of the banks in the smaller cities of the state which believe in and practice the good doctrine of newspaper advertising of a telling kind. Evan Mattinson is the president and L. E. Rockwood is the cashier.

The Farmers and Merchants Bank of Hillsdale, Rock Island county, is one of the few private banks in Illinois which publish a statement. Loans of $161,080 are reported, with deposits of $192,049. E. L. Hansen is the cashier.

The apple crop in that part of the state lying between the Illinois and Mississippi rivers is reported to be a large one and 50,000 barrels have been shipped from Griggsville alone.

A new bank building is to be erected in Blandinsville, near Macomb. The new bank building is one of three buildings to be erected in Blandinsville at a cost of $50,000, one of which will be used for a garage and a second for an agricultural implement house.

Springfield's clearings for the month of October, 1912, were over a half million dollars greater than for the corresponding month in 1911. This year the October clearings totaled $5,247,965, while in 1911 for the same month a total of $4,558,166 was reached. Springfield is making rapid strides as a banking city and the greatest of prosperity is evidenced by this substantial increase.

Ross R. Mattis, president of the Trevett-Mattis Banking Company of Champaign, and his son, George M. Mattis, treasurer and vice-president of the Illinois Traction System, have gone to New York City and from thence will sail to Panama to spend a few weeks in the Canal Zone.

ALEXANDER ROBERTSON BACK AT DESK

Alexander Robertson, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial National, has recovered from his recent illness and is back at his desk. Mr. Robertson visited Atlantic City and the South during his convalescence.

BELOIT SAVINGS BANK

The thirty-first annual report of the Beloit (Wis.) Savings Bank, makes a good showing. Deposits in excess of a million show how carefully the officers of this institution have guided its business management. Edward F. Hansen, the secretary and treasurer, has been connected with the bank for twenty-five years.

OHIO BANKER REPORTS GOOD CONDITIONS

Walter B. Richie, president of the First National of Lima, Ohio, visited Chicago on Monday. Mr. Richie reports favorable business conditions in his state, and says there is a good demand for money at improved rates.

Pasadena, Cal.—Clearings for the month of October were $4,324,078.31, as compared with $3,057,137.15 for corresponding month last year.

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

Some interesting figures on the industrial basis of Milwaukee's prosperity were received by Milwaukee bankers this week in the most recent report of the bureau of manufactures of the department of commerce and labor, Washington. The statistics place Milwaukee tenth among American cities in value of annual output, although rating it second in percentage of industrial expansion between the two industrial censuses of 1904 and 1909. In this period the city showed an increase of 51 per cent in value of annual output, with Detroit leading by a narrow margin. The city has now approximately 2,400 manufacturing plants with 105,000 wage earners drawing an aggregate weekly payroll of $1,500,000.

Increase in Grain Receipts

Grain receipts for October, 1912, exceeded those of October, 1911, by 1,608,870 bushels. Out of the total 6,624,410 bushels received last month, barley gained 750,000 bushels, while corn fell off from last year's receipts nearly 300,000 bushels.

Renews Petition

The Marshall & Ilsley Bank this week secured from the circuit court a writ of certiorari to secure a review of the recent action of the city in taxing both capital stock and realty and buildings of the bank. The bank renews its petition to have the assessed value of its buildings deducted from the assessed value of its capital stock and cites the state laws of 1903 to prove its claim. The bank's 50,000 shares of stock were assessed at $220 a share, its new building and the ground it occupies at $254,000, and its south side branch and property at $18,000. When the board of review met last spring it sustained the assessor in refusing to make the deduction asked.

No Changes to be Made

No change in the financing of The Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light Company will result from its absorption this week by the newly incorporated Wisconsin Edison Company of New York, according to James D. Mortimer, president of the Milwaukee corporation and director in the new holding company. The Wisconsin Edison Company, which is capitalized at $12,000,000, takes over the Wisconsin holdings of the North American Company.

Milwaukee Chapter to Give Minstrel Show

The Milwaukee chapter of the American Institute of Banking is preparing an elaborate minstrel show to be presented at the Pabst theatre on the nights of December 6th and 7th. Boxes for the opening performance have been taken by the following prominent Milwaukee bankers and business men: Charles F. Pfister, L. J. Petit, Fred Vogel, Jr., James K. Ilsley, Oliver C. Fuller, Gustav Pabst, William Woods Plankinton, Albert Trostel, John E. DeWolf, and George H. Russell.

Puts Valuation at $8,770,000

The state railroad commission this week fixed the physical valuation of the Milwaukee Gas Light Company's properties at $8,770,148. The company places a valuation of $14,000,000. The report of the commission is the first made to the city since the petition for lower gas rates was filed more than one year ago.

Conference of Agricultural Committees Called

The agricultural committee of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, through its chairman, L. A. Baker, New Richmond, has issued a call for a conference of associations interested in the improvement of agricultural conditions in Wisconsin, to be held at the college of agriculture of the University of Wisconsin at Madison on November 22d.

New Bank at Butler

The New Butler Bank was organized this week with capital of $10,000. John Pilgrim is president, and George Lilly vice-president. A cashier will be appointed next week. The stockholders decided to erect a story and a half brick structure to house the new bank.

Bank Robbers Scared Away

An unsuccessful attempt to rob the State Bank of Bagley was made this week, but the would-be safe breakers were frightened away after blowing off the handle of the door. Investigation has led to the belief that the attempt was made by amateurs.

Frank Martin of Shawano Dead

Frank Martin, cashier of the German-American Bank of Shawano, died on Tuesday, following an operation at a hospital in Green Bay.

¶ This Bank, being at the logical center of Wisconsin banking activity, and having an exceptional list of State and Foreign correspondents, offers its services to conservative Banks with the assurance that such a connection will be of mutual advantage.

COUNTRY BANKERS EXPECTED TO BUY

La Salle street investment houses are preparing for great activity and breadth in the bond market, which they expect will develop in the next few weeks. They are laying in stores, so to speak, of high-grade mortgage securities, in anticipation of a vigorous demand to come from country bankers, who are at present practically out of the market.

Just now the individual investor, the man who buys over the counter, is the life of the trade in bonds. Although the customers of this class are buying freely, they do not supply the activity such as comes when the country banks are buying bonds in earnest.

It is to the country banker that the Chicago bond merchants are now looking for a big revival in their business. This will come, they know from the experience of previous years, as soon as the demand for money for financing the crop movement slackens a bit. An inquiry for $50,000 bonds which came to the First Trust & Savings Bank from a country bank was the first inquiry from such a source in several weeks. It is considered a harbinger of a steady demand which will set in from the country as soon as money becomes more plentiful.

"Indications point to an abundant supply of money for investment purposes, especially after the turn of the year," said the manager of one La Salle street house. "The demand for high-grade bonds will be unusually active, because, for one reason, investors of the more cautious sort will prefer such securities to industrial stocks, during a time of tariff uncertainties."

APPOINTED RECEIVER FOR DEFUNCT BANK

Horace C. Reed, a national bank examiner, has been appointed by Comptroller of the Currency Murray as receiver to take charge of the affairs of the First National of Wilburton, Oklahoma, which recently closed its doors.

The Continental Trust Company of Waco, Tex., has formally changed its name to the Cattlemen's Trust Company of Fort Worth.

Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh bank clearings in October shattered all previous records. They amounted to $267,768,219.38. The previous record was $250,602,941 in April, 1907, the nearest previous approach thereto having been $247,191,957 in July, 1912. The exchanges for the month were $24,613,221 over the total for September and showed an increase of $57,232,606 over October, 1911.

The exchanges for ten months were $2,323,590,728.62. This has been exceeded but once in the history of Pittsburgh Clearing House, in 1907, when exchanges were $2,328,543,515.27. Thus 1912 is but $4,952,786.65 less than for the same period five years ago. But the total for 1912 will certainly make a new record, as business now is practically booming, while in 1907 it fell off rapidly after October, when the panic occurred.

State Banks

The deposits of the state banks and trust companies of Pittsburgh show a decrease as compared with the statements of May last, when a new high mark was made. At that period, however, deposits were abnormally high by reason of the temporary presence of several exceptionally large sums in some of the trust companies. The total is $202,000,000, as compared with $209,000,000 in May. The present figures, however, show a gain of about $11,000,000 over the aggregate of November a year ago. The state bank totals show a new high mark with over $100,000,000 in deposits. The deposits of this class of banks are mostly savings accounts and have, with but few exceptions, shown a consistent increase.

BECOMES ASSOCIATED WITH SALOMON & CO.

Harry Benner, who recently has been connected with the corporation department of the Harris Trust and Savings Bank, has become associated with the Chicago office of William Salomon & Co., bankers. Mr. Benner, before his association with the Harris Trust and Savings, was connected with the Pennsylvania Lines west of Pittsburgh, and later was secretary to W. G. Burd, general manager of the Panama Railroad Company at Colon, Panama. He is a graduate of the University of Chicago.

McCRUM-HOWELL COMPANY SITUATION

The recent sales of assets of the McCrum-Howell Company to the creditors committee for $870,000 was confirmed yesterday by Judge Buffington in the United States district court at Philadelphia.

The Colorado Bankers Association has appointed a committee to pass upon all irrigation projects in the state and give its opinion as to the soundness of their securities, the expense of the examination to be borne by the enterprise seeking the approval of the committee.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis, Nov. 13th.—About fifty bankers and brokers from New York, Chicago and other eastern cities were entertained at the Racquet Club Monday night by St. Louisans. Re-enforced by sixteen bankers and brokers from St. Louis, they will depart at 7 A. M. today, for an inspection of the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad, especially of the St. Louis, Brownsville and Mexico branch. They recently have bought and handled the securities of this railroad, and the present trip is promoted by G. H. Walker & Co. of St. Louis and William Salamon & Co., of New York, to give them an opportunity to inspect the property behind the securities.

The tourists will be entertained at a noon-day luncheon by New Orleans bankers and business men at the headquarters of the Progressive Union, the business organization of New Orleans. At Dallas the party will be entertained by J. C. Casler and Clarence E. Linz, president and vice-president, respectively, of the Dallas Automatic Telephone Company, and will inspect the properties of the Southern Traction Company of Texas, which is constructing an interurban road between Waco and Dallas, for which St. Louis financiers are supplying the funds. The properties of the Dallas Telephone Company will also be inspected.

The following St. Louisans will make the trip: Louis Barklage, W. L. Beckett, J. A. Berninghaus, C. G. Cobb, W. B. Dean, Jr., W. V. Delahunt, Fred Emert, Talton T. Francis, H. M. Kauffman, Alden H. Little, Albert T. Perkins, Thomas H. West, Jr., Henry Potter, R. L. Rinaman, G. H. Walker and James H. Wear, Jr.

Large Gains for St. Louis Lines

According to returns so far received from railroads making weekly reports, gross earnings for October were well above those of the same month a year ago. The total aggregated $40,074,554, an increase of 6.9 per cent. In the South a few small losses still appear, but they are not significant, and a number of important systems report pronounced gains, notably the Southern, an increase of $377,146, and the Chesapeake and Ohio, with $170,031. Roads in the West and Southwest almost without exception show large gains, reflecting the revival in railroad business due to active movement of freight incident to unusually satisfactory crop results.

Urges Plan Change

A new plan for the development of the Mississippi River, which would enable St. Louis to reap the benefits of its location, was outlined yesterday at the noon-day luncheon of the Business Men's League at the Planters' Hotel, by Hugh L. Cooper, vice-president and chief engineer of the Mississippi River Power Company, the engineer who put the power dam across the Mississippi at Keokuk. The speaker declared the loudly extolled 14-foot channel from the lakes to the gulf was an engineering impossibility and asserted the money expended and the enthusiasm developed at the deep waterways conventions was misdirected. The new plan he suggested was the appointment of a strong commission of engineers and business men to study the problem fundamentally.

Oklahoma Bank Robbed

It is the general belief that the Ochelota State Bank was blown by persons in that vicinity and not by yeggmen. After applying fourteen charges of nitroglycerin to the safe and vault, the robbers obtained $2500 in money and escaped. The repeated explosions awakened citizens, and sixty approached sufficiently near to the robbers to watch their operations, but a fusillade of rifle shots terrorized them into inactivity. Tom Ellis, assessor-elect of Washington County, went too close to suit the robbers on guard and was called by his name and told to halt. Another circumstance lending color to the belief that the work was done by local men, is that the hand car on which the robbers left town was returned to the "Y" before daylight. All telegraph and telephone wires leading into the town were cut by the robbers before operations were commenced.

Texas Wealth Over Two Billions

The total assessed wealth or assessed valuation of Texas for 1912 aggregates $2,526,681,775, as disclosed by figures compiled by the comptroller's department from the tax rolls of the 249 counties in Texas. This is an increase of $11,059,030 over the valuation of 1911, which reached the sum of $2,515,632,745. This increase is considered comparatively small when it is shown that the increase in Texas wealth for 1911 over 1910 reached $127,000,000. One of the reasons assigned for this small increase this year is a decrease of about $18,000,000 in the intangible assets. This being election year is also assigned as a reason for the small increase.

New Arkansas Bank

The Peoples Bank of Devall Bluff, has been chartered with a capital of $15,000. R. H. Sanders is president; W. H. Bland, vice-president; F. L. Major, secretary-treasurer.

Conditions in Oklahoma Excellent

Conditions in Oklahoma are excellent this year. The cotton crop is larger and bringing higher prices. The farmers have harvested a large corn crop. Bankers report collections the best in three years, and business is good.

Two New State Banks for Texas

At a meeting of the state banking board certificate of authority to do business in Texas was granted to the Moscow State Bank of Moscow, Polk County, capital stock $10,000, and to the Guaranty State Bank of Mount Selma, Cherokee County, capital stock $10,000. Both assumed the guaranty fund plan of protecting depositors.

Arkansas State Funds

State Treasurer John W. Crockett, has filed his biennial report with the governor. The total balance on October 1st, including school bonds, was $2,690,003.58; currency on hand, $800,770.69. General revenue balance was $188,323.94; total receipts for two years, $2,196,474.73. During the past two years $1,125,006.56 was paid for confederate pensions. The balance in the State Capitol fund was $208,815.52; amount drawn from the Capitol fund the past two years was $335,862.84. On October 1st, there was to the credit of the common school fund $94,409.40. Receipts from this source during the past two years were $2,430,352.02; expenditures, $2,363,378.07.

IDAHO BANK PRESIDENT CONVICTED

Pocatello, Idaho.—Five years in the U. S. prison at Leavenworth was the sentence imposed upon H. K. King, an aged banker, formerly president of the First National Bank of Salmon City, Ida., in the federal court on October 26th. He had been convicted of making false reports to the comptroller of the currency prior to the failure of his bank. It was urged in his defense that his guilt was only technical and his offense committed to tide over temporary difficulties.

ACTUAL value received from their connection with us has increased our accounts from other banks 50% in two years. We therefore invite the business of others with the assurance of mutual satisfaction.

PEOPLES SAVINGS, CEDAR RAPIDS, UNDER NEW CONTROL

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—Announcement has been made that the control of the Peoples Savings Bank, the west side institution which has made such a marked success, has passed into new hands. A great majority of the stock has been sold at a big figure to a number of popular, shrewd and capable business men who may be depended upon to maintain the high standing in business and popular favor which this bank has had in the past.

The new organization will be as follows: Congressman James W. Good, president; Matt J. Miles, first vice-president; William King, second vice-president; John Burianek, Jr., cashier, and John M. Ely, assistant cashier. These officers, with the following, will comprise the board of directors: James W. Good, Matt J. Miles, William King, John Burianek, Jr., C. E. Tuttle, John A. Reed, John M. Ely, and Dr. R. Lord.

The transfer of stock, it is understood, represents the highest price ever paid for bank stock in Cedar Rapids. The deal includes the transfer of the new bank building which was just completed a year ago last September and which has attracted the attention of financial interests all over the country because of its unique construction.

The Peoples Bank was organized twelve years ago last June. Mr. Burianek has been with the institution nine years and is considered one of the best posted bankers in this section. He has succeeded in working the deposits up to a gratifying business and has inaugurated several original ideas which have proven very successful. The retention of Mr. Burianek and Mr. Ely will be an assurance that the affairs of the bank will be conducted along the same line of efficiency as in the past.

The bank is capitalized at $50,000 and the bank building represents an outlay of considerably more than that figure.

TELEPHONE THWARTS BANK ROBBERS

A telephone was the means of preventing bank robbers from taking $75,000 in currency from the First National of Medaryville, Ind., this week. The explosion of the nitroglycerine used blew the telephone receiver off the hook and signaled the exchange. Failing to receive any response, and hearing a muffled sound like that of a far-away explosion, Mrs. Theodore Braemer, the telephone operator, looked out of the window and saw three men standing in front of the bank. She quickly summoned the town marshal, but the robbers saw him coming and succeeded in getting away. It is believed that they fled to Chicago. They succeeded in getting $2,000 in coin, but were frightened away before they had time to get the $75,000.

A new bank has been organized at Oxford, N. C., the new institution to be known as the Union Bank of Oxford. It will be capitalized at $100,000. Those interested in its organization are W. L. Peace, J. D. Brooks and L. F. Perkinson of Oxford.

MILWAUKEE BANK OCCUPIES PROMINENT POSITION

The working capital of the First National of Milwaukee now is four millions, so that sterling institution occupies an enviable position among the banks of the Middle West outside of Chicago.

BANK EMPLOYEES HOLD STOCK

A majority of the employees of the Citizens Central National, New York, are now stockholders in that institution, which is due principally to President Schneck, who, four years ago, purchased a large block of the stock of the bank for the benefit of the bank's employees. Mr. Schneck personally carried the stock for them, so that each of the clerks subscribing has been able to pay for his share of the subscription in easy monthly installments. The stock has now been all paid for. The market price of the stock has increased over $50 a share during the four years they have been paying for it.

DENIES RUMOR

The rumor that Albert H. Wiggin, president of the Chase National of New York, is to enter the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., has been denied by Henry P. Davison.

MAKING JUDGE LANDIS A HERO

Go where you like in Chicago, you will hear nothing but praise for the efforts Federal Judge Landis is making to get back from the wreckers at least a part of the depositors' money in the case of the failed private bank of W. T. Kirby. The job had been "put over" in the county courts and Kirby was in a sanitarium and a friendly conservator in charge. It was a lovely plan for legally separating the depositor from his money. The judge from the bench issued a statement which certainly will be added at once to the arguments in use favoring state supervision of banking, which is the only remedy for such failures as those of Kirby, of Mason, of McCarty and of a long string going back for years. One could wish for no better thing than to have Judge Landis open up some of the closed cases which made those who planned the Kirby failure hopeful of success. Here is what the judge said in part:

During the eight years I have been on this bench there have been paraded before me many private bank failures, downright losing of the hard earned money of poor, hard working wage earners. It has resulted in scores of suicides.

And while I am on this subject, let me say there is an influence in this state powerful enough to prevent the enactment of a law forbidding this kind of business. As matters now stand, it makes it possible for any man to paint a sign with the name "Banker" on it and begin business as a private banker.

Even the Illinois Bankers Association at its recent convention went on record against a law to correct this evil.

The new legislature, to meet in a few weeks, is certain to take up the matter of bank supervision. To amend the banking act is a referendum matter and very tedious, but the criminal law code could be amended by an act making certain kinds of banking a criminal offense. There's the chance.

EFFICIENT SERVICE OF FEDERAL COURT

The exhaustive manner in which the affairs relating to the Kirby private bank failure have been delved into by the federal court, must be a source of great satisfaction, not only to the depositors who have been so shamelessly swindled out of their money, but to the general public who are interested in seeing all attempts at fraud and imposition promptly thwarted by the law. Circumstances tend to indicate that the proceedings in the county court were merely a ruse to have the banker-physician declared insane so that he would be absolved from criminal liability as a result of the bank failure. It also has been shown that large sums of money were withdrawn from the bank immediately prior to the failure. The whole affair has been characterized by the federal court as "a deliberate attempt to steal the depositors' money."

LARGER PAID CIRCULATION IN THE MIDDLE WEST THAN ANY THREE OF ITS COMPETITORS COMBINED

The way in which the federal court has gone into the matter certainly is highly commendable. An attempt had been made to get the United States court to relinquish jurisdiction and to turn the property over to the conservator, which was denied. The court has succeeded in eliciting information which clearly indicates that the whole affair probably is a deliberate frame-up, and has refused to believe that the banker is insane. Kirby has displayed wonderful astuteness in refraining from saying anything tending to impeach his methods of banking, always using the threadbare excuse of "not remembering."

It truly is too bad that people of questionable character, who are addicted to laxity in business methods, should be allowed to engage in such an important and responsible business as that of banking. A bank is a public necessity; the people must have some place to put their money. It is just as necessary to the public welfare as are the public utility companies. So much has been said about supervision of late that it is unnecessary to enumerate the numerous arguments in favor of it. The almost daily examples of the evils incident to a lack of supervision speak far more eloquently than any words which can be uttered on the subject. The people are fortunate in having public servants who will unearth fraud and collusion; but, after all the damage has been done it does not do much good for some court to apprise the unfortunate depositors that they have misplaced their confidence,—it does not give them their money back. The thing to do is to prevent the fraud and collusion in the first place, or to discover its existence in ample time to protect the intended victims; and this can be done only by prescribing some qualifications for one who wishes to engage in the business of banking.

The failure of a private banker usually causes a great sensation,—for the time being,—the newspapers graphically depict the unfortunate predicament in which the depositors are placed; the woe and misery resulting from the failure; the fact that the depositors are of an unsophisticated and uneducated class who think that any place which has the word "bank" on the window has the strength of Gibraltar. A great hue and cry is raised about the loose methods of the proprietor, his failure to keep books of account and about the speculative enterprises to which he is a party. Yet, in a few days the whole thing blows over; the people forget about it, and nothing more is said until the next failure occurs. Usually there are a few sessions in court, but nothing material seems to be accomplished. One seldom hears of these so-called "bankers" being prosecuted criminally for their misdeeds, notwithstanding the fact that the criminal code of the state of Illinois provides a penalty for accepting deposits with knowledge of insolvency.

If the public wants relief from this almost unbearable situation, some organized effort should be made to have some of these persons prosecuted criminally, for confinement in the penitentiary appears to be the only effective deterrent. If an insolvent is permitted merely to go through the bankruptcy court, what is there to prevent him from starting another bank, after he has been relieved from his liabilities by the government?

The public has lost track of most of the recent private bank failures. None of the bankrupts, however, seems to be boarding at the expense of the state. If the same thoroughness and efficiency manifested by the federal court in the Kirby case were exhibited in all similar cases in other courts, it is conceivable that the results would be radically different from what they seem to have been of late, and that much progress would be made toward stamping out wildcat banking.

CLARIFIED AND EXPLICIT

With bankers and railroad men, the ten years' war for a better bill of lading law is an old story. It is a complicated question and by most business men is understood but imperfectly. Mr. Hagey of the First National was one of the speakers before the Chicago Association of Commerce this week on this much-mooted subject. He stated the issue in a nutshell when he said:

"As bills of lading are now issued by the railroads, the roads themselves are not held responsible for the acts of their agents," said Mr. Hagey. "Under this system banks are afraid to loan money on these bills, save to men whose known responsibility is such that they do not need any security to borrow."

We suggest this extract be used as a text by those among the bankers who may be called upon to write or speak on the matter. It is a clarified and explicit statement of the chief present objection to the existing laws.

KIRBY BANK FAILURE

This week was replete with sensational developments in the Kirby private bank failure. Federal Judge Landis severely arraigned the banking methods employed by the Kirby institution, and said he did not see how anybody could help but lose his money in such a bank. Judge Landis recognized in Dr. Kirby an acquaintanceship of fifteen years' standing, and absolutely refuses to believe that the man is insane. He stated it as his opinion that County Judge Owens was imposed upon in the insanity proceedings before him. It has developed that former Judge Thomas B. Lantry, counsel for Mrs. Kirby, accepted $500 from Dr. Kirby a few days before the latter was adjudged insane by the county court. The judge said he didn't believe Mr. Lantry would accept a fee from a crazy man. It was impossible to determine from Dr. Kirby's testimony whether or not the physician is insane. It was noticeable, however, that he displayed sufficient astuteness to say he didn't remember, when any question was asked to which an intelligent answer would have aided the progress of the investigation materially.

The efforts of the federal court have been directed toward recovering the $20,000 belonging to the creditors and which, it is alleged, Mrs. Kirby has in her possession. It is said that the wife of the banker-physician withdrew $20,000 from the failed bank a few days before it closed its doors; that she deposited the money under assumed names in two South Side banks, and that it was withdrawn on October 31st. Officers of these institutions positively identified Mrs. Kirby as the person who had opened an account at their respective banks under the names of Miss E. Walsh and Mrs. N. S. Lamb. When asked as to these matters she declined to answer, on the advice of counsel, claiming that it might have a tendency to incriminate her. Judge Landis then ordered a rule entered upon Mrs. Kirby to produce the $20,000 in court Tuesday morning. Owing to the difficulty which had been experienced in securing her attendance, she was not permitted to leave the court room during the noon recess. The witness all through the proceedings maintained a calm, defiant manner and almost from the very first persistently refused to answer the questions put to her by counsel for the creditors.

Judge Landis ruled that Mrs. Kirby be required to show in writing Tuesday morning why she should not be compelled to turn over the $20,000 alleged to be in her possession. She replied, setting up the fact that the United States court has no jurisdiction in the matter. Judge Landis was appealed to to grant another day's time before making a ruling. She was ordered to bring the money into court on Wednesday. Then occurred one of the severest arraignments ever delivered by a judge from the bench. He sharply criticized the Illinois Bankers Association for the action at the Peoria convention in going on record as being opposed to supervision. He cited the failure of the Kirby bank (which he characterized as more of a store than a bank) as an example of what frequently happens in the case of unsupervised banking.

Roger S. Gorman, the conservator appointed by the probate court, and a brother-in-law of Dr. Kirby, admitted on the stand that he had done practically nothing to gather the assets. He said that he knew nothing of the $20,000 alleged to be in Mrs. Kirby's possession. Daniel J. Kirby, cashier of the bank and a cousin of Dr. Kirby, proved to be a very forgetful witness and manifested remarkable ignorance regarding the affairs of the bank.

In most cases he either refused to answer the questions put to him on the ground that it might incriminate him, or said that he didn't remember. He did testify, however, that just prior to the failure he had handed to Mrs. Kirby on two different occasions $10,000 which she had taken away with her.

The attorneys for the Kirbys and for the conservator were caustically criticized by Judge Landis. Former Judge Lantry, who represents the conservator and Mrs. Kirby, when asked by the judge if it might not prove embarrassing to endeavor to collect money on behalf of the conservator and from his other clients, said that that proposition had not occurred to him.

It is said that Dr. Kirby confessed to Isaac Doff, personal bailiff of Judge Owens, and in whose custody the banker-physician has been pending the outcome of the present proceedings, that the $20,000 which it has been alleged is in the possession of Mrs. Kirby was in reality lost on a fake race and that Dr. Kirby, in an effort to recoup previous losses, had staked this sum and had been swindled out of it by a gang of "wire tappers," whose rendezvous is said to have been at the Blackstone Hotel. Counsel for Mrs. Kirby have receded from the former position which they took of advising their client to stand upon her constitutional rights and not to give any testimony in the case which might incriminate her. It is reported that Mrs. Kirby is willing to waive her constitutional privilege and to tell all that she knows relative to the mysterious disappearance of the $20,000. Mrs. Kirby's testimony is expected to corroborate the confession made by her husband to Bailiff Doff.

Counsel for the receiver characterize the defense which has been interposed as a "frame-up," and refuse to give credence to the "wire tapper" story. As a result of the frenzied finance disclosed by this Kirby trial, public sentiment has become very strong against the private banks, and it is considered very probable that the next legislature will pass a bill relating to them.

In her testimony Friday morning before Judge Landis Mrs. Kirby admitted having opened accounts in two south side banks under assumed names, and said that she had done so at the request of her husband. She said that on October 29th her husband telephoned her to come to the Blackstone Hotel and bring $10,000 from the Kirby Savings Bank. She met her husband, who was with another man, and they all got into a taxicab. Dr. Kirby and the stranger got out at Eighteenth St. and Wabash Av. After that Mrs. Kirby went home. The physician later on the same day telephoned her to make out a check for $10,000, payable to J. O'Malley, and to indorse it herself and deposit in the Stockmens Savings Bank. At 10:30 o'clock he came home and said that they had gotten $40,000 from him and expressed the fear that they would shoot him. He said that he would have $100,000 the next day and asked his wife to go to ten different banks and open accounts, which she refused to do. He then told her to draw two checks for $10,000. One of them was the "Miss E. Walsh" check on the Washington Park Bank and the other on the Citizens Trust and Savings, signed "Mrs. N. S. Lamb." Mrs. Kirby did this and gave them to Dan Kirby, the cashier.

ASSOCIATION OF COMMERCE LISTENS TO BILLS OF LADING TALKS

About 250 members of the Chicago Association of Commerce were present at the regular Wednesday noonday luncheon of the ways and means committee held in the main dining room of the LaSalle Hotel. Bills of lading was the subject under consideration at this meeting, the speakers being Clay H. Hollister, vice-president and cashier of the Old National, Grand Rapids, Mich., chairman of the bills of lading committee of the American Bankers Association, and J. F. Hagey, assistant cashier of the First National of Chicago.

Mr. Hollister told of the present status of the bills of lading situation in congress.

CLAY H. HOLLISTER
Grand Rapids, Michigan
Chairman Bills of Lading Committee, A. B. A.

Some of the objections to present bills of lading are that they do not guarantee delivery of the number of articles listed, the road being liable only for the goods actually received. A bill of lading only gives a list as furnished by the shipper, and does not guarantee the quality of the goods; it may be fraudulently issued and the signature forged and hence not binding on the railroad; it may have been issued in duplicate and not so marked, so that two bills may be outstanding for the same shipment, and a bill of lading may be outstanding when part of the goods have been delivered.

The most serious of the defects of the common law proposed to be remedied is the doctrine which prevails in all of the federal courts and in a number of the state courts, that although a bill of lading acknowledging the receipt of described goods is issued by the authorized agent of the carrier, and passes to a "bona fide" holder for value, who takes it relying upon the truth of the statements which it contains, the carrier is at liberty to show the fact, whenever it is a fact, that the agent never received the goods, but issued the bill through mistake or fraud or as an accommodation to the shipper, and upon such showing free himself from responsibility on the ground that the agent had no authority to issue the bill before the goods were received. It is desired to have a uniform bills of lading act adopted in all of the states which will be in the nature of a code of the rules of law relating to the issue, transfer and redemption of bills of lading.

Senate Bill No. 4713, known as the Pomerene Bill, is the same law which the bankers are advocating in the different states of the union. Last August the senate passed this bill by a unanimous vote, and it now is up to the committee on interstate and foreign commerce of the house, where it will be urged for passage at the short session of congress this winter. Advices are that Chairman Adamson of the house committee is opposed to the measure and that he has prepared a bill of his own covering the subject. His auditors were greatly amused at the provisions of the proposed bill of the committee chairman as stated by Mr. Hollister. Among other things, it provides that it shall be unlawful for any bank, officer or agent thereof to accept any bill of lading without first ascertaining by actual inquiry that the shipment really was delivered to the carrier whose agent has signed the bill of lading. Violation of this provision is punishable by a fine not exceeding $5,000. The agent also is subject to a fine of $5,000 or imprisonment in the penitentiary for any term not exceeding five years, or both. It is needless to say that there is not much likelihood of such a ludicrous measure being passed. In concluding his remarks, Mr. Hollister said:

"The Pomerene Bill will come up before the house this winter. We are in great hopes that we shall receive such co-operation from the shippers and bankers who are interested in this subject as will enable us to carry through congress some remedial legislation, which shall be in definite form on the statute books, and something which will make a bill of lading when offered to a banker a document which can be recovered against for what it purports to contain." The bills of lading committee already has been successful in having corrective laws enacted in ten states.

Mr. Hollister's succinct statement of the present status of the bills of lading legislation was very greatly enjoyed by those who were fortunate enough to hear him. He presented his subject clearly and interestingly.

Mr. Hagey spoke on bills of lading as collateral and pointed out the present necessity for better legislation which would tend to make the bill uniformly more truly negotiable. The vagueness of the legal status of bills of lading, the indefinite degree of negotiability and the uncertainty of the rights and obligations of the parties to it have prevented this instrument from being considered by bankers as a high-class bankable document. Considering the enormous amount of everyday business transacted by means of bills of lading and the necessary advances made on them, it would seem only proper that satisfactory protection be given the lender. Frequent and severe losses have been suffered by banks upon such loans, in most instances caused by carelessness in the method of handling bills at the time of their issuance or their redemption. The various states have passed statutes which have rendered some assistance but there exists such great ununiformity and conflict that the bankers are unwilling to extend advances which are actually necessary. The vital thing to be obtained would be federal legislation which would make the carrier responsible for the acts of its agents both at the time the bill was issued and the time it was taken up. If such legislation were procured it would put into general use at once an instrument which would possess all the essential characteristics of good collateral. The law which is receiving the support of the American Bankers Association would accomplish this end and would make reasonable requirements necessary to safeguard the banks. Mr. Hagey handled his subject in a lucid and forceful manner. This was his initial appearance before the members of the ways and means committee, and he at once established a reputation for graceful speaking and clear thinking.

Among the bankers who were present were G. P. Hoover and F. R. Elliott, vice-president and treasurer of the Harris Trust; Joseph R. Noel, president of the Northwest State; F. L. Hankey, vice-president of the Northern Trust; John W. Thomas, Malcom McDowell and W. G. Edens, assistant cashier and assistant secretaries of the Central Trust Company of Illinois; Henry S. Henschen, cashier of the State Bank; Thomas E. Newcomer, assistant cashier of the Fort Dearborn National; V. E. Nichols, vice-president and cashier of the First National of Englewood, and M. E. Greenebaum of Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust Co. Dan Norman represented the Continental and had as his guests Warren W. Smith, cashier of the South Chicago Savings Bank; John A. Carroll, of the Hyde Park State; J. J. Salat, vice-president of the Lawndale State; G. I. McEldowney, president of the Bank of Chicago Heights, D. Wiedemann, cashier of the First National of Harvey and Clarence E. Smith, president of the Peoples Bank, Waukegan.

Notes

Mr. McEldowney celebrated his birthday anniversary by coming in for the luncheon.

This is the third time that the members of subdivision II, banks and bankers, have furnished programs and speakers for the noonday luncheons of the ways and means committee during the present year. At the two previous meetings the subjects of agricultural education, good roads and bank supervision were discussed.

Mr. Hollister's acceptance of the invitation of the Association of Commerce to speak on this subject was greatly appreciated by the members of the ways and means committee. Nine new members of the association were reported by the secretary as having been secured since the last meeting on November 6th. Chairman Stone of the membership committee reported a campaign for new members to be inaugurated next week, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday being set aside as the days for this work. Luncheons will be held on these days at the LaSalle, at which time the progress made in the work will be reported.

In the absence of Edward E. Gore, who was out of the city on a business trip, Scott A. Bond, vice-chairman of the committee, presided and introduced the speakers.

Special stenographer Brady, who always reports the council meetings and those of the members of the Illinois Bankers Association, was on the job.

WILLIAM T. ABBOTT ON THE KIRBY FAILURE

William T. Abbott, vice-president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, when interviewed this week concerning the Kirby private bank failure, said:

"It might be assumed that in the agitation the last few years for controlling the private bank situation in Illinois, and especially with all that has been said and written in the last year, every phase of the subject should have been covered. In some articles, the point has been suggested, that even where the private bank is solvent yet upon the death or legal disability of the banker, all his affairs, including his banking relations, must be settled through the medium of the probate or county court.

"The case of the Kirby Savings Bank, so called, now pending simultaneously in the bankruptcy court and in the county court of Cook county, is an added illustration, as well as one of the most powerful that has yet occurred in Chicago, of the evils of a system which permits unregulated and unsupervised banking, although the amount involved is not so large as in some of the other failures of the past year.

"On Saturday, November 2d, certain petitioning creditors filed a petition in bankruptcy against William T. Kirby, doing business as Kirby Savings Bank, alleging his insolvency and other acts of bankruptcy, and a receiver was appointed.

"On Monday, November 4th, a conservator was appointed for him, he having, as it then appeared, been adjudged insane, on the previous Thursday.

"A conflict of jurisdiction at once arose. The conservator filed a petition in the bankruptcy court, requesting the surrender of all Kirby's assets by the receiver, to him, the conservator.

"As it developed on the first hearing, not only had all the depositors' money been wasted and squandered, but on the eve of the adjudication of insanity or immediately afterward, others associated with him in the bank had secured additional funds from other banks which had not been turned over to the receiver; and, so far as the facts are known at this time, apparently have followed the money of the depositors into devious channels, with the hope of recouping former losses. Judge Landis, with his customary thoroughness, determined to go to the bottom of the matter, and leave no stone unturned to recover that money for the depositors. Owing to the personal relationship between the conservator and the associate of Kirby, into whose hands the money was traced, he was of the opinion that that result was more likely to be reached in the bankruptcy court than by allowing the conservator, a near relative of the family, to assume jurisdiction.

"The various steps by which he has proceeded have been chronicled in the daily press.

"On Tuesday of this week, in entering the order requiring Mrs. Kirby to deliver to the receiver $20,000, which the court considered the evidence showed had come into her possession, Judge Landis showed a keen grasp of the private bank situation in Illinois, and his remarks are hardly complimentary to organized banks, large or small, who have refused to go on record as favoring supervision and regulation of all banks and bankers in Illinois."

Part of Judge Landis' Opinion

"Now, one thing more before this order is entered. I have been here for nearly eight years on this bench. I have had paraded before me a series of these so-called private bank failures. It is a peculiarity of the private bank failure in this community that the looting of the bank takes the money which is the earnings of the poor of the community, the accumulation of the pennies from their scant earnings; and this succession of failures of private banks in this community has resulted in scores of suicides of poor people who have lost years of earnings, savings from their toil. And it is to be recalled, in this connection, that there is an influence in the state of Illinois, in spite of this record of failures of private banks—it is actually true that there is an influence in this state powerful enough to prevent the enactment of a law that forbids this kind of business—that makes it perfectly lawful for any man, no matter how irresponsible, to paint the word "bank" on a board, put it up over a door, and open the door and receive the money of these people; and it is a fact that at the last meeting of the Illinois Bankers Association that organization went on record, in the face of the people of Illinois, against the enactment of a law that would break up this nasty business and put this whole field of banking under the supervision of public officers. I say the bankers association of this state—some big bankers and some little bankers—actually stood up in public in their meeting and voted against the enactment of such a law—the big bankers (we might as well be honest about it while we are on the subject), the big bankers, because they did not want to offend private bankers who kept their deposits with them, and the little bankers, because they wanted to be free to handle other people's funds without the examination of a public officer.

"These gentlemen who are responsible for this action I suppose are entitled to such satisfaction, as they contemplate the Kirby failure and other failures like it, as they may be able to get out of their attitude."

"We suppose the answer of the wealthy down-state private banker will be that a man in an incorporated bank is just as liable to go crazy, as a man running a private bank, and that therefore, supervision and incorporation are powerless to prevent the action of the laws of nature. This argument is in line with most of those which have been heretofore advanced, the fallacy of which is apparent at a glance. If the president or other officer of an incorporated bank should go insane, that bank, if solvent, would continue just the same. If insolvent, its affairs would be administered by the banking department of the state, in accordance with the law, and there would be no unseemly conflict of jurisdiction as to courts and the persons who had wasted or squandered the bank's deposits of money would be summarily dealt with. And in any event it would not be left in charge of one woman and a seventeen-year-old boy cashier as in this case.

"This situation is squarely up to the state legislature—the failure of the Illinois State Bankers Association to recommend legislation to this end does not justify the legislature in withholding action on its part. It should speedily pass such laws as will put an end to this scandal and disgrace to our state.

"There will be in the coming legislature, a working majority, but holding the balance of power, of statesmen who were elected on the platform of 'Social Justice.' There is no way by which they can so thoroughly demonstrate the sincerity of their ante-election promises, and so thoroughly promote the cause of 'social justice,' as by forcing, as they will be in a position to do, the enactment of some law that will do away with private banks, the failure of which, as Judge Landis points out in the above opinion, invariably falls upon the poor and ignorant of the great cities.

"Will the 'Social Justice' party meet this call upon them?"

FOLEY I. C. GENERAL MANAGER

Announcement was made on Wednesday of the appointment of Thomas J. Foley as general manager of the Illinois Central Railroad.

Mr. Foley has been assistant general manager of the company for several years and succeeds W. L. Park as general manager. Mr. Park will continue as vice-president in charge of operation of the road.

Sullivan S. Morris, who has been general superintendent of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley Railroad, has been appointed chairman of the general safety committee of the road. This is a new position.

STATE SENATOR INTERESTED IN ROAD IMPROVEMENT

State Senator H. W. Johnson, president of the Ottawa (Ill.) Banking and Trust Company, visited Chicago Monday. Judge Johnson is very much interested in the matter of road improvement in Illinois, being president of the commercial club of his home city, LaSalle. They have a good roads committee and are busy urging the farmers and land owners of LaSalle county to drag their roads. Judge Johnson will address the members of the LaSalle County Institute at their meeting in Ottawa in February. This plan is to be followed throughout the state generally this winter. The program committee of the Illinois Farmers Institute has arranged that the subject of good roads be considered at each of the county meetings of the institute. Bankers and members of commercial bodies throughout the state are taking a deep interest in this subject, conferring with the managers of the local farmers' institutes and co-operating in the matter of helping to secure suitable speakers and arrange for beneficial programs.

DAVID R. FORGAN TO MAKE ADDRESS

David R. Forgan, president of the National City Bank of Chicago, will make an address on November 19th at the annual dinner of the American Railway Guild. Mr. Forgan's subject will be "How to Avoid Another Panic." The guild is a branch of the American Railway Association, and its membership includes the general officers of railways throughout the country. W. A. Gardner of Chicago, president of the C. & N. W. Ry. Co., is the head of the organization.

CALL MONEY RATE MARKED UP

Several local banks sent out notices this week that the interest rate on outstanding demand loans will be 6 per cent hereafter. Some new call loans have been made recently at the 6 per cent rate, but the bulk of the local money of that class has been going at 5½. In some of the local banks 6 per cent is claimed now as a minimum rate on all classes of new loans. There is an excellent demand for money and the supply for loans is low. The demand from the country continues strong and local borrowers in various lines of industry and commerce are active in the market, preparing for their winter business.

PRESIDENT LORIMER RECOVERING

President William Lorimer of the LaSalle Street Trust Co., Chicago, who is ill at the Presbyterian Hospital with an attack of appendicitis, is rapidly recovering. If the former senator continues to improve as rapidly as at present, he will be able to leave the hospital the first of next week.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Formal notice has been served upon the stockholders of the Kansas City Stock Yards Company that a new company formed under the laws of Maine has been organized to take over the property, and explaining the terms of the proposed transaction. If 75% of the old stockholders accept the proposition, the deal will be made and the stock yards will be turned over to packing-house interests. The new company is capitalized for $11,500,000, of which $9,000,000 is preferred stock and $2,500,000 is common. It is rumored that Edward Morris, head of Morris & Co., will be president of the new company and that control will pass January 1st. The packers now have control of the stock yards in Denver, Fort Worth, St. Joseph, Sioux City, Omaha, East St. Louis and Chicago. Kansas City has the only independent yard in the country. It was built in 1871. Charles Francis Adams, of Boston, was one of seven men who organized and controlled the first company. The business has grown enormously in the forty-one years and the capital stock has greatly increased. It is now in the hands of many hundreds of people, many of whom live in Kansas City. It is proposed that the new company is to take at least one half of the common stock, paying for it at the same rate as the other subscribers. The new company will get the stock of the present company in exchange for preferred stock drawing 5% interest plus $10 for each share of stock in the present company. Further, it gives stockholders the opportunity to subscribe for one-seventh of their present holdings in common stock, paying $50 a share therefor. The common stock of the new company will have voting power. It is said that if this deal goes through it will mean the retirement of the present officers of the company, who are: president, C. F. Morse; secretary and treasurer, E. E. Richardson; general manager, Eugene Rust; traffic manager, William Weeks.

Group 5 at Great Bend

An unusual attendance and a jollification over the splendid crops produced in the Southwest marked the meeting of Group 5 of the Kansas Bankers Association at Great Bend, Kan., Wednesday, November 13th. Death of Captain Logan Enyart

Captain Logan Enyart, 87 years old, a pioneer resident of Nebraska and a banker of varied interests, died at his home in Nebraska City, Nov. 9th, after an illness lasting more than a year and which followed a runaway accident in the western part of the state. Captain Enyart was one of the best known and wealthiest men in Nebraska, owning lands in Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and Colorado. He was president of the Farmers Bank of Nebraska City and was also majority stockholder in a bank in Ouray, Col., and a bank near Gallatin, Mo. One of his holdings was forty thousand acres of Nebraska farm lands. He was born in Monroe county, Kentucky, June 30, 1833, went to Missouri with his parents, served through the Civil War as captain of Company G, First Missouri Cavalry, and at the close of the war went to Nebraska with fifty cents in his pocket. He was a member of the Nebraska legislature for two terms and was a prominent Mason. A widow and several brothers and sisters survive him.

Borrowers Protective Association Organized

In May, 1912, a unique organization was formed in Pawnee township, Lincoln county, Oklahoma, which bore the name of the Borrowers Protective Association. All of its members were farmers and most of them specialized in cotton. For years they had suffered by excessive rates charged by the banks for money required to handle cotton crops, and as the farmers did not have money to pay their notes at the banks until the cotton crop was marketed, nothing was done by the association until last week when active steps were taken to recover what was alleged to be illegal interest from the banks. The first man to demand a return of illegal interest was Frank Arnold. The bankers at first attempted to fight the case, but finally compromised out of court. Arnold got back $650 interest. His demand was followed by others. Thomas Elder received $57.91, Joseph Van Camp $16 and Elder Boxley $42.85. The movement has now become general in the cotton growing sections of Oklahoma and it is estimated that thousands of dollars will be returned to the farmers without a fight. The law against Cleveland.—Bank clearings in Cleveland during October crosses the hundred-million mark for the first time in the city's history. Making a total of $107,644,900, they compare with $90,917,400 in October last year and show a gain of more than 18 per cent. September clearings showed a gain of 14 per cent over September last year, and the gain in the entire nine months of 1912 was better than 12 per cent over the period last year.

Group 1 of the Ohio Bankers Association met at Hamilton on Tuesday. A big delegation of Cincinnati bankers made the trip, reaching Hamilton at 5:50 p. m. The group was entertained at the Hamilton County Club with a dinner, followed by the business session. Thomas J. Davis, of Cincinnati, is the chairman of the group. O. M. Blake of Hamilton, M. L. Wolf of Xenia, and Hon. J. Adam Bede were the speakers.

The directors of the Fourth National Bank, Cincinnati, have declared an extra dividend of 1 per cent in addition to the regular semi-annual disbursement of 4 per cent. The dividend is a disbursement of $25,000 on the capital of $500,000.

MAUSOLEUM

The above is one of our classic four column front mausoleums. We have erected many hundreds of mausoleums, ranging in price from $2,000 to $100,000. The private mausoleum is the least heartrending method of caring for the deceased.

SOUTH TEXAS NATIONAL OUTGROWS NEW HOME

After occupying its magnificent building little more than a year, the South Texas Commercial National Bank, Houston, Tex., has already outgrown its quarters. Plans are now being drawn for the construction of an annex forty feet long at the rear of the building. This will permit the removal of the immense vault to the rear of the building and will give room for eight additional cages for the accommodation of clerks and tellers.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

After making a record run of more than $2,000,000 for twenty-five consecutive days, St. Paul bank clearings fell to $1,930,907, which however, exceeded the clearings for the same day in 1911 of $1,192,491.

Minneapolis Clearings High

Bank clearings in Minneapolis one day last week passed previous records, even at time for grain deliveries. On one grain delivery day the clearings reached $7,000,000, and at another time approached that total, but the new record is $7,746,237. The day previous the record was $7,355,552. The two-day figure of $15,081,788 was as much as an average week total of a year ago. For the week, with five business days in 1912, compared to six business days last year, the comparative figures are $33,095,654, and $31,641,978. Clearings for 1910, the highest yet, $1,155,659,665, will probably be passed in 1912. Sixty millions of dollars have been paid for grain shipped into Minneapolis, since September 1st, by Northwestern farmers.

Elected Treasurer Y. M. C. A.

E. W. Decker has been made state treasurer for the Young Men's Christian Association. He succeeds a man who served the state committee ten years. J. S. Ulland, president of the Fergus Falls National, was elected member of the committee.

First National Scores in Football Game

The First National clerks football team administered a sturdy whaling to the football team of the Northwestern National last week. The score was 10 to 0. A regular sporting editor reported the game, in which he said in complimentary terms of the clerks' work: "Le Palma drop-kicked a goal from the field, and added one more point to the score when he kicked a goal from a touchdown made by Jaffray. The feature of the entire contest was a forward pass, Hodgins to Jaffray, behind the goal posts for the touchdown. About 500 witnessed the game."

New Fire Insurance Company Organized

With an authorized capital of $1,000,000, the Bankers & Merchants Fire Insurance Company has been organized in the Metropolitan Life Building, Minneapolis. C. A. Christensen, head of the Minnesota & Western Grain Company, and member of Stair, Christensen & Timmerman, is head of the organization. W. C. Thom, cashier of the First National of Rushmore, Minn., is one of the incorporators.

F. A. Gross Elected President Twin City Bankers Club

F. A. Gross, president of the German American Bank, Minneapolis, was elected president of the Twin City Bankers Club last week at the annual meeting in the Minneapolis Club. He succeeded E. H. Bailey, president of the First National, St. Paul. E. W. Briggs, cashier of the Stock Yards National, South St. Louis, was elected vice-president and George F. Orde, vice-president of the First National, Minneapolis, was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Savings Department Opened

The Merchants National, St. Paul, has completed arrangements for its savings department and deposits are being received. The opening was last week.

Charles R. Frost Resigns

Charles R. Frost, secretary of the Minnesota Bankers Association since April 1, 1908, has resigned and will leave his work December 1st, to become treasurer of the National Surety Company of which William B. Joyce, formerly of Minneapolis, is president. Mr. Frost will move to New York. George A. DuToit of Chaska, chairman of the executive committee, will call a meeting soon to elect a successor to Mr. Frost. Mr. Frost has also had charge of the protective work of the Interstate Protective Association. Mr. Frost was born in St. Paul. He was manager of the American Bank Insurance Company before he became secretary. Before that he was connected with the legal department of the Twin City Rapid Transit Company.

St. Paul Bank Merger

Purchase of the National German American by the Merchants National has been authorized. The consolidated bank will have capital of $2,000,000 and surplus of $1,909,000, also deposits of $20,000,000. J. W. Lusk, president of the National German American, and Kenneth Clark, president of the Merchants, resigned, and were made members of the new board. Donald S. Culver, vice-president of the German American, became president and G. H. Prince, vice-president of the Merchants, became chairman of the board. F. Weyerhaeuser, vice-president of the German American, takes the same office with the new bank. L. W. Hill expects to remain a director of the Merchants. Each stockholder of the purchased bank is to receive one share in the Merchants. The new bank is to remain in the Merchants quarters, Fifth and Jackson streets, but a separate company may erect a building in the spring.

The Commercial National Bank has doubled the size of its directors' room, in the Lumber Exchange, by taking the additional space from the exhibit room of the west coast lumber manufacturers.

Minneapolis Delegation to Investment Bankers Convention

Eugene M. Stevens, of Stevens, Chapman & Co., a member of the executive council of the Investment Bankers Association of America, is arranging for a Minneapolis delegation to go to the annual meeting of the organization in New York City, November 21st and 22d.

The gathering will be the first annual convention of the organization, and, according to Mr. Stevens, there will probably be representatives from 300 investment banking institutions and trust companies at the meeting, as well as 600 New York bankers.

In the Minneapolis delegation will be Mr. Stevens, E. W. Decker, representing the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, and C. T. Jaffray, representing the Minneapolis Trust Company.

A. I. B. Hears Discussion on Historical Minneapolis

Historical Minneapolis was discussed before the Minneapolis chapter of bank clerks at Dayton's tea rooms by Douglas A. Fiske, new president of the Minneapolis Civic & Commerce Association. One hundred and twenty-five were there. He said that:

"In every banking institution of this city and every business house the managers or officers are cognizant of the fitness of the employees for advancement, and the man that gets the advancement is the man who not only knows his own job, but something of the man's work ahead of him, and also something of the general affairs of the city, for a man is more competent to administer the affairs of a bank or a business house if he knows something of the growth and development of the city and the reasons therefor, than the man who narrows his activities to the limits of his particular job. And so to-night I want to start you thinking about our great city, its wonderful development, and its brilliant future.

"The trade territory, exclusive of Canada, now tributary to Minneapolis, embraces one half of Wisconsin, Minnesota, northern Iowa, North and South Dakota, Wyoming and Montana, an empire in itself," said Mr. Fiske. "This rich territory is teeming with its millions which are surely coming."

Law Suit May Result

Alleged embezzlement of state funds may lead to suit against the banks which cashed checks for $19,540, bearing forged indorsements, and against E. K. Pruitt and W. D. Raymond, former secretaries of the board of stock commissioners. Recommendation to this effect has been made by the legislative committee appointed by Governor Norris, to investigate the alleged embezzlement by Samuel Langhorne, Jr., clerk in the office of the board. The report is that another shortage of $1,512 has been discovered traceable to J. H. Lander, stock inspector, formerly at Chicago. The members of the board are criticized in the report for negligence.

St. Paul Scandinavian Bank Sold

On Thursday of this week President A. L. Alness sold control of the St. Paul Scandinavian American Bank to a syndicate headed by directors J. C. Carlson and J. A. Swenson. Reported that 450 out of 512 shares were taken at 410, and the syndicate buys the bank building at $65,000. Alness will remain as president. A dividend has been declared from earnings of $190,000, leaving book value 210. Vice-president C. L. Johnston and Director A. E. Boyesch retire; Assistant Cashier J. B. Jensen was made vice-president and director, and Bookkeeper A. G. Hultgren becomes assistant cashier. C. H. Biorn was elected to the board and J. A. Swenson was re-elected cashier. Capital remains $100,000 surplus $100,000, and undivided profits are $10,000. No individual owns more than 100 shares.

Increases Capital

In line with the general forward movement in St. Paul the American National bank will increase its capital from $200,000 to $500,000 and surplus from $100,000 to $250,000. The American National has assets of $2,476,877 and deposits of $2,064,428. This follows sale of the Second National to James J. Hill, sale of the Northwestern Trust to the First National and merger of the National German American into the Merchants National.

J. R. Mitchell

"Large capital gives increased facilities in the financing of large business," said J. R. Mitchell, president of the Capital National, "and while to many it seems like added power which might work to the city's detriment, however, under the proposed management, both the banks merged will be officered by members of the present staff and there is little to fear from such a consolidation of banking capital.

"The effect upon the future of the Capital National bank is encouraging, and one of its greatest advantages is the close association with the Capital Trust company, by which we are enabled to take care of whatever large business comes to us and yet give to the smaller business interests—which we consider our greatest asset—the attention they need."

Minneapolis Trust Re-elects Directors

James J. Hill, St. Paul, and five other men were re-elected directors in the Minneapolis Trust company at the annual meeting, Nov. 12th. Officers were re-elected also, including Elbridge C. Cooke as president. The other directors are leading business men: C. T. Jaffray, vice-president of the First National; W. H. Dunwoody, chairman of the board of the Northwestern National and director in the Great Northern road; Isaac Hazlett, banker, and J. R. Kingman and C. S. Langdon. The directors declared a 3 per cent semi-annual dividend two weeks ago, payable Nov. 1st.

Will Erect Bank Building

The Simons Realty company, of which L. C. Simons, cashier of the Twin City State Bank, is cashier, has leased a lot for 100 years across from the bank, at Raymond and University avenues, a main line of traffic between the two cities, and will erect a building for the bank. The lower floor will be for banking quarters.

County Deposits Bid at 270

Practically all the Ramsey county banks were bidders for county deposits at 2 per cent. Heretofore the county was getting only 1½ per cent. Bids were received in which some of the banks bid less than 2 per cent. The bids were rejected and on a re-bid all banks bid 2 per cent. The action of the auditing committee was in line with a recommendation of the state bank examiner in his annual report, which decried the low rate.

Buy First State of Sauk Center

The First State of Sauk Center, Minn., has been bought by a crowd of capitalists composed of A. G. Whitney of St. Cloud and J. A. Caughren, M. F. Woodbury, J. A. Dubois, J. F. Cooper and Thomas Sullivan of Sauk Center. J. A. Caughren is president, Mr. Woodbury is vice-president. Capital stock is $25,000. The bank is known as one of the strongest in central Minnesota.

New Minnesota Banks

With capital of $10,000, the Pelican Rapids State Bank, Pelican Rapids, Minn., has incorporated. C. R. Frazee, P. C. Frazee, H. E. Frazee, G. M. Mills, H. G. Page, W. K. Frazee, Pelican Rapids, and J. A. Bjornstad of Minneapolis are the men behind the institution.

The Farmers State of Raymond, Minn., has a capital of $10,000, and has just been authorized with incorporators as follows: Russel Spicer, C. W. Odell, E. M. Stanford, A. N. Lewis, John Feig, C. B. Carlson, all of Willmar, Minn.

Northwest Banking Notes

Banks in Winona county have bid upon daily balances of county funds on the basis of 1%, for two years, and the audit board will recommend to the county board a division of the funds among the banks on this basis.

George F. Orde, vice-president of the First National, Minneapolis, is interested in a proposed national school writing contest. J. R. Bayley, supervisor of writing in the schools, has written to twenty-five cities. Mr. Orde will assist financially. It is proposed to have each room of the sixth, seventh and eighth grades in each city submit two samples of writing. The contest will close in April. A silver cup goes to the winner.

Alderman Karl De Laitre has been elected a member of the board of trustees of the Farmers & Mechanics Savings Bank, to take the place of the late John De Laitre, former president, his father.

The State Bank of Tree Lake, Wis., has been formed with $10,000 capital. C. G. Kuney is president and J. P. Parrette is cashier. Another new Wisconsin bank is the Whitewater Commercial & Savings Bank, capital $50,000. Incorporators are: M. R. Fish, Jerome Baker, D. F. Zuell, and others.

Spokane, Nov. 11th.—Spokane bankers and men in all lines of business are showing a keen interest in the development of active plans for the building of the $2,000,000 Davenport hotel, work on which is now under way. The site for the fourteen-story hotel has been cleared, and the contract let to the Engineering Construction Company, a Spokane firm, for excavating and erecting basement walls. The awarding of contracts for actual building has assumed a national aspect, and some of the largest construction firms in the United States have men on the ground preparing figures. Among the large firms already in the field for the general contracts are: The James Stewart Construction Company, St. Louis; James Black Masonry & Contracting Company, St. Louis; Dinwiddie Construction Company, Portland, Ore.; Brayton Engineering Company, Portland; Hurley-Mason Company, Portland; Lewis A. Hicks, San Francisco, and the Sound Construction Company, Seattle. The hotel, which is financed almost entirely by Spokane capitalists, will rank with the finest in the west.

National Apple Show

Bankers of Spokane and the surrounding country will take a leading part in one of the most important movements of the Pacific Northwest, namely, solution of the problem of financing and marketing the big apple crop. During the National Apple show in Spokane, November 11th to 17th, a conference of bankers, railway officials, apple growers and fruit by-product manufacturers will be held to discuss these problems. It has been demonstrated beyond doubt that the Spokane country has all natural advantages for apple production of the finest quality, but the industry has not yet reached the stage where it can command all the money needed in the natural course of harvesting and marketing the crop. The crop in this section this year amounts to more than 12,000 carloads.

President D. W. Twohy of the Old National, Spokane, will lead the discussion on financing, followed by O. A. Fechter, president Yakima Valley Bank, and Trueman Butler, vice-president Butler Banking Company, Hood River, Ore.

Sells Interest in Railroad

O. G. Laberee, of Spokane, has sold his interest in the Alaska Northern Railroad at a stated price of $1,250,000 to a syndicate of Canadian bankers. The railroad was organized by Mr. Laberee in 1909, since which time he has been president, and his son, B. R. Laberee, has been assistant general manager. Both have resigned and will devote their attention to development of the Pincher Creek Coal Mining Company, in Alberta, in which they are heavily interested. A. H. Wheatley, of Spokane, secretary to Mr. Laberee, will succeed to the presidency of the railroad.

Spokane Chapter Men Selling Tickets for Apple Show

The Spokane chapter, American Institute of Banking, has pledged itself to assist in the financing of the Fifth National Apple Show, and thirty-eight members are engaged in an office-to-office canvass of the city, selling season tickets. The business district is divided into nineteen divisions, each in charge of two workers. The banks are giving their employees all the time necessary to do the work.

Out-of-town Visitors

Among out-of-town bankers in Spokane last week were: H. T. Jones, president Hartline (Wash.) State Bank, and F. H. Schultz, president both of the Commercial Trust & Savings Bank of Wenatchee, Wash., and of the Douglas County Bank, Waterville Wash.

Will Open Buffalo Office

Stevens & Hoag, a Spokane lumber purchasing firm, has contracted for 15,000,000 feet of Idaho white pine for 1913 delivery. The firm will open a branch office in Buffalo, N. Y., whither George W. Stevens, senior partner, is now traveling. Mr. Stevens has arranged for the firm to become exclusive eastern selling agents for the Larson Lumber Company of Bellingham, Wash.; for the California White Pine agency of San Francisco, and for the Redwood manufacturers of Pittsburg, Cal. En route Mr. Stevens closed a deal for another 8,000,000 feet of Idaho white pine to be shipped to eastern states, partly by rail to Duluth and thence down the lakes, and partly to New England and the Atlantic seaboard. Mr. Stevens will open the Buffalo office November 1st, and will immediately make arrangements to put several salesmen on the road. In addition to the western and Idaho white pine from the Inland Empire territory, the Buffalo agency will handle other Pacific coast products, such as fir, cedar, redwood and California white and sugar pine.

Banking Notes

Frederick A. Collmann of Hathaway, Smith, Folds & Company, Chicago, has been visiting the Northwest Loan & Trust Company, his company's Spokane representative.

J. B. Moberly, real estate loan manager of the Mercantile Trust, St. Louis, and Judge Goode, counsel of the company, also of St. Louis, have been in Spokane several days, conferring with officials of the Union Trust & Savings Bank.

H. T. Jones, president of the Hartline State, Hartline, Wash., was a visitor at the National Bank of Commerce and the Old National last week.

Seattle

The Seattle Clearing House Association held its annual meeting recently and elected Vice-president J. E. Chilberg of the Scandinavian-American to the presidency of the association. President E. W. Andrews of the Seattle National was elected vice-president and J. W. Spangler secretary of the association. Vice-president J. A. Swalwell of the National Bank of Commerce, and President E. Shorrock of the Northwest Trust and Safe Deposit Company, were chosen members of the executive committee. The other members are President N. H. Latimer of the Dexter-Horton National and E. W. Andrews, who hold over. The trust committee is composed of President J. W. Maxwell of the National City Bank, Vice-president A. H. Soelberg of the State Bank of Seattle and Cashier N. B. Solner of the Union Savings and Trust Company. A new set of rules adopted by the association introduces no change of general interest. The rules had not been altered very much for many years, and minor changes were desired to adapt the rules to the larger commercial importance of the city.

The State Bank of Seattle announces that owing to a large increase of business during the past few months, it has become necessary for the bank to enlarge its official force. A. H. Soelberg, who has been acting as cashier in addition to his duties as vice-president, at a meeting held October 25th resigned the office of cashier, and Hugo Carlson was appointed to fill the vacancy, Mr. Soelberg still remaining active vice-president. Mr. Carlson has been connected with the bank since its organization, and was until recently manager of its bond department. Otherwise the official staff remains unchanged.

Bankers of the Puget Sound district will hold a meeting on or about November 24th for the purpose of organizing the third group of banking institutions authorized by the state association at its last meeting. A committee composed of H. L. Merritt, Seattle; Victor Roeder, Bellingham, and Robert Moody, of Everett, are now working out the details. Groups of these banks, of which there are to be seven in the state, are for the purpose of closer relations and more intimate study of Washington's diversified industries. The groups will take no authority of a legislative character, but such new measures as they create will be taken before the legislative committee of the state association for action. At each meeting of the group for Puget Sound a speaker, expert in his subject, will address the bankers. Logged-off lands, lumber and shingles, the best and

The farmers' unions of Whitman county, Washington, are planning to establish a stock company with a capital of $500,000. This company is to control stores in several of the more important towns of the county and also to control a bank with which they will finance the stores. The present plans call for 5,000 farmers to take $100 worth of stock, or if this number cannot be interested, to secure 2,500 farmers to take $200 worth each. The stock for the stores will be purchased from eastern manufacturers, and thus they hope to eliminate the profits of the middleman. The stock will be underwritten by the Farmers State Bank of Colfax.

EDUCATION IN SAVING AND THRIFT

President Joseph R. Noel, of the Northwest State Bank, Chicago, has been placed at the head of the Illinois committee of the savings bank section, A. B. A., to conduct a campaign of education in saving and thrift. He has issued his first general letter in the beginning of what those who know Dr. Noel will expect to be a systematic and pressing attempt to do something significant. The circular letter under date of November 13th reads:

Under date of November 1, 1912, E. G. McWilliam, secretary of the savings bank section of the American Bankers Association, wrote me in behalf of the methods and systems committee, having in charge the campaign of education in saving and thrift, that I was expected to be chairman of a committee to promote such a campaign in Illinois, and it was suggested that as a first step we endeavor to secure the adoption of the school savings bank system in every city of any size in this state. With the letter was enclosed a list of those in this state who had manifested considerable interest in this undertaking, and by the aid of whom an active committee was to be formed. The list was as follows:

Alton—First Trust & Savings Bank, D. A. Wyckoff, cashier.

Beardstown—First National Bank, T. K. Condit, cashier.

Chicago—Central Trust Company of Ill., W. G. Edens, asst. secy.; Chicago Savings Bank & Trust Co., Lucius Teter, president; Franklin Trust & Savings Bank, E. F. Olson, cashier; Harris Trust & Savings Bank, H. B. Mulford, adv. mgr.; North West State Bank, Joseph R. Noel, president.

Galesburg—Peoples Trust & Savings Bank, W. A. Armstrong, cashier.

Harvey—Bank of Harvey, W. H. Miller, president.

Jacksonville—Jacksonville National Bank, Miller Weir, cashier.

Oak Park—Oak Park Trust & Savings Bank, Paul E. Zimmermann, cashier and secretary.

Pekin—Farmers National Bank, A. A. Sipfle, cashier.

Rochelle—Stocking Trust & Savings Bank, A. W. Guest, cashier.

Evidently Mr. McWilliam wrote each of those named above about this matter, for I have received letters pledging active co-operation from most of them.

I assume that all the others named in the list are also interested in this question, and are willing to serve on this committee. I am therefore sending copies of this circular to all these gentlemen.

Before we undertake to do anything as a committee, it might be well first to determine whether it would be practicable to try to hold a meeting of the entire committee. Of the fourteen names on the above list eight are either in Chicago or within a few miles of it. Therefore it would appear that Chicago would be the logical meeting place if it were considered advisable to hold such a meeting, and if it is so considered it would seem best perhaps to allow the member who is farthest away from Chicago to express the first preference as to a date for such meeting. This member is Mr. Wyckoff of Alton. The next farthest away is Mr. Weir of Jacksonville, and the next, Mr. Condit of Beardstown. Then Pekin, Galesburg and Rochelle follow in the order named.

Question 1. Shall we attempt to hold a meeting of the committee?

Question 2. If it is determined to hold a meeting, should the above or a similar suggestion as to preference of date of meeting be carried out?

Question 3. What is your first preference as to the date of the meeting?

Question 4. What is your second preference.

Question 5. What is your third preference? If it is deemed inadvisable to hold a meeting we could of course interchange ideas through the mail, but at best this would necessarily be unsatisfactory.

The possibilities and opportunities for work of this committee are greater than one would at first imagine and apparently widen as he studies the situation, and it seems quite important to a satisfactory result that each of us devote considerable study to the subject.

Our bank belongs to two outlying bankers' associations in this city, and at the last monthly meeting of one of them, a committee was appointed for the purpose of (1) investigating the school savings bank system, (2) co-operating with a similar committee which will probably be appointed by the other outlying bankers' association, and (3) reporting back to the next meeting of the association—all with the end in view of eventually securing the authority of the board of education in this city to inaugurate the system.

A principal of one of the Chicago high schools, through a singular coincidence, wrote me in this connection several days ago, evidencing a very lively interest in the system. In a recent letter, he endorses one he had received from a teacher of the seventh grade in a Cincinnati public school. Observing a newspaper item to the effect that the system was being tried in Cincinnati, the principal referred to wrote the school authorities there; and this teacher, to whom the inquiry was referred, answered that the system was instituted in her school September 19, 1912, and says: "We have grades from the kindergarten through the eighth grade and find the movement more interesting in the lower grades. Dr. Washburn, while not the originator of the savings bank idea in schools, conceived the idea of starting one in our own school, which has, as yet the only bank, though two or three suburban or county schools are on the eve of similar enterprise. The venture has been eminently successful. In a community of laboring people, of foreign birth or extraction largely, it is amazing to us that already we have 530 depositors out of a school enrollment of 1300, while some $450.00 has been deposited. If you contemplate trying the experiment in your own class, merely let me refer you, for suggestions, to the October issues, 1911 and 1912, of the 'Popular Educator,' wherein appear articles written by myself upon the bank as operated in my own class for the past two years. If you wish to launch forth more broadly, we shall be glad to tell you something of what we have done. As, however, much that I might say would be unnecessary, it might expediate matters if you should ask questions upon points concerning which you wish information. We shall then try to give you all the help possible. We have found the venture wonderfully educative and are glad of an opportunity to extend its usefulness."

The literature on this subject which I have seen is as follows:

"How to Operate a School Savings Bank." Issued by the Savings Bank section of the American Bankers Association. I presume all of you have received copies of this pamphlet. If not, I shall be pleased to supply any of you with a copy.

"The Tidings of Thrift." An article which Mr. McWilliam informs me appeared in the September number of the "Bankers' Home Magazine." I have only the one copy he sent me, but I shall send it to any of you who desire to see it. It includes a table of statistics, showing that deposits in school savings banks in various parts of the country are in excess of $900,000.00.

Report of Committee on Methods and Systems of the Savings Bank Section of the American Bankers Association. Made at the Detroit convention, the proceedings of which have not yet been published in book form. Many banking journals have given it in full. It is a very interesting report, especially the latter part thereof, and should be read by every member of this committee.

BANK LOSES INDEMNITY

Frankfort, Ky.—The United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company has been saved $10,000 by the decision of the Court of Appeals in the case of the Ballard County Bank's assignee against the company. Suit has been filed against the company to recover $10,000 indemnifying bond placed on Cashier W. F. Purdy, who is alleged to have peculated $11,750. The contract of the indemnifying bond provided that a report of any disclosure of peculations should be made within six months after the discharge of Purdy, but the discoveries were not made until two years later. The appellate court holds that the bank cannot recover under such conditions.

One way to make our bedlamites self-supporting is to permit them to open banks, but it is a poor way.—Record-Herald.

TENNESSEE BANK ELECTS OFFICERS

The stockholders of the First National Bank, recently organized at Petersburg, Tenn., with a capital stock of $25,000, have elected the following officers: J. P. Dwiggins, president; R. H. Terry, vice-president; B. C. Dysart, secretary. It is announced that the new bank will open for business soon.

Des Moines, Nov. 13th.—Des Moines bankers predict an era of prosperity despite the advance notices that Wilson's election would mean hard times. With general accord, they declare that the election results will not in the least disturb conditions. In fact, they think that the unsettled condition that has prevailed prior to the election was more disturbing to prosperity than the placing of the democrats in power.

"The democrats will go slow and conditions will not be affected," says Arthur Reynolds of the Des Moines National. "It will be two years before there will be any lawmaking on the part of the democrats. Then they will consider well the conditions that confront them because they will know that they will be held responsible for any disturbing situations. In Cleveland's administration the democrats faced a depression for which they were not responsible, but for which they have been held to blame. I believe that the adoption of the income tax will be of great aid in keeping up the national revenues. So far as Iowa is concerned, this state suffers less from financial influence probably than any other, and I am certain that Iowans need not have the slightest apprehension.

Homer A. Miller, of the Iowa National, agreed with Mr. Reynolds that general conditions are not likely to be affected by the election of Wilson. He pronounces conditions as harmonious and asserts that the election of a president would not alter them, no matter which one of the three leading candidates were chosen.

Charles H. Martin of the Peoples Savings, G. E. MacKinnon of the Mechanics Savings, John Hogan of the Ferman Savings and other bankers, when interviewed on the election, expressed themselves as highly pleased with the outcome and certain that the country will continue prosperous.

Bank Robber Captured

Harry Lee, alias Charles McBride, has been arrested at Cedar Rapids on the charge that he is one of the gang which sought to rob the Alburnett Savings Bank at Alburnett last Friday night. According to word which has reached Secretary Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association, Lee was cleaning a .38 revolver when the Cedar Rapids officers broke in the door to his room and arrested him before he had time to defend himself. On the table before him sat a bottle of nitroglycerine. In his possession was a pair of shoes that fit the description of shoes stolen from a store at Cedar Point, and other articles of clothing were similarly identified. Five charges of dynamite were exploded at Alburnett and the vault door blown off, but the men escaped when the town began to awaken. A similar effort to rob the Hudson Savings Tuesday night also ended in failure.

enjoyable session last week at their November meeting. E. D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan & Trust of Chicago, who was expected to make the address of the evening was forced to decline at the last moment, and Rev. John Bamford, of the Westminster Presbyterian Church of this city, was asked to give an illustrated lecture on Ireland. Prior to the meeting, dinner was enjoyed at the Des Moines club. The Bankers Club is starting out well this year and the prospects are that the season will be the most enjoyable of any in the history of the organization.

Overdrew His Account

A curious case affecting the failure of a bank to notify one of its customers when his account was overdrawn is reported from Bedford. It seems that one W. C. Allen was held for obtaining money by false pretences. The defendant had drawn a check on the Kellerton Bank which he had presented at the Citizens Bank at Bedford and had received his money. When the check reached the bank upon which it was drawn, it was returned with the statement that Allen had no money in the institution. Allen showed at the hearing that often his account at the Kellerton Bank had been permitted to go overdrawn without his being notified and that he had no reason to think when he drew this one that he had no money in the bank. Under those circumstances, the court ordered Allen released. It developed that the check in controversy had been lost in the meantime and Allen declares he will pay it when it is produced.

Bleakly Re-elected State Auditor

State Auditor Bleakly had a live run for his money at the recent election but at this writing it is thought that he will again be in charge of the state banking department with a majority of some 17,000 votes. The state ticket in some places was very close and it was thought for some hours that Mr. Bleakly had gone down with the general republican "depression." Mr. Bleakly has been a popular official. His election makes certain that the banking department clerks will remain as at present for another two years.

Install Policeman

The Iowa State Savings at Cedar Rapids

has started a metropolitan pace in that city by placing a special policeman in its building for the protection of its customers. The presence of this blue-coated officer within the institution is believed by the officials to be of value. Not long ago, a farmer was standing in the institution counting a roll of money, he heard a cry of "runaway" and ran to the window leaving his "wad." In such cases as this, the special policeman is expected to be on the job, thus eliminating dangers of complications resultant from carelessness and such.

Will Speak at Minneapolis

Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National, has accepted an invitation to speak at Minneapolis, November 20th, before a joint meeting of the Minnesota Agricultural Congress, the Citizens League of Minnesota, and the National Citizens League. Mr. Reynolds will discuss the Aldrich plan and give his views on the central bank question. This is a subject dear to Mr. Reynolds' heart and the bankers who assemble at Minneapolis may be prepared for something high class and interesting.

Celebrates Thirty-fourth Year in Banking World

Harry T. Blackburn, cashier of the Iowa National of Des Moines, last week celebrated the thirty-fourth year of his entrance into the banking field. He started as a clerk in the Citizens National and was for eighteen years with the institution. He then became bank examiner and followed it for four years. Twelve years ago he became connected with the Iowa National and is today one of the most popular bank officials in the city.

John P. Hess Shot While Hunting

John P. Hess, president of the German Bank of Carroll, was accidentally shot while hunting near Carroll. He stumbled while carrying a gun and the charge entered one of his legs just below the knee joint. At this writing it seems certain that the limb will need to be amputated, and his condition is regarded as critical.

F. C. Langfeldt Leaves for Wisconsin Bank

F. C. Langfeldt, who has been engaged in the banking business at Durant, Iowa, for several years, has removed to Stoughton, Wis., where he becomes identified with the Citizens National through the purchase of the McCook interests in that institution. While he was with the Durant institution it grew in deposits from $300,000 to $600,000.

W. R. Jameson Enters Brokerage Business

W. R. Jameson, who has been active in the management of the Waterloo Loan & Trust up to July 1st, has now entered the brokerage business and will buy and sell high class securities, mortgage loans, etc. Mr. Jameson has been an active worker for the Iowa Bankers Association and has many friends who will wish him success. His offices are in the Black Hawk National building.

Holstein Savings Celebrates Twenty-fifth Anniversary

The Holstein Savings, at Holstein, observed its silver anniversary on November 1st. When this bank commenced twenty-five years ago, it had a capital stock of $25,000 and deposits of $40,000. Now it has capital stock of $60,000, surplus of $40,000, undivided earnings of $30,000 and a total in deposits of $750,000. C. J. Woglenburg, who is cashier of the institution, is president of the Cushing Savings, the Merchants State at Correctionville and is otherwise actively identified with business enterprises. J. W. Reed is president and J. C. Kuchel is vice-president.

By JOHN J. BIDDISON

"Hello, Lutz," said a Sioux City detective to Peter Lutz, absconding cashier of the First State Bank of Zeli, S. D., when the officer accosted him on the streets of Sioux City Monday. "Guess you'd better go along with me, hadn't you?" Lutz "guessed maybe he'd better," and the pair repaired to the police station.

The sheriff from Lutz' home county put in his appearance soon after, and the banker smilingly declared that he was game and agreed to go back home without requisition papers. He had on his person when apprehended, more than $1,900 in bills, said to be all that remains of the $17,000 he had made away with in the course of his peculations. Lutz was recognized by a photograph and followed to the postoffice, there to get a letter that the officers had information he would receive. He got nervous, however, and did not go up to the window, so the officer nabbed him anyway. J. L. Wingfield, state bank examiner, discovered the irregularities and put the officers on the trail of the absconder. The arrest came only a few days thereafter.

J. Q. Adams has come to Sioux City, from Wahpeton, N. D., to be associated with the Farmers Loan & Trust Company. He has leased a beautiful home here.

G. S. Needham, cashier of the State Bank of Early, Ia., is dead, after a three weeks illness from general breakdown. He was one of the best known bankers of northwestern Iowa.

Chas. Shammo, of Brewer, Ohio, who gave a grocer here a check for $740, drawn by E. H. Cosgrove & Co., of Lincoln, on the First National Bank of Lincoln, and cheerfully assured the merchant that it was in payment for three weeks' work, will have to tarry a while in the custody of the law. The police have received word that the check is worthless.

The state banking department at Pierre, S. D., has issued figures for September, showing that the total combined deposits in state and national banks on September 4th was $85,374,991, as against $78,884,771 on June 14, 1912.

Total bank clearings in the city last week were $3,225,841.28.

The Farmers Home Bank of Lily, S. D., has been incorporated with a capital of $10,000 and the following officers: O. A. Fossum, president; O. K. Berg and Jas. Anderson, vice-presidents; T. A. Fossum, cashier.

F. B. Gannon, president of the First National Bank of Aberdeen, S. D., who was defeated as a candidate on the democratic ticket for the state treasurership, still has some consolation. He will leave early in February with Mrs. Gannon for Naples, Italy, and from that point will tour Europe in an automobile that will be shipped ahead of them. Mr. Gannon had been promising himself for some time that if he lost the election he would take this pleasure trip.

The citizens of Corydon, Ia., received a gift of $165,000 by the terms of the will of the late

A. Walden, for many years president of a bank there. Mr. Walden specified in his will that $100,000 should be used for a waterworks system, a sewer system and an electric light service, that $35,000 should be used to buy a public park and $30,000 in the construction of an orphans' home.

THE STATEMENT MACHINE IN BANKS

Every bank man realizes that the pass-book is the bane of the bookkeeper's department. Depositors cannot be made to leave their books for balancing at regular intervals, which consequently clogs the check files, and eventually brings in a deluge of books on the first day of the month, particularly if it be a "quarter day."

The solution of the problem is the statement system that is coming into general use, and which does away entirely with the balancing of pass-books, giving the depositors instead, a statement of account on designated dates.

While a time and labor saver for every bank, both large and small, it is of special value to institutions handling several hundred accounts, or upward. Constituting a separate department by itself, and having no connection with the bookkeeping department, it adds greatly to the efficiency of the bookkeepers by allowing them to give their entire time to the entering of deposits and checks, and the work pertaining thereto, thus giving increased capacity in the number of accounts each man may handle.

The form of statement is simple, as will be seen by the illustration; simple to write up, and simple for the depositor to comprehend. But its value lies in the methodical manner in which it works out. With the old pass-book system, there is no certainty as to the number that will come in on a given day. There may be a dozen to-day and a hundred to-morrow. In that way, the clerical force is not working evenly. To-day some are working at low capacity on what may be a slight day in point of the incoming deposits and checks. To-morrow the hundred pass-books may come in on top of a big day's work. They always come in quantities on the first day of the month, when every man is working up to the full limit of his capacity on these things.

But under the "system," being in a department that has no other demands on it, the work is planned consistently; the main idea being to distribute the making of statements along through the month, having approximately the same number to do each day. To be sure, the first day of the month always brings more to do than any other day, but excepting large business concerns, most people do not care what day they receive their statements, so they generally may be assigned as the statement clerk desires. In instituting the system, however, in order to get the thing on a proper working basis, the depositors are consulted, and unless a preference is expressed each one is notified that he will receive his statement monthly, bi-monthly or quarterly on a certain day of the month.

Many accounts have so few transactions that it is not necessary to render a balance each month, a quarterly balance being sufficient. But the depositor forgets to bring in his book at the end of the quarter, so often-times it runs for a much longer period, which is all wrong, because, for reasons of safety alone, no account should be allowed to go more than three months without being written up.

And right here is where the "system" gets in its work. It does the depositor's thinking for him, at least so far as the date of his statement is concerned.

A filing cabinet is kept with the cards arranged chronologically, a space for each working day of the year. When a statement is made up, a new sheet is headed off, with the balance to the credit of the account at the top of the credit column, and the date when the next statement is to be rendered is stamped in the small space in the upper right-hand corner. At the close of the day, all of the newly headed off blanks are placed in the file under their respective dates, to-day's division card being taken out and placed in the back of the file, thus keeping the cards in rotation, so that when the next day's work is begun the blanks for that day are at the front, all headed off, and with the balance to start with already printed at the head of the credit column.

In using this system it is essential that the checks and deposit tickets be filed together; then when the time comes for drawing off a statement the necessary material is right there for use.

The sheet is placed in the machine, the balance shown at the top of the credit side is printed in, then the deposits are listed, the Burroughs Adding Machine, which prints in the dates, being used. The total of the credit side is then struck. The checks are then listed in their proper column and a sub-total printed. The carriage is moved over so that the total of the debits can be printed directly under the total credits and the subtraction made, the result being the balance to the credit of that account. This is also printed as a sub-total, after which the sheet is removed and a new one placed in the machine. The amount carried in the machine is then reprinted at the top of the credit side, showing the balance with which the statement will be started off next time. The date when that statement is to be rendered is derived from the dates at the top and bottom of the completed statements, which show the intervals at which the account is to be balanced.

The statement clerk then goes to the bookkeeper's ledger and compares the balance shown by the statement with that on the ledger, not asking the bookkeeper for the amount, but looking it up for himself, and this is one of the strong arguments for the system. It is an absolute check on the accuracy of the bookkeeper, as he has nothing whatever to do with the handling of the statement, does not know which account the statement clerk is comparing, and need never know at what intervals any of the accounts are to be balanced.

GROWTH OF POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS

Deposits in postal savings banks now aggregate $28,000,000. On March 31st last, their total was $16,200,000; at the end of 1911 it was $15,000,000. The record shows a healthy growth and promise of continued expansion.

The first few of these banks were opened in January, 1911. There are now 290,000 depositors and the average deposit is $86. In the stock and mutual savings banks of the country there were last June 10,010,304 depositors having an average deposit of $444 each. From June, 1911, to June, 1912, the number of depositors in the stock and mutual savings banks increased by 215,657, and the average deposit increased to $14.63. It is likely that the postal savings banks have not drawn depositors or deposits from the regular savings banks. They have probably stimulated the practice of saving and have made secure the sums formerly hidden away in old stockings or other odd corners.

In other words, the postal savings banks are doing what they were created to do. They are demonstrating that they were wisely planned and established.

CHICAGO CHAPTER, AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF BANKING

By W. W. WALTON.

A very profitable and enjoyable evening was spent at Assembly Hall, Tuesday evening, November 12th. Horace W. Allyn of the Continental and Commercial National Bank, a graduate of the American Conservatory of Music, very ably rendered Chopin's "Ballade in A Flat" and Liszt's "Rhapsody No. 11," which was a musical treat seldom enjoyed by Chicago Chapter at its general meetings.

Foster S. Nims of the Western Bank Note Company, Chicago, addressed the Chapter on "The Elements of Success for a Young Business Man." Preliminary to the discussion of the subject, Mr. Nims gave a brief history of the engraving and lithographing industry, describing methods used as early as the fifteenth century up to the present time. It was during the seventeenth century that the English people took up this art. He also gave an idea as to the precautionary methods used during the process of the preparation and engraving of bonds, certificates of deposit, checks, etc.

Mr. Nims' lecture on the elements of success was very impressive and it goes without saying that all who had the pleasure of hearing this talk left the hall full of new ambition and enthusiasm. Mr. Nims was very practical in his remarks and urged the Chapter boys to spend much time in their home or room reading, not only good and inspiring books, but such books and literature as will be helpful to them in their line of business. He impressed upon them the necessity of their ever being on the alert to prove themselves not wanting when put to the real test. He also discourages those who are inclined to be suspicious of their co-worker, to become more ambitious and interested in their work, thereby dispelling their suspicions. Mr. Nims advises all young men to imitate the successful characteristics of a man who has made himself a success as by such imitation they will in the course of time unconsciously assimilate these qualities; he further says that all men are born with ambition, but many allow it to be killed by a desire for ease and contentment, and he values the estimate of worth only by the output of the brain.

Mr. Nims was very capable to handle the subject which he so wisely selected, having made for himself a successful career. He associated himself with the Western Bank Note Company eighteen years ago as an office boy and has grown with that firm in its progress and is now the city sales manager of that company.

H. C. Cobb, representing The Meilicke Calculator Company, concluded the program for the evening by giving a short talk on modern inventions and describing the Meilicke Calculating Machine, which automatically calculates time and interest.

The class in Commercial and Banking Law will hold its examination next Tuesday evening, November 19th, at Assembly Hall. It is desired that a full attendance be on hand.

Chicago Chapter will hold its first dance of the season at the drill hall, Masonic Temple, Friday evening, November 22, 1912. Frappe will be served. Music furnished by Spamer's Orchestra. All bankers, bank clerks and their friends are most cordially invited and a good time is assured all who will attend. Tickets may be obtained upon application of any of the Chapter members in the various banks.

VISITORS

F. E. Davis, cashier of the Citizens National at Tipton, Ind., visited Chicago Wednesday; Frank L. Conger, cashier of the First National of Galesburg, Ill., was a caller Tuesday; S. E. Walker, cashier of the Millikin National, Decatur, Ill., called on Chicago banking acquaintances on Thursday.

Springfield (Ill.) Correspondence

A comparison between the bank clearings in Springfield for the month of October, 1911, and the same month in 1912, shows a great increase in business transactions. The clearings were over a half million dollars greater last month than during October a year ago.

Totals given out from the clearing house placed the clearings last month at $5,247,965.40. For October, 1911, they were $4,558,166.65, a difference of $689,798.85.

O. J. Downing

At a recent meeting of the directors of the City National, Dixon, the resignation of Dr. C. C. Hunt, vice president, was accepted. O. J. Downing was elected to fill the vacancy thus caused. Mr. Downing has been identified with the bank and Dixon enterprises for many years and his addition to the corps of officials will lend influence to the bank's already splendid local prestige.

Plot to Defraud Bank Discovered

Four Italian laborers are under arrest at the Woodstock county jail and a fifth one is being sought as perpetrators of a well-framed plot to defraud the Citizens State Bank of Crystal Lake. The arrests were caused by C. B. Wright, cashier of the bank, who declared that the profits to the gang did not net them $1,000. Reports say the gang cleared up $880.

The laborers worked at the Terra Cotta factory near Crystal Lake and all are said to have had savings accounts in the Crystal Lake bank. According to Mr. Wright, they gave their pass books to friends, who, through fake identification, he claims, drew out the savings. Then they themselves appeared at the bank, protested that someone had secured their books and withdrawn their savings without authorization and demanded to be reimbursed. The operations were intermittent over a period of time, it is said.

"Their game became so strong that they could not put it over," said Mr. Wright. "We have not got absolutely straightened out yet, so I cannot tell, and do not feel disposed to tell at this time, all the details and the exact profits of the gang. I do not think, however, that the bank will lose a cent. We have the goods on them."

Private Bank Incorporates

The Citizens Bank of Tamaroa, formerly a private banking institution, has incorporated as the Farmers State Bank, $25,000 capital. The officers of the bank are: President, Albert H. Evans; vice-president, T. J. Rice.

Death of Illinois Bankers

J. P. Johnson, president of the Bank of Avon, died at his home in that city last week of pneumonia. He had been ill about two weeks, having contracted a severe cold which developed into pneumonia. He has been in bed for the past few days and since Sunday his condition has been serious.

Edward Alfred Culver, president of the Farmers State Bank at Greenfield, and president of the Greenfield board of education, died last week.

Kewanee Bankers in Pekin

It was erroneously stated in this department last week that a party of bankers from the Savings Bank of Kewanee were in Peoria and had made an inspection of the Farmers National. This should have been the Farmers National of Pekin from whose handsome new quarters and immense vault they came to get suggestions for their new building.

If the express companies have collected on many "prepaid" packages from you lately, you will be glad to hear about that $25,000 robbery at Lake Charles, La.

PERFECT TRAIN FROM PERFECT TERMINAL

The officers and directors of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway Company had on exhibition, two days of this week, at the new terminal station in Chicago, its new North Western Limited train. The new train, a masterpiece, went into service Friday night at 6:45 for a run to Minneapolis. It will run in this service regularly hereafter. The equipment is a dream and represents the latest from the car builders viewpoint.

WOODHAVEN DIVIDEND

New York, Nov. 12th.—A rumor to the effect that the state banking department had recommended to the banks the safety of loaning funds equal to 50 per cent of the pass-book balances of the depositors of the failed Woodhaven Bank was denied by the department yesterday. While not denying that there was a sufficient margin of safety in loaning 50 per cent, with the pass-books as collateral, an official of the department said that it was contrary to the policy of the department to make any such recommendation.

It has been Superintendent Van Tuyl's policy ever since he took charge of the department to make payments to the depositors as soon as available funds were at hand. It was said at the office of the superintendent that this policy would be carried out in the instance of the Woodhaven Bank, and that the depositors might entertain hope of receiving about 45 per cent of their deposits at the expiration of sixty days. The department is forbidden by law to make payments until the expiration of sixty days after the closing of any bank.

ANNUAL BANQUET OF ASSOCIATION OF COMMERCE

The eighth annual banquet of the Chicago Association of Commerce will be held in the gold room of the Congress Hotel, Tuesday evening, November 19th. This banquet will be given in honor of the Chambers of Commerce of the United States of America. Representatives of the various chambers of commerce, boards of trade and business men's associations in all parts of the United States will be present.

BOND HOUSES CONSOLIDATE

The bond houses of Breed & Harrison of Cincinnati and Jos. T. Elliott & Sons of Indianapolis have consolidated. C. Edgar Elliott will be a member of the firm as well as George Forrey, former Indiana representative of Breed & Harrison. Mr. Forrey will have charge of the Indianapolis office and C. E. Elliott will come to this city as the Chicago representative. Their office will be located in the Borland Block, 105 South LaSalle St., the firm name now being Breed, Elliott & Co.

Banks all over the country are asking to have the time of the Aldrich-Vreeland bill extended from its expiration period in 1914. It is the only panic remedy on the pantry shelf.

of deep thinking, and then, with fingers crossed, proceed to pick out all republicans.

OF course the I.-O. favors the plan.

THE Prudential is issuing hold-up insurance, but as yet no company has been bold enough to issue a policy protecting depositors against the hole-in-the-wall bank and its confederates.

THE chief bull moosers had a "family" dinner in Chicago on Thursday night in an attempt to select a third party choice for U. S. senator from Illinois. The voting was by ballot and resulted in "no choice." Had any bull mooser received two votes he would have won on a plurality.

IT will be a long jump from that Princeton bicycle to the eight-car garage at Washington, with the Mayflower in the Potomac, just back of the house. Couldn't happen in any other country.

A CHICAGO daily, referring to Mr. Pierson of New York, makes this editorial comment:

"A bank president who resigns to accept $80,000 a year as head of a grocery concern furnishes another reason for high prices of food."

THE after-dinner song at the moose banquet was "After the Bawl is Over."

WILSON is going to make the vice-president a member of his cabinet.

BRYAN thinks ex-presidents, ex-vice-presidents and ex-speakers (Ah, there, Uncle Joe!) should be members of congress with every privilege except voting.

CONJURES up a very interesting period when ex-presidents will give of their time, counsel and experience on all public questions, by addressing the house in session.

THE same car will also visit the meetings of Groups 2, 1 and 6 at Lawrence, Kansas City and Beloit, on the corresponding days of the week following.

FROM Cedar Rapids comes the story that the Peoples Trust & Savings Bank, the bank with the "freak" building, has changed hands. The purchaser-in-chief is Matt. Niles, an ex-mayor of Cedar Rapids, and a leading real estate loan broker.

CONGRESSMAN J. W. GOOD, just re-elected, will be president. What becomes of John Burianek Jr., "the whole bank," is not stated. Quite a stir was created in Iowa banking circles.

LEO E. STEVENS, president of the Century Savings at Des Moines, was in Chicago this week acting for the Commercial Club of that city in an attempt to get rates for the state fair this year.

STEVENS has been making good in his bank and there has been a very profitable rise in the stock since he took hold.

ROLLIN P. GRANT is the new president of the Irving National in New York. He has been the active vice-president, and next to Mr. Pierson, one of the chief builders in organizing the present powerful institution.

THE Irving in ten or twelve years has come to the front at a rapid rate and now is rated one of the most influential and powerful banks in the metropolis.

IF you have two dollars that isn't working, send it to R. J. Finnegan, secretary of the Illinois Improvement Association, and become a member of the most active bunch of patriots in the state.

W. G. EDENS is the president of the association and lots of good hard work is being done. Automobile clubs, commercial clubs, the Illinois Bankers Association, and public men generally, have supported the movement. S. E. Bradt of DeKalb is an active vice-president.

THE object is to harmonize and correlate all efforts for the improvement of the public roads of Illinois, to the end that an adequate and efficient system of road construction, administration and maintenance will be adopted. It is estimated that unless there is a change in conditions in our state, at least $55,000,000 of the taxpayers' money will be wasted in the next twenty years in misdirected road work.

BISCHOFF BANKING HOUSE, New York City, has asked for a private bank permit or certificate from the state banking department, as required by the New York state law. Capital $250,000.

A New York banker in speaking of Banking Commissioner Doyle of Michigan, said:

"MICHIGAN was infested with a number of crooks who insisted on being allowed to keep places open which they called banks, but which were in reality used to get depositors' money to further private schemes. Doyle broke up the so-called banks and either put the schemers in the penitentiary or drove them out of the state."

THE Pioneer State Bank, which was recently incorporated in Chicago and will take over the private banking business of Andrew H. Greenberg, has secured quarters at 1016 West North Avenue and expects to open for business sometime before Dec. 1st.

A NUMBER of well-known Chicago bankers are co-operating with Greenberg in thus getting on the right side of public opinion in this city.

FROM Boston comes a gentle surprise in the resignation of Cashier F. H. Curtiss of the First National. No reason assigned, not even the conventional one of "giving his whole time to his other interests." Vice-president Downy C. Muir was made cashier.

STILL they talk about that big Hill bank in St. Paul. Some think that James J. was nettled that the bankers butted into his pet divertisement, assisting the farmer, and that he is just butting back.

AT least Hill should be on Mr. Huttig's program at the big Boston convention. He would fill even the gallery seats.

KIRBY SMITH is so proud of the new building of the Commercial National Bank of Shreveport, La., of which he is vice-president, that he is sending out a miniature facsimile of the building in metal art work.

JUDGE LANDIS is doing more for bank supervision in Illinois than any other one ever did. The lawyers had it all cooked up in the Kirby bank failure.

THEY got doctors to say Kirby was insane and had him in a sanitarium. A quiescent brother-in-law was made custodian and Mrs. Kirby drew all the money. Lovely situation.

THEN came Landis, and he has made the attorneys even admit that the six doctors were paid for their fake testimony with the depositors' money. So were the lawyers so paid.

WE wish Landis would open up the Mason failure, the McCarty failure, the International and a dozen others. More power to him.

PUJO was a big man this summer. So were the seven little governors who "prevailed" over the Colonel's scruples about being "your candidate." After the avalanche, where are they?

O HIO has accepted the income tax amendment to the constitution and but two more states are needed to make it effective.

E. ST. ELMO LEWIS has been appointed to represent Michigan in the national council of the National Economic League.

THE league aims to provide a means by which important national, political, civic and economic issues can be directly initiated by the best independent thought of the nation, and to secure widespread and continuous discussion of these issues by and before the people of the country.

WINNESHEIK County (Iowa) State Bank now pays 4 per cent on six months time certificates and has found it profitable. Good times in Iowa!

THIS bank also strengthened its capital by $50,000, making it $150,000, with surplus of $50,000. All out of earnings.

WHY not be a philanthropist? Doesn't cost much. We can think of one who has a national reputation brought about by "giving" a million for better roads, a quarter of a million to each of a dozen schools and colleges and sums of from $1,000 to $10,000 to widows, orphans, and others in the public eye at the time. The key to the situation is in the "conditions." Somebody else is to contribute eight or ten times as much and it doesn't happen that they do it. See the point? Cheap publicity.

MY, but we're getting hungry for that bull moose dinner (business of sending marked copy to B. F. H., care of the traction company, at Champaign) and if the moose is as well "done" as he was Nov. 5th, it ought to be a success.

YES, and at that Harris ran 16,000 ahead of his ticket in this county. You see we bet against him but voted for him. So did a lot of other people.

MYRON T. HERRICK sure got a short run for his money. He's on his way home.

THE Inter Ocean pledges itself with all the power at its command to fight those twin devils of anarchy—the recall of judges and the recall of judicial decisions."

IF, as the U. S. courts decided, "outdoor exercise is necessary for the well-being of federal prisoners," how about the state and national bank men who neglect this essential? Why not a hygienic department in the A. B. A.?

THOSE who may be looking for a fast train to get out of New Orleans and back to Chicago will be pleased to know that the Illinois Central has put on a twenty-four-hour schedule. Brings Sol. Wexler so much the closer, too.

THE real progressives, those who believe in the binding qualities of primaries, are beginning to say that the only "square deal" possible at Springfield this winter is to elect both Lewis, the democrat, and Sherman, the republican. Each carried his party primaries.

OUT in Seattle a man who robbed a newsboy's stand of the few pennies left there in his absense by customers, got "two months." Here's a tip to Judge Landis of what a robber of duped depositors ought to get.

E. E. CRABTREE of Jacksonville, an ex-president of the Illinois Bankers Association, was in Chicago this week. He reports an unusual demand for money in his district, by farmers.

THEY had an epidemic of hog cholera last year in that part of the state, and following that much of the winter wheat froze out, so it is up to the banker to finance and "carry" his friend the farmer until he sells his corn.

AFTER all, Judge Landis proved to be Chicago's real "white hope."

THE Tribune's Thursday morning cartoon really was a little too hard on the "big banks" which voted "against state supervision." Some of them had very different motives. All the "big banks" and most of the private banks will welcome an equitable supervisory act.

THE state needs a separate and distinct banking department nearly as much as she needs private bank inspection.

PRESIDENT WILLIAM LORIMER of the LaSalle Street Trust, after all is expected to get well without going under the surgeon's knife.

WE join the Inter-Ocean in its desire to "take the judges out of politics," but if the Chicago Bar Association is to pick the winners, who will take the association out of politics?

Investment Bank- ers Convention

The first annual convention of the Investment Bankers Association of America, held at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York on Thursday and Friday of this week, was very largely and enthusiastically attended. Frederick R. Fenton, secretary of the organization, together with his secretary, C. G. Schray, left Chicago Monday to assist in the final preparations for the convention. A temporary office of the secretary was established at the Waldorf-Astoria and remained open during the convention. Cards were issued which admitted the holder to meetings of the association. A meeting of the Board of Governors, including an informal dinner, was held from 5 to 9 p. m.

The convention proper was called to order by President Caldwell at ten o'clock Friday morning. Mr. Caldwell's annual address will be found elsewhere in this edition of THE CHICAGO BANKER.

Addresses were made by the following gentlemen: Warren S. Hayden, of Hayden, Miller & Co., Cleveland, Ohio, on "Blue-Sky Laws and Their Relation to the Investment Banker," and Robert R. Reed, of Caldwell, Masslich & Reed, New York City, on "Uniformity in Municipal Bond Legislation."

Routine matters largely occupied the business portion of the convention, consisting of the appointment of committees, amendments to the constitution and by-laws, and suggestions to the various committees as to the work they are to take up. At seven o'clock, a banquet was held at the Waldorf-Astoria, at which addresses were delivered by Frank Trumbull, chairman of the board of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway and chairman of the board of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway, and by Oswald Garrison Villard, whose subject was, "The Relation of the Press to the Investment Banker."

The committee on program consisted of the following gentlemen: L. B. Franklin, chairman; H. B. Clark, J. W. Burden, Allen G. Hoyt, Trowbridge Callaway, John F. Symington, F. W. Rollins and Homer W. McCoy.

About a hundred members of the association left Chicago Wednesday afternoon on a special train over the Lake Shore. Investment bankers who were in Chicago on their way to the convention were optimistic as to the future of the country and predicted that present prosperity will continue uninterrupted.

Report of the Secretary

Secretary Fenton reported the total membership of the organization as 277. Recommendation was made that in the various financial centers where there are a number of members, meetings be held at frequent intervals, wherein matters of direct interest to the members of the association can be discussed and recommendations made to the board of governors for action; also the inauguration of a membership campaign, keeping in mind the fact that character rather than numbers is the thing most desired.

IRVING SHUMAN
SULLIVAN, ILL.

A. E. EDWARDS
PASADENA, CAL.

Mr. Shuman is cashier of the First National at Sullivan, Illinois, and is well and favorably known to bankers. His name has been mentioned quite frequently in connection with the comptrollership. He is one of the original Wilson men in Illinois.

A. E. Edwards is president of the California Bankers Association. His marked executive ability has been largely responsible for the place which his association occupies among bankers' organizations.

ELECTED MEMBER OF BOARD OF TRADE

Charles G. Fox, cashier of the LaSalle Street Trust and Savings Bank, has been elected a member of the Chicago Board of Trade and the bank has been made a depository for margins.

JAMES B. FORGAN IN NEW YORK

James B. Forgan, president of the First National Bank, is in New York attending a meeting of the trustees of the Equitable Life Insurance Company.

CANDIDATE FOR TREASURERSHIP

Joseph R. Noel, president of the Northwest State Bank, is a candidate for treasurer of the Chicago Association of Commerce on the regular ticket.

PRESIDENT PHILLIPS IN TOWN

John D. Phillips of Green Valley, Ill., president of the Illinois Bankers Association, spent a couple of days in Chicago this week on association business.

SUPERVISION BILL FOR ILLINOIS

Now that the Chicago Tribune has canvassed the members of the Illinois Bankers Association and finds them eight to one in favor of supervision and the Chicago Record-Herald has polled the members of the legislature and finds them unanimous, it ought to be an easy matter to pass a wise, temperate revision of the present banking act in accordance with modern ideas. Governor-elect Edward F. Dunne has put himself squarely upon record as favoring supervision and he goes a little farther and shows a leaning toward state guaranty. Nothing remains but to secure the consent of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association and everybody will be happy. The daily papers are becoming well informed on the subject and during the week published a valuable article from the pen of W. T. Abbott, vice-president of the Central Trust Company of this city. Ex-president B. F. Harris has been untiring in his efforts to keep the papers right technically. Many of the young men who have been writing about the subject were inclined to handle it as a police reporter might. Much useless stuff was

K. N. & K., New York: "There is likely to be an active competition for the world's floating supply of gold before the year ends. As things stand now it seems likely that the United States will be in a position to command a considerable amount of the metal should it become necessary to make an effective bid."

OBSERVATION as to what has happened in states where it has been tried leads one to hope that Illinois will not undertake to supervise private banks as such. Incorporation as banks is the real remedy.

"THEY have been investigating the tariff all my lifetime," said the president-elect when told that an effort would be made to investigate tariff schedules in advance of an extra session.

THERE is common sense in that remark. A man who does not understand the tariff question now, never can, or, at least, never will let himself be made, to understand it.

ELECTION of Samuel Rea as the ninth president of the Pennsylvania Railroad constitutes news of great financial significance. It means that the largest transportation system in the world again is to enter a period of new expansion, of aggressive development. Further, it signifies that the financial powers of the country firmly back the opinion that conditions are ripe for a new advance movement.

ANDREW J. GRAHAM actually took a week off and spent it down at French Lick. He and Mrs. Graham met and greatly enjoyed the acquaintance of D. W. Twohy and Mrs. Twohy of Spokane.

MR. TWOHY has been in Chicago recently on his way home. His eastern trip included a business visit to New York.

NO, Woodrow didn't guess at the special session of congress business. He polled the members of the house and senate by wire, just as the bankers of Illinois on supervision. The replies were three to one in favor.

SOME of the more impulsive of the newspapers were proceeding on the theory that the president-elect was trying to find a way out of calling a special session. There is nothing on which to base this theory. Mr. Wilson was entirely right in seeking to find out the opinion of other party leaders.

THE Tribune, having given us a safe and sane Fourth, is going to try to hand Illinois the same kind of a banking law.

A BULL moose paper is being sold at auction and Bill Flinn has lost his voice "allee samee" as T. R. Everybody sing "After the Bawl is Over."

EDITOR JOHN FIELDS, of the Oklahoma Farm Journal, is organizing the entire Southwest into a Concatenated Order of Kafircorn Woolies and is issuing gold and enamel badges to all new members. The Farm Journal aims to teach farming by a "safe system" and has given much time to the kafircorn subject.

INCIDENTALLY, Editor Fields will send his publication to legitimate farmers twice a month for five years for one dollar if remittances are made before December 31st. After that date subscribers will get the paper three years for one dollar. Accurate farming information applicable to southwest conditions can nowhere else be had at such a price.

ANDREW J. FRAME, dean of Wisconsin bankers, continues to pay close attention to the question of bank supervision in Illinois. Last week he paid a high compliment to Judge Landis. This week Colonel Frame writes to say: "I see the private bankers are getting a shaking up. Good ones ought to court investigation and bad ones should be given no quarter. Illinois is one of but a very few states not under supervision."

MR. FRAME is taking a very deep interest in the question of a new constitution for the American Bankers Association. Under a resolution offered by him at Detroit, a very able committee is at work, the chairman being Robert E. James of Easton, Pennsylvania.

CHAIRMAN JAMES has written to all of the members of the council and to a number of ex-officials of the association, asking for suggestions to be incorporated in the new constitution. Some of the members of the council and perhaps a few ex-members will go so far as to furnish their ideas in the shape of a complete revision.

WHILE this will take considerable work on the part of those engaging in it, it will perhaps be the better way to lay before the committee the complete plans of those who have given the matter deep study.

ONE of the matters which seems to be uppermost in the minds of everybody at present is some plan of controlling section expenses and the expense accounts of members of council, members of committees and of headquarters attaches.

ONE of the present weaknesses that has been pointed out frequently in these columns is that Colonel Farnsworth does not have authority to veto what might appear to be improper expense accounts turned in nor to place any check or curtailment upon the expenditures made by the sections. A general proposal covering either the creation of an audit department outside of headquarters, or conferring the powers of an auditor upon the treasurer, is coming up all over the country.

SOMETHING like this, if brought about, will relieve Colonel Farnsworth of 99 per cent of the criticism which has been directed at him and for which he is no more responsible than the Sultan of Turkey. It is the acme of unfairness to criticise an able, intelligent, and industrious employee for something which is outside of his discretionary powers.

W. G. EDENS, a member of the Big Council from Illinois, is digging up data from his years of organization experiences, at the request of Chairman James, who is a valued friend.

FOR ten years THE CHICAGO BANKER by many was regarded as a radical supervisionist. In the light of what the dailies and Judge Landis are doing for the cause, we, like Bryan, become a mere conservative without any change of position whatever.

OTHER revelations are quite as illuminating. Quite a few of the private bankers challenged, or questioned, the accuracy of the figures reported by B. F. Harris, as showing how the bankers association members had responded to his poll. The figures so far received by the Tribune are even more favorable toward supervision than were the confidential replies.

A. Barton Hepburn Criticizes System of Money

There are three cardinal defects in our monetary system, not to mention others, from which other great commercial nations are reasonably immune:

First—The reserve power of the banks; the cash they hold—and which is a margin of safety in dealing with the public, and which supplements the use of checks and drafts, which may be characterized as auxiliary currency—should be under centralized control, an altruistic control dominated by the government, in order that the same may be used when and where needed for the common good, in whatever section of the country conditions may call for its use. Under present law, each of our 26,000 banks holds its own cash reserve, and whenever troublesome times come or threaten, all banks naturally seek to strengthen themselves by increasing their cash holdings—they enter into active competition for this purpose, and in so doing refuse loans and withhold currency. Past experience has taught them that if they part with their cash there is no source from which they can with certainty obtain more. The situation is thereby aggravated and threatened trouble may be made actual trouble, all because of the natural working of the law.

Second—The volume of metallic money comes through the mint and partially disappears by abrasion, loss and through the melting pots of the jewelers. As to any particular country, the volume may be increased or diminished by export or import. While the volume of coin money varies, it is in no sense responsive to the varying needs of business. A properly regulated bank currency is the only currency which the experience of the world has devised that will come into being when wanted and retire when there is no longer need for its use. Under our law, banks must buy bonds, which command a premium, as security for circulation, and must pay more for the same than the amount of currency they are permitted to issue thereupon. By taking out circulation, a bank locks up money in a bond investment, and it thereby lessens its ability to supply the needs of its customers.

Commercial banks are designed to serve and supply credit to commerce and trade, both large and small. The notes and loans which they hold represent the hopes of prosperity of the millions of people throughout the land who have sought credit with the banks in order to supplement their own resources and realize the greater gain. Such credits represent both brain and brawn—the farmer, the laborer, the merchant, the manufacturer—and are the best credit, the best asset that any nation can produce; their character corresponds to the standard of commercial honor which obtains in the community. Millions of people are striving to meet and pay these obligations at maturity, in order to protect their credit and save their financial lives. They are the best and most liquid assets that banks can hold, in peace or panic, and this is proved over and over by the experience of all commercial nations.

A. BARTON HEPBURN
New York

The volume of such notes or credits in banks expands or contracts with the varying activity of trade, and bank notes should be predicated upon such assets—the best of assets—and expand when business activity and the public welfare call for their use; on the other hand, contract and disappear when their service is no longer required. When a bank possesses ample capital and surplus, is replete with commercial assets representing the best names and best credit—just such assets as the bank was created to handle—and yet cannot obtain currency to satisfy the demands of its customers, except by buying gold abroad at a premium and importing the same, the trouble is not with the bank, but with the law. That was the general condition which existed in 1907, and the responsibility for that condition and consequent losses rests upon congress and the public indifference which fails to inspire action by congress. What other nations have proven as to currency based upon commercial assets we should incorporate into our law.

Third—There should be a market for commercial paper available to all banks. Interior banks may rediscount their notes with correspondents in metropolitan centers, but banks in our larger cities have little recourse except in foreign countries. There should be a central institution, under government control, where short-time commercial paper or loans that are good beyond peradventure can be discounted and the proceeds, if need be, received in bank note currency. Such a resource does not exist now. It would afford business necessary relief and avoid a money stringency with its resulting loss to all classes, capitalistic and manualistic alike.

Congress having neglected to provide such a currency, the clearing houses of the country have sought to meet and have succeeded in meeting crises successfully, by combining their credit and responsibility in the form of clearing-house certificates. In New York and some other large cities clearing house certificates are issued in denominations of $5,000 and multiples thereof. Such certificates are good only in the hands of member banks, and are usable only in the settlement of debit balances at the clearing house. In other cases clearing-house certificates have been issued in the form and size of current bank bills, in amounts ranging from $1 upward, and in rare instances for fractional parts of a dollar. They were designed to, and did, circulate from hand to hand as money.

The first described certificates were not subject to a tax, but the latter were clearly subject to the 10 per cent tax imposed by congress, which was designed to tax state bank circulation out of existence, and incidentally induce state banks to come into the national system. The emergency, however, which called such certificates into use, was so great that the government, with full knowledge and record evidence available, has in no instance made any attempt to enforce the 10 per cent tax. The useful purpose served by such certificates and the good accomplished were proclaimed by all.

These certificates so used are simply a form of asset currency. For the best of reasons the government neglected to enforce the penalties provided by law, although the violation of law was flagrant, and yet, strangest of all, with this object lesson borne in upon them with almost crushing emphasis the government neglects to provide for a currency, within the law, similar in character, but superior in efficacy.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $10,000,000.00 was well illustrated by the experience of the country in 1893. The great protection which such a currency would afford to the country generally and to every individual, by the protection of values, whether it be wage, salary, bonds or factory, was vividly brought to the attention of all, by the very general resort to currency substitutes which obtained.

In 1893 the silver propaganda, in favor of the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, raised the fear that the country might go on a silver basis and the standard of values be all upset accordingly; this fear gave undue consequence to the Baring failure and had the effect of preventing an early restoration of confidence. The hoarding of gold, in anticipation of a possible premium, should the country go on a silver basis, was an incident of the situation and directly affected the money supply.

The resulting stringency induced the issuing of clearing-house certificates very generally in the smaller as well as the larger cities of the country, and also the issuing of certificates of deposit and cashier's checks by the bankers in amounts of $1, 5 and $10, designed to pass into general circulation as money. The money stringency was thus relieved, the panic overcome, and all such currency retired within a short period.

The experience of Columbia, S. C., was very illuminating in respect to this subject. The bankers there were unable to obtain currency from their metropolitan correspondents, and therefore issued clearing house certificates which were used in paying the farmers, moving their crops and the transaction of business generally in that community. One of the leading bankers prepared statistics, showing the amount of currency which had been brought into Columbia by express the previous year to supply the crop-moving requirements of the fall. The express charges for bringing in and subsequently returning this money were very considerable; the interest paid upon the loans made with their city correspondents, in order to realize credits, both for checking purposes and for currency purposes, was very considerable. All this was saved by the use of clearing house certificates, which were issued against the joint credit of the banks of the town, and served every purpose, not as well, of course, but nevertheless served every purpose of the community in harvesting and marketing their crops; they also saved the bankers of the city a considerable sum of money.

This illustrates forcefully one of the very great advantages to be derived from a law which would allow banks locally to utilize their own credit for currency purposes and shows to what an extent the different sections of the country would be made independent of the money centers like St. Louis, Chicago, New York and other cities. The panic of 1893, and their inability to obtain currency in New York and other cities, forced the issuance of clearing-house certificates by Columbia and contributed to the financial well-being of the community which Columbia served, by saving them the usual tribute in the form of express charges and interest, which they normally paid to other localities.

Other sections of the country had a similar experience. Surely it is reasonable and right to ask congress for legislation which shall, in the light of experience, give us a banking and currency system which shall serve the needs of business and conserve the material interests of the community.

EFFICIENT SERVICE OF HARVEY G. RIGGS

Harvey G. Riggs, vice-president and cashier of the Mercantile Trust and Savings, Quincy, Ill., who has done so much to stimulate interest in the matter of road improvement in Adams county, has just completed a year's service as president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, and his annual report was presented to the members at their yearly meeting on the evening of November 13th. W. E. Lancaster, second vice-president, made a graceful and forceful speech in which he lauded the loyal and disinterested work of President Riggs during the past year. The report made by Mr. Riggs was a most comprehensive one and covered the work of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce which has been so active in advancing the commercial and manufacturing interests of this important city.

GOOD ROADS MEETING

The American Automobile Association will hold a good roads convention in the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago, December 2d and 3d. The association has forty-four state bodies and 450 local clubs. The efforts of this organization during the past year has given the good roads movement a country-wide impetus.

Geographical Distribution

In purchasing railroad bonds the question of the territory served is of the utmost importance, for upon this depends the character of the traffic received and hence the revenue of the company. Diversity of traffic underlies a diversified investment. The larger the territory, the more diversified the traffic, and therefore the more stable the earning power.

We offer three railroad bonds, each well secured and in combination making a well-rounded investment, at prices to yield an average income of over 5¼%. The traffic of these roads is derived from three widely separated sections of the country.

DISCUSS AGRICULTURAL CREDITS

At the thirty-second annual convention of the National Farmers Congress, held recently at New Orleans, consideration was given the subject of agricultural credits. Harvie Jordan, founder of the Southern Cotton Growers Association, urged the establishment of a credit system for American farmers. He said the rate of interest paid by farmers is about twice that paid by industrial corporations, despite the circumstance that securities offered by soil workers are equally good or better than those offered by corporations.

Willet M. Hays, assistant secretary of the Department of Agriculture, argued for education of the farmer and betterment of conditions in agricultural communities as the best method of improving the race.

George Woodruff Before the Minnesota Agricultural Congress

Much has recently been said in America concerning the subject of agricultural credit in foreign countries and the possible adaptation in this country of some of the European forms of farm finance, and our bankers and others who have investigated this subject abroad have submitted interesting reports a general summary of which may be made under four heads: First, agricultural credit institutions in Europe consist of privately owned and co-operatively owned personal credit banks and privately owned and co-operatively owned mortgage banks, the personal credit banks making loans to farmers for short periods of time and the mortgage banks making loans to farmers for long periods of time; second, interest rates to European farmers are not actually as low as has been claimed, but generally range from $4\frac{1}{4}\%$ to 6% except where special conditions, as for instance a government subsidy, operate to make the rates slightly less; third, from a general standpoint our present 24,000 independent community owned national and state credit banks would fulfill all of our requirements for short time credit providing we would create a national reserve association of some kind; and fourth, our present haphazard, wasteful and unsatisfactory method of handling mortgages or long time credit should be done away with and some system of mortgage banks substituted therefor.

Accordingly, out of these investigations has grown a quite general conviction that in the field of agricultural credit in America the paramount need is not for a new system of credit banks, but for a modern system of mortgage banks.

So far, there have been suggested three plans for American mortgage bank organization: First, a haphazard development of independent mortgage banks to be organized under our existing laws and to grow up at random in various parts of our country, the controlling interests in the stronger and more successful of which are to be eventually taken over by a large and powerful parent concern located in one of our large cities; second, a co-operative system of rural land credit associations to be organized under new state laws and to be based upon the principles of the American Loan & Homestead Association and the German Landschaft organization; and third, a great de-centralized system of national mortgage banks to be organized under a national mortgage bank act and to be based upon the general principles of our present national credit banks.

Regardless of which form of organization may eventually be adopted in this country, the general plan for successful mortgage bank operation will be the same, and it is to this general plan that we should first give careful thought and study before finally determining upon which form of organization we are to adopt.

A mortgage bank, whether national or state, privately owned or co-operatively owned, should be subject to the supervision and examination of either state or national authorities, should be organized with ample capital or responsibility, should loan money exclusively upon real estate, and in order to secure the money to loan, should issue and sell its bonds, secured by mortgages as collateral.

The success of the bank will depend largely upon the two things that have contributed most to the success of foreign mortgage banks: First, amortization provisions in the mortgages; and second, restrictions around the bonds.

In America, such loans as are made on farm lands should be made for not to exceed 50% of the value of the land and preferably for a period of thirty years, each loan to be paid back to the bank in small semi-annual payments, and this system of small payments constitutes what is known as the amortization plan of operation. As under this plan the loan will never have to be renewed but will continue to run until the semi-annual payments have cleared the farm of debt, the farmer will never be compelled to pay the frequent commissions, expenses of bringing down abstracts, and legal charges which he is now compelled to pay every few years when the loan is renewed, and more important still, he will be largely relieved of any anxiety lest he fail to meet the mortgage when due and lose the farm, for under this plan of amortization loans, it will be practically impossible for an honest farmer to lose his farm.

In many parts of our country, the interest alone on farm mortgages amounts to at least 8% per annum, but a mortgage bank located in such a section could easily afford to loan money on farms for thirty years, requiring an annual payment or annuity of but 8%, which would cover not only the interest but also the payment of the principal and the expenses and profits of the bank. The payments made each year would always be the same in amount and would equal 8% on the principal of the loan; viz., 6% for interest, 1.227% for amortization or payments on the principal, .773% for expenses and profits—total 8%.

It will be observed that at the end of thirty years, the farmer would be entirely out of debt without ever having been called upon to pay in any one year an amount larger than 8% on the

George B. Caldwell at Investment Bankers Convention

As an association, we shall not hazard prophecies as to the course of the investment market, nor unduly emphasize any particular securities, but realizing that the number of investors in high-grade bonds and mortgages increases in direct proportion to the dissemination of investment knowledge, I believe now, as I said to you on August 8th, "That through an association of this kind we can expect to receive and extend to one another some support and deal with investment banking and business problems from a scientific standpoint." Let us, therefore, endeavor to set forth in this meeting and in those that may follow, salient and pertinent facts bearing upon the development of municipalities, the railroads and public utilities of our country, the governmental safeguards surrounding invested capital, and other matters of interest for the public good.

The Membership Question

To date our membership committee has not recognized applications for membership from those who are wholly dealers in commercial paper, brokers, or those engaged exclusively in the handling of mortgages, even though they possess the requisite capital and other qualifications required by our temporary constitution. In the "Call of July 18, 1912," the invitation was extended to "bond houses and banks with bond departments." On September 20, 1912, the membership committee presented to your board of governors some applications which raised the question as to the qualifications of the term "investment banker" for admission to this association, and pending the adoption of a permanent constitution and by-laws which are to be presented at this meeting, they decided the following definition should govern:

President of association makes recommendations as to work to be undertaken during the coming year, and outlines purposes of the organization

"Any national or state bank, trust company, private bank, banking firm or corporation in good standing, having a paid-in capital of fifty thousand dollars or more, and which makes a practice of buying bonds or investment stocks and publicly offers the same as dealers therein, shall be eligible to membership in this association."

It is now quite apparent that if the membership shall continue to be restricted to actual dealers in bonds, the growth of the association, as well as the funds for carrying on its work, will be correspondingly restricted. If by a conservative extending of its membership it can acquire the added strength of the various types of all high-grade investment bankers, there is no good reason that I can see why the same should not be done, especially if any organization of investment brokers is to become national in character. In this connection, it should be borne in mind that only a small percentage of our membership is now connected with organized banks, so that this association brings together for the first time a new class of bankers engaged in creating, buying and selling a specialized form of credit. As our responsibilities are yet very large, and bound to increase, and as we can already see more to do than can be wisely undertaken, considering our age and means at hand, it might be well to move slowly on this question of a broadening of our membership—a matter we can decide at some future meeting, if it seems desirable, with perhaps one exception, and that is, that we should include Canadian investment bankers as eligible to membership in any association truly American.

The Ethics of Trading

I know that the ethics of trading among bond and stock houses are highly developed—more so than among any other class of merchants. There is, however, a chance for improvement in this respect and it seems to me that as an association, we should try to encourage this. I want to see the day when confidences between our members will not be abused, but increased, and selling agreements more generally respected.

A recent writer on the "Modern Business Conscience" has said, "But whatever be the burden which modern society lays on the peddler, there are multiplying signs that the banker has ceased to be reputable, who, satisfied with the creed, 'Caveat Emptor' (Let the buyer beware), washes his hands of his customers after he has unloaded his wares. The modern demand of society is for the transformation of the dealer in financial securities from the mere maker of a market for something he wishes to part with into a trustee for the protection of the purchaser."

If the dealers of the East want the assistance of the West, and likewise the money of the West, or vice versa, or in other words, if our domestic market is to be broadened, it must be done by the co-operation of those houses, East and West, North and South, that bring out and make the first distribution of any large issues. Houses should unite to sustain the market, as well as to make offerings. The public are now willing to become buyers of our bonds because they have confidence in the security and in the representations that are made to them. As year by year millions of new bonds are sold, the offering houses should at least see to it that the market is sustained at a price governed only by the price of money and a fair profit to the dealer. The practice of distributing houses, after having offered bonds, declining to trade in them at any reasonable price, destroys confidence and drives money that should continually be at our command into other channels. We meet this condition in part by listing upon some exchange a few issues, but a bond offered on the exchange without a buyer or a friend always makes a bad showing—even worse than an unlisted bond, because of the greater publicity given it. If the business of buying and selling bonds is profitable and worth while, why should we not deal in them as frequently as they come upon the market? And why should the investor buy of us a second time if he finds we will not trade in what we have sold him? As one of the problems of this association is how to inspire public confidence and a broader market, I hope we may educate the public to know that fair trading, as well as the greatest protection from sharp practice which they can have, will come through their dealing with members of this association.

The Protection of Publicity

There is another phase of bond trading that is worthy of our consideration at the present time. In the past the investment banker has stood practically alone; that is, as an individual, in so far as any protection was concerned. The press has been his real safeguard, consistently parading the virtues and condemning the illegitimate enterprises before the public. If we are to be helpful in guarding the rights of the honest investment banker, we must extend a helping hand in this direction. There are today financial magazines of great accuracy and some newspapers publishing financial news only, but these magazines and newspapers are not the ones of popular circulation. It is the first work of our committee on publicity to co-operate with our best publications, for with increasing wealth the bond business will grow and be accompanied by the increased number of parasites, who seek to turn the small investors into the path of wrong, or speculative investments, thus stifling legitimate enterprise. Such a case is in point here in New York in the promotion of a certain realty company and more recently in Rochester and Chicago with a certain redemption company. The first company, it is said, has sold a million of its bonds, or near bonds, to some twelve hundred investors, and all the receivers have been able to find is about seventy-five thousand dollars' worth of property. The manner in which this company ballooned its assets is a liberal education to those who would know how a realty concern, pretending to sell investment securities, gambles in undeveloped suburban real estate. The second company worked a fraud by agreeing to make a market for stocks and bonds issues guaranteed by them for which they charged a fee in advance and found an excuse for doing nothing. Such companies should be brought under the supervision of the banking department of each state in which they are organized.

This leads me to suggest that one of the opportunities for good work by our members is to furnish the secretary's office, and through him to the proper committee, with a list of any securities that are counted as bad, or that have come to grief, as quickly as it is discovered. The secretary's office of this association should be regarded as a library, as well as a clearing house for the ideas and suggestions of its members. Definite phases of our work have, it is true, been assigned to committees, but this does not lessen the obligation of each member, nor does it help us in building up a library of value, unless all defalcations and receiverships, as well as all speculative promotions, are promptly reported. The secretary is having blanks prepared for such reports and these will be sent to each member, and I commend them to your use.

Legal Department

I recommend that we create the office of general council, who shall be chosen each year by the board of governors: that to this department all legal questions shall be submitted by the officers and various committees.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

By C. C. Burford

The people of Illinois were interested in learning of the offer of $1,000,000 which the International Harvester Company has made to aid in lifting the standard of the agriculture of the United States, not only because of the added benefit which the state itself may gain, but also because Professor Perry G. Holden, formerly of the agricultural college of the University of Illinois, is to take charge of the work. Illinois gave to Iowa one of the best agricultural experts of the country and now the International Harvester Company plans "to give him to the entire nation." As a step in the right direction and as another hopeful sign of the coming of a greater agricultural production for America the new work will be watched with interest.

Fine Weather for Crop Handling

The past ten days or two weeks have been just right for the farmers of the state to "husk" corn, as they say in Illinois, and the corn has been gathered by the hundreds of thousands of bushels. Corn money has already been going through the banks and within a few weeks more there will be a much larger amount of money changing hands. The warm weather of the past two weeks has not been the best for certain lines of merchandise dealing in winter supplies but the coming of colder days will cause a large amount of buying held in check by the "Indian Summer."

Eastern Syndicate Buys Coal Lands

An eastern syndicate has closed a deal for over 30,000 acres of coal lands in northern Macoupin county, a few miles south of Springfield, near the towns of Virdin, Girard and Nilwood. Charles E. Wyatt of Springfield, representing New York capitalists, made the deal. The coal under the land is said to be from six to eight feet in depth and lies about 350 feet below the surface. Mr. Wyatt has also a two years' option on about 280,000 acres of Illinois coal lands lying in various counties, such as Macoupin, Montgomery, Saline and Jefferson. Six mines are now in operation in the 30,000 acre tract and four new shafts will be sunk in the 280,000 acre tracts. These mines will be among the best constructed in the country, being lined with concrete reinforced with steel wires. The new electric haulage system will be used throughout. A capacity of from 5,000 to 7,000 tons every eight hours is expected and the new deal is one of the most important ever made in this state.

Heath Visits Alma Mater

W. A. Heath, president of the Live Stock Exchange National of Chicago and president of the Bankers Club of that city, attended the Home-Coming of the alumni and former students of the University of Illinois last Saturday, held in connection with the annual football game between the University of Chicago and the University of Illinois. Mr. Heath is an Illinois alumnus and was for many years with the Champaign National Bank, leaving that institution as cashier to become a state bank examiner, later becoming vice-president of the Hibernian Banking Association of Chicago and now president of the Live Stock Exchange National.

Mr. Heath responded to a toast at the banquet of the Sigma Chi fraternity. H. W. Mahan, president of the South Side State Bank of Chicago, was invited to give a toast at the banquet of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity and although in Urbana Friday on business found it necessary to return to Chicago before the festivities.

Other bankers present at the Home-Coming were Robert R. Ward, vice-president of the Benton State Bank of Benton and active in the work of the Illinois Bankers Association, and Riley Smith of the Farmers Trust Company of Indianapolis.

Illinois Railroad Sold

The Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis railroad was sold Monday to an organization composed of the second mortgage bondholders of the road by W. A. Allen, master in chancery of the United States district court, at a public auction held in Springfield. The sale was the result of a suit brought by the Equitable Trust Company of New York against the Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis railroad and others. W. W. Stevenson, a New York attorney, who represented the second mortgage stockholders, deposited with the master in chancery $750,000 of consolidated mortgage five per cent bonds of the road. This was in accordance with an order of Judge Humphrey of the federal court that $350,000 in money or $750,000 in bonds must be deposited as a guarantee of sale. There was considerable talk about the Rock Island lines acquiring the road but nothing came of the rumor.

The new southern extension of the North Western from Peoria is being rapidly pushed to completion. A new bridge over the Illinois River is being built at Pekin and as the road taps a very rich farming territory the condemnation costs have been very great. The cost of the new road is very high. It is thought that the North Western will shortly seek a St. Louis entrance. The Minneapolis and St. Louis railroad, which recently acquired the Iowa Central into Peoria from the west, reports increasing business and the railroads all over the state are doing a large and increasing business.

Prosperity in Decatur

Good times throughout the state are reflected in the scarcity of common labor. The building of the new $2,000,000 Wabash shops in Decatur was delayed by this reason and tramps were even employed. It is said that "there is plenty of good work for any able bodied man in Decatur" and that "any man who is willing to work and who does not want to sit in the presidential chair as his first job can get work at the Wabash shops." The Decatur Brick Manufacturing Company's new plant, to cost $80,000, is a new industry for busy Decatur. The new structure of the National Bank of Decatur occupies a part of the attention of Decatur boosters while the beautiful quarters of the Millikin and of the Citizens Nationals are also favorites.

Miller Addresses University Students

Herbert F. Miller, one of the officers of the Chicago Association of Commerce, addressed the business students of the University of Illinois, Friday afternoon, November 22d, on the general topic of the duties and responsibilities of chambers of commerce and of business men's associations. The lecture was delivered under the auspices of the Commercial Club of the University of Illinois.

Wealth of the State

An idea of the wealth of the citizens of Illinois can be gained from the 1912 assessment made by the local assessors of the state which places the property values at $2,122,104,048, an increase of $17,942,501 over the valuation of 1911. Cook county, including the city of Chicago and suburban towns, leads with a valuation of $930,472,142. McLean county, including Bloomington, comes second; Sangamon county with Springfield third and Peoria county fourth. These figures do not include the railways and the capital stock of corporations. These figures were given out at Springfield by the state board of equalization.

McKinley to Expand in Colorado?

The Rocky Mountain News of Denver is authority for the belief that William B. McKinley, president of the Illinois Traction System and representative for the past eight years in congress from the nineteenth Illinois district, is interested in Colorado utilities, as he and his confidential associate, H. B. Chubbuck of Peoria, were in Colorado Springs "looking over" the Colorado Springs and Interurban Railway. The property is valued at three millions of dollars and it is not known if a deal of any sort has as yet been made. The News credits Mr. McKinley with being "one of the largest traction magnates in the world." Since the election Mr. McKinley has been resting in Colorado but will soon go to Montreal, Canada, where he will confer with various capitalists who are interested in the Illinois Traction System. Mr. McKinley already has large interests in various Kansas cities.

Vocational High School at Joliet

Illinois bankers who are interested in the work of their state association in vocational education will be glad to learn of the work which is being done in the high school of Joliet. The high school in that city is proud of the work which they are doing and while they are hoping to extend their work in vocational training yet they are now offering courses in mechanical drawing, stenography and typewriting, bookkeeping, manual training and domestic training, surveying, chemistry, physics and commercial English. Many of the boys and girls who have only a high school education secure good positions in the industries of Joliet because of their vocational training secured in the local high school.

Illinois Notes

An article recently published in the Christian Science Monitor "writing up" Champaign, Urbana and the University of Illinois, included, among others, a view of the exterior of the elegant First National Bank building of Champaign. This is the Harris bank.

The Central Illinois Public Service Company has acquired ownership of the Marion Light, Water and Power Company of Marion, the deal aggregating about $150,000, according to an announcement of the Commonwealth Edison Electric Company of Chicago. It is announced that the Central Illinois Company will purchase the plants at Carbondale, Anna, Herrin, Harrisburg, Johnston City, and other southern Illinois towns.

Bankers who have visited Peoria at the time of the Illinois Bankers conventions and at other times will be interested in knowing that the Illinois Traction System (the McKinley lines) will soon begin the erection of a new eight story station and office building in that city, to cost about $250,000. As a railway, commercial and banking center Peoria occupies an enviable position among cities of its class.

BANKERS ATTEND COMMERCE BANQUET

A large number of Chicago and down-state bankers were present at the eighth annual banquet of the Chicago Association of Commerce held in the gold room of the Congress Hotel on Tuesday evening. Among those in attendance were the following: C. P. Clifford, First National; G. F. Emery, Live Stock Exchange National; J. Fletcher Farrell, Fort Dearborn National; J. F. Hagey, First National; E. A. Hamill and C. L. Hutchinson, Corn Exchange National; W. N. Jarnagin, National City; H. R. Kent, Fort Dearborn National; Malcom McDowell and W. G. Edens, Central Trust Company of Illinois; C. H. Frost, resigned, as state secretary. Secretary W. B. Hughes of the Nebraska association; W. C. McFadden, North Dakota Association; P. W. Hall, Iowa Association; E. C. Platt, South Dakota Association; G. D. Bartlett, Wisconsin Association, met in Minneapolis to discuss features of insurance in which the association is interested.

NO TARIFF SCARE IS LIKELY

New York, Nov. 20th.—Louis G. Kaufman, president of the Chatham and Phoenix National of this city, thinks it will be a hard task to get up a tariff scare, for the simple reason that times are too prosperous.

"I do not look for any real radical changes in the tariff," said Mr. Kaufman, "but even if the leaders were disposed to put through a radical programme I do not believe the South, which is growing so fast industrially, would permit it. Some changes which might affect certain industries for a time would, on the other hand, be of benefit to the people of the other sections.

"The formation of the United States Steel Corporation was the best thing that ever happened to the industry. You don't hear of failures in the steel and iron business now, and the industry is on a stable basis. It is live and let live, and the country is better for it.

"Business conditions certainly are on a healthful basis everywhere throughout the United States. There are no reports to be had that speak otherwise."

From a careful canvass of the mercantile situation Mr. Kaufman said he was unable to find any clouds on the horizon. Particularly was this true of the West and Northwest, where the banks and business houses were reporting an enormous volume of trade. Any ill effects of agitation over the tariff question he was certain had been discounted many months ago.

In conclusion Mr. Kaufman said: "The crops this year are so great that I do not believe they can all be moved to market inside of the year, and the proceeds of this enormous wealth certainly must result in maintaining a very big and broad volume of business for a long time to come. We are not likely to have any boom, but a steady, substantial and healthful activity with substance behind it."

ATTRACTIVE BOND OFFERING

The bond department of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, owns and offers subject to prior sale $230,000 of bonds of the Advertising Building, to be located on Madison Street between Clark and LaSalle. These are first mortgage, 5½ per cent, leasehold, serial gold bonds, issued by F. R. Barnheisel.

SEES NO DANGER FROM REVISION OF TARIFF

D. R. Forgan, who returned this week from New York, said that financiers there believe there can be no radical revision of the tariff. The country is now so big and the cost of running the government so large that a fair tariff is assured by reason of the revenue that must be derived from the imposts. Mr. Forgan said that money is likely to remain stiff until the end of the year.

Taxes on Failed Banks

In response to a request from the bank commissioner of Oklahoma as to whether the guaranty fund can be held liable for unpaid taxes against a failed bank. Attorney-General West holds that the fact that a bank has failed does not exempt it from liability for taxes. The opinion states that if a bank can delude the bank commissioner sufficiently to cause him to allow the institution to operate beyond the time when it should have done so, it may also deceive the assessor into fixing a value on the capital stock and assets for taxation above what the bank possesses. The attorney-general suggests that if the bank commissioner would send to the assessor of each county the net value of the capital, surplus and undivided profits of each bank in that county, which is the basis of assessment of banks, that the assessor would be glad to follow it and the valuations would be more nearly equitable.

The Transit Department and Banking Relations

Transit items are checks or drafts drawn on banks located out of town. It is the business of the transit department to collect these outside items, and until they are collected or lodged at some correspondent bank they do not count as a part of the bank's resources. A city bank of deposits averaging about $5,000,000 will have outstanding in the process of collection, from $250,000 to $300,000 of such items all the time. The object of the transit department is to collect these out-of-town items as cheaply, as safely and at the same time as quickly as possible. The cost of collecting these items not only includes the running expenses of the department, but also the exchange charged by country banks. The transit department cannot be profit producing unless the exchange received from customers is greater than that paid out to correspondents after the running expenses of the department have been added. Careful and constant watching is necessary to keep down this cost of collection. This is where an experienced transit man can earn his salary. The transit manager must not only look after the bank's interests in keeping down expenses, but must also safeguard the customers' interests by using strong and reliable banks as collection agents, by keeping after delayed remittances and by maintaining proper records. The very fact that the bank acts only as an agent for its customers in collecting their deposits will cause the bank to feel the responsibility of a careful selection of correspondents. Proper record of the endorsements, payees and amounts of items is also necessary so that duplicates can easily be secured of lost items.

One of the things that should be insisted upon is the direct collection of items. In fairness to the bank's customers, every item deposited should be sent as near to its place of origin as possible. Delay arising from round-about routing should be minimized, and, in fact, it is a question whether or not a city bank would be liable in case a check was returned unpaid after floating around the country from bank to bank for an unreasonable length of time. It is generally agreed by good transit men that there should be no more than three bank endorsements on any item and it is preferable to have but two or one. Ordinarily a city bank will collect two or three of the neighboring states direct, that is, send the items to the points of origin. For the territory farther away it is customary to send the items to collecting banks in other reserve cities where balances are maintained for this purpose.

The transit department receives items from two sources, through the mail in cash letters from bank correspondents and over the counter from city customers. All outside items are charged to the transit department, listed and then sorted by states or territories. The sorting is done according to definite instructions resulting from arrangements made with other banks for the handling of the business. There may be one or more clerks, depending upon the size of the bank, to make up the cash letters containing these country items. In the larger banks it is customary to have the stuff divided into registers, so-called, each register having a certain number of accounts or a certain number of states. Each man balances up his own work against the total handed to him by the sorter.

One simple method of division for a small bank is to have two registers, one for items sent for credit, that is, to correspondents; and the other for items sent for daily remittance, that is, to non-correspondents.

Problem of Exchange Charges

Let us analyze for a moment this matter of exchange charges on country checks. It operates like this. Supposing a man in Charleston, we will say, buys a bill of goods from a jobber in Baltimore and sends the Baltimore house his check on a Charleston bank for the net amount of the bill. The Baltimore jobber deposits this check to his own credit with a Baltimore bank who charges him exchange therefor, of, say, $1.00 per thousand. The Baltimore bank then sends the item to its Charleston correspondent who remits for it less $1.00 per thousand, if that is the regular charge. In this case the Baltimore jobber has paid a tax on the transaction, that is, the exchange charge, and has not, therefore, received the full amount due him. It is possible that the Baltimore jobber is a very good customer of his bank and in that case the Baltimore bank might choose to accept the check from him without exchange charge, though they themselves will have to absorb it. In this case the bank has paid a tax on the transaction with which, in fact, they have had nothing to do. It can be seen from this that the country merchant has transmitted the funds in a form worth something less than their face value, which you will agree is not fair to either the Baltimore house or the Baltimore bank. As a matter of strict equity, a local merchant should do one of two things, either go to his home bank to purchase a draft for the amount, which is received at par through Baltimore, or send his check on his home bank plus the exchange.

The theory of exchange is that it is supposed to represent the shipping rate of currency. The use of a banker's facilities represented by the cashing of personal checks or the sale of a banker's draft in order to transfer funds from one party to another located in different cities, is worth something. Without these facilities it would be necessary for anyone making a payment in another city to send the actual cur-

HOW TO GET STATE SUPERVISION

To those who have examined into the situation carefully it would seem that there is a shorter and more certain route to state supervision in Illinois than by a direct amendment to the banking act. An amendment to the banking act, under a constitutional provision, must be submitted on a referendum vote to the people. This requires considerable delay and no little expense. In addition, if the general subject of a redraft of the Illinois banking law should come before the legislature there is every likelihood—speaking plainly—that numerous amendments would be offered covering such questions as guaranty of deposits, segregation of savings deposits and the owning of stock in one bank by another bank. In fact, the question once opened, it might be difficult to control the situation.

The regulation or supervision of strictly private banks as such is looked upon as an utter impossibility. The private banker might possibly be conducting his bank legitimately; it might be making money and be totally solvent. Yet this same private banker might have interests in traction companies, land companies, manufacturing concerns and gas properties, or even in mining stock. Personal losses in any of these enterprises naturally might cause the bank to fail and its depositors of course to have their claims scaled down simply as creditors of his estate. The bank examiners could not pass upon the solidity of a private bank as such without an examination of all of the investments and business enterprises in which the banker was concerned. Incorporation is the only remedy for the present situation.

The short route to bank supervision in Illinois might come through a section to be added to the criminal code making it an offense after a certain fixed time, say from three to five years, for any institution other than an incorporated one to call itself a bank or to exercise any of the banking powers. Sections 25-a to 25-d inclusive of the present criminal code provide for the punishment of bankers, brokers, etc., who may violate its provisions. The courts have on numerous occasions sustained the statute; hence it would seem to follow that the plan suggested is feasible. Such an amendment would not be required to come to a vote of the people and might become effective at once as to all new banking enterprises and applicable to going institutions in existence at the time the amendment was passed after a period of from three to five years. This would give the solvent private banker an opportunity to convert his lands and other investments into money. The minimum capital for a state bank in the city of Chicago would be left at $200,000 as at present. If it were possible to have a two-hundred-thousand-dollar crowd organize a bank with a capital of $50,000, such a capital might be adequate. This, however, might not happen very frequently, and a crowd which could not raise a capital of $200,000 to start a state bank should be denied the privilege. In sections of the city which could not support a two-hundred-thousand-dollar bank, they would not have far to go to find one already in operation.

Another matter which concerns the bankers of the state is the present burdensome system of examination fees. A bank examiner from Chicago goes over to Moline and charges all of the banks in that city round-trip mileage from Springfield in addition to his examination fee. For a five-cent fare he can reach Rock Island from Moline and charge each of the banks in Rock Island also a round-trip fare from Springfield in addition to the examination fee. This is what a distinguished member of the Illinois Bankers Association at one time called "constructive mileage." The whole question of fees and mileage could be adjusted by an amendment to the present fees and salaries act, also without submission to a popular vote. It is understood that these questions have been passed upon by the very highest authority in the state and that there will be no constitutional or legal objections to bringing about the reform in the manner suggested. Bank supervision has attained a wonderful popularity within the last few weeks, and all, or nearly all, of the big Chicago dailies are hammering away at it both morning and night. If all of this tremendous power and enthusiasm could be directed toward some simple plan such as that outlined above, there would be neither uncertainty nor delay in bringing about universal bank supervision and eventually bank incorporation in Illinois. In the meantime a hint to the wise would be to incorporate at once. Let every private banker in the state who feels right minded, and who recognizes the handwriting on the wall when he sees it, show to his depositors and to his neighbors that he is in a position to convert into a state bank whenever he feels like it.

MORTGAGE BANKS FOR FARMERS

President George Woodruff of the First National at Joliet has devoted considerable time in both Europe and America to investigating loan systems adaptable to American mortgage banks intended to furnish cheap funds to farmers. His first public appearance on the subject was at the Detroit convention of the American Bankers Association, where he let in a little daylight upon the much touted cheap money supplied to European farmers. His investigations in France and Germany show conclusively that what the farmer gets for his three and one half per cent interest is not money, but a debenture bond, which he is compelled to sell in the open market and thus his loan nets him from about four and one quarter to six per cent. Mr. Woodruff again spoke on the same subject at the Peoria convention of the Illinois bankers and since that time has been in demand where such subjects are under consideration. He has not yielded to the desire to make a sensation by reporting things which have not happened, nor to hold out promises to the American farmer which cannot be fulfilled. This week he spoke on mortgage banks before the Minnesota Conservation and Agricultural Development Congress, covering all divisions of his subject. He reviewed briefly the findings of American investigators and touched upon the various divisions of European agricultural credit. European interest rates were compared with those of America and the adequacy of our present system of credit banks was touched upon. Mr. Woodruff believes that there is need for a complete system of American mortgage banks. He discussed somewhat at length these various plans and gave his view upon the functions of such an institution. Amortization provisions, which appear in most European farm mortgages, were explained and it was shown that whereas American farmers now frequently pay eight per cent and frequent commissions for renewals, that under the European system of amortization, total payments of eight per cent would extinguish the entire loan in thirty years.

His talk before the Minnesota delegates was illustrated by figure charts showing how this result would be accomplished. His address in full will be found elsewhere in this edition of THE CHICAGO BANKER and will well repay careful reading and study on the part of all those interested.

LACK OF INTEREST ON THE PART OF BANK CLERKS

The other day a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER happened to notice on the bulletin board of a certain bank a notice advertising a lecture to be given by the Chicago Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, and requesting the attendance of bank clerks. All over this announcement there was scrawled writing of a derogatory character, some of which probably was meant to be witty, but which fell far short of the mark.

The work which is being undertaken by the American Institute of Banking is deserving of especial commendation. In its endeavor to fit young fellows employed in banks as clerks, for positions involving added responsibilities, it is serving a laudable purpose. In order for one to qualify himself for a better position, it is necessary that he increase his knowledge to a point consistent with the duties of the position which he desires to attain. The time has passed when apprenticeship in any particular vocation is all that is required to increase one's efficiency in that particular line. Nowadays the standard fixed by business men is much higher than formerly, so that a successful applicant for a position is required to be possessed of a certain amount of scholastic training. Frequently young men are hampered in their quest for knowledge by the fact that they are employed all day, which often precludes the acquisition of very much learning outside of that which they get from their positions. The only solution of this problem is the night school. The American Institute of Banking is the solution in the case of the young bank clerk who doesn't want to be a clerk all his life, but who desires to be somebody in this world and to be able to hold a position above the average one which requires special skill and training. Truly it is too bad that more young men do not take advantage of the opportunities which are afforded them. When the time comes to promote a clerk, it goes without saying that he who has special training will be given the preference over the one who has wasted his opportunities and who has looked with indifference and contempt upon a system of education calculated to improve his chances.

JUST AS A REMINDER

The formal application of Earl W. Butler came up at the Springfield session of the state board of pardons just to remind us that the Kirby fiasco isn't the only one. Butler is but eighteen years of age, yet he succeeded in operating a string of private banks in Lewistown and other small towns near Peoria. He didn't steal the depositors' funds—he only "speculated" with them. The "wire tapper" method was not then discovered but he got away with the funds just the same. There have been too many "bank" failures, and too few of those who "failed" went to the pen to make us agree to a pardon or other condonement.

BANK MERGERS IN CANADA

The year 1912 will have a place in Canadian banking history on account of the number and importance of the mergers occurring in it. At the beginning of March the union of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and the Eastern Townships Bank occurred, whereby the first-named institution was lifted to a practical equality with the Bank of Montreal. Six months later, at the beginning of September, the Royal Bank and the Traders united forces, after which event the Royal became an institution with $170,000,000 of assets. Next month, in October, the provisional agreement for the absorption of the Bank of New Brunswick by the Bank of Nova Scotia was announced. If the shareholders of the New Brunswick bank ratify the sale the union will take place February 1, 1913. According to the current bank return, September 30, the assets of the Bank of Nova Scotia amount to $66,982,002, and those of the Bank of New Brunswick to $12,676,121. So the combination probably will have assets of about $80,000,000.

This announcement scarcely was made when the newspapers in Montreal and Toronto were giving details of a fourth merger which is expected to be consummated in a certain contingency. In this last case the Metropolitan Bank of Toronto is credited with having made an offer for the Banque Internationale, the new Franco-Canadian institution founded a year ago by Sir Rodolphe Forget and his associates. The Metropolitan had assets September 30 of $13,828,032, and the Internationale had assets of $5,152,614. However, the footings of the balance sheets of the later institution were swollen September 30 to the extent of from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 by a special deposit supposed to be of a temporary nature. And if the combination goes into effect the Metropolitan afterwards in all probability would show total resources of about $18,000,000.

SEASONAL BOOK OFFERINGS

"Through South America" is one of the best of the fall offerings by the publishers. It is by Harry Weston Van Dyke, introduction and commendation by John Barrett. The illustrations are full page and 32 in number.

As Mr. Barrett, the distinguished director-general of the Pan American Union, says in his readable and informing introduction to this book, "No one can read Mr. Van Dyke's travel story of South America without being impressed with the importance of these countries, the enjoyment and value of visiting them, and the advantage of the development of closer relations between all of them and the United States." The volume is certainly a most satisfactory one, viewed from the point of the prospective traveler, the business man with an eye to South American trade, or the reader in search of full and complete information about this great and vastly interesting continent. After an opening section giving an outline of the stormy history of South America from its discovery by Europeans, each country is taken up in turn, and its scenery, cities, people, social life, and industrial, economic, and commercial aspects described. Especial stress is laid on the trade relations between the two Americas, on which, as Mr. Barrett points out at some length in his introduction, the Panama Canal will have such an enormous effect. The discussion of the future of the commerce of both continents lends a particular interest to this wide-awake book by an alert traveler.

Published by Thomas P. Crowell Company, New York, at $2.00.

"Childhood" is a volume of beautiful tots in soft browns and appropriate verses for each. This is a beautiful quarto volume of pictures of children taken from life, and all of them up-to-date American children, amid their home surroundings. The illustrators have had recourse mostly to sepia tints. All the more important photographs of the little ones are full-page, the subjects chosen with much discrimination. The pictures are "tipped in," not pasted down, and on that account show up much better than would have been the case had use been made of a now obsolete process, but which was thought all right in its time. As a table book "Childhood" will doubtless find many admirers.

"Childhood" is on heavy plate paper and comes boxed for Christmas trade. It will appeal to all children and to all among the grown-ups who love them. Published by Crowell & Company, New York, at $3.00.

Northwest Apple Growers Conference at Spokane

Waldo G. Paine, railroad expert, tells the needs of the producers for adequate storage facilities at a convenient center

Before the Pacific Northwest apple industry can get maximum returns, organization between districts for marketing purposes must be effected and a large storage plant must be provided in Spokane, according to the belief of Waldo G. Paine, traffic manager of the Spokane & Inland Empire Railroad and chairman of the publicity committee of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce.

In an address at a large conference of growers during the National Apple Show in Spokane, Mr. Paine said:

For a long time intelligent men who have been close to the pulse of the apple industry in the Pacific Northwest have realized that something must be done if we are to maintain our place as a producing section and if we are to rise to the position that should be ours by all natural laws.

This realization has led to more advanced cultural methods and has even gone a way toward securing co-operation among the growers. But we are now facing a situation that demands action—action both speedy and intelligent. I believe the problem will be solved in time, but not by sitting quietly by and allowing things to take their course. This attitude cost California growers dearly, and it will serve us the same if we do not take time by the forelock and do something.

Apple conditions up to 1910 are well known—limited crops in the Pacific Northwest and ever-decreasing crops in the barrel districts of the United States. But in 1910 the east had an abnormally small crop. That year the northwest had the largest in its history to that time, amounting to about 10,000 cars in round numbers.

Even then we were not able to get the maximum return, for we were not prepared to market our crop judiciously and widely. Fortunately, the light crops of the east, with their corresponding market opportunities, automatically stirred up some demand for the box apple, but conditions were slow in shaping themselves.

Meanwhile there were some severe losses by growers, due to indiscriminate consigning and leaving the fruit too long on the trees, resulting in their arrival at the markets in an over-ripe and soft condition. A car shortage added to the gaiety of the situation. Later in the season, of course, after the first glut was over, prices naturally stiffened and the results on the whole were fair. Some districts lost more than others; many growers got less than the cost of production.

Nineteen-eleven found conditions reversed. The east had a large crop of apples while the northwest crop was abnormally small, less than 50 per cent of the 1910 crop, in fact. People began to talk about co-operation, but desultory and unscientific methods of selling still prevailed to a considerable extent. Lack of co-operation between districts found the northwest in a general state of uncertainty and unpreparedness to market the small crop intelligently. Looking back over the 1911 situation, I am impressed with the fact that the vital necessity for general business organization was demonstrated even more forcefully than in 1910.

This year the situation that has been inevitable sooner or later has been reached. We find the east, the west, the northwest, the southwest—the whole country, in short—producing abnormally large apple crops. As a whole, the crops are more than 50 per cent larger than last year, and the largest since 1896.

We are to-day face to face with cold, hard facts. Theory no longer exists as to the character of competition the northwest apple must meet in order to justify a living wage to the orchardist and interest on an exceedingly large investment in orchard lands and trees.

That is the history of the apple business during the last few years. From it we must take our lesson. Prejudice against co-working with one's neighbor has no place in the proper application of this lesson. It must give way to reason, and the grower must come to realize that his fellow-grower is not a horse thief, and that their interests are identical, and that only by team work can all hope to prosper.

Assuming that the Pacific Northwest is fairly well organized in its different fruit sections by local organization, as it is to a reasonable extent, is that local organization sufficient? Decidedly not. There must be organization between districts if the apple business is to get adequate returns. This matter, however, is treated capably and fully by men competent to give you exact facts and figures. All I shall do is to give you my views regarding one big feature of the problem, on which its solution depends more or less. That is the matter of storage.

I do not propose to tell you anything about what kind of storage facilities you should provide, but rather shall touch briefly on the subject fundamentally as it affects the distribution side of the business.

In the first place, I believe Spokane is the natural storage center for a large portion of the Pacific Northwest apple crop. This city is conveniently located with respect to all the growing districts, and its wonderful railroad facilities make its position of great strategic importance to the grower. From here any point in the United States or Canada can be reached with ease and dispatch.

These advantages, geographically and because of transportation facilities, are still further increased by recent action of the transcontinental railroads in making Spokane a storage-in-transit center. Apples now destined for the east may be stored in Spokane for a period not to exceed nine months, for five cents a hundred more than the through freight rate.

The importance of this to the Pacific Northwest is at once obvious. In reaching markets west of the Missouri river or St. Paul, the nearest storage-in-transit center, a considerable saving is effected by storing in Spokane. If stored in St. Paul, the back haul to the markets of such states as the Dakotas and Montana would be no small item of expense to the grower.

Then, too, the storage problem must be met locally by the individual growers and at the initial shipping point, such as North Yakima, Wenatchee, Hood River and all the others. The grower himself should be prepared to take care of a portion of the product of his own orchard, and the initial shipping point must have capacity for a portion of the crop of its own immediate locality.

But it appears not only impracticable but impossible for any one of the many initial shipping points to handle the crop of districts other than its own. Sufficient reason for this conclusion is found in the fact that none has the transportation facilities necessary to reach all the markets expeditiously and without loss of time that would result in damage.

Then again, any city that goes into the market as a storage center must be large enough to insure against loss to the storage owners by reason of crop failure. Spokane is so situated that a crop shortage in one particular district would work no material damage. A large storage plant in a city one-tenth its size would lie idle a whole year in case of crop failure in that district, with consequent loss to the investors.

Just as co-operation and intelligent, scientific study are needed on the part of the growers, so they are necessary on our part here in Spokane. We have the means at hand to assist in placing the apple business on the right course. It is now up to us to make Spokane the apple storage center of America. As I told you before, we have all the conditions necessary to success. All that is needed now is pluck and brains and teamwork. The situation must be investigated thoroughly by men of broad experience and special fitness for the task. Having once determined that the apple business can be served by so doing, it should be decided that proper storage facilities must be provided in Spokane to care for such a proportion of the Pacific Northwest apple crop as the future may demand.

A broad, public-spirited course must be followed if we would get the best results. Scientific investigation of the situation, past, present and future, so as not to provide too great or too small facilities, is imperative. To-day Spokane can care for only about 400 carloads of apples. A plant to store 500 more is to be built next spring. But I feel certain that when the trees now planted in the Pacific Northwest come into bearing we shall need storage capacity many times as great.

So let us get together, growers, bankers, business men, railroad men and all who are interested directly or indirectly in this great apple industry. This will be a much more prosperous country and a much more happy country in which to live if the man who tills the soil and grows the trees makes a fair return for his investment of time, brains and money.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Bank clearings in the larger cities of the Central West continue to climb with increase in railroad activity due to crop shipments. Kansas City still holds sixth place in the nation's list, with St. Louis fifth. Only New York, Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia are ahead of these cities and Kansas City's percentage of gain led them all for the week ending November 14th. General business throughout the Central West has kept up to the very high standard set for it in October and of course this business is being reflected in the increased activities of the banks of this territory. Omaha showed an increase of 9.9% for the week under review, while Fort Worth had the amazing increase of 48%, due largely to the booming cotton market.

Bankers on Tour of Inspection

Seventy-five bankers and business men from England, New York, Chicago, Louisville, St. Louis, Detroit, Kansas City and Cincinnati have been making a tour of inspection of the Frisco railway properties the past week, swinging around a big circle having as its circumference Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans, Galveston, Dallas and Kansas City. While most of the travelers were investors in Frisco securities or in enterprises and properties along the lines of that railroad, many of them were also interested in various public service corporations in the cities visited, and a number are large industrial owners. At most of the cities visited, dinners and other attentions were shown the financiers. The personnel of the visiting party was: M. C. Addoms, Jr., New York; Earl Alexander, New York; Henry Almstedt, Louisville, Ky.; F. T. Armstrong, New York; Warden W. Syres, New York; W. F. Missouri Banker Buys Park National

The Park National Bank, Forty-seventh Street and Troost Avenue, Kansas City, has been bought by W. M. Dyer of Grandview, Mo., from R. L. Beattie, president, and other stockholders. The capital stock is $25,000 and the institution does a suburban and neighborhood business. A part of the stock has been resold by Mr. Dyer to George J. Eten, J. C. Holmes, U. R. Holmes, G. W. Strode, Eugene Lindsey, John D. Warnell, Stephen B. Slaughter and B. Z. Palmer. Slaughter was elected president and Dyer will be cashier. Mr. Dyer says the bank expects to erect a new building near the present banking room.

State Bank of Omaha Opened

The State Bank of Omaha was formally opened for business Monday, November 18th, at Seventeenth and Harney streets. The big building built expressly for this bank is named for it, and the banking rooms are magnificent. The counters and wainscoting are of striped Italian marble, while the base board, the customers' desks in the lobby, and the tellers' tables are of black Egyptian marble. While the bank has been doing business for about ten days, the formal opening was delayed on account of work on the finishings not having been completed. Albert L. Schrantz is the president of the institution. He was formerly manager of the Bennet store. Albert S. White is vice-president. He was formerly a banker in St. Louis, and J. L. Svoboda is cashier. Mr. Svoboda is interested in a number of Nebraska banks and has been state bank inspector. F.

M. High, assistant cashier, was formerly cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Wymore, Neb. The bank opens with a capital of $300,000 and, being the only state bank in Omaha, is the only financial institution coming under the state bank guaranty law.

New Bank at Dallas, Texas

A new national bank is to be established in Dallas, Texas, within the next few weeks. Herbert W. Jester and John Cain Jester, who recently disposed of the Jester National Bank at Tyler, Texas, are to take up their residence in Dallas and with B. B. Cain and other financiers of Dallas, will organize the new bank. It will be one of the largest banks in the Southwest. L. L. Jester, father of Herbert W. and John Cain Jester, is one of the pioneer financiers of Texas, having established during the course of a long and active career such institutions as the Corsicana National, the Houston National, and the Tyler National, the latter becoming the Jester National. It is expected that full details of the new concern will be known within a few days.

Address of Warren S. Hayden

Warren S. Hayden of Cleveland, speaking in regard to "Blue-Sky" laws and their relation to the investment banker, said:

"The object of such legislation, of course, is praiseworthy; but the difficulty is that any laws calculated to achieve that object must in some degree put limitations on those whose activities would never of themselves occasion legislation. This is true to some extent even if the law is drawn skilfully and with full knowledge of the investment business, but it is true to a highly embarrassing degree when, as can easily be the case, the law is drafted hurriedly by those unfamiliar with business conditions and methods.

"The interest of the investment banker is therefore vital, and for his own protection he will bestir himself if he is convinced that Blue-Sky legislation in some form is coming, and coming soon in states where he has business.

"In my own state of Ohio the legislature is almost sure to consider this subject this winter. I have heard of three bills now in preparation. I have a letter from a senator in Maine saying that he is about to write a blue sky bill. Similar activities are going on in Washington, Oregon, Nebraska and Indiana. Blue-Sky measures failed of passage last year in Massachusetts and Illinois, and, no doubt, will be reintroduced. Like legislation providing for utilities commissions, this is the sort of thing to spread rapidly from state to state. The imminence of a mass of this legislation so importantly affecting our business may be taken as beyond doubt, and this association is wise in having the matter promptly considered and acted upon by its appropriate committee.

"Any Blue-Sky law follows one of two theories, whose opposition in principle is as old as representative government, and is especially familiar to Americans in these times. These opposing principles are paternalism and democracy. In the present application one would make government regulate business by passing in advance on the merits of concrete transactions—the other by punishing transgression of a prescribed general rule. This is old debating ground, and each member of this association no doubt has long since made his choice of sides. Some hold that individuals ought, as far as possible, to be deprived of opportunity to make mistakes; while others believe that to protect fools against their own folly is only to make more fools, and that opportunity to make mistakes of necessity accompanies opportunity for progress. This is not inconsistent with protecting people against professional liars. The distinction as applied to Blue-Sky legislation is between having government give citizens opportunity to get the facts, and having government determine for citizens the effect of the facts.

"In my opinion the Kansas law is of the paternalistic type. It is the only Blue-Sky law now in existence—except as general laws against fraud are Blue-Sky laws—and for this reason it is studied by all who are considering legislation of similar purpose. Blue-Sky acts in other states are exceedingly likely to be patterned after that in force in Kansas."

Mr. Hayden suggested that a proper committee of the association carefully study the whole subject and report its conclusion as to the appropriate type of legislation with its precedent reasoning, and that the results of the study be communicated to the entire membership.

Robert H. Reed of New York urged uniformity in laws governing municipal bonds, i. e., substantial uniformity; absolute uniformity was declared to be impracticable.

printed before the situation narrowed down to the real issue.

The Chicago city council through its legislative committee will be found strongly advocating supervision. Its committee seems to favor a regulation of private banks as such, but later on expert evidence will show to all those now favoring that method the error of their ways. A number of states have attempted supervision of private banks and found it impracticable. Let Illinois follow in the footsteps of Wisconsin, Minnesota and other advanced republics and there can be no mistake. The short-cut plan to supervision without delay for referendum vote is by amendment of criminal code as set forth in an editorial in this issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

H. W. Parker, Merchants National, secretary of the St. Paul Association of Credit Men, addressed the Minneapolis Office Men's Association Thursday night on "The Administration of Credits as a Career."

Tells Advantages of Farming in Northwest

L. W. Hill, chairman of the Great Northern, said that 79,000 Americans carrying $110,000,000 of household furnishings and cash had gone to Canada the past five months to be permanent settlers. Joseph Chapman, chairman of the development committee of the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association, at the same meeting of northern line railroad men and development enthusiasts, outlined the advantages of farming in the Northwest and said: "I believe that if we make the American farmer realize he has the best soil and the best market in the country, we can stop this steady stream into Canada and build up our Northwestern states. It is patriotism to lend the cause of immigration to Minnesota and the Great Northwest every assistance." Mr. Chapman presided at the Thursday meeting of the conservation congress.

Provident Loan Society Reports

The Provident Loan Society, St. Paul, reported sixty-nine loans paid in October as compared with fifty in September and thirty in August. There was collected on the society's principal $3,838, as compared with $3,347 in September and $3,796 in August. Seventy-two loans in October aggregated $4,472, the largest total since May. From March 1, 1911, when the society was formed, to November 1st, $42,000 has been loaned to 800 borrowers. Outstanding loans November 1st amounted to $20,526, apportioned among 400 persons. The annual meeting will be December 26th.

St. Paul Bond Issue

For $225,000 bonds St. Paul received a bid of less than par from Merrill, Oldham & Co.,

Boston. A. B. Leach & Co., Chicago, said they would negotiate for the bonds at less than par. The sinking fund committee spurned the bid and ignored the other offer. Par must be obtained for the bonds or the city may finance the projects otherwise. The issue includes $150,000 for sewers, $50,000 for parks and $25,000 for playgrounds.

Increased Business for St. Paul

"Millions of dollars' worth of business that has heretofore been going to Minneapolis will now be brought to St. Paul," said the Dispatch, a daily newspaper, in connection with the announcement of the change of control of the Scandinavian American Bank, the merger of the National German American and the Merchants National and increase of the American National capital, with the outlook for a consolidation of the First and Second Nationals, and the Northwestern Trust.

That St. Paul has awakened financially with a start that shakes its corporate body is evident from the comments on the rapid succession of interesting details of bank changes. The Northwestern Trust stock was turned over last week to the First National and the transfer of the First to James J. Hill is expected January 1st. Mr. Hill said of the Merchants' deal that it is a splendid thing for St. Paul and that the latest merger, instead of being a lining up of forces against each other, means a strengthening of St. Paul's financial condition.

The Second National expects to have its increase of capital from $200,000 to $500,000, and surplus from $100,000 to $250,000 by January 1st. President Ben Baer said this is to take care of increasing business and that the recent changes will prove a good thing for business and the city generally. By the merger the bank expects to pick up country business and the loaning power will be greater. He continued: "St. Paul will now take the place in the financial world it should occupy. It is a mistake that these things were not done years ago. Other cities have done this with much benefit."

President W. A. Miller of the First said the merger was good and will help things all around, as well as being an economical move. He said it is good banking and something from which there should be a good deal of benefit.

Scandinavian-American

The Scandinavian-American, which distributed its stock more widely through sale of 450 shares by President C. L. Alness, has deposits of $1,432,209. Its assets are $1,725,866. C. H. Biorn, who was elected director, is a well-known attorney. J. B. Jensen, the new vice-president, is to assist President Alness with his work. A. G. Hultgren, elected assistant cashier, has been with the bank twenty-three years. Mr. Alness organized the bank twenty-six years ago. It has paid all semi-annual dividends, and earned its $100,000 surplus. The bid for stock is $220 with book value of $210. The bank plans more aggressive business.

First National

When J. J. Hill has obtained control of the remaining 25 per cent of the stock of the First National, it is expected he will retain the present official staff and that C. H. Buckley, cashier of the Second National, may be made assistant cashier of the First. This will leave E. H. Bailey president, W. A. Miller as vice-president, F. A. Neinhäuser as cashier and O. M. Nelson as assistant.

Million Dollar Trust Company

A $1,000,000 trust company in connection with the Merchants' National is said to be a new angle in prospect for the banking situation. Frederick Weyerhaeuser, a stockholder, favors such a company. "$1,000,000 capital will be small enough," said Mr. Weyerhaeuser, "but it cannot be definitely decided upon until the directors pass upon it. The recent bank sales and mergers will prove to be a big thing for St. Paul. The banks will be able to handle things in a bigger way. I expect to see one or more new banks start." When the new bank will be erected Mr. Weyerhaeuser said had not been determined. Tenants have leases until spring in the present building. Chairman G. H. Prince of the Merchants said he did not care to discuss the trust company feature and President D. S. Culver said it is a question of the future. That the capital of the Northwestern Trust Company is to be increased from $200,000 to $1,000,000 is said to be certain, or possibly more. President E. H. Bailey said the needs of the patrons of the First National and of the trust company will be taken care of and increases made as needed.

First National To Be Made Larger

Recurring to the First National, it is rumored that the bank will be made a $5,000,000 institution when the new management takes charge. That is a capital of $3,000,000 and surplus of $2,000,000. After merging the Second and First, this will mean $1,600,000 additional capital and $600,000 surplus. "After Mr. Hill has completed his plans," says the St. Paul Dispatch, "the First National will be larger than the Northwestern National. Minneapolis, which has for years been the leader in the Northwest. It will far outstrip the First National and Security National Banks."

Northwest Banking Notes

L. C. Simons, president of the Twin City State, beside announcing a proposed new building, said this week that the bank will increase its capital from $25,000 to $50,000.

H. von der Weyer is said to be slated for cashier of the New Merchants National and Harry W. Parker, cashier of the Merchants, first assistant, or possibly a new vice-president. George E. Prince, chairman of the board, and President D. S. Culver will not discuss the situation.

The Belgium State Bank, Ozaukee county, Wisconsin, has been authorized with $15,000 capital. Nic Hubing is president and F. J. Witmeyer cashier.

Fourteen Ramsey county banks have been reported as depositaries by the board of commissioners. About $900,000 funds have been placed. The Merchants National took $400,000; the First National, $100,000; the Capital, $100,000. Some of the small state banks take as small an amount as $5,000. The interest is 2 per cent on balances.

E. J. Weiser, banker, was chosen treasurer of the North Dakota Fair Association at the meeting in Fargo.

The Scandinavian-American National closed one Saturday night looking as it has for years and opened Monday with an entirely new appearance, due to a birch balcony erected at the rear around the main bank vault. Simple in construction, it changes the appearance of the interior completely. The gallery will be utilized for working purposes. The wood was milled, fitted and stained ready to erect, and when the bank closed the workmen jumped in and soon had the balcony in place.

Eugene M. Stevens, Stevens, Chapman & Co.; E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National, and Treasurer H. L. Moore, representing the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company; C. T. Jaffray, representing the Minneapolis Trust Company; and S. W. Wells, Wells, Dickey & Co., are attending the Investment Bankers Association meeting in New York City. Mr. Decker was there and the others left Chicago on the Twentieth Century special.

V. H. VanSlyke, president of the Metropolitan National, and S. H. Bezoier, assistant cashier of the Security National, were elected two of ten directors, for two years, of the Minneapolis Commercial Club, at the annual meeting Monday.

Earl Stearns, cashier of the State Bank of Ludden, S. D., is in Aberdeen for an appendicitis operation.

Bank clerks are busy just now getting ready for the Thanksgiving affray between the football teams of the Minneapolis and St. Paul clerks. The teams are not yet fully arranged, so that all former college and high school athletes in the banking chapters of the two cities are on the uneasy seat, wondering where luck will strike. The game is to be played at 10 A. M. in Nicollet ball park, Minneapolis.

Bank to Erect Skyscraper

Merchants National Bank of St. Paul will erect a new bank building on the site of the National German-American Bank. The new structure will be a skyscraper and will cost $1,600,000. The building will not be owned by the bank proper, but will be built by the stockholders of the new Merchants National. Each stockholder will be allowed to subscribe to the building fund an amount equal to 40 per cent of the stock held. It also is provided that a bond issue of $800,000 can be issued to carry the project through. These are the two banks whose merger was announced last week. For the present the Merchants National will move to the National German-American Bank and its business will be carried on there. Before the two banks combine, each will sell its present building and the stockholders will buy the German-American. In its last statement to the comptroller the National German-American put its building in at $250,000. This means that $1,350,000 will be expended in the actual construction of the new building. The salvage from the German-American building will pay for its wrecking.

Merchants National Officers

The revised list of officers for the new Merchants National after the consolidation with the National German-American is given out as follows: Chairman, George H. Prince; president, D. S. Culver; vice-presidents, F. Weyerhaeuser, R. C. Lilly, H. von der Weyer; cashier, H. W. Parker; assistants, H. Van Vleck; G. C. Zenzius, J. A. Oace, L. Roy Knauft. Mr. Weyerhaeuser is the well-known lumberman; Mr. Lilly is assistant cashier at the Merchants National; Mr. von der Weyer is cashier of the National German-American, entering the bank as messenger in 1884. H. W. Parker, cashier since 1905 of the Merchants, arrived in St. Paul in 1892. Mr. Van Vleck was formerly cashier of the First National, Mandan, N. D., and went to St. Paul in 1890. Mr. Zenzius is assistant cashier at the German-American since 1907. He entered the bank in 1883. Mr. Oace was with the Scandinavian-American thirteen years, and three years national bank examiner in the Northwest. Mr. Knauft has been with the German-American sixteen years and assistant cashier since 1907.

THE TRANSIT DEPARTMENT AND BANKING RELATIONS

rency from one place to the other. Working on this theory, it will be agreed that a bank is entitled to exchange charges, or, in other words, exchange is justifiable.

We have said that exchange charges are theoretically determined by the shipping rate of currency. As a matter of actual fact, they are determined by competition. In a one-bank town the exchange charge is likely to be larger than in a town of two or three banks unless there is an agreement in force as to a common charge. An examination of the actual charges made by country banks shows a great many illogical conditions. You will frequently find that in the same county there is one bank remitting for items at $1.00 per thousand, another in another town at ten cents per letter and still another, perhaps, at par. Probably the shipping rate for currency will be about the same for all the banks in that locality.

The only alternatives for a city bank to adopt in cases where exchange charges are unreasonable are either not to accept checks drawn on the town or bank in question or to collect them through the express companies. Neither one of these alternatives is satisfactory from the standpoint of service. You have probably all heard about cases of exorbitant exchange charges made by country banks who, perhaps, have no competition and will charge all the trade can bear. Probably the most satisfactory solution of the exchange problem comes through co-operation of banks in clearing houses. Clearing house rules regarding exchange charges for country items, if lived up to, help the member banks and also their customers. If all the banks in Baltimore, for instance, would adopt clearing house rules regarding the exchange on country items, you would find that the accounts of city customers would be received on a more profitable basis; and you would also find that your city customers would see to it that remittances were made to them from the country either in funds par in Baltimore or with the exchange added. If the country merchants, for example, were compelled either to buy drafts or remit plus exchange the charge or tax would rest where it belongs. Right there is the nub of this whole exchange problem. The man who makes the check should pay the exchange, if there is any, and not the customer that receives it or the bank that collects it. Our experience in Chicago has been that our big jobbers and manufacturers have either insisted on Chicago or New York drafts or else have allowed for the exchange when billing their customers.

In some cities the co-operative or clearing house idea is carried further. In Boston and Kansas City, for example, clearing houses are collecting the items on their territories through the clearing house. That is to say, all the banks in Boston, for instance, hand over and receive credit from the clearing house every day for their items on almost every town in New England, and one letter is sent out from this city to banks in each country town. This method saves labor and postage and also enables the city banks to obtain a low exchange cost for collection. Under this plan it is understood that if any city bank prefers to send its items direct to a town, by reason of having a correspondent there, it is at liberty to do so and thus voluntary action is maintained.

Some kind of co-operation is needful in order to properly regulate and control this matter of exchange charges. Old transit men tell us that the cost of collecting country items is becoming larger year by year, and country banks are forcing the city correspondents under stress of competition to more and more liberal terms. It is probably true that city banks are doing too much for their country correspondents in a great many cases and a very close analysis is necessary to determine that a reasonable profit is made on every account.

Transit Department and Bank Relations

As we have previously stated, the object of the transit department is to collect out-of-town items as cheaply, as safely and as quickly as possible. The officer in charge of bank relations in a city bank is not only supposed to see to it that these objects are accomplished but he can also increase his own bank's deposits if he will use his transit items as a lever for getting country bank balances. A country bank is glad to get items on their own town from city banks for two principal reasons: first, they can charge a profitable exchange on them and, second, it helps to maintain a credit balance in their settlement with competing banks. If a country bank has a volume of items drawn on their neighbor banks larger than their neighbor banks have on them, they will, of course, have a credit balance and they are in a position to dictate to the other banks how this credit balance shall be paid, whether by draft or in actual currency. It costs money to ship in currency, and on the other hand, the ruling rates of exchange may be such that it is more desirable to have currency than a draft on New York or other reserve city. Because of these two advantages, country banks as a rule are desirous of receiving items on their own town, and, as stated, a city bank can use this fact to advantage if they have the business to send. It should be worth while for every city bank to keep an analysis of their total sendings on every important town in their territory, together with exchange cost, so that they can know whether or not they are entitled to a balance. You will find that the opinion is generally held among transit men and city bankers that the cheapest way to collect items for themselves is with a comprehensive balance; that is to say, it would probably be cheaper for a bank in Baltimore, for instance, to collect all their western items through Chicago by maintaining a balance there and having the items credited at par, than to pay exchange for daily remittance without a balance. The reason for this condition is a human one. A balance looks attractive to a city bank and increases its totals.

Considering further this line of thought, we find that banks in reserve cities frequently maintain reciprocating balances; that is, a bank in Baltimore will keep an account in Chicago, collecting western business through their correspondent there, and the same bank in Chicago will maintain an account with the Baltimore institution, using the latter's services for the collection of their southern items. On the face of things, it would appear that the deposits of both institutions did not show a real increase, assuming for the sake of argument that the balances carried were of about the same amount. The arrangement is perfectly legitimate, however, and the deposits should be counted as reserve for both banks, if there is a basis of service at each end; otherwise not.

Country bank business, generally speaking, is usually not as profitable as city business. Country banks are asking for more and more and the competition between banks in the same city and between different cities is very keen. No country bank's account is worth anything to a city bank unless it is a profitable one, even though the deposits of the city bank may be swelled by the balance carried. Every city bank should see to it that every country bank account is carried on a profitable basis, and I have yet to hear of a case where a country banker would not listen to argument or reason if a careful and scientific analysis of his account showed it to be losing money. A scientific profit and loss analysis is necessary and desirable for every city bank handling out-of-town accounts. A city bank with such an analysis department that gives its customers painstaking, careful service and that attends to the special demands of its country banker friends, as well as paying their drafts and receiving their deposits, should be able to increase its bank's business in a natural, satisfactory way and should show a reasonable profit when the figures are cast up.

NOT TO INCREASE CAPITAL STOCK

A rumor to the effect that the State Bank of Chicago contemplated increasing its capital stock from a million and a half to two millions has been denied by the officials of that institution. Another report which has been gaining currency was that the $500,000 of new stock would be sold at $200 per share. The directors of the bank take pride in the fact that its surplus has not been acquired through selling stock at a premium.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, Nov. 18th.—The pride of the orchard wealth of the Spokane country is on display this week at the fifth National Apple show, the largest in history. A total of 2,000 exhibitors are displaying 3,250,000 apples, representative of the greatest crop ever harvested, estimates placing the Pacific Northwest yield this year at more than 12,000 carloads. Sixteen carload displays of 630 boxes each, together with ten-box, five-box, one-box, and plate displays occupy a total floor space of 25,000 square feet.

The show was formally opened November 11th by Governor Marion E. Hay of Washington and Robert E. Strahorn, president of the exposition. Madame Johanna Gadske, world-famous soprano, sang at the opening ceremony, which was participated in by city officials and trustees of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce.

Improvements for Business Block

Improvements on a large scale will be made on a half block of property in the heart of the Spokane business district as the result of the taking of a 99-year lease on what is known as the Merriam site, by the Trustees Company of Spokane. The property is located at the southwest corner of First avenue and Howard streets, and is said to be worth approximately $500,000. Harry A. Flood, manager of the Trustees Company, which already owns five buildings in this city, states that it has not been decided as to the nature of the building or buildings to be erected on the ground. The site now contains several one-story buildings, which will be removed in the near future. The lease calls for development of the property in a substantial manner.

Portland to Have New Hotel

Wallace, Idaho, and Moscow, Idaho, capitalists, well known in Spokane and the surrounding country, and prominent stockholders in the Exchange National and the Fidelity National Banks of this city, plan to build a 14-story hotel in Portland, Ore., in the near future. Those who are considering the project are Harry L. Day of Wallace; his brothers, Jerome H. Day of Moscow and Eugene Day of Wallace, and his brother-in-law, Edward Boyce of Portland, all owners in the Hercules mine at Burke, Idaho. They own the old Portland hotel at present, having secured possession about two years ago. The hostelry occupies a valuable site in the business section of the city. It is proposed to raze the Portland hotel to make room for the new one. Harry L. Day is one of the largest stockholders of the Exchange National Bank and Jerome H. Day is a stockholder of the Fidelity National Bank.

New Railroad

Farmers living near Colfax, Wash., and business men of that city have started a movement to build a railroad between two Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation company lines. The two lines proposed to be connected are thirty miles apart, one being the main line between Colfax and Endicott, the other a line on the Snake River between Lewiston and Riparia. The country affected is a rich grain-producing district.

Spokane Postal Savings Banks

Figures tabulated at the Spokane postoffice November 9th by Arthur G. Clouser, cashier of the postal savings bank department, show that Spokane people have $53,535 on deposit. Of this amount but little was received by the branch postal savings banks in the suburbs.

Plan To Clear Cut-over Timber Lands

Action favoring a plan to secure clearing of cut-over timber lands by creating bonding districts and assessing the cost of improvements to land benefited, was taken at the annual convention of the Inland Empire Federation of Commercial Clubs in Spokane, November 11th. The convention voted to urge the next Washington Legislature to enact a law permitting the bonding system. About 1,000,000 acres of logged-off land in eastern Washington are affected. The federation elected the following officers: P. R. Parks, Colville, Wash., president; William Lippert, Colfax; Dr. E. White, Pasco, and I. M. Brown, Walla Walla, vice-presidents; H. C. Wuerth, Spokane, secretary, and O. E. Moss, Fairfield, Wash., treasurer.

Among out-of-town bankers who were in Spokane this week were: H. G. Burns, cashier Exchange Bank, Reardon, Wash.; B. W. Hughes, cashier First National Bank, Medical Lake, Wash.; R. A. Bigelow, cashier Colfax State Bank, Colfax, Wash., and F. D. Rice, assistant cashier First National, Brewster, Wash.

WILL SELL IRRIGATION BONDS

Klamath Falls, Ore.—The election in the Bonanza Irrigation District resulted in 50 votes for and 11 against the bond issue of $785,000. Under the rules of the U. S. Reclamation Service, 95 per cent of the private lands in any project must be subscribed before the work will be authorized. This has been the reason that it has been so difficult to start any project where the majority of land is held in private ownership. It is nearly impossible to secure the necessary subscriptions. As this proposed project is to be built under the state law and the bonds sold for the construction, the failure of so large a percentage to vote in favor of the issue of bonds will probably not interfere with their issue. It is proposed to begin work next spring, if the bonds are sold.

NYE & ORMSBY BANK DECISION

Carson, Nevada.—Judge Langan has handed down a decision holding that the Nye Ormsby County Bank is responsible for money deposited by County Treasurer Patterson of Ormsby county, this deposit being declared a preferred claim. Patterson is receiver of the bank. The sum includes $19,477.61 of county money and $3,358.75 of city money.

TO DISCUSS PROBLEMS OF RURAL SCHOOLS

At the annual meeting of the Southwestern Teachers Association to be held in Evansville, Ind., November 29th and 30th, P. P. Claxton, United States commissioner on education, will discuss some of the problems of rural schools. It is expected that from 1,200 to 1,500 teachers will attend the convention.

Des Moines, November 20th.—President Shade of the Iowa Bankers Association shortly will name the legislation committee for the association, so he has written Secretary P. W. Hall. The committee then will be summoned to meet in Des Moines, at which time a program will be formulated along the line of securing changes in the laws of the state which will prove of benefit to the bankers and which the latter believe they are entitled to enjoy. The law affecting bank taxation is one that will be discussed, and doubtless there will be some discussion relative to state supervision of private banks. The bankers probably will be a unit in backing a "Blue-Sky" law similar to that in effect in Kansas. In this connection it has been announced that J. N. Dolley, bank commissioner of Kansas, will speak to the Des Moines Bankers Club at the December meeting. He will discuss this statute, in which there is much interest in Iowa and which it is believed will be taken up favorably when the legislature meets.

Telephone Girl Thwarts Attempted Robbery

Secretary Hall believes that a medal should be awarded the night telephone girl at Alburnett. This young lady's attention was attracted when she heard yeggs dynamiting the vault in the Alburnett Savings one night recently. Although her telephone exchange board was in full view of the bank, she began industriously to call up the people of the city, only to find that the robbers had cut practically all of the wires. She managed, however, to get a connection with the cashier of the bank, who thought she was mistaken and told her so. Nevertheless the brave girl aroused the police at Cedar Rapids. She also awakened a farmer at the edge of the town, who drove to the home of the town marshal and got him up. By this time, the robbers became aware of the presence of the girl. One of them went up to her room, pointed a gun at her head and forced her to go to bed. But her mission was successful in driving away the yeggs, for they became suspicious and fled on a handcar just as two automobile loads of officers from Cedar Rapids appeared. Later one of the men, it is thought, was arrested at Cedar Rapids.

Forgers at Work

Letters admonishing the bankers of Iowa to be on the lookout for bogus bank drafts have been sent out by Secretary Hall from the headquarters of the I. B. A. in this city. The letter states that bank drafts bearing the names of the First National of Brooklyn, Iowa, and the Bank of Darlington, (Mo.) have been stolen from lithograph houses in this city. The warning also contains reference to one Howard Lewis alias Carl Terkfelt, who it appears has been forging numerous checks for $14.70 and passing them upon merchants in various cities of Iowa. Counter checks of the First National at Mason City and the Des Moines National have been used. This fellow's method is to go into a store, purchase a small amount of goods, tender a check for $14.70, walk off with the change and leave the goods to be called for later. Secretary Hall states that he is notified of a forgery on an average of one a day. He warns bankers to be on their guard at all times.

Further Delay in Payment for Railway

Former Secretary of the Treasury Shaw has scored again in securing the "steenth" delay in the payment of the purchase price of the Atlantic North and South Railway. A syndicate of which he is representative bought the road at receivers' sale for $400,000 and paid down a few thousand dollars. But the syndicate has failed to come across with the remainder. Several attempts of creditors to get the deal closed up have been balked and finally the case went to the supreme court. Mr. Shaw appeared in Des Moines and succeeded in getting still another thirty-day extension on the showing that the Balkan war has prevented the foreign capitalists back of him from paying the money. He stated, however, that a bank at Toronto has promised to back him. Ed S. Harlan, vice-president of the Iowa Trust and Savings at Atlantic, and receiver for the company, was an interested listener when the case was argued before the supreme court here.

Makes Donation For Hospital

Joseph Sartori, a pioneer resident of Cedar Falls, and father of President Sartori of the Security Trust and Savings at Los Angeles, has donated $25,000 for a hospital to be erected in Cedar Falls and to be known as the Theresa Sartori Hospital. The son will give $1,000 a year to the maintenance of the institution. The elder Sartori is very ill and his son has been at the bedside. Needless to say the people of Cedar Rapids are overjoyed at the bequest.

Black-hander Confesses

C. E. Osborne, arrested at West Liberty for alleged writing of black-hand letters, has confessed, according to stories which have reached Des Moines. Osborne blames a Muscatine loan shark for his downfall. He asserts that he got into this fellow's clutches and that in his effort to get out he was forced to resort to illegal means to secure funds. He had threatened several parties with violence if they did not place certain specified amounts of money at designated places.

Keokuk Bank To Have New Building

The Security State at Keokuk has begun work on a new building, which it is claimed will be one of the handsomest in Iowa when it is completed. The bank has taken over two store rooms which will be thrown into one and completely made over. The front will be of white tile of semi-classic design, and modern and attractive in every way.

Plan to Improve State Organizations

Important plans for the mutual improvement of the various state organizations were discussed at a meeting of the secretaries of the associations of Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Nebraska and Wisconsin held at Minneapolis last week. Secretary Frost of Minnesota called the meeting and Secretary Hall of Iowa attended as representative of this state. He reports a satisfactory session.

Feel No Alarm at Result of Election

Many Iowa bankers have been giving out interviews to the newspapers relative to the effect the election of Wilson will have upon the financial situation. These have been uniformly of an optimistic tone. Iowa bankers feel that conditions in the Middle West are too stable to be disturbed by administration changes, particularly in view of the bumper crops this season. It is thought that the democrats may attempt some so-called progressive legislation, but that this will not be of an alarming or radical nature.

Supreme Court Decides Against "Ultra Vires" Doctrine

That a contractor who does work for a city or county has a right to his pay and cannot be beaten out of it by claims that contracts were made without authority, was held by the supreme court this morning in a case entitled First National Bank of Red Oaks vs. The City of Emmetsburg. The amount involved is not large but the case establishes a point in law upon which courts in the state have been holding at variance for several years. Shepherd and Hanrahan of Des Moines did a sewer job for the city of Emmetsburg and after completing the work asked for certificates in payment. These certificates had been promised to the Red Oak Bank as security and the bank brought the suit to recover. The point was raised that, while the city of Emmetsburg had had the work, and enjoyed the use of it, the contract originally had been made by the city fathers without authority. Judge Coyle of the Palo Alto Court sustained the contention of the city of Emmetsburg and an appeal was taken. This is the first time the question of great importance to contractors, has been before the supreme court. In brief, the higher court decides that the doctrine of "ultra vires" does not hold in such cases.

Iowa Banking Notes

Orris Mosher, a banker at Walnut, was candidate for congress from the Ninth Iowa district on the democratic ticket. Unfortunately for him, this was one of the few Iowa districts that did not go democratic.

A new bank at Mineola, to be known as the Mineola State, has filed articles with the secretary of state. It gives its capital stock as $25,000.

An over-enthusiastic furnace in the Valley National Building, Des Moines, resulted in a call for the fire department, but no damage was done.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

A hint as to why the bank clearings of Sioux City this year have been running from 15 to 25% above those of a year ago, is contained in an announcement of what has been done in the way of building in the first ten months of 1912. While it is to be noted that last year was a poor business year generally and that there is a normal growth in business to add to the contrast, together with the admission of one more bank into the clearing house, it is asserted that the large amount of building, almost twice as much as last year, has been an added material factor. Building permits by the city engineer issued up to November 1st amounted to $3,044,767, as compared with $1,358,985 for the same period of 1911. There has been a phenomenal amount of residence building, but there still are far from being enough houses in town to supply the demand, and real estate men assert there is good money to be made by anyone who is willing to go extensively into the landlord business in Sioux City. Local people generally will not build to rent, for the reason, apparently, that once upon a time Sioux City had a boom and it broke. That was twenty-five years ago and more, and the city has changed in spirit and in fact since then, but the old bugaboo continues to throw a fright into some. Disastrous fires have also contributed not a little to the building record, for they have forced the construction of some handsome and costly structures to replace old buildings that everybody but the owners was willing to see go up in smoke. The fire losses this year, however, have been excessively great, and there is much alarm felt on that account. The total added value to the city obviously is not as great as the building record would seem to indicate.

Sioux Falls (S. D.) and Garretson (Minn.) banks will not be large losers by reason of the frauds perpetrated by Ed. Grundvald and Fred Knochenmus, professional swindlers who operated in that territory long enough to get cash on paper to the value of $1,860 and an automobile valued at $1,600. A certain business man of Sioux Falls, however, whose name is being kept under cover, will have to put up $1,500, the amount of a draft which he endorsed before it was honored by his bank.

The swindlers, when last heard from, were at Warren, Minn., and hitting the high places in leaving their pursuers behind them. They bargained with a Sioux Falls automobile dealer for a car and tendered a draft in payment. They wanted to drive the machine away with them, but the seller insisted on sending along a chauffeur to make certain of the genuineness of the draft before giving up the car. He was to take them to Hardwick, Minn., to interview officers of the bank from which the draft purported to come. At Warren they stopped for the night, and the swindlers in the night arose and endeavored to leave with the car. The chauffeur, however, had locked the magneto and retained the key, so the pair resumed their journey afoot.

The departure of more than 100 Greeks from Sioux City for the front has cut into the deposits of the local postal savings bank quite seriously, for the funds of foreigners make up the bulk of the money left with Uncle Samuel. The closing of large building operations also has worked to remove various foreign laborers from the city, taking their savings with them.

The fortieth anniversary of the founding of the First National Bank of Yankton, S. D., will be celebrated at Yankton on November 25th, with a banquet to which will be invited all the citizens of the town who have been residents there for forty years or more. F. L. Van Tassel, president of the bank, is himself one of the pioneers.

Peter McGinnis died at Montrose, S. D., lately. Other people have died also, but McGinnis was supposed to be wealthy, and all the folks were curious to know just how much he left. They have been disappointed, for whatever he left was in a buried sock or some other "safe" repository other than a bank, and all their searching has been in vain.

What will be known as the Martin State Bank has been organized at Martin, S. D., and will soon open for business. The officers are: President, C. S. Allen; vice-president, M. M. Cummins; cashier, T. C. Torrison. The capital stock is $10,000.

Clyde Wilcox, formerly president of the Farmers & Merchants State Bank, of Bushnell, S. D., after spending the last two years in California, has returned to South Dakota and accepted the cashiership of the Platte State Bank, at Platte. He has purchased an interest in the institution.

CHICAGO'S VISTORS

Among those who called on Chicago bankers the past week was A. H. Rankin, cashier Sangamon Loan and Trust Company, Springfield, Ill.; C. F. Kuehnle, vice-president of the Bank of Denison (Ia.), called Saturday; C. H. McCormick, assistant cashier of the First National of San Francisco, spent several days in Chicago this week in the interests of his bank; A. G. Smith, president of the City National of Clinton, Ia., was here Monday; B. M. Mead, cashier of the City Trust and Savings of Peoria, visited Chicago Saturday.

GEORGE B. CALDWELL AT INVESTMENT BANKERS CONVENTION

The constructive work will cover a digest of laws of the various states governing the investment of savings banks, trust companies and trust funds, a list of the states and a copy of the statute governing public utility commissions; also a list of the states and copy of statute exempting municipals or other securities from taxation. This department shall assist in drafting any new laws or securing the passage of the same that are approved by the legislative committee.

"Get-rich-quick" Propositions

Every progressive move in history, to purify a condition has entertained first, a breaking down of the bad features that have existed, and second, a building up or a substitution of the good for the bad. We have been widely advertised as organized to fight "get-rich-quick" schemes. While this is a worthy object, it is, however, incidental to the field of usefulness we hope to occupy. Our bureau of investigation cannot be burdened with a corps of engineers, accountants and lawyers scouring the country seeking whom they may devour, simply because their standard of integrity does not equal ours,—nor have we funds at fifty dollars per year a member to carry on such a work. We are not expecting to publish a blacklist, nor to act in an advisory capacity on questions as to what the investor should or should not buy. No association of investment bankers would attempt so large a responsibility. The individual houses must continue to do this work. The farthest we can go is to first keep our membership of the highest character and our own skirts clean, and give such moral and active support to rooting out of the field the "get-rich-quick" schemes as our means of investigation may warrant. To accomplish this object, I recommend the use of the Pinkerton Detective Agency and co-operation with the United States Government officials and the press whenever a case comes to our attention that demands it.

Again, it should not be overlooked in this connection that many factors have contributed their share to making fraudulent promotion so general and so profitable as to become almost a national disgrace. Among them are the complication and diversity of laws of each of our forty-nine commonwealths; the laxity of our prosecuting authorities; the difficulty of proving "intent to defraud" under the federal statutes; the absence of any federal bureau of registration, or responsibility of state officials after a charter is issued, providing some supervision over security issues; and, the acceptance by many newspapers and some magazines of fraudulent and misleading advertisements. There is no doubt but that an awakening of the public conscience is bearing fruit, for already nine states have placed a "prospectus" law on their statute books, making false representations that effect stock or bond sales a misdemeanor, and two other states have a "Blue Sky Law," compelling corporations to register and submit a financial statement before they can sell their securities. These are strong indications of aroused public sentiment, which this association will analyze and aid, and in that way do for a time its most effective work.

If I read the sentiment of "the market" and the times, it is that there is an ever-increasing demand for broader information on all matters of finance. Investors are becoming less haphazard, more vigorous and self-reliant in the selection of their investments. Knowledge spells conservatism—conservatism in investment affairs is a national asset, for the wealth of the nation is increased by every wise investment and impaired by every foolish one.

Now that the sentiment which the press has created, likewise many of our members acting alone, is about to be crystallized and solidified into a permanent organization, of which we are the organized exponent, I shall hope by our united efforts in time to enhance greatly the value of all good American securities, both at home and abroad. This will, in my judgment, not only draw members of this association closer together—those within the fold would be in greater sympathy because each year they could see the association exerting a powerful influence for their benefit, while those without the fold would have before them an inspiration to do a legitimate business and become members, or suffer the dangers of exposure.

In this way, bond dealing, which has become a specialized form of banking, and a profession, will compare well ethically with those professions which demand a diploma from the aspirant for admission into the charmed circle of practitioners.

GEORGE WOODRUFF BEFORE CONSERVATION CONGRESS

original principal of the loan, and he would furthermore have saved all renewal commissions and expenses. Each of the semi-annual payments would be sufficiently small to enable the average farmer to borrow the amount necessary from his local banker if he should be temporarily out of funds when the payment came due; and furthermore, as the amount of each semi-annual payment would in no case exceed 2% of the value of the land, the farmer should practically always be able to make the payments out of the proceeds of the land itself. On any interest paying date, the farmer would be allowed to make partial payments of any amount or to pay off the entire amount due on his loan. Of course, partial payments would reduce the amount of the principal still due and consequently a smaller part of the semi-annual payments that follow would be required for interest and a larger part would be applied on the principal, so that the loan would be paid off before the expiration of the thirty years, thus saving additional money for the farmer. So much for the first point, that of amortization.

Now let us consider the second point, that of the restrictions around the bonds. The mortgage bank would obtain the capital to finance the farmer by the issue of its bonds, as is done by modern mortgage organizations throughout Europe. These bonds should pay around 5% interest, should be the direct obligation of the mortgage bank, and should be secured by the deposit of mortgages as collateral with a trustee to an amount in excess of the bonds outstanding. These bonds would then furnish for the American investor a new type of investment, combining the underlying security of the farm mortgage, the full liability of a bank under state or national supervision, and the advantage of a comparatively broad market. The restrictions which should be compulsory upon the bank should be those that have been worked out by the world's most successful mortgage banks, among which may be suggested the following:

(a) Each mortgage put up as collateral for bonds shall be a first and valid lien upon certain specified forms of real estate (as, for instance, farms and dwelling houses) located within the particular state or states the mortgage bank is organized to serve, which real estate shall be such as is available for the production of income.

(b) Each such mortgage shall be a first and valid lien upon the whole and undivided fee and upon no lesser estate, and the appraised value of the real estate securing any such mortgage shall be at least double the amount of the indebtedness secured thereby.

(c) Each such mortgage shall be such as is given to secure a principal indebtedness not exceeding in amount fifteen (15%) per cent of the capital and surplus of the bank. (This guarantees to the holders of the bonds that the mortgages held as collateral are diversified and of such sizes as to be readily salable.)

(d) All such mortgages upon real estate located in any one county shall not exceed in principal amount twenty (20%) per cent of the principal amount of all mortgages owned or pledged by the bank. (This guarantees to the holders of the bonds that the mortgages held as collateral will never be upon property located in any single district.)

(e) All such mortgages upon buildings in course of construction shall not exceed in principal amount ten (10%) per cent of the principal amount of all mortgages owned or pledged by the bank.

(f) All such mortgages on farm lands shall contain provisions for proper soil conservation. (This is a very necessary provision when loans are made for a long term of years.)

(g) All such mortgages shall contain provisions for annual or semiannual amortization payments. (This guarantees to the holders of the bonds that the security behind each mortgage held as collateral will be constantly growing larger.)

(h) The appraised value of the real estate securing any such mortgage shall not exceed the selling value of the same, and the appraised value shall be determined by two independent appraisals and shall be approved by the executive committee of the bank.

(i) The bank shall acquire no note secured by mortgage on any real estate in which any officer or director of the bank is interested either directly or indirectly.

(j) The proceeds of any loans made upon buildings in course of construction shall be retained by the bank and paid out only upon construction vouchers countersigned by a duly authorized agent of the bank.

(k) The bank shall acquire no real estate except to protect its interests in case any of the mortgages owned by it are foreclosed and the property therein described sold to pay the indebtedness secured thereby. All real estate so acquired shall be promptly sold.

(l) The aggregate amount of the principal of all bonds issued and outstanding at any one time shall not exceed fifteen times the amount of the capital and surplus of the bank.

Of course, the above suggested amortization table and the above suggested restrictions, together with the interest rate and the term of the loan, would vary in different localities and under differing conditions, but the general principles should remain the same. The profits to be earned by the mortgage bank should be satisfactory, owing to the fact that it could be so organized as to limit overhead expense to a comparatively small amount; and in addition to the part of the annuity which is paid to the bank to cover its expense and profits, it would make a considerable gain from the difference in the rate of interest which would be paid to it by the borrower and the rate of interest which it would pay on its bonds to the investor.

In America, we have about arrived at the point where the old wasteful pioneer days are to be supplanted by modern, efficient, intensive effort, and the farm mortgage field is one of the first that should feel the effects of reform.

SPEAKS TO RAILROAD MEN

David R. Forgan, president of the National City Bank, spoke at a dinner of the American Railway Guild at the Blackstone Hotel on Tuesday night. Mr. Forgan spoke briefly on currency reform. In speaking of credits of railroads he said:

"The credits of your railroads are vital to your properties, and by keeping your credits up you keep up your properties."

CONTINENTAL TRUST OF DENVER NOW REORGANIZED

Reorganization of the Continental Trust Company of Denver has been completed, William E. Hughes being elected to the presidency of that institution. Resignations of John W. Springer as president and L. M. Beck as treasurer were accepted. There will be no change in the other officers, which are as follows:

Allan F. Ayers, vice-president and secretary; J. Spencer, vice-president and trust officer; Paul B. Gaylord, vice-president; E. S. Harper, assistant treasurer; Ernest R. Stadler, assistant trust officer.

Although Mr. Springer is retiring from the presidency of the trust company, he still retains an interest in its affairs, being one of the largest stockholders.

Colonel Hughes was in Denver last week completing the transaction by which he purchased the controlling interest in the company from Mr. Springer, and left last Saturday for St. Louis, where he will remain, probably, until after the holidays. During his absence the general management of the affairs of the bank will devolve upon Mr. Ayers.

PROMINENT KENTUCKY BANKER RESIGNS

Some surprise was occasioned by an announcement recently made in Louisville financial circles to the effect that Arthur Y. Ford, for several years vice-president of the Columbia Trust Company and until recently cashier of the new Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company, had tendered his resignation to the executive committee and that the same had been accepted. It is said that Mr. Ford expects to accept a position with the Kentucky Wagon Manufacturing Company. Until a successor is appointed, J. F. Speed, the treasurer, likely will perform the duties of both offices.

GOOD ROADS ENTHUSIAST

R. R. Wallace, cashier of the First National at Hamilton, Ill., is a good roads enthusiast; he reports that the people on the west side of Hancock County are taking a lively interest in the matter of road improvement. They have built a boulevard along the new water level, from Hamilton to Nauvoo, Nauvoo being one of the historic towns of Illinois, with a population of 1,200. The building of a dam across the Mississippi River at Hamilton will raise the water in the river something like thirty-five feet at Hamilton and from twenty-five to thirty feet at Nauvoo, creating practically a still-water lake from Hamilton north as far as Burlington, Iowa. The water of this lake will overflow considerable of the old road up the river, and the builders of the improvement thought they were merely bound to replace that road, but instead of building a poor road such as the people have been using for years, they have gone to the other extreme and are building the best possible road, a magnificent boulevard along the new water level. This example of good road building has had the effect of stimulating interest in the matter of road improvement generally throughout this section of Illinois. This is just what the good roads advocates claim will come about if the principal roads in the different counties are improved by state and county aid and afterwards supported by the state; that it will stimulate the inhabitants to drag and improve the roads that run close to their own homes, or as Editor Miller of Ohio would say, "the roads which the farmer owns." What a magnificent opportunity the people of Peoria county possess to develop a stretch of boulevard along the Illinois River in front of their city. At present this road for a considerable period of the year is an impassable mudhole. It would seem that Statesman Fitch and Editors Baldwin and Pindell, and other public-spirited citizens of Peoria could bring about the accomplishment of this enterprise if they set to it unitedly and aroused the public spirit of the people of Peoria and of Peoria county.

DECEASE OF ZANESVILLE, OHIO, BANKER

Zanesville, Ohio, Nov. 18th.—A few hours after he told a business associate that he expected to be at his desk in a few days, Conrad Stolzenbach, aged 76, millionaire president of the First National Bank, vice-president of the National Biscuit Company of New York, and a director in a number of local institutions, died suddenly of inflammation of the liver.

DETROIT BANKS TO MERGE

Rumor has it that the Wayne Savings and Home Savings Banks of Detroit will merge their interests in the near future; that the new institution will have a capital of two millions and surplus of a like amount. The Wayne Savings opened for business in 1872 with a capital of $100,000. Its present capital is a million and it has a surplus of $1,300,000. The Home Savings was organized in 1889. It now has a capital of $750,000 with surplus of a like amount. It is planned to increase the capital to a million, so that both banks may enter the combination on an equal footing. It is reported as probable that President Charles F. Collins of the Wayne Savings will be the head of the new bank and that Julius H. Haass, president of the Home Savings, will be the vice-president.

BANKER'S DAUGHTER SINGS AT THE LA SALLE

Mrs. Hannah Butler sang operatic selections from Wagner at the German Day meeting of the members of the Dorothy Meadows Drama Circle, at the LaSalle Hotel, Friday afternoon. Mrs. Butler is a daughter of Director Samuelson of the State Bank of Orien, Ill.

ILLINOIS HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION TO MEET

Eugene Funk of the National Corn Growers Association, Bloomington, Ill., a director of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, announces a meeting of the officers and directors of the latter organization to be held in Bloomington, Saturday afternoon and evening, November 30th. These gentlemen have been invited to come to Bloomington to meet the local McLean county road enthusiasts. It seems that some six miles of hard roads have been constructed in McLean County recently and much improvement of the wagon roads has been brought about as a result of systematic dragging. Inspection of these roads is to be made, if the weather permits.

W. A. BULLARD DEAD

Willard A. Bullard, a banker and capitalist, died this week in Cambridge, Mass. Mr. Bullard was president of the Harvard Trust Company, Riverdale Cotton Mills and Westpoint Manufacturing Company. He was a director of the Chattahoochee Valley Railroad of Georgia and of several southern cotton mills.

PRESIDENT OF AMERICAN BANKERS ASSOCIATION ENDORSES EDUCA- TIONAL PLAN OF A. I. B.

C. H. Huttig, president of the American Bankers Association, appreciates the value of the educational work which is being done by the American Institute of Banking, and in writing about it to B. W. Moser, president of the Institute, says:

"I am pleased to see that the Institute Section through its Correspondence Chapter is extending its educational work outside of city chapter classes. Young bankers in the country are as ambitious as anybody else to improve their professional knowledge and efficiency, and since the utility of correspondence instruction has been demonstrated by leading universities, I see no reason why the Correspondence Chapter, furnishing as it does the same facilities as are furnished to study classes in cities, should not have a membership of thousands instead of hundreds. Possibly the low price of $10 at which each of the two parts of the study course is supplied to members of the American Bankers Association may in the minds of some persons reflect upon the character of the work. You might therefore explain that such nominal tuition fees are made possible only by the fact that the association has deemed it wise to assist the Institute financially. I trust that you will obtain at least one student in every institution throughout the country."

Through Institute work and by means of the Institute study courses to which Mr. Huttig refers, bank men are enabled to learn in a comparatively short time what it would take years to learn by experience, and it is confidently predicted that Mr. Huttig's letter of endorsement will influence many bankers and bank men throughout the country to take advantage of the educational opportunities offered by the American Institute of Banking.

CONSERVATION CONGRESS

D. C. Armstrong, president of the state bankers' association, presided at the Wednesday session of the conservation congress in the Minneapolis armory. Arthur Reynolds of Des Moines, vice-president of the A. B. A., talked on "How to Avoid a Money Trust." Chairman G. F. Orde of the bankers' reception committee; W. F. McLane, Hennepin County Savings; J. S. Pomeroy, Security National; H. A. Scriver, St. Anthony Falls; J. A. Latta, Northwestern National, and F. A. Gross, German-American, escorted Mr. Reynolds through the land show. George Woodruff, president of the Joliet First National, was a speaker, and Professor W. A. Scott, department of commerce, University of Wisconsin; also Joseph Chapman. J. W. Wheeler, Capital National, chairman of the agricultural committee for the bankers, presided at the afternoon session.

COMPLAINS OF MILEAGE SYSTEM

Comrade James B. Perry, president of the Bank of McHenry, Ill., was a Chicago visitor Wednesday. Mr. Perry, while having had a successful career as a private banker since the organization of the bank in 1888, is not opposed to supervision and examination, and in all probability the bank some day will be incorporated. In speaking of the situation in McHenry county he calls attention to the fact that they have seventeen state and private banks in the county, and under the present state law, which provides for the payment of examiners on a mileage fee basis, it is manifestly unfair to some of the smaller banks that they be required to comply with this system. The average distance from Springfield to each of these banks is 240 miles. The law allows the examiner 8 cents a mile to and from Springfield, which amounts to $38.40 mileage for each bank or $652.80 for all the banks in McHenry county. In addition to this the examiner is allowed a fee of $10 per day for each bank or a total of $170. This added to the mileage fee makes a total cost of $822.80 for the examination of the seventeen banks of the county. At the present time it is understood that the bank examiner who makes the McHenry county state bank examinations lives in or near Chicago, and the total expense of making the round trip from his place of residence to any one of the banks of McHenry county is $10.

It long has been the opinion of many Illinois bankers, particularly those connected with the state association, that there should be some revision of the law in respect to the hardships which it works on the smaller state banks for excessive examination expenses, and undoubtedly the members of the legislature, when this subject is before them this winter, will give the item due consideration.

Mr. Perry, immediately after the war, when his service in a New Hampshire regiment had been finished, came to McHenry county because of other relatives who had preceded him. Shortly after locating there he became principal of the schools and later entered the general mercantile business. He later entered the banking business because of the needs of the community. At that time there was no agitation about examination, supervision or incorporation. His bank honestly endeavored to serve the community faithfully and efficiently, and because of advancing years, he and his partner now are considering the advisability of incorporation. There are scores of men who, like Mr. Perry, have rendered their communities a distinct public service in conducting their private banks, but the present agitation does not always take this into consideration and give credit where credit is due.

Los Angeles

The First National of Glendale is having plans prepared for its new bank building to be erected at corner of Broadway and Grand boulevard. The estimated cost is $10,000.

For the first time in the history of Los Angeles the bank clearings for a single month have crossed the $100,000,000 mark. October's clearings were no less than $106,707,043.89—practically $7,043,734 greater than in any previous month. The nearest approach to this figure was in May this year, when the clearings totaled $99,653,310. The increase in the volume of the clearings last month over the same month in 1911 amounted to a little more than $27,118,475, and the increase as against the same month in 1910 was a little in excess of $37,655,220.35. For the ten months of this year ending with October the clearings aggregated $950,717,123, and everything promises that the total for the year will be about $1,250,000,000. The increase last month over September this year totaled $19,677,763. October has often been considered a comparatively dull month in business circles, but evidently the precedent does not hold good this year.

The California Savings Bank has taken over the unexpired lease of the German-American Savings Bank in the Hibernia building. Possession will be given in March, 1913, when the German-American will remove to the new Union Oil building.

Articles of incorporation have been filed for the East San Diego State Bank, to be located in Teralta. The incorporators have placed the capital stock at $50,000, of which $25,000 has been subscribed. The incorporators are: G. Aubrey Davidson, R. D. Spicer, P. Morse, P. V. Morgan, Robt. E. Brier, H. M. Holleman, and M. E. Sargent.

Martin Abernathy, formerly of Los Angeles, has been elected a director in the First National Bank of Claremont. Mr. Abernathy has extensive banking interests in the Middle West, and retired from active business some years ago. He has purchased a substantial interest in the Claremont institution.

ORGANIZE FELLOWSHIP CLUB

A large number of men associated with the Harris Trust and Savings Bank have organized a Fellowship Club, which has for its purpose social intercourse between the men of different departments in the bank. The first banquet and entertainment of the season will be given on November 20th at the University Club of Chicago.

BANK FOR DIVERNON, ILL.

Application to organize has been received for the First National of Divernon, Ill. Capital $25,000. This bank is to succeed the Divernon Bank, Divernon, Ill.

CLEVELAND CHAPTER

By C. W. STANSBURY

Cleveland Chapter is proud of the fact that so far we have added 179 new members to our list. This is nearly 100 per cent increase and we have not stopped growing yet.

We are just completing arrangements for a minstrel show to be held by the Chapter in February or March next. The institute throughout the country has heard much about our last minstrel show, and we hope to make our next still more successful.

We have organized our law class for the coming year to study "Banking and Finance" under the able leadership of Attorney H. Melvin Roberts. The membership in this class was limited to fifty, but on November 12th, at its organization, the attendance was eighty-one. This class meets every Tuesday night at 6:45 in the Chapter rooms.

BIG MILWAUKEE LOAN

The largest loan ever recorded in Milwaukee's financial history was that made to the Continental and Commercial Bank of Chicago this week by the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company. The $6,000,000 loan at 4.45 per cent carrying for from twelve to fifteen years is only one of several large investments of the Milwaukee Company in Chicago and represents one-half of the $12,000,000 investment of the Continental and Commercial's new twenty-one-story building. The loan is made with the option of retirement of the principal at the rate of $100,000 a year, or in multiples thereof. The Continental and Commercial Safe Deposit Company will own and operate the building. The capital stock will be issued by it and all of the shares will be owned by the Continental and Commercial National Bank and carried in its investment account.

THE TRIBUNE at this writing shows 702 favoring and 127 opposed to supervision, out of a total of 829. Mr. Harris had 988 direct yes or no card replies, in addition to about 100 letters; 606 of these cards were from organized bankers, all but 25 of whom favored supervision, and represented 62% of the organized members of the association. Privates to the number of 382 replied by card, representing 67% of the private banker members of the association; 165, or 43% of these favored supervision. The 988 card votes, exclusive of letters, show 746 for supervision and 242 against, so that the supervision idea is growing, according to the Tribune's poll.

READERS in Illinois will remember that at Peoria only 225 voted against supervision, so that 225 out of 1685 members put the association on record as opposed to supervision. In truth, the members of the association in Illinois have been misrepresented in times past by their executive council, which, like the Peoria convention, was packed to oppose supervision.

BANKING LAW JOURNAL, New York. has published a "Banking Law Digest—January, 1900, to July, 1912." Edited by John Edson Brady, member of the New York bar.

THIS is made up from the digest published monthly in the Journal, and with it, readers can be up to date, as reference will be made to it in the Journal hereafter. Three dollars per copy.

FLOYD SEYBOLT of Lincoln, Neb., is likely to get a bank examinership under Governor Moorehead when the spoils are distributed. It will be that or "something as good," says the capitol gossip.

C. W. BEERBROWER, secretary of Group 5, Virginia, reports a most successful meeting at Bristol, November 9th. J. B. Peery of Floyd was elected chairman. There was a banquet at the close of the session.

SIX books from Houghton Mifflin Company which were delayed were published November 23d. They are "Humanly Speaking," by Dr. Samuel McChord Crothers; "Italy in the Thirteenth Century," by Henry D. Sedgwick; "The Children's Reading," by Frances J. Olcott; "History of Plymouth Plantation," by William Bradford; "Boston, New and Old," by T. Russell Sullivan, with illustrations by Lester G. Hornby; "The Poems of Fred-eric and Mary Palmer."

WARE & LELAND, in reviewing "the situation," predict still lower prices before any substantial advance can occur.

SECRETARY F. H. COLBURN of the Californians didn't go back from Detroit, but lingered longingly and lovingly in the East. He's back home now and was greatly pleased at the cordial reception the California delegation met with all along the line.

W. O. JONES, poet laureate, etc., of the National Park, New York, has been elected a director of the Broadway Trust. He also acts on the local board of the Flatbush branch of the Broadway. Flatbush claims Mr. Jones as among her select citizens.

THE Minnesota conservation congress held at Minneapolis this week drew speakers of national prominence from all over the country and in fact the program presented would have done credit to a national organization.

ARTHUR REYNOLDS of Des Moines, vice-president of the American Bankers Association, addressed the delegates on "How May We Avoid a Money Trust?" Mr. Reynolds spoke for an hour and held the undivided attention of the delegates. His solution of the question was a suggested depository where the wealth and resources of the country could be assembled and held for safety and convenience.

J. W. WHEELER of St. Paul was another of the speakers. He declared that the fate of the country now is in the hands of the tiller of the soil and that the aforesaid tiller must increase his pace in order to keep up with the growing population.

GEORGE F. ORDE of the First National, Minneapolis, was chairman of the committee on entertainment, a job which generally falls to him in Twin City banking affairs. It is recorded that he acquitted himself well.

JOSEPH CHAPMAN of the Northwestern National paid his respects to the "college high-brows" and argued in favor of a change in our educational system. Mr. Chapman shows by statistics that only two per cent of the youth of the country are educated as they should be educated.

GEORGE WOODRUFF, president of the First National at Joliet, reviewed his experience in investigating the farm mortgage loan institutions of Europe. His address will be found printed at length elsewhere in this edition.

JAMES J. HILL, one of the principal prime movers in favor of looking toward the development of agriculture in the Northwest, occupied the attention of the delegates with a carefully prepared review of farming and financial conditions and their reflex action upon prices.

MR. HILL maintains his standing position that the farmers of the country could add billions of dollars every year to the wealth of the nation and at the same time leave the soil better than they found it if their work was properly done. Mr. Hill believes that the rates on farm loans are too high, not because of a deficiency of farm credit, but owing chiefly to bad management of the industry itself. He thus absolved bankers from responsibility for a condition of things for which they are often held responsible.

MR. HILL struck hands with the college professors who were present and said that hereafter he wanted to be counted with them in their work. He had been recorded as a great disbeliever in the utility of agricultural education in schools.

EDMOND D. FISHER, deputy comptroller of the city of New York and a former banker, spoke to the conservation congress on the money problem. He advocated a new system of credits for farmers.

THOSE who assisted in entertaining the visiting bankers and other delegates to the congress were W. F. McLane, J. S. Pomeroy, H. A. Sriver, J. A. Latta, Francis A. Gross, and George F. Orde who was chairman of the committee.

THE BOWMANVILLE NATIONAL located at the corner of Lincoln, Western and Lawrence Avenues, this city, has everything in readiness for their formal opening to-day (Saturday, November 23d). E. M. Heidkamp is president and Edwin A. Feldott, cashier.

THE new banking quarters are commodious and suitable for the purpose and it is believed that the neighborhood will support the institution in a way which will make it profitable to those who are conducting it. The officials were particularly careful in their announcement to state that the business of the new institution will be conducted under the supervision and inspection of the United States government.

THE Investment Bankers Association isn't the only yellow back in the safe. The brokers are organizing quite ambitiously and along fairly similar lines.

A CALL is being sent to brokers throughout the United States and Canada to attend the organization meeting of the proposed International Association of Brokers, which will be held either in Chicago or New York on February 20, 1913.

J. N. SECHREST of Buffalo is acting in the George B. Caldwell capacity to the new movement. Security dealers doing business on a capitalization of $5,000 or over will be admitted to membership in the proposed organization, and the first 400 to send in membership applications will be enrolled as charter members.

SEVERAL thousand letters have been sent to the members of the profession and a large number of replies have been received. It is anticipated that 500 men, at last, will be at the opening meeting.

C. EDGAR ELLIOTT, who will be the Chicago representative of the consolidated Cincinnati and Indianapolis bond houses of Breed & Harrison and Jos. T. Elliott & Sons, under the firm name of Breed, Elliott & Harrison, is a live wire and well known to the members of the Indiana Bankers Association.

CASHIER.

NEW NATIONAL BANK OPENS

O'Shaughnessy, Bernard Harrison and the president and vice-presidents.

The bank will have a savings department and a safety deposit vault.

Gates W. McGarrah, president of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank, New York, announces the purchase of the building at 50 Wall Street, to be occupied by the bank May 1st.

A Weekly Paper Devoted to the Banking

JOHN J. MITCHELL RETURNS FROM EAST

John J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Trust and Savings, returned last Saturday from New York and Boston. He said the consensus of opinion among European bankers who visited New York seems to be that the Balkan situation will not produce serious international complications. Eastern bankers regard our industrial situation as healthy and feel encouraged regarding the future. No alarm is felt at Governor Wilson's election and the belief is that tariff revision should be brought about as speedily as possible.

SEES NO MONEY STRINGENCY

J. B. Forgan, president of the First National of Chicago, said that the greater part of the demand for funds to finance the crop movement is over, and that he does not anticipate any stringency. The heavy drain on deposits has ceased. In a few weeks, funds will be pouring in and the banks again will be in an easy condition. He also emphasized the necessity of currency legislation, and said that the Aldrich act is inadequate and impracticable.

BANKS BID FOR CITY FUNDS

Funds of the city of Chicago, amounting to about twenty-one and one-half millions, will be distributed among sixty-nine banks during 1913. Most of the banks have submitted bids of $2\frac{1}{4}$ per cent interest for the money. Some, however, have bid $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, viz.: The State Bank and the Jefferson Park, Ravenswood, Irving Park and Bowmanville Nationals. The interest received by the city on its cash balances amounts to \$400,000 per year.

TO SELL LAND TO SATISFY JUDG- MENT

Master in Chancery H. A. Patton, Cheyenne, Wyo., has advertised 40,000 acres of land in Big Horn county, Wyo., for sale. The land is to be sold to satisfy a judgment obtained by the State Bank of Chicago in its suit against the Hanover Canal Company. The judgment amounts to $226,338 and costs. The sale is set for January 9, 1913. Much of the land to be sold has been reclaimed.

SOUTHWEST STATE BANK

A permit has been issued by the state to Joseph F. Triska Louis Hott and John A. McCormick, to organize the Southwest State Bank of Chicago. The new institution will be capitalized at $200,000.

TO CONSIDER INCREASING CAPITAL STOCK

A meeting of the board of stockholders of the North Side State Savings Bank of Chicago will be held on December 30th for the purpose of considering a proposition to increase the capital stock of the bank from $50,000 to $200,000. W. R. Dawes is president and Edwin F. Mack is vice-president.

Two Active Association Workers

W. J. PATTERSON ABERDEEN, WASH.

BENJAMIN F. DAVIS
LANSING, MICH.

A conspicuous place among those who are engaged in active participation in affairs pertaining to state bankers' organizations is occupied by W. J. Patterson of Aberdeen, Washington, and Benjamin F. Davis of Lansing, Michigan. Each of these gentlemen is president of his state association and has been untiring in his efforts to conduct the organization along progressive lines.

BANKER ACTS AS INTERLOCUTOR

L. H. Grimme, cashier of the National City Bank, acted in the capacity of interlocutor at the minstrel show given by the Hamilton Club in Orchestra Hall, Tuesday evening.

JOHN J. MITCHELL ELECTED DIRECTOR

John J. Mitchell has been elected a director of the Chicago Telephone Company to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Arthur D. Wheeler.

H. B. HOWELL ELECTED VICE- PRESIDENT

H. B. Howell, for many years in charge of credits for the Carnegie Steel Company at Pittsburgh, has been elected vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce of New York, and will move to New York on January 1st.

As soon as a suitable location can be obtained the Minneapolis Stock Exchange expects to meet daily. E. T. Chapman, H. D. Thrall and A. W. Stevens were appointed to pass on new stocks to be listed. There are three seats left and a membership fee is $250. Two applications are in for action.

ARREST ALLEGED EMBEZZLER

West Point, Ga., Nov. 29th—A man believed to be H. W. Parker, an official of the Bank of Commerce, Winnebago, Minn., said to be wanted for the alleged embezzlement of $20,000, was arrested here to-day on the request of Winnebago authorities.

Parker is said to have disappeared from Winnebago last spring. The man arrested has been living in West Point since last June under the name of J. M. Long. He recently married a Georgia woman.

Local police state that an officer, en route to West Point from the Minnesota city, will attempt to identify the prisoner.

Kelsey Chase, state bank examiner for Minnesota, said Parker's shortage would reach about $20,000. Parker disappeared April 27th, 1912, leaving a wife.

PRESIDENT HENRY M. CARPENTER, of the Monticello (Iowa) State Bank, was in Chicago over Saturday and Sunday. The big captain of the victorious Maroon eleven is his son. H. M. is very proud of the husky six-footer.

LEWIS B. FRANKLIN, vice-president of the Guaranty Trust, N. Y., made a big hit with the Investment Bankers by his banquet talk. He sees a useful field for the new association.

NOW you see where supervision might have helped. One of the private banks which allowed Kirby to "overdraw" $10,000 has since incorporated.

G. F. EMERY of the Live Stock is sending out a folder on "Why Every Farmer Should be a Stockman." The real, blushing author is G. A. Ryther, and the points made are unanswerable. Copies may be had on request.

MR. RYTHUR shows a "world's shortage in live stock" beyond dispute. Also that there is a "grand opportunity for profit," which is to the point. Good dope for banks in agricultural districts to hand out liberally.

THE Daily Times of Davenport is doing fine publicity work by a series of cartoons, accompanied by a verse or two of explanation. The work is done under the caption "Some Local Celebrities."

LAST one was devoted to President A. F. Dawson of the First National. Shows him seated on top of his fine, six-story bank building, with appropriate labels telling of his virtues and accomplishments. The verse underneath says:

WHEN Dawson left congress and hustled back West

Everything went to smash!

The hens quit laying; the farmers quit haying,
The country prepared for a crash.

The Democrats won in a one-sided run

But everyone seems to feel

Tho' the nation is slumping, Davenport's humping,

SEVERAL bills to bring private banks under the supervision of the state are being prepared. They will come before the general assembly at its next session, and the best one should be passed.—Daily News.

STATE BANKING COMMISSIONER EDWARD H. SECRETARY P. C. KAUFFMAN of the Washington association, has been very ill from inflammation of the heart covering. Better now, with prospects good for complete recovery.

THE Robbin testimony in the Carnegie Trust failure case, New York, reads very like the Kirby case, only the figures were larger.

CHRISTIAN ROPP was the first white child born in a large Illinois farming district southeast of Bloomington. This was many years before there was a railroad in Illinois and at the time of the Civil War Mr. Ropp was a grown man.

HIS father and eight sons had cleared, almost entirely by their own labor, eight quarter sections of the best land, which still remains in the family.

CHRISTIAN, then a young man of twenty-one, hauled two loads of wheat to Bloomington for sale. Wheat was selling at war prices, and the two loads roundly came to $100. Young Mr. Ropp accepted the figures of the grain dealer, but on his way home figured it over and found that he was about $11 short.

THIS episode directed his attention to the necessity for a grain table of prices, weights and values for the use of farmers who were either too busy or not qualified to figure out the matter for themselves.

HE produced at once and had printed copies of a table which would give the value of any size load of grain at any price, and give the correct number of bushels according to weight.

A FEW years later he added a great many other tables, most of the work being done purely to benefit his fellow farmers. Then the agricultural papers began taking up his tables and called it "Ropp's Calculator," until now more than two millions of copies have been sold.

FULLY sixty years of Mr. Ropp's lifetime have been given to the Calculator, which now is a handy pocket volume and which contains tables giving prices and other statistics on grain, cotton, stock, merchandise, interest, trade discount, wages logs and lumber, and capacities such as showing the contents of granaries, corn cribs, wagon loads and so forth. It also has specific gravity tables, a perpetual calendar and miscellaneous tables covering wages, butter fat in milk, coins, freight bills and other interesting things.

THE Calculator has been used by bankers in Pennsylvania and in other eastern states with great success for distribution among farmers, merchants, shopmen and mechanics, prospective and actual customers of the bank.

TO almost any question which may arise on the farm, in the bank or factory, or in the store, it will give the answer as quickly as a watch will show the time. There are about twenty sections in one of these little volumes

Supervision Without Incorporation Will Be Failure

Position of The Chicago Banker on necessity for incorporation if state control is not to be a farce borne out by Banking Commissioner A. E. Kuolt of Wisconsin. Recent developments in the situation

The bank supervision movement in Illinois is becoming clarified by the persistent hammering of the dailies. By concerted effort something good for the public and not too onerous on the "banks" should come out of it. Legislators are hedging, intimating that they want to be seen and argued with in a legitimate way. Banks generally favor the idea, but the privates are resisting compulsory incorporation. On this branch of the subject, the testimony of Wisconsin, our nearest neighbor on the north, is very illuminating. Bank superintendent Kuolt, at Madison, commenting on the Illinois situation, said:

"Such a failure as that of the Kirby Bank in Chicago, would be impossible in Wisconsin to-day. Ten years ago private banking was abolished throughout the state."

Mr. Kuolt said also experience showed that supervision merely gave the private bank prestige without reaching evils.

"Illinois, in endeavoring to put private banks under state supervision, is years behind Wisconsin," said Mr. Kuolt. "Illinois will learn that supervision is ineffective unless the assets of a private bank are reserved to pay the claims of depositors first of all. The history of the abolition of the private bank in Wisconsin is interesting. Up to 1895, state banks of Wisconsin were operating under the general bank act of 1852.

"In the face of a constitutional provision forbidding the legislature to enact banking laws the general police powers inherent in the state were invoked, and in 1895 was passed a law creating the office of bank examiner, and providing for an examination of state and private banks. This was the extent of supervision. In the absence of restrictions on investments made by banks, and of any corrective measures, the supervision could not be efficient. As to private banks, supervision brought out the fact that, while the bank itself might be solvent, its owner, frequently engaged in other business, might be insolvent without such fact appearing on the books of the bank itself.

"Inasmuch as the bank assets were not segregated under the laws existing, and were not available to secure claims of depositors first of all, but on the contrary, all creditors of an insolvent private bank owner had a pro rata claim against the assets of the bank, it is manifest that the solvency of the private bank proper was entirely dependent on the solvency of the bank owner; that his solvency could not be determined from the examination of the bank alone, and the examination of his other business affairs was beyond the scope of the bank examiner. Briefly, the experiment with private bank supervision added unearned prestige to the bank. In 1902 the people of the state adopted an amendment to the constitution. The legislature was given power to enact a general banking law. A bill was presented in which the powers, rights and duties of the state banks were clearly defined and the banking department was created.

"In a separate chapter the bill provided for segregation of the assets belonging to the private bank from any other assets that private bank owner might possess, thus extending the much needed protection to private bank depositors. Moreover, the bill proposed that all restrictions governing state banks apply to private banks.

"At a public hearing before the committee of the legislature, 42 out of 148 private bank owners of Wisconsin were present and opposed the measure. It was then moved that the entire chapter pertaining to private banks be stricken out, thus leaving private banks to their fate without supervision. To this the private bankers present objected strenuously, realizing that with the withdrawal of supervision the halo theretofore enjoyed by them would vanish. Eventually the original bill was rewritten and adopted. It provided that only duly incorporated state banks and national banks might use the word 'bank' in their title. It provided also that existing private banks should incorporate on or before September 1, 1913, or remove from their sign the word 'bank.' It did away with private banking in Wisconsin effectually and forever."

William W. Hartigan of this city has given the matter close attention and holds that the "particulars of a recent bank failure in Chicago are being found out by Judge Landis in the federal court. The findings should be given great publicity, especially in the foreign sections of Chicago, because foreigners as a rule bank their money with their countrymen, who enjoy the benefits of lax banking laws in the state of Illinois. These banking laws are fostered and protected by certain members of the Illinois Bankers Association.

"It seems as though every real estate dealer, steamship agent and employment broker in the foreign section is a banker, and I am under the impression that any one who has a few hundred dollars can start a bank. Many of these bankers are petty politicians and they operate employment bureaus. I know that many of these bankers spend most of their time dabbled in ward politics and spend the balance of their time trying to secure positions for their depositors with the railroads and large municipal corporations. Bank failures in the foreign sections are of common occurrence, and as they are mostly small banks, their failures do not attract much attention. Every time there is a bank failure, suffering follows, likewise suicides. These people lack faith in our splendid regulated banks. There should be a reform in the banking laws."

On the other hand, B. L. McFadden of Havana, Illinois, says: "One principal objection the private bankers of Illinois, numbering over 700 banks, make to the proposed supervision of private banks and the plan proposed by the Charles G. Dawes Committee is this: The Illinois banking law requires a minimum capitalization of $25,000. In no state adjacent to Illinois or in the middle west is the capitalization so high as this. The following states have a minimum capitalization of $5,000: Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Oklahoma. The following states require $10,000 as a minimum: Iowa, Wisconsin, Kansas, Missouri, Minnesota. Ohio has $12,500, and Kentucky and Michigan, $15,000 each.

"Here are twelve strong arguments in themselves against the Dawes proposition, and they should be apparent to any committee engaged in framing a measure to bring the private banks of Illinois under state supervision. Notwithstanding Mr. Harris, there are plenty of small towns in Illinois needing banking facilities that could not support a $25,000 bank. Although a state banker myself, I believe in being just to the private bankers."

The Kirby failure is "police" news from now on. The $31,000 which Judge Landis appears to think is "depositors' money" in reality was obtained on bad checks from other none too careful banks. Where are the deposits? The money the "wire tappers" got came out of the other bank vaults and reveals another deplorable banking condition.

ADVOCATES "BLUE SKY" LAW

Willard Done, insurance commissioner for Utah, is of the opinion that every state in the Union should have a "Blue Sky" law, to prevent the sale of "wildcat" stocks. Mr. Done said that the insurance commissioners at their Seattle meeting last summer, formulated a law which is to be introduced in many legislatures this winter. The bill in Utah will provide that a commission consisting of the secretary of state, superintendent of banks and the insurance commissioner be appointed to pass on the stocks of all concerns offered for sale. It is said that a similar bill will be introduced in Minnesota by Insurance Commissioner J. A. O. Preus.

HARRIS TRUST ADOPTS FINGER PRINT SYSTEM

Harris Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago has adopted the finger print system of identification of depositors. The bank already has a large collection of finger print signatures, and this week has given the system a hard, practical test. A number of the visitors were given souvenir postal cards bearing their finger prints. Duplicates of these prints, with the visitors' names, were kept by the bank. Later the visitors mailed their souvenir cards back with no additional identification marks on them, and in every case the bank was able to determine who mailed the card, and having identified the finger prints correctly, returned the cards to their owners.

STATE A PREFERRED CREDITOR

The New York court of appeals has decided that money of the state deposited in an institution which subsequently fails, is to be paid back in preference to the claims of the other depositors of the bank. This decision was rendered in the case of the Carnegie Trust Company, where the state had on deposit $38,445 on account of the general fund and $97,372 on account of the state canal fund. A surety company paid the general fund account, but there still is due to the state from the canal fund the sum of $63,373. This must be paid before another dividend to creditors of the insolvent company can be declared by the banking department. It is said that Superintendent of Banks Van Tuyl offered to pay the state on the same basis as the individual creditors. A referee to whom the case was referred, decided that the state was not entitled to a preference. This ruling, however, was reversed in the appellate division and the court of appeals upheld the appellate division.

GEORGE B. CALDWELL RETURNS FROM NEW YORK

George B. Caldwell, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings, has returned from New York, where the first convention of the Investment Bankers Association, at which he presided as president, was held last week. Mr. Caldwell said:

"The convention was very successful and was largely attended by all of the eastern houses and especially the New York firms. Those who attended the banquet said that it was one of the best ever held in New York City, equal to any and better than most of the banquets which they had attended there. The speeches were very good. Every courtesy was extended to us and we received more notoriety and a very much larger appreciation than we expected for so young an association."

NEW BANK IN PROCESS OF ORGANIZATION

It is rumored that a new bank, to be located in the Westminster building, Monroe and Dearborn Streets, is being formed by certain financial interests. It is said that not much progress has been made by the promoters thus far.

MAY INCREASE DIVIDEND RATE

It has been rumored of late that the Continental and Commercial National contemplates increasing its dividend rate. George M. Reynolds stated there would be no change in the dividend to be paid January 1st. It is possible that the April quarterly payment may be increased to 3%, although the management is not in any way committed to the raise.

ENDORSES GOOD ROADS PLATFORM

The good roads committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce held a meeting on Tuesday of this week in the LaSalle Hotel, at which time the platform adopted by the Illinois Highway Improvement Association at its convention in Peoria last September was endorsed. The following members of the committee were present: Chairman W. G. Edens, Henry Paulman, John H. Hardin, John D. Shoop, H. S. Pettis, L. Wessels and J. C. Claire. President Eugene U. Kimbark of the Association of Commerce also was in attendance.

Geographical Distribution

In purchasing railroad bonds the question of the territory served is of the utmost importance, for upon this depends the character of the traffic received and hence the revenue of the company. Diversity of traffic underlies a diversified investment. The larger the territory, the more diversified the traffic, and therefore the more stable the earning power.

We offer three railroad bonds, each well secured and in combination making a well-rounded investment, at prices to yield an average income of over 5¼%. The traffic of these roads is derived from three widely separated sections of the country.

BALTIMORE BANKS TO BE MERGED

The Merchants National and the National Mechanics of Baltimore are to merge their interests under the name of the Merchants and Mechanics National Bank, with capital of two millions and surplus of a like amount. Deposits will be between eighteen and nineteen millions. The total resources will aggregate about twenty-five millions and the consolidated institution will be the strongest bank in the South. The surplus of the new bank will equal its capital from the outset. The president will be Douglas H. Thomas, formerly president of the Merchants National; John B. Ramsay, formerly president of the National Mechanics, will be chairman of the board of directors. These two banks are the oldest and largest national banks in Baltimore. The National Mechanics was organized in 1806 and the Merchants National in 1835. It is said that the merger was brought about on account of the need in Baltimore of a large banking institution which can take part in the big financial operations that will result from the anticipated development of the South during the next few years.

A syndicate has been formed by Alexander Brown and Sons, who negotiated the consolidation, to take over all stock not assenting to the merger. The syndicate will take over the stock of those holders who do not assent to the merger for 30 for the National Mechanics stock and 226⅔ for Merchants National stock, the par value of the former being $10 per share and of the latter $100. A meeting of stockholders will be held December 28th, for the purpose of passing upon the recommendations of their boards of directors. The offices of the new institution will be those now occupied by the Merchants National.

JOHN W. GORBY REPORTS PROSPEROUS CONDITIONS

John W. Gorby of the Peoples Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago reports favorable conditions throughout the middle west. He says there is a good demand for money, which likely will continue for some time. Everybody is feeling happy and contented as a result of the bumper crops and is looking toward the future with a good deal of assurance. No alarm is felt as a result of the recent election, the consensus of opinion being that the change in administration at Washington will not have any bad effect upon business conditions.

TALKS ON TARIFF CHANGES

Bryon L. Smith, president of the Northern Trust Company, who has returned from a trip to New York says business men with whom he talked seemed to feel that it would be best to have, as soon as practicable, such tariff legislation as is to be enacted. Mr. Smith does not believe anything can be done to prevent at least two years of prosperity.

ENFIELD BANKS MERGE

The First National and the Farmers State Bank of Enfield, Ill., have consolidated under the name of the Farmers National Bank of Enfield, with a capital of $30,000. The new institution will begin business the first of the year. J. E. Willis, one of the veteran bankers of southern Illinois, who was president of the First National, and A. E. Welsh, president of the State Bank, will both retire. Jas. M. Jordan, who for twenty-five years has been cashier of the First National, will be cashier of the new bank.

BANK OFFICIALS CHOSEN

The stockholders of the new bank at Amboy, Ill., held their first meeting last week and elected directors and officers. Geo. P. Miller, of Lee Center, was elected president; Fred Harch of Bradford, vice-president, and Ray Rariden, cashier. The bank will be ready for business in a few days.

RIVER AND HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS PROMISED

"We hope Congress will make the most liberal annual appropriation for rivers and harbors this year that ever has been made," said Representative Joseph E. Ransdell, senator-elect from Louisiana and president of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, who reached Washington to-day.

"The needs of the country are so pressing I shall urge that the appropriations shall not be less than $50,000,000, and we hope to have the rivers and harbors bill passed by the Christmas holidays."

This announcement by Mr. Ransdell is expected to bring out further strong support for a heavy appropriation bill this year. The rivers and harbors congress meets here next week, coincident with the opening of congress, and, backed by favorable planks in the democratic and republican platforms, an effort will be made to induce the democratic house of representatives to be unusually liberal with its appropriations for public works. Meantime committee staffs were working at the capitol to-day on the preliminary draft of the rivers and harbors and public buildings appropriations bills.

Charles L. Matthews was elected vice-chairman of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Henry W. Boureau.

DEMOCRATS SHY AT CURRENCY REFORM

No currency reform legislation will be attempted at the coming session of Congress, it was practically decided at an informal conference of the democratic members of the subcommittee of the house banking and currency committee, headed by Representative Glass of Virginia. "The committee probably will be unable to report anything like finished legislation to the house at this session," said Mr. Glass to-night. "No definite steps toward drawing a bill have been taken by the members of the committee, and no currency scheme has been evolved to fill the place of the Aldrich currency plan rejected by the committee following the specific declaration of the democratic national platform against the Aldrich plan."

URGES CHANGE IN BANK LAW

A. B. HEPBURN HONORED

The government of France has conferred upon A. Barton Hepburn of New York, the appointment of Officer of the Legion of Honor in recognition of the part taken by the New York Chamber of Commerce in the reception to the French Champlain delegation which visited New York last May.

CALIFORNIA BANK

Local financiers are behind a project to establish a new bank in Corona, Cal., to be known as the Farmers and Merchants Bank. Mentioned in connection with the enterprise are L. A. Wyatt and M. W. Findley of Los Angeles. Plans for the institution contemplate a new 2-story building.

NEW BANK FOR CHAMPAIGN

A permit has been issued for the organization of a new bank at Champaign, Ill., to be known as the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank, with a capitalization of $150,000. Virgil W. Johnson will be president; Walter W. Stern, vice-president, and Fred Collison, cashier.

Guaranty Club

The second annual meeting of The Guaranty Club, composed of officers and clerks of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, was addressed by President A. J. Hemphill, and by Charles H. Sabin and William C. Potter, vice-presidents. Reports of the various standing committees, including the savings, entertainment, athletic, and library committees, indicated that the Club is in a very strong position. The following men were elected officers for the ensuing year: R. J. F. Allen, president, James Steel, vice-president, C. F. Bruder, Jr., treasurer, Ralph Dawson, secretary.

The Guaranty Club was organized nearly two years ago and has demonstrated the value of such an organization among the employees of a great corporation. It has a membership of over three hundred. Athletic meets, fellowship dinners, and debates make up a portion of the club's program, in addition to which successful base ball and bowling teams are maintained.

It is expected that the club will enter a still wider sphere of activity and usefulness when the Guaranty Trust Company occupies its new building, now being erected at the corner of Broadway and Liberty Streets.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By R. A. ALBERTSEN

Washington, Nov. 29th.—Under Comptroller Murray all obtainable data on private banks has been assembled for comparison. An analysis shows that Illinois and New York lead all other states in the number of failures of private banks. For the fiscal year of 1911 five private banks in Illinois and six in New York closed their doors. The five in Illinois had $195,500 assets and $360,000 liabilities; the six in New York $538,330 assets and $980,690 liabilities.

Since these failures were reported New York has passed a law placing private banks under a form of regulation that is drastic in many respects. There were no failures of private banks in Massachusetts, California, Idaho, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nevada, Indiana, Rhode Island, and South Dakota, which states impose various kinds of regulation on these institutions.

There were two failures in Alabama, one in Montana, and one in Texas, although these states have special laws governing private banks. Failures in other states having practically no supervision of private banks were one each in Iowa, Michigan, Utah, and Virginia and three in Pennsylvania.

How They Do It in New York

The recently erected New York statute makes a distinction between individual bankers and private bankers. Individual bankers come under the supervision of the superintendent of banks in the same manner as incorporated banks and are subject to all of the provisions of the banking laws, examinations, etc.

Private banking, as such, is only authorized in cities of the first class. A license is issued by the comptroller of the city, the applicant depositing $5,000 if he is engaged only in the business of receiving money for transmission to another, and $10,000 if he is to receive deposits.

How Other States Regulate Privates

Private bankers are placed under the supervision of the state banking departments and made subject to all the provisions of state banking laws, as far as applicable, by the laws of Alabama, California, Idaho, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, and Nevada. There are special laws governing private banks in Indiana and Montana. Private banking is forbidden by the law of Nebraska.

Rhode Island forbids the use of any words indicating that it is a bank to all except banks incorporated under the laws of that state. South Dakota makes it unlawful for any one to advertise that he is engaged in the business of banking without first obtaining authority from the public examiner. Texas permits private banking, but requires the private banker to use the word "unincorporated" after the title of the bank.

In Illinois 259 private banks reported capital stock $5,860,813, surplus $2,615,750, and deposits $35,634,663. The previous year 246 Illinois private banks reported capital $5,134,178, surplus $1,386,742, and deposits $31,893,713.

To Regulate Water Powers

Because of the rapidity with which the remaining public water powers of the United States are passing under private control President Taft in a forthcoming message to congress will urgently recommend the enactment of legislation enabling federal regulation of this important national resource.

The president and Secretary of the Interior Fisher will give their approval to a plan evolved by Senator Burton of Ohio contemplating the adoption of the lease system with reference to water sites upon public lands. The lease will have a duration of fifty years and will be irrevocable except in case of violation of its terms or in case congress finds revocation necessary in the interest of navigation.

It will provide for prompt development and continuous operation of the water power, for a reasonable rate of rental for the valuation and compensation for the physical properties upon the termination of the lease, for the control of capitalization and bonded indebtedness of the companies obtaining leases, and for full reports covering items of cost, rates of service, and profits.

The Farmer and the Automobile

A Southern M. C. says that at a good roads convention in Atlanta a speaker said:

"There are many farmers who are opposed to smooth and level roads through their sections because they know the better the roads the faster the machines will run. The roads were intended for all—the man in the ox-cart as well as the man in the auto—and they don't believe they ought to be chased into the ditch in order to get out of the way of the speed devils."

This state of affairs applies only to parts of the country where the farmers don't have automobiles—if there are any such.

Springfield (Ill.) Correspondence

That business in Springfield during the last year has shown a marked increase over that of 1911, may well be shown in the comparison of the bank clearings for the twelve months of 1911 and the eleven months that have closed this year. With a month left to be completed before the first of next year, the comparative clearings indicate that between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000 more business will be done this year than during the last one. According to figures compiled by Albert H. Kerns, clerk of the Springfield clearing house, the total amount of clearings for 1911 were $53,945,224.73. From January 1, 1912, to November 13th, the total clearings this year were $52,235,539.09 or only $1,709,684.74 below the total figures for the twelve months last year. It is estimated that the clearings this month will run above $4,000,000. Then if they run to $5,000,000 in December, it will place the total for 1912 at over $60,000,000, about $7,000,000 in excess of what they amounted to last year.

E. E. Crabtree Speaks on Banking at High School

E. E. Crabtree of the banking firm of F. G. Farrell & Co., Jacksonville, addressed the students of the high school last week, on "Banking," particularly as a vocation into which high school students can enter. Mr. Crabtree said that the man with the high school education has a better qualification for banking than the man without, other circumstances being equal. He advised all those who contemplated banking to finish their high school courses and to get as much other education as possible.

To Increase Capital Stock

At a special meeting of the stockholders of the Canton National, held on Wednesday of last week, it was decided by unanimous vote to increase the capital stock from $100,000 to $125,000, to take effect January 1, 1913. By this increase two hundred fifty new shares of stock are issued and these have all been placed among business men and farmers in the vicinity of Canton. The shares are of $100 par value and sell at $250 each, the premium going into the surplus fund, which is thus increased to about an equal sum as the capital stock. The stock will pay twelve per cent dividends from January 1, 1913. The sale of the new stock issue about doubles the number of stockholders of the bank, the flourishing condition of which is a matter of pride to all concerned.

Celebrates Sixtieth Anniversary

The State Bank of Rock Island observed its sixtieth anniversary on Thursday of last week. The bank was founded November 21, 1852, by Cook & Sargent of Davenport, and was managed as a branch of the Davenport bank by J. M. Parker. Later Mitchell & Cable purchased the banking business and still later the firm of Mitchell & Lynde came into possession. For the greater part of its existence, the bank was a national institution. In 1905 it became the State Bank of Rock Island. Phil Mitchell is president; I. S. White, vice-president; K. T. Anderson, cashier, and C. F. Channon, assistant cashier. The capital stock is $200,000; surplus, $100,000, and deposits in the savings department, $1,284,321. The home of the bank has been recently remodeled. There are but two banks in the state which antedate the State Bank of Rock Island.

New Moline Bank

Official announcement has been made that the new Commercial Savings Bank of Moline will open for business December 2d. The new institution is the first bank on the bluffs and will prove a great convenience to the residents living on the hill. The officers are well-known Moline citizens. John Weckel, is president; J. A. Schmidt, vice-president, and Reynold Johnson, cashier. The bank is capitalized at $100,000 and will be under state supervision.

Two Banks Licensed

The Pinkerton Exchange Bank at Hanna City, in which a number of Peorians are interested, has been granted a permit by the state auditor of public accounts to organize a state bank. The new institution will be operated under the name of the Hanna City State Bank. The papers were issued to Harry B. Pinkerton, head of the Hanna City institution; Delbert A. Covey, and Edwin V. Champion of Peoria. The capital stock will be $25,000.

A permit also was issued to J. W. Wchenker, Joseph C. Burtschi, and Ira D. Lakin for the organization of the Commercial Bank of Vandalia, with a capital stock of $30,000 and a charter tenure of twenty-five years.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

By C. C. Burford

Probably three-fourths of the corn crop has been taken out of the fields, and while there is a good crop reported from all parts of the state, yet the average yield in many localities is about ten bushels per acre less than what was expected. This statement does not indicate evil tendencies financially, yet the crop will be somewhat shorter than was anticipated. The quality is reported good, yet there was danger of corn rotting during the warm days of middle November. It is said that farmers are cribbing a much larger per cent of corn than usual, being unwilling to accept the lower scale of prices. Grain elevators in many cases are full, some refusing to accept any more corn, while the grain car famine is heard everywhere "with no immediate prospect of relief."

Change in Peoria Banks

Edward C. Leisy has sold his stock and resigned his directorship in the Merchants National of Peoria and has been elected a director of the State Trust and Savings Bank of the same city, to fill the unexpired time of his late brother, Albert C. Leisy. E. C. Leisy has been a prominent financier of Peoria, is credited with the erection of the Jefferson office building, aided in the erection of the Jefferson Hotel, erected the Orpheum Theatre, where the sessions of the recent Illinois Bankers Association convention were held, and has since purchased the Majestic Theatre.

Regarding the State Trust and Savings Bank the Peoria Star recently said, "The bank has been remarkably successful under the management of Ed Strauss and Berne Mead, and this addition to its directory puts it in the first rank of Peoria's financial institutions. At the same meeting of the directors W. M. Gish was elected assistant cashier to succeed W. F. Shanemeyer, who has recently entered business for himself. Mr. Gish has been for five years head teller in the bank."

Miller Interests University Audiences

Herbert F. Miller, business manager of the Chicago Association of Commerce, interested an audience of University of Illinois business students last Friday afternoon when he outlined not only the work of the Chicago association, but spoke also of the other great associations of the nation. He urged the young men to prepare themselves to act as secretaries of chambers of commerce and of other civic bodies.

Mr. Miller was also invited to address the high school teachers of the state, who were in session at the university in annual conference, on some principles of commercial education in the high schools of the state. He struck a good blow for the preparation of business men by the high schools and added another good word for vocational education now being urged by various bankers' associations.

While in the University community he was entertained at a luncheon at the home of Dean David Kinley, professor of economics and director of the commerce courses in the institution. Other guests at the luncheon were Dean Walter Hotchkiss of Northwestern University; David Felmley, president of the Illinois State Normal University at Normal; H. S. Capron, cashier of the First National of Champaign, and C. A. Kiler, a Champaign business man, good roads advocate and a director of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association.

Shuman for Comptroller

Irving Shuman, cashier of the First National of Sullivan, former chairman of Group 7 of the Illinois Bankers Association and a member of its committee on agriculture and vocational education, has been mentioned by many papers throughout the state as a probable comptroller of the currency under President-elect Woodrow Wilson. While there are scores of rumors about probable appointments, this one is of especial interest to Illinois bankers. Mr. Shuman has been a prominent Wilson worker for many months, and is said to have been "one of the original Wilson men." He urged Wilson's nomination when it seemed useless, and early urged the nomination of Governor-elect Dunne. Mr. Shuman has spent the fall at the democratic headquarters in Chicago as a confidential adviser to Joseph E. Davies, the western democratic manager. Other comptrollers of the currency who have come from Illinois or who have since lived in the state, have been Edward S. Lacey, of the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago; Charles G. Dawes, now president of the Central Trust Company of Chicago; William B. Ridgeley, formerly of the Ridgeley National of Springfield; James H. Eckles, now deceased, and Lawrence O. Murray, the present incumbent.

Good Roads Committee Has Bill

The committee on good roads appointed by the last general assembly has prepared a bill which will be submitted to the next session of the legislature. The bill will include state supervision and aid in the building of hard roads. Engineers will be named for each county to work under the direction of the state engineer. The number of highway commissioners in each township will be reduced

New Boat Line Organized at Peoria

A new steamboat line with capital stock of $500,000, organized under the laws of Delaware, has been announced at Peoria at a luncheon held at the Creve Coeur Club in honor of E. S. Conway of Chicago. The matter has been under headway for some time and Peoria business men are greatly interested in the project. Enough stock has been subscribed to buy one boat and to start business immediately.

Peoria is expecting some large things in a commercial way with the completion of the Panama Canal, and with a deep waterway through the Illinois river the city will become one of the most important shipping points in the Middle West. It is planned now to run boats from LaSalle to New Orleans and later, if the deep waterways idea is followed out, from Chicago to the Gulf. Everything in the nature of water transportation, in the way of warehouses, storing, teaming, etc., are embraced in the charter. Mr. Conway is a former president of the Chicago Association of Commerce and is now president of the Kimball Piano Company. The company will be known as the Chicago, Peoria and New Orleans Transportation Company. There are plans for securing 1,300 feet additional river frontage for warehouse and wharf purposes, and there is every indication that the river trade will be revived. Peoria bankers and business men are deeply interested in adding terminal features, both rail and river, to their commercial facilities.

Needles Prominent Odd Fellow

Thomas B. Needles, president of the First National of Nashville, and well known to bankers in southern Illinois and throughout the state, was elected grand treasurer of the grand lodge of Illinois Odd Fellows at their recent state assembly held in Peoria. Mr. Needles has been an Odd Fellow for fifty-five years and is one of the most prominent members of the order in the state. He has been grand treasurer before and has also been treasurer of the state of Illinois.

University Makes Agricultural Exhibits

The University of Illinois has taken great interest in the National Land Show now being held in the Coliseum in Chicago with the result that large exhibits have been arranged there with competent lecturers in charge to explain them. The University will also make exhibitions at the International Live Stock Show to be held at the Union Stock Yards of Chicago, November 30th to December 8th.

New State Bank at Avon

The State Bank of Avon, near Galesburg, will soon be opened for business, as the capital stock for the new institution has been subscribed. George Sailer will be the president, A. E. Hatch, vice-president and H. F. Townsend, cashier.

Goddard and Curtiss at Masonic Function

Leroy A. Goddard, president of the State Bank of Chicago, and George W. Curtiss, president of the Dime Savings and Trust Company of Peoria, were among the thirty-third degree Masons who attended the sixth semi-annual reunion and the consecration of the apartments of the bodies of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite Freemasonry and the installation of the officers of the Springfield Consistory. Illustrious Leroy A. Goddard, 33, is an active member of the supreme council and Illustrious George W. Curtiss, 33, is Most Wise Master of Peoria Chapter, Rose Croix. The event, which "was a red-letter day of the Masonic order in Springfield," witnessed the assembly of the largest number of thirty-third degree Masons ever held in that city.

Illinois Notes

W. R. Davis, formerly of Douglas county, is now with the Farmers State Bank of Cuba, Fulton county.

The Farmers Savings and Loan Bank of Urbana has tentative plans drawn for the erection of a new three-story bank building to cost between $30,000 and $40,000. National City of Chicago is the correspondent.

Cracksmen blew the safe in the State Bank of Millbrook, in a town of the same name near Aurora, and escaped with $3,000 in currency and negotiable paper. There have been a multitude of robberies over the state this fall, not only of banks, but of postoffices and of stores as well.

Harry Densberger of New York City, formerly with the German-American National of Peoria before its merger with the Commercial National, has been called to East Peoria by the illness of his father, Jacob Densberger.

The Springfield Commercial Association will banquet the outgoing and incoming state officials and members of the legislature. The banquet will be held the first week in January.

The Peoria Star reprints the comment of W. T. Abbott, vice-president of the Central Trust Company of Chicago, regarding the private bank supervision question in Illinois. Mr. Abbott is well known in Peoria, where he was formerly a leading attorney.

The high school teachers of the state recently assembled in conference at the University of Illinois advocated "the subsidization of all high schools undertaking one or more industrial or vocational courses, including agriculture and continuation schools, to the extent of one-half the cost of maintaining such schools and courses, the control of which locally is to be under the present board of education." Another good word for vocational education.

NORTH DAKOTA BANKS CONSOLIDATE

The Hettinger State Bank and the Bank of Hettinger, N. D., have been consolidated under the name of the former. The new institution has a capital of $25,000, while combined deposits foot up over $100,000.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

For Milwaukee bankers prominent in society circles, next week promises to be a strenuous one, with the annual Charity Ball, the minstrel show of the Milwaukee Chapter of the American Institute of Bank Clerks, and the the Horse Show contending for their attention.

Among the patrons of the Charity Ball in the Auditorium Tuesday night for the benefit of the Milwaukee Infants' Home and Hospital are: President Oliver C. Fuller of the Wisconsin Trust Company, President James K. Ilsley of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank, President L. J. Petit and Cashier L. G. Bournique of the Wisconsin National and Vice-president William Bigelow of the First National. These have all taken boxes for the minstrel show by the bank clerks in the Pabst Theatre on Friday night. On Saturday night the strenuous week's program will close with the Horse Show of the Milwaukee Riding Club for the benefit of the Children's Free Hospital, boxes for which have been taken by L. J. Petit, Spencer Ilsley, Oliver Clyde Fuller, Fred Vogel, Jr., H. H. Camp, and William Bigelow.

Minstrel Show Progressing Rapidly

Rehearsals for the big minstrel show by Milwaukee bank clerks on Friday and Saturday nights of next week are progressing successfully, according to the reports that emanate from behind the locked doors of Pabst hall, where the boys are at work nightly.

William Fisker, employed by the Wisconsin

Trust Company and reputed to be the smallest bank clerk in the city, will have the additional distinction of being the only one of the large cast to appear without burnt cork accessories, being cast in an Uncle Sam rôle. E. A. Redeman, cashier of the Germania-National, is daily becoming more proficient in the classic characteristics of the interlocutor, and the chorus of sixty is hard at work on a program of songs that contains not only all the recent hits, but many originalities composed by the songsters themselves.

James K. Ilsley Back

President James K. Ilsley of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank has returned from an extended trip in Montana and California.

Agricultural Conference at Madison

That the millenium is near at hand when bankers and farmers will work hand in hand in improving the general prosperity of the country through improvement of agricultural conditions is the opinion of Walter Kasten of the Wisconsin National who attended the agricultural conference under the auspices of the Wisconsin Bankers Association at Madison last week. Although the meeting was only a conference and no definite measures toward a crop improvement campaign were taken, Mr. Kasten said that it would undoubtedly result in recommendations that will figure conspicuously in the program of the crop improvement committee of the W. B. A. for the coming year.

Bartlett Still on Jury

Secretary George D. Bartlett of the W. B. A. is still serving the ends of justice as a member of a jury in Judge Ludwig's branch of the circuit court. He is rejoicing in the fact that he is serving this time with men who are forbidden by the statutes to "let George do it."

Income and Corporation Taxes

According to County Clerk Martin Plehn, the amount of the income tax to be paid by individuals and unincorporated firms in the city next spring is $511,342.72, while that to be paid in the county outside the city is $23,054.19. Corporation taxes in the city amount to $860,436.15, while those in the country outside the city are $534,396.91.

Lower Dwelling Rates

The Milwaukee hearings before the legislative committee appointed to investigate fire insurance matters in Wisconsin closed on Saturday, after heads of all the fire insurance companies and many agents and representatives had been called to the witness stand. The question put by Insurance Commissioner H. L. Ekern would indicate that a movement for lower dwelling rates is under way, although no report will be made until December 15th.

J. A. Corbett, president of the Citizens National and of the Citizens Title and Trust Company, Decatur, Ill., was in the financial district Monday.

PEOPLES TRUST TWO YEARS OLD

Peoples Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago will celebrate its second anniversary December 1st. The bank is capitalized at $500,000, has a surplus of $100,000 and undivided profits of a like amount. Deposits are well above seven millions. The institution has enjoyed a steady growth since its organization. Offi-

Gas building. Since its organization it has taken two additional rooms and at present is contemplating the acquisition of three more rooms, which will give it more than double the original space. During the short period which it has been in existence, the Peoples Trust has gained a reputation for conservative management and stability which has contributed in no small way to the success which has attended its operation.

KANSAS 1912 CROP OUTPUT IS LARGEST IN HISTORY

Kansas crops of wheat, corn and oats this year are the largest the state ever has produced, according to the annual report of F. D. Coburn, secretary of the state board of agriculture, issued recently. The present wheat prospect is 91 per cent of 7,500,000 acres. The report says:

"The combined value of Kansas wheat, corn and oats this year is $170,785,666, or about $55,000,000 more than 1911. The next best record was in 1909, when their value was $169,262,323. This year's yields were in each instance considerably in excess of those of 1909, but prices were lower.

"This year Kansas raised between a fifth and a fourth of all the winter wheat produced in the United States. The wheat yield, 88,889,184 bushels, exceeded 1911 by 38,000,000 bushels. The average yield per acre was 14.24 bushels.

"This year's corn yield, 156,499,382 bushels, while from a considerably diminished acreage, is 49 per cent larger than of 1911."

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis, November 27th.—The week opened up well at the financial institutions and the volume of business transacted was entirely satisfactory. Business was active in all branches of banking. There was a liberal demand for money and rates held firm at 5½ to 6 per cent on call and time loans. Bank clearings were considerably larger during the past week than the corresponding period last year.

Changes at Third National

The board of directors of the Third National has voted to create another assistant cashiership and the position of auditor, to become effective January 1, 1913. The new assistant cashier will be Frank K. Houston, Nashville, Tenn., who occupied a similar position in the First National at that place. Mr. Houston has resigned his Nashville position and is making preparations to move to St. Louis. The auditor will be W. C. Tompkins, chief clerk of the First National of Chicago. Increase in business of the bank necessitated the new positions, according to F. O. Watts, vice-president of the Third National, who made the announcement of the board's action.

Bremen Bank Entertains

The Bremen Bank last week gave a public reception to mark the opening of its remodeled banking rooms at Broadway and Mallinckrodt streets. About thirty financial institutions, brokers and friends of the bank sent flowers. A feature of the event was the inauguration of a savings department, interest at 3½ per cent, the same as that paid by the trust companies. The banking rooms have been enlarged and remodeled at a cost of about $30,000. The decoration reaches its climax in the board room, which has art glass windows, a high mahogany wainscot and a mural painting as a frieze.

Company to Invest In Country Banks

A new financial institution to be known as the "Bank Stock Trust Company" is in process of formation in St. Louis with a proposed capital stock of $500,000. The purpose of the new financial institution is to buy stock of small country banks as an investment and operate similarly to the Bankers Trust Company of St. Louis. In explaining the purposes of the new company, Frederick E. Bryan, attorney and banker of St. Louis, who is promoting the company, said: "The purpose of the proposed trust company is not to control a chain of banks, but to hold stock in them as a common stockholder with the local people, each bank being entirely independent, but having through their connection with the Bank Stock Trust Company a community of interest. The proposed new company will not invest a dollar of its capital or surplus in anything but country bank stocks." Among those interested are George F. Moore, E. F. Ustick, T. T. Fauntelroy, Charles E. Lane, F. C. Hahn, C. C. Collier and Campbell Cummings, St. Louis; C. H. Fauntelroy, F. E. Bryan, Wirt Wright and M. A. Traylor, East St. Louis; Asher Cox, Xenia, Ill.; L. O. Snoddy, Golden Gate, Ill.; N. S. Helm, Benton, Ill.; and L. M. Haynie, Nelson, Mo.

Proposes Bank to Fight Loan Sharks

At a dinner Thursday night in the Mercantile Club by Col. James G. Butler, initiative was taken which is expected to lead to the establishment in St. Louis in the immediate future of a branch of the Fidelity Corporation of America, the purpose of which is to put the loan shark out of business. This institution was organized April 3, 1910, in Norfolk, Va., and has branches in Atlanta, Ga., Baltimore, Md., Washington, D. C., Birmingham, Ala., and Seattle, Wash. It covers in various operative ways twenty-six states. Theodore S. Garnett, Jr., of Norfolk, a director, explained the plan. He said that Arthur J. Morris, president of the Norfolk institution, was the originator of the system, which has as its principle the capitalization of the earning capacity and integrity of honest persons who have no other assets on which they could borrow money. The Fidelity corporation operates under the general commercial corporation laws, as it does not do a banking business in the sense of receiving deposits or allowing checking of accounts. While the average interest charge to borrowers is 9.42 per cent a year, a certificate of deposit is paid back in weekly payments, equaling the difference between that rate and 6 per cent. Certificates of deposit bearing 6 per cent are also sold to investors. These certificates are subject to call. Col. Butler presided at the meeting. Those present were Festus J. Wade, H. L. Cornet, W. F. Carter, F. B. Eiseman, W. W. Hoxton, A. B. Hart, W. J. Kinsella, George D. Markham, Rev. Dr. S. J. Niccholls, A. A. O'Halloran, Edward L. Preetorius, John C. Roberts, S. L. Swarts, B. J. Taussig, Thomas Wright, T. E. Anderson and M. L. Wilkinson.

Bloomfield Bank to Pay Deposits in Full

State Bank Examiner John F. Swanger, who has been in charge of the City Bank of Bloomfield since Tuesday of last week, has given out a statement saying that arrangements have been made by the directors for the payment in full of all deposits. It is believed that the bank had about $125,000 in deposits when it closed its doors. Of this amount, at least 50 per cent belonged to Stoddard county. The bank directors and the cashier have guaranteed the payment in full of all deposits should the assets of the bank be insufficient.

Governor Hadley has offered a reward of $300 for the arrest of H. M. Smith, formerly cashier of the Bank of Holstein, Warren county, who is accused of embezzlement of $7,538.42.

Bank Robbed in Daylight

A lone robber entered the State Bank of Foyil, Oklahoma, on Thursday of last week and stole over $1,000, after which he took a farmer's horse, tied near the bank, and escaped. The bank had been closed for the noon hour while Assistant Cashier W. C. Skelton went to lunch. The robber gained entrance by forcing the front door of the building. This robbery is the second time the bank has been robbed within the last year. Last spring yeggmen blew the safe, secured $2,000 and escaped. A pack of bloodhounds has been put on the robber's trail.

Will Pay 15 Per Cent Dividend

Commissioner of Insurance and Banking B. L. Seventy per cent has already been refunded and this will make the total refund 85 per cent. The guaranty fund banks which met the assessment will be refunded about $16,000 on this dividend.

State Banking Law Further Construed

The attorney-general's department, through Assistant General Terrell, held in an opinion to Commissioner of Insurance and Banking Gill that a bank and trust company may, under the banking law, act as an executor or administrator of an estate without having to make a deposit of $50,000 in securities in the state treasury, but in such an event the company would have to make a bond. By depositing the securities the bond would not be required.

A socialist's view of modern business is contained in Charles Edward Russell's new book, "Business: The Heart of the Nation," published by the John Lane Company, New York. Business in relation to the newspapers, political graft, the slum, and the high cost of living are his chief points of attack. He delivers some very telling blows, at times almost going to extremes in his intimate description of conditions that now exist in the business world. The author's argument is, of course, that business is unable to change these conditions under the régime of competition and that the only solution is socialism. Mr. Russell's book has gone into a second edition and sells at $1.50 net.

BANK SUPERVISION IN WISCONSIN

Frequent reference has been made in these columns as to the improved financial and banking conditions brought to the state of Wisconsin by the enactment of a state-wide bank supervision bill. Wisconsin had only about one fourth as many private banks as Illinois now has at the time the law was passed in 1903. Every movement looking toward supervision in that state was warmly contested by private bankers and a strong committee of lobbyists attended all sessions of the legislature when the matter was under consideration. Practically the same arguments which are being used in Illinois to-day against supervision were used by this committee. Some of them recently put forth in this state simply are the warmed-over efforts of the Wisconsin propaganda. In spite of political opposition, however, state supervision became a fact in Wisconsin in 1903 with almost similar consequences, so far as some of the private banks were concerned, as occurred in Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota and elsewhere, when those states adopted supervision. Thirteen of Wisconsin's most important private banks promptly closed their doors. Deposits ranged all the way from seven thousand dollars in the Bank of Plainfield to one hundred fifty thousand dollars in the Bank of Edgerton. The legal department of the state of Wisconsin filed a brief, when the matter was contested in the courts, stating that the entire deposits of the thirteen banks were a total loss to the depositors. The exact figures of this total loss are $575,928. This complete and absolute failure proved what many of the organized banks of Wisconsin claimed, that the real opposition to supervision came chiefly from banks which could not stand an investigation. In the years since 1903, there have been but fourteen liquidations of state banks in the whole state of Wisconsin. The new law provided that failed banks should be liquidated by the state banking department, without the costly and expensive receivership so common in the state of Illinois. These fourteen banks, all state institutions, had deposits of $778,997.58. There was not one dollar of loss to any depositor in any of these state banks. No more complete answer as to the comparative safety of state supervised banking when compared with private banking could be required by anyone. The result is totally convincing and it is believed that if supervision were to be adopted without several years for readjustment, that many private banks in the state of Illinois would follow the example set by the thirteen large private banks in Wisconsin. There are many features of the Wisconsin law which might be incorporated in a similar law in Illinois with great advantage. Wisconsin does not tolerate private banking of any description, and her system of liquidating failed or mismanaged banks has shown itself to be both inexpensive and expeditious. Not a dollar has been lost to a depositor under the new state banking law in Wisconsin and there have been no failures within the last two years. Supervision of private banks as such is a mere makeshift and it never can be effective; it has been tried in two or three of the largest commonwealths and has failed. The Wisconsin plan or the Minnesota plan or the South Dakota plan or of a dozen other states which might be mentioned all have been perfectly effective, and banking has progressed very rapidly under the new conditions.

ILLINOIS GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT

It is conceded by those who are informed in such matters, that Illinois lacks quite as much in the way of road supervision as she does in bank supervision. Her roads are believed to be probably the worst of any of the better class of states. There is hope, however, of something being done in the matter at the coming meeting of the legislature. The Illinois Highway Improvement Association has been quite active under the presidency of W. G. Edens of this city, and at a meeting held this week, the program adopted at Peoria was fully endorsed by the good roads committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce. This same program has met with the approval of the good roads committees of the Illinois Manufacturers Association, of the State Teachers Association, of the Chicago Automobile Club and of a number of other clubs interested in better roads. A plan has been formulated for presenting the matter with all of these endorsements to the members of the incoming legislature which will meet at Springfield January 8th. Part of the plan includes the use of automobile license fees and wheel tax money as a sort of permanent fund to provide interest on a contemplated bond issue. There seems to be no contention on the part of anyone who is interested about the necessity for prompt and lasting betterment of country roads in Illinois. The Commerce Association is likely to include in its efforts the improvement of the Cook county roads outside of the city limits. These are said to be just a little bit worse, if possible, than the other country roads throughout the state. The Illinois Bankers Association has maintained a committee on good roads for some time and has done effective work among its membership. All of these organizations will be united when the opportunity comes for presenting the matter before the legislature at its coming session. So far as investigation has been made, it appears that the members of the legislature are favorable to doing all that they reasonably can do for good roads.

SIDE LIGHT ON THE BOY PROBLEM

Keeping the boy on the farm isn't the only difficult problem connected with the bringing up of Young America. A St. Louis choirmaster with years of experience advances his conclusions in a neat set of paragraphs which may help some. He says:

Let your boys be boys.

Don't cram religion down their throats, but let them absorb it.

Don't deny them any legitimate sport consistent with their proper physical and moral development.

If a boy has a stubborn disposition, direct that stubbornness into the right channels and he will make a name for himself.

Inculcate habits of cleanliness, for a healthy body is a great help toward a healthy mind.

It is sometimes a good thing to put a boy on his honor.

Allow them at all times to think for themselves, with guarded supervision, and teach them the right of reason.

In the above one may find a suggestion which may prove helpful in some important case. The bright, ambitious youth resents too much supervision as much as any private banker. He wants only to see the right of a thing from his view point, perhaps, yet he resists mere direction or mandate. Some boys never get a chance to try what may be in them until they leave home. The best boy may be soured and turned from home influences by senseless and useless restrictions.

GOES TO BLOOMINGTON

William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, left Chicago on Friday of this week for Bloomington to attend a meeting of the officers and directors of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, of which he is president; the meeting to be held the afternoon and evening of November 30th. The party will inspect some six miles of hard roads in McLean County, the condition of which has been greatly improved as a result of systematic dragging.

BY JOHN J. BIDDISON

A cruel piece of idle gossip caused a run on the Chariton (Ia.) Savings Bank recently in which many persons of the town participated, and before the day was over nearly $50,000 in cash had been withdrawn from the institution. All demands were promptly met and some people, recovering confidence, replaced large sums when convinced that there was no foundation for the rumors that had spread like wildfire. The absence from town of President J. A. Brown and Vice-president Webster Hultz was responsible for the rumor. Mr. Brown was in the West on a business trip, and Mr. Hultz was in Des Moines.

Yankton, S. D., Bank Celebrates Fortieth Anniversary

The fortieth anniversary of the founding of the First National Bank of Yankton, S. D., was observed Monday with an all day "at home." The bank, organized in 1872, tendered a banquet to 200 pioneers, every one of whom had been in the city or county for 40 years, President F. L. Van Tassell, one of them, doing the honors in person. The building was gay with flags, bunting and ivy, within and without, and music was rendered throughout the day, while souvenirs were given away to all callers.

Want Legislation in Banking Laws

Several measures looking to the betterment of business conditions will be taken up by the next Iowa legislature when it convenes. Among the more important of these will be an effort to remodel the banking laws governing the operation of trust companies. Trust companies are not trust companies, as they are now operated in Iowa, and their operations are decidedly limited. They are not permitted to manage estates, hold funds in trust or do such ordinary duties and, in fact, are quite generally confined to doing a sort of general banking business, in some notable instances being clearing houses for strings of small country banks. Business men hope that the broadening of the sphere of trust companies will result in making it easier to underwrite stock and bond issues and so promote large enterprises that now are often difficult to get under way.

A reform of the tax laws, probably further lessening the burden on moneys and credits, is also on the schedule. An employers' liability law is another measure quite certain to be passed in which business men generally are intensely interested. Business and municipal interests will be represented before this legislature probably more fully than they ever have before.

Visiting Bankers

The following out-of-town bankers were in Sioux City during the past week: Robert Peterson, assistant cashier, First National, Centerville, S. D.; F. E. Frisbee, president, First National, Sheldon, Ia.; A. D. Horton, cashier, First National, Hawarden, Ia.; Chas. E. Walters, of Chas. E. Walters & Co., bank brokers, Council Bluffs, Ia.; D. H. Hedrick, president Battle Creek (Iowa) Savings Bank; W. A. Schaetzel, president Union County Bank, Elk Point, S. D.; Willard Whiting, cashier, and E. M. Casady, president of the Whiting Bank Whiting, Ia.; J. S. Wilson, cashier First National, Hull, Ia.; A. M. Shaw, cashier, Delmont, (S. D.) State Bank; John Schwabland, vice-president First National of Crofton, Neb.; A. J. Granger, assistant cashier, Farmers Bank, Salix Ia.; W. J. Davis, vice-president First National, Hartley, Ia.; John R. Welch, president, First State, Mapleton, Ia.; F. W. Bloxham, cashier First National, Sheldon, Ia.; I. S. Large, president, First National, Rock Valley Ia., and C. W. Brink, banker, Matlock, Ia.

Banking Notes

Further difficulties with the banks of Rapid City, S. D., have attended the recent escapade of Frank Devers, who was arrested on complaint of the Security Savings Bank, charged with having obtained money from it by giving a mortgage to land he did not own. The First National of White Lake has had him arrested again, accusing him of obtaining $150 on a similar false pretense. It was only a short time ago that Devers was fined for assaulting a witness of the Security Bank in the trial of its action.

A jury in a federal court at Aberdeen has found James Wilson and Charles Williams guilty of robbing the postoffice at Milbank, S. D. They were sentenced to two years in the federal prison.

Earl Stearns, cashier of the State Bank of Ludden, N. D., was operated upon for appendicitis a few days ago at Aberdeen, S. D., and is reported to be recovering.

The National Investment Company, of Mitchell, S. D., has been given a charter to do business by the state of South Dakota. It is a million dollar concern, formed to do a general land and investment business.

A three-story building, the first in Hooper, Neb., is to be built next spring by the First National Bank there. The upper floors will be rented to others.

Michael F. Loughlin, a retired banker, fell dead on the street in Sioux City last week, of heart failure, at the age of 59 years. He had lived in Sioux City only since September. He formerly lived at Ackley, Ia.

INDIANA BANK BUILDING

Time for the submission of preliminary plans in the architects' contest for the contract of supervising and planning the erection of the new sixteen-story bank and office building of the Fletcher Savings and Trust Company in Indianapolis has been extended to December 2d. The award to the successful architect probably will be made about two weeks later. It is said that the new building will cost over $600,000.

The building will be of steel construction and will occupy an area of twelve thousand square feet, with a frontage of nearly a hundred feet in Pennsylvania street and one hundred and twenty feet in Market street. It is proposed to make it a notable one, not only in architectural quality, but in the capacity and strength. The trust company has taken a ninety-nine year lease on the building site, with privilege of renewal. Banking quarters will be on the ground floor of the new building. The interior of the banking room will be two stories in height and finished in marble and bronze.

The completion of the building will mean the actual bringing together of the two trust companies which, last July, were merged into the new company which will occupy the building. At the present time these companies are occupying their old quarters, the Marion Trust Company, at East Market street and Monument place and the German American Trust Company at Market and Pennsylvania streets. The merger brought together a capital of $1,500,000, the largest trust company capital in the state.

INCREASE IN WHEAT EXPORTS FROM THE UNITED STATES

Wheat exports from the United States in 1912 will materially exceed those of recent years. The record of the ten months now available in the statistical division of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce indicates that the wheat exports of the full year will exceed one hundred million bushels, against eighty-three million in 1911 and sixty-two million in 1910. The total for the ten months ended with October is seventy-six and one-fourth million bushels, against sixty-seven and three-fourths million in the corresponding months of last year. This increase occurred chiefly in the new crop, the September exports having been seventeen million bushels, against ten and three-quarters million in September of last year, and those of October, twenty million bushels, against eight and three-quarters million in October of last year, the total for the two months of September and October thus being thirty-seven million bushels, against nineteen and one-half million in the same months of 1911.

Only about one-fourth of the wheat exported in October, 1912, went in the form of flour, while nearly two-thirds of that exported in October of last year had been transformed into flour before exportation. This contrast in the proportion of the wheat which was turned into flour before exportation is a characteristic of the wheat export trade of the United States. In those months or years in which the wheat export trade is heavy the proportion which is turned into flour before exportation is small; in those months or years in which the exportation is light the share which is turned into flour before exportation is large. In the fiscal year 1911, when only sixty-nine million bushels of wheat were exported, 66 per cent thereof was in the form of flour; while in 1908, when the wheat exports aggregated 163 million bushels, the share sent in the form of flour was but 38 per cent.

While the wheat exports of 1912 will show larger totals than in immediately preceding years, those of corn and meats show a decline. Figures compiled by the statistical division of bureau of foreign and domestic commerce indicate that the exports of corn in 1912 will be but about one-half those of 1911, the total for the ten months ending with October being twenty-six million bushels, against fifty-three and one-half million in the same months of last year. Meat exports also show a marked decline in 1912 compared with 1911. The quantity of fresh beef exported in the ten months ended with October was less than eight million pounds, against twenty-million in the same months of 1911; of pickled beef, twenty-three million pounds, against thirty-six million in the corresponding period of last year; of lard, three hundred and ninety-five million pounds, against four hundred and thirty-nine million; of oleo oil, eighty-six million pounds, against one hundred and fifty million; and of live cattle, 32,160 head, against 130,928 in the same months of last year. Cotton, however, shows an increase of about fifty million dollars over the corresponding months of last year, and cotton-seed oil also a slight increase, the export figures being, for cotton, four hundred and twenty-one and one-half million dollars in the ten months ended with October, against three hundred and seventy-one million in the corresponding months of last year; and of cotton-seed oil, sixteen and three-fourths million dollars, against fifteen million in the same months of last year.

While the products of the farm will show that little change in the general export record of 1912, those of the factory show a marked advance, the value of manufactures exported in the period for which figures are now available exceeding by more than one hundred million dollars those of the corresponding months of last year and indicating that the grand total of manufactures exported in the full year 1912 will considerably exceed one billion dollars and form about one-half of the total exports.

PAYMENT IN FULL

Toledo, Ohio, November 26th.—According to Assistant State Bank Examiner J. A. Holmes and the attorneys in charge of the Mechanics Savings Bank, the creditors of the defunct institution will receive payment in full.

With the payment of a 70 per cent dividend September 4th, and the authorization of a second dividend of 20 per cent, which was made in Common Pleas Court to-day, the creditors will have received a total dividend of 90 per cent.

Those in charge of the affairs of the bank say a third dividend of 10 per cent will be declared next May upon the expiration of a year, as required by law, before the final dividend is authorized.

According to the statement made to the Court, the additional 20 per cent dividend will be ready for distribution by December 2d.

Two Cincinnati banks acted as reserve agents for the Mechanics Savings Bank.

has won popularity for his books. The heroine is an opera singer, known as Irish Nora, and the tale is concerned with her abduction by a princely suitor, who wants a morganatic wife. She believes that this has been arranged by the American hero, who strikingly resembles the prince. The attention of the reader is held to the end by the author, who mingles mystery and romance in a most baffling manner. Among the other characters are an ex-prize fighter, father of the heroine; her ambitious mother, seeking an entrance into high society, and minor characters who contribute to the humor of situations or complexity of the plot. The book is good reading all the way through, and the dénouement leaves the characters no less surprised than is the amused and interested reader.

Among the boys' stories must be mentioned "The Mystery of the Gray Oak Inn" by Louise Godfrey Irwin. Boys who will read this book will find it very unnecessary to leave home for adventure and excitement. It is full of adventure throughout, with such exciting materials as an old house, the haunt of long ago counterfeiters, a secret room, a big fire, and an agricultural station around which to weave the plot. The story unwinds interestingly and youthfully, until everything is discovered at the end. It is published by Moffat, Yard & Co., New York.

From the press of The Book Supply Company, Chicago, comes a new book. "Their Yesterdays," by Harold Bell Wright. This is the love story of a man and a woman, in which there is sentiment, pathos, and realism. It is unlike anything the author has yet written, and for the first time his own thoughts, rather than those of his characters, have shaped themselves into a delightful story which exalts life and love and honors the home. Mr Wright has won his high place as a story teller by introducing to the world "That Printer of Udell's," "The Shepherd of the Hills," "The Calling of Dan Matthews," and "The Winning of Barbara Worth." "Their Yesterdays" is the best work he has yet done; no one could fail to be uplifted and inspired by its reading. The illustrations are in colors by Coates, and it sells at $1.30 net.

FINGER PRINT SYSTEM ADOPTED BY BANKS

Two Detroit banks, the Peninsular State and the Peoples State, have adopted the finger print system of identification. The system was inaugurated and is supervised by Henry P. Borgman, cashier of the savings department of the Peoples State, and Walter G. Toepel, cashier of the Peninsular State. The system is known as the Flak system, having been originated by P. A. Flak. This method of identification is used in the case of illiterate depositors. The signature consists of the imprint of the first three fingers of the right hand. The system is designed to eliminate the possibility of fraud and at the same time perfect a method which will determine absolutely the identity of saving depositors who are unable to write.

The St. Francis State, village of St. Francis, Minn., has been incorporated with $10,000 capital. R. W. Akin, J. B. Berry, Bozel Hunter, Anoka, are the incorporators. COMMERCE TREBLES IN FOUR YEARS

Commerce between the eastern and western coasts of the United States, by way of the Isthmuses of Panama and Tehuantepec, shows a remarkable growth in recent years. Figures made public by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce and Labor show that this traffic has trebled in value in the last four years. Prior to 1907, all merchandise passing between the eastern and western coasts of the United States by way of the isthmus utilized the Panama Railway. At the beginning of 1907, however, a railway line 190 miles in length was opened across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec in Southern Mexico, constructed with special facilities for transferring merchandise from vessel to railway and railway to vessel, and since that date this traffic, on both the Panama and Tehuantepec railway lines, has grown very rapidly and amounted in the fiscal year 1912 to 125 million dollars in value, against 36 million in 1908. These figures, which include only domestic merchandise passing by way of the isthmus between the eastern and western coasts of the United States (including, however, Porto Rico as among the eastern and Hawaii among the western ports), suggest that a still greater growth in this traffic between the eastern and western coasts is likely to develop with the opportunity for vessel shipments without breaking bulk at the Isthmus, which will come with the opening of the Panama Canal.

The chief growth in this coast to coast traffic by way of the Isthmus has developed, as above indicated, since the opening of the Tehuantepec Railway. The total value of shipments from the Atlantic coast ports to the Pacific coast ports in the year ended June 30, 1908, the first fiscal year including a full year's operation of the Tehuantepec road, was 14¾ million dollars, of which over 13 millions passed by way of the Tehuantepec road. By 1912 the total had grown to 69½ million dollars, of which a little over 55 millions was by way of Tehuantepec.

The value of merchandise passing from Pacific coast ports to Atlantic coast ports by way of the Isthmuses was, in the fiscal year 1908, 19¾ million dollars, of which about 18⅓ millions passed by way of the Tehuantepec road. In the fiscal year 1912, this total had grown to practically 55 million dollars, of which a little less than 45 millions crossed by the Tehuantepec line.

Practically all of the sugar sent from Hawaii to the eastern coast of the United States goes by way of Tehuantepec, and forms considerably more than one-half of the eastward movement of domestic merchandise from the Pacific to the Atlantic coasts by way of the Tehuantepec road; while merchandise from the eastern coast bound for the Hawaiian Islands forms approximately 10 per cent of the westward movement of domestic merchandise across the Tehuantepec road.

The character of articles forming this large traffic between the eastern and western coasts by way of the Isthmuses of Tehuantepec and Panama is shown by a table issued by the Division of Statistics of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. This table shows that of the 12¼ million dollars' worth of merchandise passing from the Atlantic coast to the Pacific ports of the United States in July and August, 1912, iron and steel manufactures amounted to over 3 million dollars; cotton manufactures to nearly 2 million dollars, and the remainder miscellaneous articles in large variety, chiefly manufactures. The merchandise from the Pacific coast destined to the Atlantic ports includes, as above indicated, sugar from the Hawaiian Islands, forming about one-half of the total of 8 million dollars during the two months ended August 31, 1912; the remainder being chiefly fruits, canned vegetables, canned salmon, wool, copper ore, and wines.

RAPID GROWTH IN TRADE WITH ITS NON CONTIGUOUS TERRITORIES

The trade of the United States with its non-contiguous territories will amount to 250 million dollars in the calendar year 1912. Tables just completed by the Division of Statistics of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce and Labor show that during the eight months ended August 31, 1912, merchandise shipped from the United States to the noncontiguous territories amounted to 74 million dollars in value against 61 millions in the same months of last year; and the merchandise received from these territories amounted to 97½ million dollars in value against 80½ million in the corresponding months of last year. This showing of an increase of 30 million dollars—a gain of more than 20% in the single year—gives assurance that the total value of this trade in the current calendar year will reach and probably exceed 250 million dollars in value.

The gain in the trade with the noncontiguous territories has been far greater than that in the trade with foreign countries. The figures of 1912 will exceed by 150% those of a decade ago, while the trade with foreign countries for the same period shows a gain of approximately 75%. The first year in which accurate trade figures with all of the noncontiguous territories were available was the fiscal year ended June 30, 1903. Prior to that time no official data was procurable of the trade with Alaska, and figures were refused by those engaged in the trade with Hawaii and Porto Rico after their annexation to the United States and establishment as customs districts. This condition was, however, remedied by an act of Congress which required statements of this traffic to be made in terms similar to those in which the trade with foreign countries is shown, and in consequence of this enactment full statistics of the traffic have been available since 1903. These figures show that the trade with Porto Rico in 1903 amounted to about 23 million dollars in value, while in the current year it will amount to about 75 million dollars, or more than three times as much as a decade ago. The trade with Hawaii in the year ended

June 30, 1903, was 37 million dollars in value, and in the calendar year 1912 will amount to about 85 million dollars, an increase of over 130% in a decade. With the Philippines, the trade in 1903 was 15 million dollars in value, and in the calendar year 1912 will amount to about 45 million dollars, having trebled in that period. With Alaska the trade of 1903 was about 20 million dollars in value and in the calendar year 1912 promises to be about 45 million dollars, an increase of approximately 125% in the period in question; these figures being exclusive of gold received from Alaska, which seems likely to be greater in the current year than ever before—the figures of the eight months ended with August 31, 1912, being 7⅓ million dollars against a little less than 5 million in the corresponding eight months of 1911, and a little more than 5 millions in the eight months of 1910.

Manufactures form the bulk of the 110 million dollars' worth of merchandise passing to the noncontiguous territories in 1912, and sugar, tobacco, fruits, fish, copper and hemp are the principal articles forming the 140 million dollars' worth of merchandise being received from the territories in question. Sugar forms the bulk of the merchandise received from Hawaii and Porto Rico; hemp and sugar are the largest single items from the Philippines, and canned salmon and copper the largest in the merchandise received from Alaska.

VALUABLE COTTON CROP

Oklahoma is experiencing the most satisfactory cotton trade in years. Those who made cotton their chief crop this year have ample cause to congratulate themselves. At the present time the price is 12 cents; at this time last year it was 9 cents. The difference in price makes each bale worth approximately $15 more to the planter. By virtue of the increased price, the value of the Oklahoma crop will be augmented to the extent of $15,150,000. Market and crop conditions of last year reduced the 1912 acreage 15 per cent, but in spite of this fact the 1912 crop will be as large, if not larger, than that of 1911.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Bankers of the Central West, and especially of Kansas City and Kansas, are much interested in the discussion of the Kansas "Blue Sky" law before the convention of the Investment Bankers Association in New York last week. Several influential delegates to that convention condemned the Kansas law as detrimental to the legitimate investment business, a opinion that is shared by some of the bankers of Kansas. Under the Kansas law every individual or concern seeking to sell securities of any kind, except certain bonds and bank shares, must first place before the state bank commissioner a detailed statement of the business covering every element considered vital to the soundness of the securities offered. It is the complaint of some of the investment bankers that this requirement makes it a physical impossibility for the bank commissioner to pass upon all applications promptly and that the operations of the investment houses are greatly hampered by delay. In justice to the "Blue Sky" law of Kansas, however, it must be said that it has met with general approval among bankers in that state.

Kansas Group Meetings

Three interesting group meetings were held in Kansas last week which were well attended by bankers from Kansas City, St. Joseph, St. Louis and Chicago. Group 2 met at Lawrence, and among the speakers were: A. B. Chrisman, of the Inter-State National of Kansas City; J. T. Pringle, president of the First National of Burlingame, Kan., and J. N. Dolley, state bank commissioner of Kansas. Group 1 met in Kansas City, Kan., and among the speakers there were: C. N. Prouty, cashier of the Exchange State of Kansas City, Kan.; F. M. Wilson, president of the First National of Horton, Kan.; M. H. Malott, president of the Kansas Bankers Association; Prof. J. H. Miller, of the Kansas State agricultural college at Manhattan, Kan., and W. W. Bowman, secretary of the Kansas Bankers Association. Group 4 met at Beloit, Kan., and among the speakers were: G. M. Nimocks, president of the Bank of Scandia, Kan.; J. N. Dolley, Prof. J. H. Miller and G. A. Rogers, of Abilene, treasurer of the National Citizens League for Kansas. Special cars carried the visitors from one group meeting to another.

In Hands of Receiver

Financial and insurance circles in Kansas City and the Southwest have been stirred by disturbance following the attempt to consolidate the Great Western Life Insurance Company of Kansas City with the International Life Insurance Company of St. Louis. The consolidation scheme had had easy sailing until all arrangements had been made for the St. Louis company to take over the entire business of the Kansas City concern and the transfer was to have been made last week. Suddenly a storm of opposition arose among the stockholders of the Great Western Company who objected to the entire plan. On petition before the Kansas City circuit court the company was thrown into a receivership, the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City being named as receiver. This action was to stop the merger. The petitioners say that the Great Western Company was organized in 1907 and was placed in a federal receivership the following year. After two months the receivership was lifted and the company continued to grow, its insurance gaining from $10,000,000 to $16,000,000 and the surplus gaining from nothing to $60,000, or 12%. It was alleged extravagant salaries and general mismanagement caused the company to languish of late and that the officers, especially the president, were quietly obtaining most of the shares. They then sold out to the St. Louis company, so it is alleged, and the whole thing was a case of high financiering. Then the officers secured a temporary writ of prohibition from the state supreme court against the local circuit court and the new president, Thomas R. Marks, against whom there is no charge of any irregular conduct, demanded that the Commerce Trust Company surrender the company's property. The contest became so heated that a personal encounter between President Marks and Pierre Lundin, an attache of the trust company, resulted in broken glass, and a "gun play" on the part of a deputy. J. Z. Miller, vice-president of the Commerce Trust Company, maintained a dignified attitude and held possession. Up to date there have been a dozen lawyers of Kansas City and St. Louis drawn into the controversy as well as several officers of the Commerce Trust Company and Insurance Commissioner Blake of Missouri. And, says everybody concerned, the fight has just begun.

Four Bankers are Sentenced

The four former officers of all night and day banks in various cities of the Central West which failed about the same time and under similar conditions, were convicted of a conspiracy in using the mails to defraud in the federal court at Memphis. Each man was sentenced to five years imprisonment and to pay a fine of $2,000. They are E. L. Hendry, president of All Night and Day Bank of Memphis; J. H. Brooks of the same bank; Abner Davis, of the same bank in Oklahoma City and H. C. Winn of Little Rock, president of the All Night and Day Bank there. C. A. Bonds, organizer of the All Night and Day

Bank in Kansas City, the fifth man indicted, was not sentenced, as he was not able to be in court. This disposes of a series of the most unique bank frauds of recent years in the Southwest. All of the all night and day banks are organized in Memphis, Little Rock, Oklahoma City and Kansas City at about the same time. Although there did not appear to be any official connection among them, it developed that they operated together in the manipulation of business and when the crash came all went down in a heap.

S. M. Pickens Sentenced to Prison

Sam M. Pickens, formerly cashier of the First National Bank of Thayer, Kan., was convicted in the United States district court at Topeka last week, of falsifying the bank's accounts and misapplication of funds. He was sentenced to serve five and one-half years in the federal prison at Leavenworth, but pending an appeal he was given into the custody of a United States marshal. The First National Bank of Thayer was closed by the comptroller on March 31, 1911, after an examination of the books which disclosed a shortage of $32,000. Pickens, the cashier, was charged with the shortage and his defense was that the deficit was due to mismanagement and incompetency. He was indicted on eight counts and was found guilty on five. His trial was one of the most stubbornly contested cases in the history of Kansas. The principal witnesses against him were W. A. Wilcox, a bank examiner and Lewis M. Gray, an expert accountant for the government. Most of the other officers and large stockholders of the bank were farmers of the neighborhood with little experience in banking methods and they trusted Pickens implicitly.

Not a Single Bank Failure

Of the several western states which have adopted the state bank deposit guaranty plan, Nebraska alone is able to make an absolutely clean showing in that it has never been called upon to come to the rescue of a failed bank. In spite of this gratifying fact, however, the Nebraska state banking board is preparing to levy its last semiannual assessment against the deposits in Nebraska state banks at the present rate of one-fourth of one per cent. The guaranty fund is now $560,000 and the next assessment will increase it to nearly $800,000. Under the law that will be the last heavy levy and the banks will thereafter pay only one-twentieth of one per cent each half year until the fund becomes depleted by reason of failures. The law provides that when the guaranty fund reaches 1½ per cent of the aggregate deposits, assessment shall increase alto-

Want Bank Legislation

In the course of a long conference last week between the members of the executive committee of the Oklahoma State Bankers Association and Governor Cruce, several important phases of proposed financial legislation were discussed. In view of the great number of bank and train robberies in Oklahoma within the past few months, the bankers asked the governor to recommend legislation providing heavier penalties for these crimes. Governor Cruce expressed his entire sympathy with this proposal, but insisted that if anything was done along the line of heavier punishment for bank robbers, it should be made to work both ways—applying to robbery from the inside as well as from the outside. He told the committee that four times as much money had been taken from Oklahoma banks by the persons in charge of them as had been taken by highwaymen "operating from the outside." The bankers, led by Bank Commissioner Lankford, also urged that it be made a felony in Oklahoma to circulate a false report which is directly or inferentially derogatory to the financial condition or affects the solvency or financial standing of banks. Another matter having important bearing upon Oklahoma banks was the suggestion from the bankers themselves that prohibitive measures should be taken against bankers lending or advancing money from a bank to an outside concern with which the bankers are identified, directly or indirectly, as nearly every bank failure in Oklahoma, the bankers asserted, was due to loans in which officers, directors and heavy stockholders were directly interested. Governor Cruce promised to take these suggestions under advisement when he formulates his coming message to the legislature.

Offers Rewards for Bank Robbers

In the hope of stimulating public and official activity in hunting down bank robbers, the Oklahoma Bankers Association has decided to offer standing rewards for the capture of these offenders. Reward signs have been sent out to every state bank in Oklahoma which reads as follows: "One thousand dollars reward for bank burglars. As a member of the Oklahoma Bankers Association, this bank is protected against bank burglary as follows: $500 offered by the state banking board for arrest and conviction; $500 by the Oklahoma Bankers Association for the robbers, dead or alive." This action is expected to prove a timely warning against the various gangs of bank robbers who have been spreading terror among the smaller bank of the state for many months.

Central West Notes

The directors of the Stock Yards Bank of Commerce of Kansas City, held an annual election last week at which John S. Gillespie was made president and Charles W. Bartlett was chosen vice-president. The other officers remain the same. The capital stock of the bank will be increased from $25,000 to $50,000.

The directors of the Gold Savings Bank of Wichita, Kan., last week decided to change the name of the institution to the Union State Bank of Wichita. This bank was organized by the late Hiram Lewis, in connection with the Monarch Trust Company and it has gradually grown in importance until it has severed all relations with its parent organization.

So well has the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City administered the affairs of the defunct American Union Trust Company of Kansas, that after paying the depositors 75% of their money, it is said that the Commerce Trust Company is now ready to make a final payment of 22%. The payment is delayed on account of litigation, but the matters are expected to be cleared within a few weeks. The American Union Trust Company was organized in January 1911, and six months later it took over the All Night and Day Bank of Kansas City. It was this transaction that sent the company to the wall and last January, after trying vainly to straighten out the affairs of the institution, the Missouri bank commissioner turned over the business to the Commerce Trust Company.

The Kansas City Clearing House Association has leased new quarters over the Missouri Savings Bank at 920 Walnut Street. It will occupy the second and third floors, which will be splendidly fitted up. For years the clearing house was located at 921 Baltimore Avenue, but outgrew these quarters. In the new location the clearing house will be in the center of Kansas City's financial district, being within two blocks of sixteen banks, six of them being less than a block away.

The North Texas Trust Company, has been organized at Fort Worth, Tex., and will begin business with a capital stock of $250,000, which will be raised to a million soon. Sam Davidson is president, T. W. Clack and W. E. Connell, vice-presidents, and J. W. Scheuber, secretary and treasurer. The directors are all prominent bankers and business men of Fort Worth.

John A. Prescott, of John A. Prescott & Company; H. P. Wright of the H. P. Wright Investment Company, and W. T. Kemper, president of the Commerce Trust Company, were Kansas City delegates to the national convention of the American Investment Bankers Association in New York last week.

Thornton Cooke, vice-president of the Fidelity Trust Company, made an address before the Kansas City Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, last Tuesday night. Mr. Cooke discussed "Wealth and Money."

Kansas City will vote on a proposed municipal bond issue of nearly three million dollars at a special election to be held in January.

Groesbeck, Tex., is to have a new bank to be known as the Farmers Guaranty State Bank. It will have a capital stock of $25,000 and will open for business January 1st, in a building that is being erected for it.

The Texas department of banking has approved the following reserve agents: For the First State of Seagoville, the Farmers and Merchants State of Waco; for the Guaranty State of Ore City, the Central Texas Exchange National of Waco; for the Asherton State of Asherton, the Laredo National of Laredo; for the First Guaranty State of Leesburg, the Chase National of New York; for the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas, the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City; for the First State of Liberty Hill, the National Bank of Commerce, Houston; for the Continental State of Bridgeport, the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas; for the Alamo Trust Company of San Antonio, the Citizens Bank and Trust Company of Austin; for the First State of Newsome, the First National of Winnsboro; for the Farmers and Merchants State of Kennedy, the Hanover National of New York; for the Farmers and Merchants State of Ballinger, the State National of Fort Worth; for the Citizens State of McLean, the City National of Dallas.

San Antonio, Tex., is agitating the question of issuing $5,000,000 for municipal improvements.

C. A. Middaugh, assistant cashier of the Missouri Savings Bank of Kansas City, addressed pupils and others in a social center meeting last week at the Irving school. He urged that children be taught how to save.

Chang Yin Tang, the Chinese ambassador to the United States, was in Kansas City several days last week, having been invited to make an address at the annual John Jay dinner of the Kansas City Commercial Club. In his tour of the city he was shown the time lock on the door of the vault of the Southwest National Bank of Commerce, and for an hour he studied the complicated mechanism with absorbing interest. He insisted upon the lock being taken apart for his special benefit, and it was.

Among out of town visitors to Kansas City's financial district last week were: E. A. Ford, cashier of the Waldo State, Waldo, Kan.; F. A. Sewall, vice-president of the First National of Texhoma, Okla.; E. E. Williams, cashier of the Real Estate Bank of Marysville, Kan.; C. H. Jones, cashier of the Lynn County Bank of Brookfield, Mo.; E. F. Enloe, cashier of the State Bank of Moorhead, Kan.; E. F. Elerick, president of the First National of Oklahoma City, Okla., and Henry C. Duncan, president of the Bank of Osborne, Mo.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Every state needs a "Blue Sky" law said Joseph Chapman, vice-president of the Northwestern National, at the last dinner of a series by the Minneapolis jobbers and manufacturers to the visitors at the land show. The purpose, he said, is to protect people in their investments. "When we have such laws in every state," said Mr. Chapman, "there will be more money to invest in land. Millions of dollars are lost every year in swindling operations. Not one dollar is lost when a man buys land and goes onto it and cultivates it."

H. J. Schwartz to be Freed After Ten Months

The board of pardons has allowed H. J. Schwartz, cashier of the State of Royalton, to have his freedom after serving ten months of an indeterminate sentence for receiving deposits when he knew the bank was insolvent. The request for liberty was on the ground that the banker did not do wrong intentionally, that he took no money for his own use, that he believed the bank would pay out, and that he was the victim of other officers. W. P. Phillips, manager of the First National, Vinita, Okla., sentenced last spring to five years, for making a false report to the comptroller of the currency, is to be given a new trial in the second judicial district at Tulsa, ordered the circuit court of appeals in session at St. Paul.

H. W. Parker Addresses Office Men

To the Minneapolis Office Mens association, H. W. Parker, cashier of the St. Paul Merchants National, said of the administration of credits as a career: "The time a credit should run is the time a merchandise should run; until it disappears from the wealth of the country. When the wealth disappears the credit should vanish. Good credit in the markets of the world enables the merchant to do good business. The system of credits has developed almost into a science. The credit man must be a good man of business and he must know human nature. He must be able to judge whether the buyers are overbuying, and must keep in touch with local and national business conditions. He must walk in the rut of routine, but he must be a pathfinder. He must be endowed with patience and loyalty. Skill in reading between the lines is a part of the credit man's work. His office is one of hard work and large responsibility."

St. Paul Consolidation Expected Soon

Consolidation of the Merchants National and National German American is expected December 2d. For the time the new bank will be in the National German building, Fourth and Robert Streets. The Merchants will move Saturday at the close of business. More than $500,000 of the money to be transferred from the Merchants will be in coin and the $1,500,000 in other currency. Retiring President James W. Lusk, of the National German American is to have a desk in the bank. He will act in an advisory capacity.

Agriculture the Hub of Business

The farmers must raise the produce and the cities must turn the trend of immigration to the farms that more help may be obtained in raising larger crops, is the theory of J. W. Wheeler, president of the Capital Trust Co., St. Paul. He told the conservation congress that the solution of the high cost of living is up to the farmer. The explanation is based on the opinion that in 1950 the United States will be the home of 200,000,000 people. That suffering may be precluded from insufficient food, Mr. Wheeler declared, the farmers must increase the product of their farms one per cent each year.

"The Business Man's Interest in Settlement and Agricultural Development," Mr. Wheeler's subject, was answered by his assertion that the hub of business is agriculture. The business man is dependent on the farmer and must aid the farmer to meet the problem of soil conservation, that business years hence may not fail with the farmer. The farmer is becoming a landed aristocrat, not an aristocrat of the old meaning, he declared, but rather the backbone of the nation. At the same time, Mr. Wheeler said, the American business man gradually is coming to know that the farmer's success means universal success in the commercial field.

New State Bank for Minneapolis

The Citizens State, with $25,000 capital and $5,000 surplus, is the latest Minneapolis bank. It is to open about January 1st in an outside business district, three miles from the financial center. The bank is spending $15,000 on the building changes and equipment. Stock is reported sold at $120. Officers are: President, F. A. Samels, formerly with the Dakota County Bank at Lakeville; vice-presidents, N. D. Samels, commission merchant, and T. O. Gulack, retired banker from North Dakota; cashier, C. B. Stringer, formerly at Osage, Ia., and lately of the Samels bank. Mr. Samels has two banks in Minnesota and two in North Dakota. Forty-five people of the bank's community are stockholders in the new institution.

High School Bonds Sold

High school bonds, 4 per cents, running 30 years, have been sold by Minneapolis to R. L. Day Company, Boston, at 95.619. Certificates of indebtedness covering a bridge approach have been sold to the Minnesota Loan & Trust Company and the Wells & Dickey Company, at public sale, to confirm a previous sale. Another $100,000 bonds are to be sold in January. There were seven bids.

New Montana Bank

The Farmers State at Cut Bank, Mont., has been organized with $20,000 capital to open January 1st, in which Minneapolis financial men are interested. Among them are President J. H. Tucker of the Minnehaha State, Cashier F. H. Werden, and G. H. Towle of the Towle-Jamieson Company. Cut Bank al-

Chase Wants Commission to Pass on Petition for Bank Charters

Kelsey S. Chase, Minnesota superintendent of banks, wants a commission to pass on all petition for bank charters. He will recommend the improvement to the state legislature next winter. Mr. Chase said: "There are enough banks in Minnesota now, and in many instances the conditions would be materially improved if the number of banks should be reduced. I have no authority now to refuse a charter and don't care for any such authority, but the state should have a commission which should examine all applications and whenever the territory in which the bank is to be located will not support a bank on a conservative and legitimate banking basis the commission should have the authority to refuse a charter. There are many places now with two banks that will be better off with one and there are some communities with a bank that really cannot give it support."

Rates on Money Too High

Captain Horace I. Bedell, real estate, International Falls, Minn., objects to the high rate of interest charged by the bankers for money to be utilized in developing the northern part of the state. He called on Minneapolis bankers, then went on to Chicago, and thence will go to New York. The bankers take money from southern Minnesota at a low rate and then charge through their banks in northern Minnesota a 10 per cent rate. In the same line W. G. Bierd, vice-president and general manager for the Minneapolis & St. Louis road, at the recent conservation congress in Minneapolis said: "Rates on money are too high. No farmer can afford the northwestern rate of 8½ per cent. There is always money for desirable investment, and the farmer will get his money cheap as soon as he makes his investment desirable. The farmers security is his land, and when that land is producing 14 to 16 bushels of wheat to the acre, it is worth $47 to $50 an acre. But the same land can be made worth $100 to $125 an acre if the farmer makes it produce 30 bushels to the acre, and he has then cut his interest rate from 8 to 5 per cent, for his security is then as desirable as any. The farmer is to-day insuring the banker and paying the banker his rate of interest beside. It is this element of risk or faulty security that makes the farmer's interest cost so high."

Bank Merger Ratified

Merger of the Merchants National and the National German American under the name of the Merchants National was ratified Wednesday. The stockholders of the Merchants elected the board of the National German American as members of the board of the Merchants National. Twenty-six directors are in the new bank. Aside from F. H. Thatcher of Winona and Frank Schlick of St. Paul, the directors were members of the boards of one or the other of the two banks. Judge James W. Lusk, former president of the National German American, did not become a director in the new institution.

The directors elected were: George H. Prince, F. Weyerhauser, Kenneth Clark, A. H. Lindeke, E. N. Saunders, R. C. Jefferson, Charles P. Noyes, Thomas Irvine, V. M. Watkins, Timothy Foley, Jacob Dittenhofer, J. M. Hannaford, T. J. Humbird, Ambrose Guiterman, James H. Skinner, Crawford Livingston, Thomas A. Marlow, W. B. Parsons, Louis W. Hill, L. P. Ordway, Frank Schlick, F. R. Bigelow, Frank B. Kellogg, F. E. Weyerhauser, F. H. Thatcher and Donald S. Culver. The new institution will open for business Monday with $2,000,000 capital, $2,000,000 surplus, and above $20,000,000 deposits.

Country Clearing House For Twin Cities

George F. Orde, vice-president of the First National, was detailed by the Twin City Bankers Association to study in Kansas City a plan to establish a country clearing house in one of the cities. The plan may be adopted by the clearing house association, or by another association formed to facilitate business in the form of country checks.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals are hereby invited by Lawrence County, South Dakota, addressed to the undersigned, for the purchase of not exceeding $150,000 5 per cent bonds. Bids will be opened by the Board of County Commissioners, at Deadwood, South Dakota, on Tuesday, December 17, 1912, at 10 o'clock A. M.

This issue was authorized by a vote of the electors of the County at the general election held November 5, 1912. The vote recorded in favor of the issue was 2755, against 1136.

The purpose of the issue is to fund the outstanding warrant indebtedness of the County which approximates $150,000.

The bonds will be issued in denominations to suit the successful bidders, and will draw interest at 5 per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, and principal and interest payable at the Fourth National Bank of the City of New York, or at the office of the County Treasurer at Deadwood, South Dakota.

The bonds will run for twenty years with the option to redeem after ten years from their date.

A check certified by a reputable bank for two and one-half per cent of the amount of the bid must accompany each proposal, as an evidence of good faith.

The right is specially reserved to reject any or all bids and to accept any offer the Commissioners may consider to be for the best interests of the County.

Further particulars will be furnished by the undersigned on application.

NEAL C. HALL

C. T. Jaffray Back From East

C. T. Jaffray, vice-president of the Minneapolis First National, also from the East, said:

"The East has an excellent idea of the prosperity of the Northwest. The earnings of the Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Soo roads have been heavy, and the statements of these roads are regarded as the most significant index of the business conditions in the West.

"New York is busy. Building, as usual, is going on rapidly and there is little fear in commercial life of an immediate lowering of the tariff. Of course, if the tariff is lowered, it will result in less revenue for the textile and fabric manufacturers of the East."

Bank Clearings High

Bank clearings in St. Paul have already passed the $500,000,000 mark and in Minneapolis the $1,000,000,000 mark for 1912. Last year the line was not reached in Minneapolis until December 10th, when the total was $1,001,211,865. In St. Paul the clearings for last year were $513,121,148, with a prospect this year of a much better showing. The figures for Minneapolis are:

1912 (estimated).....	$1,200,000,000.00
1911	1,068,090,893.73
1910	1,155,659,664.74
1909	1,029,914,855.58
1908	1,057,468,860.09
1907	1,145,452,149.83

Minneapolis Has Cheapest Money

Returned from the East E. W. Decker, president Northwestern National, said: "Minneapolis has the cheapest money of any city in the country. Interest rates have been lower than in Chicago or New York. The only man complaining in the East is the Wall Street stock broker.

"Railroad financing will be done next year on a pretty liberal scale. The New Haven paid 6½ per cent for $40,000,000 for a year while I was East, which shows the trend of things. The other big feature was the completion of the plan for a building on the Equitable site. Here it is expected that from a thirty-six story building sufficient rental revenue will be derived to pay operating expenses and taxes on land that cost $13,500,000 and a building that will cost $15,000,000, and leave a profit. Property and rents are going up in New York.

"On the whole I do not think I ever saw conditions looking better in the East. Barring something unforeseen, the consensus of opinion is that the entire country is in for good times next year."

Northwest Notes

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Out of the fifth national apple show, which closed in Spokane last week, has developed a sturdy movement to organize growers of Washington, Idaho, Oregon and Montana into a large co-operative marketing agency. The issue will be settled finally at a meeting of representatives of all districts in Spokane, December 16th, called by President Robert E. Strahorn of the apple show at the instance of more than 100 growers.

The marketing plan comes as the result of knowledge that the many producing districts of the Pacific Northwest must band together to insure the success of the apple industry. Reductions not only in price to the consumer, but in cost of production and marketing, is the aim of the movement. This year about 16,000 carloads of apples are being marketed in the Pacific Northwest, and these figures will increase rapidly in future years.

Financial Conditions Improved

Business is better and financial conditions have improved, making more money available for enterprises of all kinds in the Spokane country since the election, according to Spokane bankers.

"Greater activity is noticed in all lines of business following the election," states J. Grier Long, president of the Washington Trust Company. "The business outlook in Spokane and the surrounding country is on the upward trend decidedly."

"The present financial condition in Spokane is excellent," says J. C. Cunningham, manager of the Union Trust & Savings Bank. "The mining industry, lumber business and farming all are yielding record returns. Plenty of money is available for local enterprises and the outlook for the future is exceedingly bright."

Confidence in Washington

Confidence in Washington and in Spokane business institutions on the part of California investors and financial men is reported by J. P. M. Richards, president of the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company, on his return from an extended visit in the Southwest. "I visited Los Angeles, San Francisco, Santa Barbara, San Diego and Portland," states Mr. Richards, "and found many stockholders of the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company and Washington Water Power Company. Their confidence in Washington and the Spokane country is great. Spokane looks better to me now than it ever did. I am especially glad to see work so well under way on the $2,000,000 Davenport Hotel. The erection of this hotel is the beginning of a new era in the prosperity of Spokane."

Begin Work on Railroad

Work began this week on the $3,000,000 Northern Pacific grade separation project in Spokane. After a large force of carpenters has torn up warehouse platforms along the right of way, track-layers will place a new track on the south side to allow the contractors to start building the concrete wall on the opposite side.

Tracks will be elevated through the city a distance of four miles.

Banking Notes

The National Grange, in session at Spokane this week, committed itself to support legislation enabling farmers to borrow from government postal savings banks at a rate slightly higher than is now paid by national banks for use of these funds. As the government loans these funds to national banks at 2¼% interest, the grange considers it possible to bring the cost of administration of farm loans at about 4%.

Seventeen acres of land at Parkwater, the industrial townsite just east of the Spokane city limits, are being condemned by the Washington Water Power Company as a site for a new transformer station to cost between $200,000 and $300,000. A power line from the company's $6,000,000 project at Long Lake, Wash., will be built to the new transformer.

Machinery of the $1,000,000 plant of the International Portland Cement Company, at Irwin, nine miles east of Spokane, will be set in motion December 10th. Most of the machinery is now in place and shipment of raw materials from Bayview, on Lake Pend Oreille, will start December 1st.

Spokane school children have a bank account of $62,295.25 in the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company, according to a report made November 1st.

Spokane banks have erected welcome shields over their doors in preparation for the American Mining Congress, November 25th to 30th.

Among out-of-town bankers in Spokane this week were: L. L. Work, Oroville; D. F. Staley, Pullman; J. L. Taggart, Uniontown, and R. K. Wheeler, Elk River, Idaho.

Wenatchee's car famine has been ended permanently, it is believed, and the apple crop of the Wenatchee valley is now being sent rapidly to the middle western and eastern markets, via the Great Northern.

EDMONTON NEWS

When the provincial parliament of Alberta meets next spring, the legislative committee of the city council of Edmonton will urge the adoption of several amendments to the charter to give the municipality added powers. Among the subjects discussed informally by the committee at its last meeting are the following:

To issue treasury notes or bills for emergency measures.

To issue stock instead of debentures or bonds.

To charge a frontage tax for all public utilities, or improvements.

To give the city power to facilitate land purchases.

To change the fiscal year to correspond with the calendar year.

Members of the committee are of the opinion that the city should have power to charge extensions of all public utilities, owned and operated by the municipality, as a frontage or local improvement tax. This does not mean, necessarily, that such extensions will be charged as a local improvement, but that the corporation is empowered to do so. The same condition would prevail as relates at present to water main extensions. The real purpose of the amendment is to enable the city to lay gas mains by frontage tax.

The committee has not fully decided upon the advisability of applying for power to issue stock as well as debentures. The city commissioners' treasurer, auditor, and solicitor have been directed to prepare reports on stocks and debentures as a means of raising money. If it is found desirous the amendment will be incorporated in the petition.

The amendment to issue treasury notes or bills is looked upon with favor. The city has not the power to issue such paper at present—it issues promissory notes payable to banks, individuals or corporations. It is held that treasury notes are safety valves or emergency measures.

It was suggested by the commissioners that a way for the city to acquire land more quickly than at present would be an amendment whereby the city will take the same course as provided by the railway act in expropriating ground. This means that the appraisal of the property will be from the date the corporation seeks it, and not after values have enhanced as the result of the knowledge of where improvements will be made by the city.

The city council of Edmonton has authorized the commissioners to negotiate a loan from a bank of $238,000 to cover items of expense likely to be incurred between now and the close of the calendar year. This becomes a special charge upon the debentures authorized under various by-laws amounting to $1,238,710.

PLANS NATIONAL HIGHWAY

Congressman Stanton Warburton of Tacoma, Washington, spent several days in Chicago this week, in the interest of a bill which he proposes to introduce in congress in December, which will provide for a national highway. The money to build the roads necessary to connect the various state capitals with each other and with the national capital and with the principal national parks will be raised by restoring the internal revenue tax of 1879 on tobacco. It is proposed to set aside the additional income from this source as a national road fund, which it is estimated would amount to about eighty millions a year. It would be a little more than double the present internal revenue tax on tobacco. Congressman Warburton expects that the cost of the proposed roads will not exceed $25,000 per mile and probably not $20,000. It is proposed that 1½% of the additional income shall be used in constructing like roads in national parks. The proposed increased tax on tobacco will not prove burdensome to the consumer. For instance, it would raise the tax on a ten cent cigar three-tenths of one cent. The manufacturer of a ten cent cigar would decrease the size one-thirtieth and the consumer could not tell the difference in size. The manufacturer of smoking tobacco likewise would decrease the size of the package about a twelfth and the consumer would not notice the difference in the size.

The bill will provide for immediate construction of an Atlantic and Gulf line from Augusta, Maine, to Baton Rouge, La., and Tallahassee, Fla., and a Pacific coast line from Olympia, Washington, to Los Angeles, Cal., and for the construction of the other lines as rapidly as they can be built on the income. Congressman Warburton says that if the bill is passed at the coming session of congress, which ends on March 4th, and the law goes into effect by July 1st of next year, a small appropriation can be provided for the preliminary surveys and work. Work could be begun by August, 1913, on the Atlantic and Pacific lines. They could be completed in a year and the Pacific line would be ready for the fair at San Francisco in 1915. Work can be prosecuted on all of the Pacific lines and the southern part of the Atlantic lines during the winter season.

HISTORICAL POINTS IN ILLINOIS

R. R. Wallace, cashier of the First National of Hamilton, Ill., writes most interestingly about the history of various localities on the Mississippi River and tributary to Hamilton. He says that many of the old landmarks in his vicinity soon will be matters of history because they will be overflowed as soon as the dam across the river between Hamilton and Keokuk is in operation. The second oldest settlement in Iowa was just across the river and a little below the present town of Nauvoo. Mr. Wallace says he is not sure whether this settlement was older than the first one on this side of the river between Hamilton and Nauvoo, but that whatever settlements were made in Illinois prior to 1830 were very close to the river and between the present site of Warsaw, then known as Fort Edwards, and the present site of Nauvoo. In 1841 there was a wing dam constructed in the river half way between Hamilton and Nauvoo. During the winter of 1841 and 1842 it was washed away. In 1842 the dam was rebuilt and furnished power to a grist mill, which was operated from 1842 to 1849. When the river is low the foundation of the wing dam is clearly visible, and even now a person who knows where it is can see the ripple in the water. This will be at least forty feet under water by the first of June of next year. Mr. Wallace has in his possession a facsimile of the original contract for the construction of the second wing dam, and in twenty minutes can put his hand on the original document. Some time between 1823 and 1827 a man by the name of I. N. Waggoner settled about a half mile from this old mill dam and accumulated quite a fortune by piloting boats over the rapids. His home, built in 1843, is being wrecked, and Mr. Wallace has bought old logs that were under the floor and rafters that were in the building. It was a brick and stone building with old split oak laths and some old brass locks that must be a hundred years old, or even older. About a hundred yards below where the old water mill stood is a house in which it is claimed Robert E. Lee lived when he was a lieutenant in the United States army and fresh from college. It is said that he did some surveying around there. The site of the old court house built of logs in the early 20's, when Hancock and Adams counties and other territory were districted together, will be submerged by the new lake.

These interesting historical facts furnished by Mr. Wallace are a reminder that bankers throughout the state should assist in preserving important historical data in their respective localities and see that this matter gets before the county historical societies and eventually finds its way into the records of the Illinois Historical Society at Springfield.

FAVORS COMMISSION TO PASS ON APPLICATION FOR BANK CHARTERS

Kelsey S. Chase, superintendent of banks for Minnesota, advocates the creation of a banking commission to pass upon all applications for bank charters. Mr. Chase says that in many instances conditions would be improved materially if the number of banks were reduced. An effort will be made to have the matter come before the legislature.

MICHIGAN BANKER INDICTED

The federal grand jury at Grand Rapids has returned an indictment against John Sibben, former assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Manistee, Mich., charging him with the embezzlement of $44,000 of the bank's funds. When the shortage was discovered in October, Sibben is said to have admitted that he had taken the money.

GOOD ROADS CONGRESS TO MEET

The American Good Roads Congress will meet the first week in December, in connection with the ninth annual convention of the American Road Builders Association at Cincinnati. A program of unusual interest is promised for the occasion. Those who will present papers and lead the discussions represent fourteen different states and one Canadian province. Eight of the authors of papers and discussions are among those who have been selected from this country to present papers at the international road congress to be held in London next June. In connection with the congress there will be an exhibition of machinery and materials used in highway construction and maintenance. There also will be exhibits from the United States office of public roads, many of the states, several of the larger cities and a number of the leading engineering schools.

WRECK BANK SAFE; GET $800

Cracksmen blew open a safe in the private bank and steamship office of Savero Pitassi and Aristide Vingo at 753 West Taylor Street early last Saturday and escaped with $800 and $10 worth of postage stamps. Nitroglycerin was used and the explosion blew one side of the safe through a showcase and shattered one of the plate glass windows in the front of the bank.

PROMINENT CINCINNATI BANKER DEAD

Briggs Swift Cunningham, chairman of the board of directors of the Citizens National of Cincinnati, died at his home there on Sunday of this week at the age of 73. Heart disease was given as the cause of his death. Mr. Cunningham retired from the presidency of the Citizens National about a year ago. He also was a director in several other enterprises.

He will remain on the board of directors of the bank and will be chairman of the executive committee.

WOMEN TO HOLD GOOD ROADS MEETING

The second annual convention of the Illinois and Interstate Women's Good Roads Association in furtherance of the Lincoln memorial highway and state and county bond issues for good roads will be held in the LaSalle Hotel, December 3d.

Des Moines, November 27th.—As reports begin to come in from the cornfields of Iowa it becomes more and more apparent that the output of Iowa's favorite staple this year will break all records. It is not possible to get reports from the Iowa Crop Bureau until the report is read to the State Agricultural Society early in December. But other corn experts have estimated that the total crop will be 453,000,000 bushels. The heaviest yield ever reported in the past was 388,000,000 bushels. From this it will be seen that the increase is tremendous. It is estimated by crop statisticians that the value of the farm wealth of Iowa is close to a billion dollars. The crops and herds for last year for instance are estimated at $621,000,000. But this year it is estimated that $900,000,000 would be more nearly correct. Moreover, the bank deposits show up $400,000,000. The Iowa farmer is not suffering any because of lack of prosperity. With the tremendous increase in all yields this year, there is no reason to doubt but that the ensuing months are going to set a new pace in the financial growth of the Iowa banks. Since last year, the increase of deposits has been remarkable, while clearings in every city in the state have shown a most satisfactory gain.

Time for Tariff Revision

Des Moines bankers opine that the special session of congress will be a good thing for the country. Recently, a Des Moines newspaper interviewed C. H. Martin, president of the Peoples Savings; Lee Stevens, president of the Century Savings, and H. T. Blackburn, cashier of the Iowa National. All expressed the belief that the country is in better shape now to stand tariff "tinkering" than it ever was before and better than it may be two years hence. Since the country is due for tariff revision, they think it better to relieve the uncertainty that now exists. This is also the view of Senator A. B. Cummins.

Suit for Refund of Tax Money

Attorney-General Cosson, was represented in a suit at Keokuk involving the old question of taxation of government bonds. The Keokuk National is the plaintiff in the suit and Lee county is defendant. The bank was taxed for six continuous years from 1903 to 1908 on $85,000 worth of government bonds. Since then it has been ruled by several judges in Iowa and by the supreme court that such bonds cannot be taxed. The bank is now seeking to secure a refund of the tax paid in in this way. The county is resisting and the attorney-general wants to get an adjudication of the question that appears to be perennial. A similar suit against the city of Keokuk has been filed by the bank. The amount involved in the latter case is $4,000.

enamored of the hounds when he recently was an interested spectator at Gilbertville at which time two hounds trailed a fellow who had thrown a rock through the plate glass window of the bank there and who confessed, when arrested, that the hounds had the right man. Some days ago, following the attempted robbery of the bank at Hudson, the hounds took the scent and trailed the gang, presumably, through the streets of Waterloo. Their performance attracted wide attention although they did not land the robbers. It is thought that if crooks know that Waterloo has two bloodhounds on the job, they will fight shy of that section of the state.

Bank Robber Wanted by Washington Police

The Des Moines police have been asked for information relative to E. J. Blair, by the police at Washington, D. C. Blair was once quite prominent in Iowa bank robber circles. He was arrested at Omaha for participating in a bank robbery in Mills county, Iowa. The Nebraska Bankers Association had him brought to Des Moines where the I. B. A., had him mugged. Just what Blair has done at Washington has not been made known in Des Moines.

Death of Hopkinton Banker

Judge Frederick Benjamin Doolittle, president of the Hopkinton State Bank at Hopkinton and one of the pioneer financiers of the state, died in Des Moines last week, while on a business trip to this city. Judge Doolittle became connected with the Hopkinton bank in 1844 and remained its president until his death. He was a native of New York, where he was born in 1825. He located in Iowa in 1850 and laid out the town of Delaware in 1860. He organized the Davenport & St. Paul Railroad, which later became a part of the Milwaukee system. Judge Doolittle and his wife have been prominent in philanthropical circles. They have given more than $30,000 to Lenox College, which is located at Hopkinton. Pneumonia contracted on the train while en route to Des Moines was responsible for the death of the banker.

Cedar Rapids State Now Open

The Cedar Rapids State Bank, a new institution, opened its doors last week with a fine line of visitors and a splendid new structure. The new institution starts out with a capital stock of $50,000. It is so located that the farmers driving into the city go past its door, and it is thought this will add materially to the bank's business. The banking rooms are furnished throughout in mahogany. The fixtures are the latest in style and design and thoroughly modern in every detail. A fire-proof room for safety deposit boxes adjoins the big fire-proof vault. The safe is 9,800 pounds in weight and is guaranteed burglar-proof.

Install Electric Signs

Two banks in Des Moines have installed handsome electric signs as the result of inspirations received while at the Detroit convention. The Commercial Savings and the Century Savings are the two institutions which have adopted this means of calling attention to themselves after night. Des Moines boasts of having the best lighted down-town streets of any city of its size in the country and the two new signs have added greatly to the general lighting scheme.

May Have "Blue Sky" Law in Iowa

It is apparent, from replies which the greater Des Moines committee is receiving to a list of questions sent out, that Iowa is interested in having a "blue sky" law. Committees of prominent men in each city in the state of over 2,000 have been sent communications and they are asked to use their influence before the coming legislature. Responses indicate that the sentiment is general throughout Iowa that this state should have a law putting an end to fraudulent investments. Reports from Kansas are also being received and they are practically unanimous in favor of the statute as it exists there.

Movement to Shorten Banking Hours

A movement has been started at Waterloo to change the banking hours there so that the institutions will be open to the public at 10 o'clock in the morning and will close at three. Heretofore the banks there, as in most Iowa cities, have been opening at 9 o'clock. It is figured that this extra hour in the morning would permit the bookkeepers and clerks to keep up with the business of the day without being kept an unnecessarily long time after banking hours in the afternoon.

Iowa Banking Notes

It was expected that a new bank and trust company would be organized at Davenport and an option was secured on the first floor of the Lane Building. However, the option was permitted to expire and it is thought that the movement has been abandoned.

The First National at Manchester is having plans drawn for a complete remodeling of its building. When completed it will be an exceptionally beautiful structure.

A new national bank to be known as the First National is being organized at Grant. Alex Weir, a Cumberland capitalist, is back of the movement. The institution will have a capital stock of $25,000, and should be a winner, as Grant is located in a wealthy farming community.

L. E. Stevens, president of the Century Savings of Des Moines, has been nominated president of the Commercial Club, and will be elected without opposition. Mr. Stevens is a real booster and since he has reached Des Moines he has taken an active part in the doings of the Commercial Club. He has been especially active in working for a public loan bureau, which will put the loan sharks out of business.

John H. Blair, vice-president of the Des Moines National, has returned from Texas, where he spent several weeks on business affairs.

MANY bankers, from time to time, have need of a special or secondary reserve fund. This reserve fund they carry in bonds or as an inactive account at interest with a metropolitan bank. We make a specialty of handling such inactive reserve accounts for banks and bankers, and of supplying carefully selected bonds for investment, circulation, emergency currency, government deposits or postal savings fund purposes. To banks intending to establish a secondary reserve fund unexcelled facilities are offered.

We have prepared an exceptionally informative leaflet on government bond data in concise enough form to be practical to every banker, — just the thing to have close at hand for ready reference. We shall be pleased to send these leaflets free upon request.

CHICAGO CHAPTER, AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF BANKING

Charles F. Hoerr, vice-president of the Home Bank and Trust Company, Chicago, and a chapter member of long standing, addressed Chicago Chapter at Assembly Hall, Tuesday evening, November 26th, on "Optimism and Persistence." Martin C. Applet and Frank E. Rasmussen favored the chapter with a piano duet.

CINCINNATI CHAPTER ISSUES "CHAPTER MAN"

Cincinnati Chapter is one of the live chapters in the American Institute of Banking. Under the editorship of Benjamin F. G. Keam of the Union Savings Bank and Trust Company, it now has started a monthly, "The Chapter Man," for the purpose of bringing the bank employees of that city closer together and to exchange ideas and promote education. The first (November) edition contains interesting reviews of past meetings and tells of coming prominent speakers. On the front page is an editorial urging non-members to join and obtain all the advantages which the Institute can afford, also the chapter calendar. Social events are not lost sight of and there is a "Personals" department. Altogether "The Chapter Man" promises to become a credit to the work of this most enterprising chapter.

ST. PAUL CHAPTER

At the regular monthly meetings of the St. Paul Chapter prominent business men are asked to speak on subjects of common interest, not necessarily pertaining to banking interests. At the last meeting, Mr. Keljik, a rug dealer of St. Paul, spoke on the causes, the progress and the probable outcome of the Turkish war. Mr. Keljik has lived for some time in Turkey and is very familiar with the customs of the people, so that his talk was a most entertaining and instructive one.

BANKING AS VIEWED BY A LAYMAN

Cheesman A. Herrick, president of Girard College, delivered a very able address before the Philadelphia Chapter recently. Following is his address in part:

Banking is the "thermometer of business." Banking is the fruition, the highest result of business, and if we in consideration, retrace for a moment, when in the trend of business banking took its rise we shall find that it was relatively late; that business had existed for centuries and had been well developed in all branches of its activity before banking as a definite and recognized part of business came into practice. As banking is the last, so it is the highest form of business.

I believe that banking is also the most useful branch of business, because it is that which makes effective the other activities of the business world. To me, the most satisfactory definition of a bank I have ever heard is: "A bank is an institution for dealing in money and credits," and the dealing in credits far outranks in importance the dealing in money. We may trust the statements of careful students in the field of economics that nine-tenths of all our modern business is on a credit basis. When we consider all the savings of business, all the conveniences of business, all the increased efficiency of business we must remember that the banks are the institutions that deal in the credits which enter so largely into business operations, and that as such they occupy a foremost position in the business activities of the present time.

I think that business men as a class are too prone to place a low estimate upon the value and service to the world of their own calling. There seems to be a leaning toward the professions and those who enter business are too much inclined to view it as a necessity from which there does not seem to be any escape. It was stated by a metropolitan clergyman not long since that a business man should make millions of money as some slight compensation for not being in his profession. This is a high standard or ideal of the clergyman's profession, but the slight which he casts on business certainly is not merited.

I have a high regard for the profession of banking because of the character which it exemplifies. You know we sometimes get the idea that success in business comes from some kind of sharp dealing, or taking advantage of the other fellow, of "doing him first," as the old saying goes, but I think that banking, above all other branches of business, teaches the necessity for uprightness, straightforwardness, and integrity of dealing as the foundation for one who is to have the best success.

Did you ever think what the conception of customer means? The customer of your bank? The customer in your commercial relation? It is the one who comes through custom, who comes through habit—the one who comes because of his belief in you or in the institution with which you are identified. In this I can give a word of personal testimony. As I look down upon the faces here this evening I see one who has for nearly twenty years been the paying teller of my bank. It would personally be more convenient for me to have my account in another bank. I could manage my affairs a little easier if my personal account were in a bank nearer my home, but I have so high a regard for the personal qualities and reliable character of the officers of this particular institution, an institution which has served me so well, that I am loth to take my account away, and I believe, gentlemen, my experience is the experience of the customers of the banks up and down this town and it is the experience of business in general. If you have not the confidence and belief of patrons in your integrity as fundamental, then the very foundation stone of this thing we call credit is undermined.

The personal element and the belief in the integrity of the individual who is involved in the relation is the fundamental to success in any large way, and I bring you from the outside, my expressions of confidence in the high integrity of the banking profession together with the statement that I believe that nothing is more fundamental to success than strict square dealing, uprightness of conduct, with the desire not only to fulfil the form and legal requirement as an external, but to fulfil the spirit of the obligations which we have incurred.

And then, in the next instance, I am happy to talk to you on education, a subject concerning which perhaps I have the most right to talk of any, and I shall speak of this because of its relation to banking as an occupation.

It used to be that a person who would become a doctor placed himself in the service of a physician. He greased his buggy, attended to his horse, picked up information here a little and there a little, added to his store of knowledge through reading books, talking to the doctor about his profession, going out with him to see his patients. Similarly a large number of those who entered the profession of law entered the lawyers' office as stenographers or clerks, picked up their knowledge much in the same way under the direction of a lawyer. Those who went into banking careers followed much the same practice, associated themselves at service with a banking house, gathering such information as they could as they went along. But within the past twenty or twenty-five years, there has been a growing sentiment in this country, particularly among the financial divisions of business, that those who are engaged ought to avail themselves of these provisions for a liberal education. Not only should expert preliminary training be given to those who would have larger responsibilities, but others should continue their education after having entered employment.

I have heard it said by the heads of banking institutions that they had clerks in their employ who were working on a given branch of the business and that these clerks neither knew nor cared for the work which other men were doing all around them or the work that the institution was doing in a larger way. If that be true, it is a most regrettable fact. For one to serve as cog in a wheel fitting into another wheel and turning with the machine, doing his own little part, and that without any knowledge of what the wheel as a whole or the machine in which the wheel turns is doing, is a most unfortunate condition of affairs. You may think that the writing up a bank ledger or the entering up of deposits or any one of the dozen or more different phases of employment in a bank is a very tedious, uninteresting and depressing sort of occupation; you may despise it if you wish and accept it as a cold necessity, but if you do, I predict that you will not get much fun out of your particular job and you will not have very much of successes in the department of life in which you serve.

I believe that banking as a science offers the finest inducement for a careful, systematic, thorough, continued study and that the courses offered in the University of Pennsylvania, for example, afford an opportunity for the young men who are in the banks or engaged in the banking business to broaden their views, intensify their interest and see where their little part of the work fits as a cog or wheel into the big machine. Once let them see this and they will do their work better, enjoy it more, and when, after awhile, in the shaping of events there comes an opportunity for moving some man higher up, the man who knows the most about the business, who has the best hold on it, who has given himself the finest equipment, will be the man who is moved up.

Twenty years ago, before the American Banking Association, a distinguished banker of this city said that he believed in this professional education of bankers in our higher schools of commerce because it was training men to an unconscious existence of ideals, and he made this comparison by way of showing what he meant: He said that he believed that the cadets trained at the military academy at West Point and the Naval Academy at Annapolis were in the time of their testing immeasurably braver men, more competent and dependable men, because of the ideals and standards of their profession; that they had been trained in these ideals in the school of the soldier and of the sailor, and that in time of trial, unconsciously they lived and acted up to the ideals and standards to which they had been trained. This man said, and I believe he said wisely, that the trained man is the man who is going to stand staunch in time of trial, and who will meet an emergency unconsciously, and instantly do the right thing. I commend to you the value of this kind of training.

You cannot afford not to avail yourselves of the opportunities offered in this Institute of Banking and in other ways for a study of your business. You will be better men for it, more useful men in your work and you will get a lot more pleasure out of life. I commend to you the professional attitude toward banking as a calling.

SYRACUSE CHAPTER

The benefits which accrue both to the individual and the community from the establishment of savings banks are well set forth in an address recently delivered before the Syracuse Chapter, American Institute of Banking, by H. L. Stout, who is connected with the Fulton Savings Bank at Fulton, N. Y. Mr. Stout's address is, in part, as follows:

Savings banks are not organized as business enterprises. They have no stockholders and are not to engage in speculations or money making in a business sense. They are simply to take deposits, usually small, which are offered, aggregate them and keep and invest them safely, paying such interest to depositors as is made after deducting expenses and paying the principal on demand. The principal features of a savings bank are that it offers safe security with small interest, but with no profit to the managers, as contrasted with a larger rate of interest and less security.

We learn as a fundamental principle, if we follow the tradition of the savings banks, that we are bound to foster the small depositor. It was for him that the savings bank was created, and it is to his service that it should be devoted. The average deposit Jan. 1, 1912, in New York state savings banks was $545.33. The man whose earning power is but little above the requirements for bare necessities is the one to whom every encouragement should be given.

The savings banks are not only doing beneficent work in inculcating habits of thrift, in gathering and conserving wealth which might otherwise be wasted or else be unproductive, and in furnishing capital for many legitimate business enterprises; but, especially in our large Eastern cities, with their great influx of alien peoples, savings banks are keeping step with the churches and public schools in helping to make good citizens of those who seek our shores as immigrants.

There is usually a department, unnamed in laws and rules, in the savings bank which might be called the Department of Mercy, where the banker becomes the good samaritan and with sympathy and suggestion endeavors to solve the small financial tangle of the old veteran, the lonely widow, the friendless and lowly. Kindness, gentleness and advice are often of more value than gold to the troubled mind.

Savings bank officers and employees occupy an unusual economic position. On the side of the depositor we come into contact with that great mass of people in whose continued sanity rest the sure foundations of our government. We meet people of every class, creed and nationality; the reformer, the socialist, the radical and the conservative, the rich and the poor—in a sense we are the custodians of the hopes and aspirations of countless of our fellow creatures. This place that we hold in the social system imposes upon us greater responsibilities than we fully realize, not only as custodians of a vast fund, but as citizens accountable to a nation.

These characteristics, peculiar to the savings bank and the saving bank officers, differentiates the bank for savings from the bank of commerce and trade. The savings bank is properly a semi-benevolent institution, one of the ties that bind and conserve society.

The savings bank is a silent but powerful factor in the business life of the country. It practically carries the municipal debt of the nation, and builds the homes of the nation. To the savings banks of New York state the United States is debtor on its bonds the small sum of $1,758,580, chiefly because they are gilt edge and come high and are not a profitable savings bank investment. The various states, counties and cities have used $399,809,476 of the New York state savings banks' moneys for public improvements; out of this amount, cities in New York state alone have used $205,132,267 for this purpose, while the railroads are borrowers to the extent of $269,859,584 for tracks, cars, engines, stations and what not.

Savings banks encourage thrift and economy in their patrons, with, of course, a resulting benefit to the community in which they are located; promote thrift in the highest degree, and encourage habits of industry by receiving small amounts from their patrons which are assembled into one large sum and invested in bonds and mortgages.

The savings bank, by taking the small amounts and combining them into one larger amount, assists the poor man to build up a line of credit which otherwise he might not be able to obtain, and makes him a valuable asset to the community; for, in providing credit for the man who wants it and can use it, it helps him and the community, and satisfies an economic want; and if you make good character an essential element in that credit granting, you have a powerful ethical force at work.

Who built the homes, the business houses, the factories, the bridges and public buildings? Who paid for sewers and streets and railroads? The people; yes. But how? The average man has not money enough to build him a house, a factory, a store, or a congregation a church. The railroads are all heavy borrowers and are always in debt. In the form of a mortgage, the savings bank comes to the rescue of the man who would build a house, and says: You furnish one-half and we will furnish the other. To the railroad it says: Go ahead; we have plenty of money.

Build well and wisely, and we will buy your bonds. To the municipality: Furnish us with bridges and good streets and lights and public parks and buildings, and we will pay your bills. Now, none of the people who deposit their money in the bank had enough at any one time to build much of a house or build a railroad; or, having the dollars, did not know how or lacked the courage; but they had the trifles which multiplied together make the greater things and, when the trifles got together in the savings bank, the savings bank and the railroad man got together and arranged a bond sale.

A dormant account is one to which neither a credit nor a debit entry has been added, or the presentation of the pass-book for the entry of interest due on the account for 22 years.

The theory seems to prevail that there is a very large amount of unclaimed deposits remaining uncalled for in savings banks throughout the state of New York, so much so that many people have the idea that many of the bank buildings owned by the savings banks were erected with the unclaimed funds of the bank. There could be no more erroneous idea than this. When we consider that there was, in 1905, only about $2,700,000 of this unclaimed money held by all the savings banks in New York state, the most of it being in the New York City savings banks, we can readily see that the Onondaga County Savings Bank was not built with these funds, as many people seem to think.

The savings bank officers are trying all the time to keep their accounts from becoming dormant by writing for the pass-book and explaining the law to the depositor, and advertising for the party.

The man, the community that would borrow, goes to the bank—the savings bank. The man that would lend, if he knew how, and where, and when—he goes also. The one deposits—the other borrows; the debtor meets the creditor, and, through the bank, both are served. Every dollar deposited not only makes the man richer, but the community as well.

Does it reach the people? Does it encourage habits of thrift and industry? Do the people use this institution in the way that it was designed to help them? Does it get the dollar of the clerk, the penny of the child and the larger sum of the man of wealth? In evidence of this, the following is offered: The savings banks of New York state on Jan. 1, 1912, had 2,987,535 depositors, with deposits amounting to $1,619,115,648, or over 30 per cent of the entire population of the state have savings bank accounts. Out of a population of 140,000 people in Syracuse, 84,000 have savings bank accounts, or 60 per cent. Out of a population of 11,000 people in Fulton, 5,700 have savings bank accounts, or about 52 per cent.

The savings banks in the state of Massachusetts had 2,137,543 depositors, with $802,220,707 deposits, and the state of Connecticut had 592,988 depositors, with $288,157,528 deposits.

While four of the oldest and largest savings banks in Philadelphia and Baltimore have deposits amounting to $139,056,522, the amount loaned on real estate mortgages by these banks amounts to only $14,604,427, or about .073 per cent of their deposits; savings banks in New York state have more than 55 per cent of their deposits loaned on real estate mortgages.

Some one has said: "Of the four institutions that stand for the good in life, first comes the home, then the church, then the schoolhouse, and then the savings bank." And I think he is right.

Charles S. Hotchkiss, commissioner for Alberta, has just compiled statistics showing that the population has increased between 90,000 and 100,000 during the year. He estimates that Alberta now has a population of 500,000, as against 372,538, when the federal census was taken early in 1911.

and each section is adapted to some special line of business. Probably there never has been printed a greater time and labor saving work on figures in the world.

MR. ROPP has figured out every calculation himself and offers a reward of fifty dollars for every error to be found within its covers. This alone ought to be an incentive for young bank clerks of arithmetical turn to review it carefully. Christian Ropp makes his headquarters at 202 South Clark Street, Chicago, where he is in business as "C. Ropp & Sons," and will be glad to answer any inquiries. So far as a personal examination goes, this little work would seem better adapted for bank distribution among farmers and mechanics as a souvenir or advertisement than anything which ever has come to the attention of this department.

ONE of Mr. Ropp's sons is an accomplished engineer and made all the drawings contained in the book. Another son set all the type, and in short, it is a family affair based entirely upon integrity and ability and furnishes an astonishing amount of information for a very small sum.

THE enterprising Frisco Lines have established what Chicago and the Northwest have wanted for a long time. December 15th they will begin running a solid train of Pullmans through to Florida without change.

IT is planned that these trains de luxe will leave Chicago about 10:30 in the morning, arriving at Jacksonville the next evening and at Palm Beach the following morning. Everything from head-light to observation car is of the latest creation by the Pullman company and all meals will be served on diners.

THESE splendid trains will pull out from Chicago over the C. & E. I. Railway and will be an addition to the regular service. Connection will be made with steamers from Key West bound for Panama and other ports.

ABOUT twenty years ago the supreme court of Illinois made a decision in a case where a suit for damages had been entered on account of a check having been returned when there were funds in the bank to cover it.

THE court went to the extreme in giving its opinion on the matter and said: "The bank will be liable to such drawer in an action for substantial damages without proof of actual damage or any malice on the part of the banker."

UNDER this decision a suit has been tried against the Northwest State Bank, which returned a check for $11.40 when it was good. The plaintiff admitted that he had suffered no damage, but sued under the decision quoted above.

THE trial judge instructed the jury that they must find in favor of the plaintiff, but that the amount of the award should be determined by the actual damages sustained. The jury, contrary to the court's instruction, returned a verdict of "not guilty" and the plaintiff's attorney made a motion for a new trial.

IT is said to have been the bank's intention in case a verdict for damages in the suit was made, to have appealed to the state supreme court again, with a certificate of importance attached, asking for a new construction of the law. As it happens, this duty will devolve upon the plaintiff.

THE case in which this cow-catcher decision was made occurred under very different conditions from those of to-day. Banks now have innumerable small accounts and handle a large volume of checks in comparison with those of the time when the decision was rendered. Such errors must be of frequent occurrence and are almost unavoidable. No matter what the result of the present trial may be, the bankers of the state of Illinois should secure an amendment requiring proof of actual damages to be shown before recovery can be made. If the supreme court should revise its decision in such matters, the same end would be attained. At the present time the plaintiff is entitled to substantial damages according to the court, whether he may have sustained actual damages or not.

WORD comes from Boston that the big A. B. A. convention of 1913 will be held the first week in October. Headquarters will be at the Copley-Plaza, which hotel only would give the convention officials reservations on three hundred rooms.

BOSTON is not so well supplied with hotels as most other cities of its size and importance and consequently reservations are being made at all near-by hotels. The sessions will be held in the hotel convention hall. The banks there are expecting an enormous attendance and a fine program of entertainment will be provided.

YOU may not have noticed in the Chicago Tribune of Sunday that among the banks which did not reply on the question of state supervision were those controlled by the president and vice-president of the Illinois Bankers Association.

PRESIDENT JOHN D. PHILLIPS had not time to send in his response from the office of the Green Valley Bank at Green Valley. Vice-president S. B. Montgomery, of the Illinois Bankers Association, is president of the Bank of Rushville, at Rushville, and of the State Loan and Savings Bank at Quincy. He did not have a postal card which was large enough to contain what he might have had to say.

COL. J. S. AISTHORPE, who is chairman of the council, and president of the First Bank and Trust Company at Cairo, was among the very first to respond and came out emphatically in favor of supervision. These little things are mentioned so that the record may be kept straight.

HARRIS TRUST, Chicago, is trying out the finger print identification system in the savings department.

WE hear the Big Fellow over at the Continental has cut out the mid-day eats.

BOTH Debs and Roosevelt had the largest votes in Illinois. On whom is the joke?

FRANK K. HOUSTON of Nashville was not able to resist an opportunity to follow the flag of his former commander, F. O. Watts. After December 15th, he will be found over at the Third National, St. Louis.

HOUSTON was Watts' right-hand man and was the most active young banker in the state.

HE was the first president of the Nashville chapter of the American Institute of Banking, and is a graduate of the national organization. He had established himself in a business way in Nashville, where he will be missed by the many progressive organizations in which he has been a conspicuous figure.

MR. HOUSTON is the son of Congressman W. C. Houston of the Fifth Tennessee congressional district, and is a graduate of Vanderbilt University. He was formerly secretary of the Tennessee Bankers Association, and later became assistant cashier of the First National. Upon the consolidation of the Fourth and First National Banks he remained in his position.

SECRETARY C. S. WEBSTER has sent out the Vermont Bankers Association proceedings book, covering the convention held at White River Junction August 16th.

ARCHIBALD WEBB, a Chicago broker, was a guest at the annual banquet of the Broad Apron Club at Hannibal, Mo., on Thanksgiving Day and carried off first honors by eating three quails and two ducks along with a quantity of other good things.

EX-PRESIDENT J. P. HINTON of the Missouri Bankers Association, writing from Hannibal about Mr. Webb's accomplishment, says: "I tremble to think what might have happened had an Illinois private banker been a guest at this banquet instead of a mere bond broker."

THIS is a new feature of the private banker question in Illinois and it may be that after the privates are put under state supervision so far as their banks are concerned, that they will be forced to undergo pure food supervision of some kind to see that when they attend a banquet in adjoining states nothing too serious may happen to the "eats."

WILLIAM POFTSOCK, who lives out on West 15th Street, Chicago, has been a long time unbeliever so far as the safety of banks is concerned. The night before Thanksgiving he counted his savings over and found he had around five hundred dollars. Some time during Thursday he went to recount the money and found it was gone.

THESE are the sort of individuals that the savings bank section committee on thrift and savings is after. The chairman of the Illinois committee in charge of the work is President Joseph R. Noel of the Northwest State Bank.

BALTIMORE has had a big bank consolidation, uniting the fortunes of the Merchants National and the National Mechanics under the presidency of D. H. Thomas.

JOHAN B. RAMSEY will be chairman of the board of the joined institutions and the dispatches give full credit to Brown & Sons of Baltimore for bringing the two institutions together. Negotiations were carried on so quietly that the announcement came as a great surprise to the neighboring banks in Baltimore.

THE Merchants had around twelve millions in deposits and the Mechanics about seven millions. Total resources will be, in round numbers, twenty-five millions and there will be no change whatever in the dividend rate, both banks having previously paid the same.

IT is said that a powerful Baltimore syndicate was organized for the purpose of taking over the shares of any of the stockholders in either institution who did not wish to participate. Shares were to have been taken over by this syndicate at a slight advance over the market rate.

BALTIMORE financiers have found, just as has been found in other cities, that the present-day method of conducting business operations requires banks with larger capital. A conspicuous example was cited of Boston, which a few years ago had sixty-five banks and now has but twenty, and the deposits of the twenty are more than double those of the sixty-five. The city of Baltimore expects to benefit greatly by the increased capabilities of the new institution.

PRESIDENT H. E. JONES of the Dominion National at Bristol, Va.-Tenn., is very proud of a new hotel just finished in that city. He calls attention also to the growth in population as well as the fact that Bristol is the natural collection point for Johnson City, Jonesboro, Elizabethton and Mountain City, all in Tennessee;

The Call

Naturally the call of November 26th found the Chicago National reserve banks "down" and the State banks "off" in deposits. The withdrawals for crop moving and dividend purposes have been very heavy. Deposits in the national banks decreased virtually $40,000,000 between September 4th and November 26th. In the same period loans were contracted only $8,600,000 and total cash resources were reduced $28,000,000. The reductions in deposits and cash are the result of the western and southern call for funds. The banks that carry the largest country balances made the largest deposit losses. The cash resources of the banks in September were equivalent to about 41 per cent of total deposits. They were reduced November 28th to about 38¾ per cent.

Sixty-two state banks and trust companies reporting their condition as at the beginning of business November 27th, show about $508,500,000 deposits, a decrease of $9,400,000 as compared with the amount reported for November 5th. The state bank deposits, with those of the national banks reported, make a total of $956,000,000, or $49,000,000 less than the total in September.

During the period between the two calls for statements the state banks increased their loans $12,000,000 and lowered their total cash resources by $18,000,000. The proportion of cash reserves to deposits in the state banks November 27th was about 24 per cent, in the national banks 38.75 per cent, and in all the local banks about 31 per cent.

J. FLETCHER FARRELL COMMENTS ON ELECTION

J. Fletcher Farrell, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National of this city, expresses himself as quite well satisfied with the result of the recent presidential election. Mr. Farrell is serving his second term as treasurer of the American Bankers Association. He is a familiar figure at bankers' conventions and enjoys the acquaintance of financiers all over the country. When interviewed this week he said:

"The election of Governor Wilson has not had any disquieting influence upon business conditions. With the republican party split nearly in half the business men of the country had regarded the election of a democrat as a foregone conclusion. No apprehension was felt in regard to this situation because of a general belief that the democrats would not manifest any inclination to enact legislation of a character inimical to business interests. As a consequence of this general feeling no surprise or alarm was felt when the result of the election was made known.

"I believe there ought to be a reduction of the tariff and that it should be made as speedily as possible. I think, however, that a considerable degree of caution should be used in the accomplishment of this reform and that there should be such a revision as will be consistent with good judgment and prevailing conditions. No radical course should be adopted in this most important work. There also is a great necessity for adequate currency legislation."

Mr. Straus, in addition to being president of S. W. Straus & Co., is the head of the Franklin Trust & Savings, recently opened for business on the south side. The Franklin Trust has absorbed the Douglas State, thereby making its deposits well over a million.

Mr. Fletcher is the active vice-president of the Drovers Deposit National, the directors of which have recommended an increase of twenty-five per cent in the capital stock, which will enlarge the present capitalization of the bank from $600,000 to $750,000. The matter will be acted upon by the stockholders, January 14th.

Speaking in regard to business conditions, Mr. Farrell said:

"Business is on a firm basis, with increased activity in all lines, in some cases the demand far exceeding the supply. There is a healthy demand for money at good rates. I believe that the present price for money will be maintained until the first of the year."

GLASS INVITES BANKERS TO SERVE IN ADVISORY CAPACITY

A number of prominent bankers and financiers of the country will appear before the subcommittee of the house committee on banking and currency, at the invitation of Chairman Glass, to assist in the preparation of the proposed currency bill.

Among those to whom invitations have been extended are A. B. Hepburn of New York City, James B. Forgan of Chicago, Festus J. Wade of St. Louis, J. Laurence Laughlin of Chicago, Paul Warburg of New York City, J. V. Farwell, ex-Congressman Charles N. Fowler of New Jersey, ex-Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw of Philadelphia and Victor Morawetz of New York City.

The committee will begin its hearings during the week of January 6th.

CHICAGO BANKS DECLARE DIVIDENDS

Dividends were declared this week by the Peoples Trust and Savings, the Colonial Trust, the Merchants Loan and Trust and the Live Stock Exchange National. The Peoples Trust is in the shape of an extra dividend of 2 per cent to be paid January 2d with the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. Directors of the Merchants Loan declared the regular quarterly dividend of 4 per cent, payable January 1st to stockholders of record December 25th; Colonial Trust the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent and an additional 1½ per cent, payable January 1st to stockholders of record December 25th; Live Stock Exchange National regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent and an extra dividend of 2 per cent, both payable December 31st to stockholders of record on that date.

THE newest thing in railroading is the Illinois Central's Panama Limited. The man who rigged up that fetching title and had the nerve to preempt it is a full blown daisy.

S. W. STRAUS, Chicago's big mortgage and bond broker, looks and acts as little like a "sucker" in the financial sense as comes to the lot of man.

YET he says "my name is on a number of 'sucker lists.' The phrase 'sucker list' is borrowed from the genial lingo of the get-rich-quick promoters, who term anyone on their mailing list who receives their literature regularly a 'sucker,' and the list itself a 'sucker list.' The buying and selling of 'sucker lists' used to be quite an industry.

ORDINARY names sell for about fifty cents apiece, while the names of those who previously purchased worthless stock, and had money and disposition to purchase again, were worth as high as $5.00 each. Once anyone gets on a 'sucker list,' he is liable to be bombarded with get-rich-quick circulars from a dozen or a score of promoters for years to come."

MARTIN A. GRAETTINGER still is on the job over at the Central Manufacturing District bank. Ernest E. Herrell was elected to be a teller. Mr. Graettinger is the cashier and in a very healthy state of being both physically and mentally.

HOW TO INVEST WHEN PRICES ARE RISING" is a new book published by G. Lynn Sumner & Co., Scranton, Pa.

IT provides prescriptions by eight or ten economists and experts on "a scientific method of providing for the increasing cost of living."

REALLY it is an able and clear symposium based on the title line and worth many, many times its cost.

WE should like to renew our acquaintance in the off season with the affable gentleman who gives away those beautiful three cornered pencils at the Illinois group meetings.

ANYBODY heard anything about the A. B. A. administrative committee meeting? Or for that matter is it to be Hot Springs or somewhere else for the May meeting of the big council?

THE going has been good out in the stock yards district and the Drovers Deposit National is increasing its responsibility to depositors by an addition of $150,000 to capital. The dividend rate now is twelve per cent.

EDWARD TILDEN is the "heavy weight" of the institution, while the active management has been for several years in the hands of Vice-president John Fletcher. Fletcher is an Iowa product, having been graduated from a very successful Cedar Rapids institution.

PREVIOUS to Mr. Tilden's taking the presidency, Richard T. Forbes, now president of the First National, St. Joseph, Missouri, was the president, and he put the business of the institution on a very firm and prosperous footing. Rumor had it when Mr. Forbes went to St. Joseph, that Fletcher would take the presidency, but it is understood that it was at his own request that Mr. Tilden occupies the chair. Mr. Fletcher is a very youthful looking man but a very successful and seasoned banker. Bankers well understand that what Fletcher says about the institution "goes."

IT did not require much time for the Franklin Trust and Savings out at Michigan and 35th Street to get on its feet. So rapidly has its business developed that it felt justified in taking in a rival institution, also in a prosperous condition.

S. W. STRAUS, the president of the merged institutions, is one of Chicago's most active financial minds. He is at the head of an enormous real estate, loan and brokerage business and is rated one of Chicago's most promising essentials.

EDGAR F. OLSON, cashier of the Franklin Trust, has shown a genius for acquiring new business and is given credit for much of the material prosperity which has come to the Franklin. Olson has had a diversified banking experience, but for a few years prior to the opening of the Franklin was engaged in other business. During his lay-off, he continued to study deeply into the bank building question. When he took charge of the business of the newly organized bank, he let loose a whirlwind of ideas which he had accumulated. The figures which have been published in the various statements issued by the Franklin fully justify his methods. It is expected that the Franklin will become one of the important outlying banks.

DON S. CULVER is to be one of the new northwestern banking magnates. Upon the retirement of two of St. Paul's most conservative and respected bankers, Judge Lusk and Kenneth Clark, a big amalgamation was put over uniting the two banks. There was an abundance of material for the presidency of the enlarged institutions and the situation was wisely handled by making Culver the president, and Prince chairman of the board. The ex-presidents, Lusk and Clark, will remain on the board in an advisory capacity. This will give St. Paul an institution which will require James J. Hill to spread himself a little if he is to have the dominating bank.

PRESIDENT BYRON W. MOSER of the Institute has gotten together a publicity committee which ought to do wonderful stunts for the chapters. Ellsworth of the Guaranty Trust, New York, is chairman, and among the well-known members of the committee are G. W. Cooke of the First National, Chicago; R. S. Hecht of the Hibernia at New Orleans; and John C. MacLean of the Security, Minneapolis.

THERE ought to be enough of the right kind of energy and ability in such a committee to make the administration of Mr. Moser not only successful, but give the Institute the

Arraigns Improper Use of Trust Company Titles

The Illinois statute, chapter 38, section 220, provides:

"If any company, association or person puts forth any sign or advertisement, and therein assumes, for the purpose of soliciting business, a corporate name, not being incorporated, or being incorporated puts forth any sign or advertisement, assuming any other or different name than that by which it is incorporated or authorized by law to act, such company, association or person shall be fined not less than $10 nor more than $200, and a like sum for each day he or it shall continue to offend, after having been once fined."

Owing to an opinion rendered some time ago by the attorney-general, in which it was held the burden of proof is on the plaintiff to show that as a result of the use of the corporate title he thereby was deceived and as a consequence suffered loss, the perfectly obvious intent of the legislature seems to have been nullified.

The present law of Illinois relating to incorporated trust companies is quite comprehensive in its scope, and if complied with by all persons or associations holding themselves out as trust companies, would prove thoroughly adequate. The report recently submitted by the Dawes committee recommends the prohibition of the use of the words "trust company" by other than corporations, a violation of which provision is made a misdemeanor. In several of the states of the Union, laws have been passed restricting the use of trust company titles.

—ED.

Encouraged by the public demand for supervision of private banks, the officers of incorporated trust companies in this city and throughout the state are preparing to unite in an effort to stop irresponsible individuals and syndicates from exploiting stock promotion schemes, offering "fake" investments and making loans at usurious rates under the disguise of being "trust companies."

For many years the regularly chartered trust companies of this city have had to contend against the prejudice caused by the dishonest practices of individuals and copartnerships who have taken advantage of the loose banking laws of Illinois to engage in questionable business ventures as bona fide trust companies.

The same disgraceful condition of affairs which allows any man to cloak his operations under the guise of "banker" applies even more forcibly to the misuse of the title of "trust company."

The initiative in this campaign has been taken by the committee on protective laws of the trust company section, American Bankers Association, through Vice-president E. D. Hulbert of the Merchants Loan and Trust

C. A. Luhnow, editor of "Trust Companies," points out evils incident to use of the words "trust company" by unincorporated associations and advocates such legislation for Illinois as will preclude this pernicious practice

Company of Chicago, who is local representative of this committee.

How Patrons Are Deceived

In connection with this movement a preliminary investigation has been made to ascertain the extent to which the name "trust company" is being misapplied in this city and the evil consequences of such deceptive methods.

A mass of interesting information has been obtained showing there are numerous unincorporated concerns and private syndicates operating as "trust companies" and using high sounding titles in order to mislead the public and their own patrons. The lack of prohibition of the Illinois statutes also has induced a number of syndicates to obtain trust company charters in other states and to maintain their offices here. By employing this device they are immune from surveillance or examination both in the state where the charter has been granted, and in this city, where they assume to be in the same category with the legitimate trust companies which have achieved enviable reputations in the management of estates and as banking organizations.

High Sounding Titles Used

In some instances, literature has been circulated describing the high standing and profitable character of the regularly chartered trust companies as a bait to "prospects." Some of these pseudo "trust companies" use practically the same titles as incorporated trust companies. In fact, these promoters often select the names of the trust companies which are among the oldest and strongest in the city.

This not only has resulted in confusion in the transaction of business or delivery of mail, but likewise misapprehension, especially in cases where such private "trust companies" have folded their tents like the Arab and disappeared with moneys intrusted to them or subscribed for some "fake" investment.

The postal authorities and the United States secret service recently have made a number of wholesale raids on syndicates which have operated schemes of various kinds. Thanks to the aggressive work of the committee of the trust company section on protective laws, most of these promoters are prevented from conducting their swindling operations under the name of "trust company" as formerly.

There are a number of so-called "trust companies" maintaining elegant suites of offices in prominent office buildings in this city. They are unincorporated and transact almost every kind of business except that for which legitimate trust companies are chartered. Some of these are nothing else than loan shark enterprises. Others are "holding companies" for speculative or imaginative corporations, the stock of which is offered on alluring promises of large dividends. There still is another kind which acts as "guaranty company" for some allied promotion venture and rakes in fees for alleged examinations, etc.

Widows and Minors Victims

Under existing conditions any individual may employ the title of "trust company" the same as that of "banker" and solicit such business as the management of estates, the care of property and funds left by deceased persons under will.

This does not refer to private executors and trustees or administrators who are appointed by testators because of their responsible character. It pertains solely to those who use the title of "banker" or operate under trust company titles without being incorporated under the banking laws.

Included in the losses suffered by the failure of numerous "private bankers" in this city within recent years are the funds and property of widows and minors for whom these defaulters acted in fiduciary capacities.

E. D. HULBERT TELLS OF TRUST COMPANY SECTION WORK

E. D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company, is an enthusiastic advocate of legislation restricting the use of the words "trust company." When interviewed this week concerning the work of the A. B. A. committee having the matter in charge, he said:

"The committee on protective laws of the trust company section of the American Bankers Association consists of Lynn H. Dinkins, New Orleans, chairman; Herbert A. Rhodes, Boston; Samuel W. Reyburn, Little Rock, Ark.; P. C. Kauffman, Tacoma, Wash., and myself. It is the duty of this committee to secure legislation in the various states for the protection of trust companies and trust funds. A good deal of its work has been directed toward preventing the misuse of the word 'trust.' Many states have passed laws in this respect, but in Illinois, although there is a statute relating to the misuse of corporate titles, it has not proven effective enough to prevent any unincorporated association of individuals who so desire, from calling themselves a 'trust company,' and not being incorporated, they are not compelled to comply with the regulations pertaining to trust companies as set forth in the Illinois statute. The committee hopes to get some action at the coming meeting of the legislature.

"Iowa has a very simple law providing that any concern doing business in that state having the word 'trust' in its name must comply with the laws of the state relating to trust companies. This is so simple and reasonable that it is hard to understand why any one should object to it, except for selfish reasons. We hope some law may be enacted in this state similar to this, which will include the word 'bank' under the same principle, i. e., providing that all concerns doing business in this state and using the words 'trust' or 'bank' as a part of their name shall comply with the laws of the state relating to trust companies and banks."

MERCHANTS LOAN STARTS PENSION FUND

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company this week it was decided to create a pension fund for the benefit of superannuated employees and their families after death. This plan will become effective January 1st and the benefits will be retroactive. The fund will be started by a liberal contribution from the surplus of the bank and employees will contribute after the first of the year.

Two other Chicago banks have adopted pension systems, viz., The First National, started several years ago and amounting to around a million dollars, and the Corn Exchange, started a few years ago. It is said that other Chicago banks are considering the advisability of the creation of a pension fund.

REPORTS INTEREST IN ROAD IMPROVEMENT

J. C. Cavender, cashier of the American Trust and Savings, which recently opened for business at Hobart, Ind., was a Chicago visitor Monday. Mr. Cavender says that Lake County, Indiana, is thoroughly progressive in the matter of road improvement; that they have a road built of crushed stone which extends from West Hammond on the western limits of the county to the Porter county line on the east, and at present the county, under its gravel road bond legislation is buying and shipping gravel from Will county, Illinois, to improve the principal roads in Lake county. Mr. Cavender further stated that while at first there was some little opposition on the part of the farmers, now they are as enthusiastic as other citizens of the county in urging this permanent road improvement.

GEORGE W. TELLING IN TOWN

George W. Telling, cashier of the Commercial Trust and Savings of Danville, Ill., was a caller in Chicago's financial district Monday. Mr. Telling says that the crops are being slowly marketed in the Vermilion county territory, with a fairly good demand for money locally.

makes 10 per cent for this year. The bank has been in operation two years and now has deposits of $7,400,000.

Dividends also were declared by the Continental and Commercial National, the North Avenue State, the West Side Trust and the Michigan Avenue Trust. The Continental is the regular quarterly dividend of $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, payable January 1, 1913, to stockholders of record December 20th; North Avenue State, regular quarterly dividend of $1\frac{3}{4}$ per cent, payable January 2d to stockholders of record December 24th; West Side Trust, regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent and an extra dividend of 2 per cent, both payable January 1st; Michigan Avenue Trust an initial quarterly disbursement of $1\frac{1}{4}$ per cent on the \$200,000 capital, payable January 2d to stockholders of record December 26th. The bank began business in October, 1910.

I. B. A. ROAD COMMITTEE MEETS

Members of the good roads committee of the Illinois Bankers Association met at association quarters in the Rookery, Chicago, Wednesday, December 4th at ten o'clock. Those present were Chairman S. E. Bradt, vice-president of the First National, DeKalb; George M. Stimson cashier A. G. Danforth & Co., bankers at Washington, Ill.; O. P. Bourland, president National Bank of Pontiac; Stewart L. Crebs, vice-president of the National Bank of Carmi, and M. O. Williamson, president of the Peoples Trust and Savings, Galesburg.

The committee met at the call of Chairman

Bradt to consider the best method of organizing the sentiment existing among the bankers of Illinois for the support of a legislative program. The members of the committee all were enthusiastic and actuated by a sincere desire to do something effective to improve the road conditions in Illinois, recognizing the great need of work along this line. The members of the committee believe that good results would be obtained by following Chairman Bradt's suggestion of organizing the bankers into strong local committees in each of the senatorial districts of the state, with a view of their approaching the members of the legislature personally and convincing them that the time is ripe in Illinois for a change in our road laws.

SALT LAKE BANK TO HAVE NEW HOME

L. H. Farnsworth, vice-president of Walker Brothers, bankers, Salt Lake City, Utah, was a recent Chicago visitor. Mr. Farnsworth reports good crops in Utah and a general prosperous outlook for the future. Within a very short time Walker Brothers will occupy their new home, recently constructed on the corner opposite their present banking location. This new building is a splendid structure, modern in every respect, and will give Walker Bros. one of the best homes of any bank in the whole region of country between Chicago and the coast.

KIRBY ADVERTISING NOVELTIES

One of the means adopted by the defunct Kirby Savings Bank for advertising its business was a button, at the top of which is a number. Underneath the figures the following words appear: "Bring your button mate in and get $1.00 each." Also a little savings bank for dimes, and a looking glass, were used. The bank was advertised as "The Savings Bank of the People."

DEFINITION OF A PRIVATE BANK

The following is the way to start a private bank, according to Frank C. Hajicek, a private banker who was sued for $900 this week by one of his depositors: "Just partition your office off and put in fixtures and openings, then you put up a sign and take in the money." When asked in court as to who constituted his bank he said: "I am the bank." Judgment was rendered against him for $900. He now is president of the Lawndale State and vice-president of the Lawndale National banks, which two institutions, it is said, have taken over the deposits of his private bank.

John M. Crebs, president of the National Bank of Carmi, Ill., visited Chicago on Wednesday to attend the stock show. Mr. Crebs has been an enthusiastic worker for years in matters pertaining to the Illinois state fair and the state board of agriculture.

Geographical Distribution

In purchasing railroad bonds the question of the territory served is of the utmost importance, for upon this depends the character of the traffic received and hence the revenue of the company. Diversity of traffic underlies a diversified investment. The larger the territory, the more diversified the traffic, and therefore the more stable the earning power.

We offer three railroad bonds, each well secured and in combination making a well-rounded investment, at prices to yield an average income of over $5\frac{1}{4}$ %. The traffic of these roads is derived from three widely separated sections of the country.

Theodore Wentz, cashier of the German-American National of Fort Wayne, Indiana, visited Chicago on Tuesday. FRANKLIN TRUST AND SAVINGS ABSORBS DOUGLAS STATE

Franklin Trust and Savings, of which Simon W. Straus, president of S. W. Straus & Co., also is president, announces its absorption of the Douglas State Bank, liquidated Saturday evening. All assets and liabilities of the Douglas State were taken over by the Franklin Trust & Savings.

This acquisition increases the deposits of the Franklin Trust and Savings to more than $1,000,000. The bank opened April 8th, last, with $212,275.93 in deposits, and has reached the million-dollar mark in less than eight months.

It will issue $100,000 of new capital stock, increasing its capitalization to $300,000. This stock will be sold on a basis of one share for two to stockholders of record of the Douglas State, at 137½, thus enlarging the Franklin Trust and Savings surplus from $50,000 to $87,500.

President Straus announces that no change will be made in the policy of the Franklin Trust and Savings Bank.

Indianapolis, Ind., December 3d.—W. F. Churchman is organizing a bank, to be known as the Capital State Bank. He was associated with the Capital National Bank for a number of years. The new bank will have a capital stock of $200,000. Interested with him are H.

ONE MILLION TWO HUNDRED AND TWENTY THOUSAND DOLLAR COMPANY TO LEND TO FARMERS

Plans for a farm mortgage bond and trust company, to be capitalized at $1,000,000, with a surplus of $220,000, its object the stimulation of agriculture by meeting the wholesale demands of farmers of the Middle West for money with which to handle their products, were made this week.

The organization of the concern, the Central Farm Mortgage, Bond and Trust Company, is in the hands of J. L. Wilson & Sons, 19 South LaSalle Street.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS URGES CENTRAL RESERVE

George M. Reynolds, in criticising the inadequate banking laws of the country and in urging the need of a central reserve, said:

As a result of the system of redepositing reserves the national bank statements show reserves greatly in excess of actual cash holdings. Reserves of $1,500,000,000 now are shown with less than $1,000,000,000 of cash. The country banks report reserves of more than $500,000,000, but more than half of these reserves are in the form of credits at reserve banks. In the same way the reserve banks show reserves of nearly $500,000,000, but only about half of these are cash in hand. The rest are credits at central reserve banks.

While the official returns of the national banks show reserves of 21 per cent against deposit liabilities, the actual cash reserves are less than 14 per cent.

This system of redepositing reserves, without any foundation of a great public single reserve upholding the whole structure of credit, collapses whenever the country banks and reserve banks, in a time of panic, attempt to convert their credits at the central reserve banks into cash in hand.

As soon as the country banks attempt to draw down any large part of their $250,000,000 deposits at the reserve banks and the reserve banks turn to the central reserve banks (New York, Chicago and St. Louis—but, in the end, New York) our system fails.

The New York National banks, the holders of the ultimate reserves, carry net deposits for other banks of $500,000,000, and any general attempt on the part of interior banks, in a money panic, to draw cash against these deposits, must inevitably result in disaster.

No Reserve Laws Abroad

We have stringent cash reserve laws, not only for all national banks, but for many state banks. No other banking country requires its banks to keep cash reserves. But we have money panics and they do not. In times of stress, our banks stop paying cash and stop loaning, intensifying distress. In other countries the banks meet financial storms by paying cash freely and loaning freely.

In other banking countries, with the single-reserve system, where money panics are unknown, and where there are no violent, business-disturbing fluctuations in interest rates, no importance is attached to individual money reserves. The chief reserves of foreign banks are the secondary reserves—liquid resources which can be quickly sold or rediscounted at the central reserve reservoir. These secondary reserves are largely discounts based on goods soon to be consumed. The discounts are highly liquid, because the consumption of the goods liquidates the loans.

Our secondary banking reserves are chiefly call loans on investment securities. A great mass of these loans cannot be liquidated without creating a stock exchange panic. And the

Editor of Great Farm Paper Has Monetary Plan

Already ten million people are believed to be interested in the new American monetary method advocated, in the interest of all the people all the time, by the Co-operative Finance League. It is called the Myrick method, in contradistinction to the Aldrich bill. The league is organizing as a popular movement to induce the congress to enact forthwith one comprehensive measure for fiscal reform in the interest of the whole people. Just how this is done is briefly set forth in an open letter to President Taft by Herbert Myrick, organizing president of the Co-operative Finance League, and editor-in-chief of Orange Judd Farmer of Chicago.

The letter to President Taft says the ill-conceived Aldrich bill is dead, even having been repudiated by the American Bankers Association after that body had twice been misled into endorsing it. The Myrick method is grounded in the five-fold reserves of the American people—gold, land, health, character, co-operation. It says that impregnable financial stability will be assured readily by proper mobilization of America's triple gold reserves.

Representative Financial Democracy

While preserving the independence of each existing bank, national or state, their subsequent federation should be a representative financial democracy, in which the customer in front of the counter (the depositor or borrower) has an equal voice with the management behind the counter (officers, directors and owners). This insures the equal representation of bank users and bank owners in the federated associations required to mobilize the people's cash, credits and co-operation in the interest of all the people all the time. Yet it pro-

Herbert Myrick of the Orange Judd Farmer outlines to President Taft a substitute for the Aldrich bill. Claims ten millions of people are for the new method of co-operative finance fects each individual bank from outside interference with its own business.

Private banking is to be abolished. Private bankers may incorporate under national or state law, thus becoming subject to the same supervision that has done so much to improve legitimate banking.

Bank Users and Owners Federate

Each bank in a locality is to join the local clearing house, whose functions and efficiency are to be greatly improved. Each bank joins the zone league that covers a commercial zone or banking district, of which some important city is the economic center. In clearing house and league, both incorporated under federal law, each bank has two voting representatives, one chosen by the bank's owners, the other by its non-owning customers. The 42 zone leagues constitute the American reserve union. It has 21 trustees chosen by bank users who are not bank shareholders, also 21 trustees chosen by bank owners; the national government holds the balance of power therein, and the whole institution is subject to congress as representing all the people.

This representative financial democracy is thus based upon one-bank one vote, and one-man one vote, irrespective of size or wealth. Thus the Myrick method puts manhood above money, making money servant, not master.

Triple Reserves of Gold

There will be a national reserve of 1,000 millions of dollars of gold, a second reserve of 500 millions of gold in the American Reserve Union, a third reserve of 250 millions of gold in the banks, not to mention over 100 millions of gold in the pockets and hoardings of the people.

This is the greatest aggregate of gold ever amassed by any one people since the dawn of history. It may then be so mobilized that this gold can be used instantly wherever and whenever needed to prevent panic, allay distrust, promote financial health, or to foster productive industry rather than gambling on the stock exchange.

Government Alone Coins Money

The government again will assume the sole function of coining money, whether in the form of gold, silver or paper. Eventually there should be one uniform kind, quality, and character of American money, every dollar of which should be kept as good as gold, and every piece of it full legal tender and lawful money for the payment of all debts.

By reason of the government's vast reserves of gold and silver, American money to-day is intrinsically in a far sounder position than foreign money. The United States is on a hard-money basis, while the United Kingdom and Europe are approaching relatively a soft-money basis.

INTERNATIONAL BANKERS

Present new phenomena in gold, coupled with the control of the discount rate by the American Reserve Union—an institution that is fairly representative of all the people and all the banks—insure that the American gold reserves shall continue to accrue. Already there is back of each dollar of American money (including treasury notes and the present national bank notes) more gold alone, and much more of gold and silver combined, than is true of the money of all Europe (including the continent and the United Kingdom).

Ours Is the Best Money

American money to-day is the best money on earth. Within a few years, we will have 100 cents' worth of gold back of each and every dollar then outstanding, not to mention America's other reserves—the brains and hands of our people, their health and character, their powers for larger usefulness through the cohesive force of well-directed co-operation, and their vast area of land and water with its unparalleled natural resources.

Therefore, let the American government take back to itself that part of the money-coining function which it delegated to the national banks fifty years ago as a war measure. Let the national banks cash in at cost their 2 per cent bonds and retire the bank notes secured thereby, receiving in exchange from the treasury American government money issued upon the joint security of those very same bonds and of all the gold and silver in the treasury, not to mention the other reserves of the American nation.

Thus without inflating the currency by a single dollar, without detracting one penny from its security and backing, without causing any disturbance in business, or without working any injury to any bank or person, the bank notes gradually are transmuted into American money, each dollar of which is equivalent to gold because redeemable in gold anywhere at any time.

Provision also is made for the wise use of bank reserves, their safe expansion and contraction in rhythm with business requirements, and their prompt repletion following use. The inability of banks to employ their reserves, when the emergency arrives against which they have been conserved, is an economic error, which (together with other glaring defects in our fiscal system) has caused panic, loss and misery transcending the imagination.

In the People's Interest

All the earnings of the proposed banking federation, over and above suitable reserves, go to the federal treasury. The gold received from this source would retire an equal amount of the bonds in the treasury. In this and other ways, the treasury reserves of gold increase until they reach 100 per cent of the lawful money in circulation, whether gold, silver or paper.

Neither the zone leagues nor the American Reserve Union has any shares or capital upon which to draw dividends, do not operate for profit, do not do business with the public, do not compete with any existing bank, but their service is performed in the interest of all the banks and of all the people in behalf of the common welfare.

Panics Would Be Impossible

The cash reserves of all banks would be greatly strengthened. Instead of bank reserves trembling upon an inverted pyramid, turn the pyramid squarely over so that it will rest immovably upon its broad and secure foundation!

Banks Issue Book Credits or Credit Currency

While the national government thus fully reassumes the prerogative of the sovereign people by itself exercising its sole monopoly of the coinage into one uniform kind and quality of money, of gold, silver and the public credit, the banks would be free to employ book credits or current credits in meeting the legitimate demands of business.

The coinage of money is a government function, but the use of credit instruments is a banking function, which should operate automatically in response to human activities and without governmental interference.

Export and People's Co-operative Banks Under Federal Law

The method provides for American export banks under national law, to finance our foreign trade, transfer from London to New York the financial center of the globe, and put the United States at the head of the world's trade. All details of the method are fully described in President Myrick's new book, Co-operative Finance.

Amend the national banking act so as to authorize the incorporation under its provisions of little national co-operative people's banks, thus affording the people of limited means relatively the same opportunity to create banking facilities for themselves as are enjoyed by those of larger resources. Such a co-operative bank may begin business with as

By C. C. Burford

Nelson H. Greene, vice-president and cashier of the Peoples Savings Bank and Trust Company of Moline, and a former president of the Illinois Bankers Association, reports that business and banking conditions in his city are of the very best and anticipates a large volume of business during the winter. Moline is one of the largest industrial centers in the Middle West, and the many friends of Mr. Greene will be glad to read what he says about increasing business in that locality. He writes:

"The election passed off very quietly, and the result was as anticipated by the business men of this community. Everyone feels that there will be no change in the business activity of the country, and especially in Moline, on account of the change of administration. All our factories are very busy at the present time and have been all fall. The great trouble has been to get raw material fast enough to supply the demand for finished goods. Pay-rolls are at a maximum and the laborers in factories are depositing their money in banks, which shows an easy financial condition among the laboring classes. The factories have never had as many orders for future delivery on their books as at the present time. All lines are showing a decided increase over any previous year's business in their existence. Money is in good demand, and while there is no large surplus, the banks are able to take care of their customers without any particular strain on themselves. The outlook for the future is very good, and we all anticipate an excellent winter's business. We do not feel that the tariff agitation will affect us, and everyone seems to be giving their entire time and attention to their own personal affairs."

Stock-raising Urged by G. A. Ryther

"Why Every Farmer Should be a Stockman," is the title of an interesting leaflet issued by G. A. Ryther, vice-president of the Live Stock Exchange National Bank of Chicago, and received by Illinois bankers this week. The leaflet urges an increase of stock feeding by all the farmers, giving convincing reasons therefor and closes with this thought, which, in a way, is a favorite text of the soil improvement committee of various bankers' associations: "Feed your stock; ship it when ready for market—be generous to the earth which yields you her harvest and a sure and rich reward will be yours." Farmer-bankers of Illinois especially, where the opportunities along feeding lines have been neglected, should write to Mr. Ryther and secure a quantity of these leaflets for distribution to their customers.

Auto Accident Proves Fatal

James B. Busey, Jr., assistant cashier of the Mahomet Bank, in a town of the same name near Champaign, died Tuesday, December 3d, from the results of an automobile accident. He and a companion were driving from Mahomet to Champaign when the rear of the car struck the railings of a bridge and overturned into a ditch ten feet below. The accident happened the evening before Thanksgiving. The deceased was a member of the Busey family of Urbana, owners of six banks in Champaign county.

Marbold Extensive Cattle Feeder

H. H. Marbold, owner of the bank at Greenview, has long been an extensive feeder of cattle, feeding the year round and making a scientific study of the work. As soon as one lot of cattle are topped off for the market, others are begun. Just now he is feeding shelled corn and oats, shock corn, clover hay and a commercial feed of alfalfa and molasses. He is a believer in a variety of feeds. He uses self-feeders in his feeding lots and hogs eat up the wastage. One car load of cattle recently marketed in Chicago brought $9.85 per hundredweight, averaging $146 per steer. He feeds all the corn which he raises and buys more. Mr. Marbold's bank in Greenview is one of the best appointed country banks in Illinois, housed in a bank building which would do credit to a city of 20,000 people. Another prominent farmer at Greenview is Homer J. Tice, who is well known to many banker-farmers of Illinois. Mr. Tice is a good roads advocate and is a member of the state legislature.

Illinois Notes

In this department of THE CHICAGO BANKER two weeks ago appeared an extended account of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank of Champaign, recently made a state bank out of the Illinois Title and Trust Company. The name of the cashier was given correctly as that of E. M. Vennum, but an item in this paper last week gave the name of W. W. Stern as vice-president, and Fred Collison as cashier. Messrs. Stern and Collison are both vice-presidents and Mr. Vennum is the cashier, taking the same place which he has filled for some time with the private bank.

CINCINNATI CHAPTERGRAM

BY WILLIAM BEISER.

T. J. Geisler, secretary of the Central Trust & Safe Deposit Company, delivered a lecture upon "Investments" on the evening of October 29th. The subject is a very important one. The strength of a financial institution is frequently determined by an analysis of its "Investment Account." The chapter was indeed fortunate in having one so well qualified to lecture upon this topic. The lecture was a finished one—and was the work of one who had made a deep study of the subject. Mr. Geisler has a course of lectures upon this subject in preparation, to be delivered at the St. Xavier's College of Commerce.

His original definition of "Investment" involved the idea of equal return in purchasing power at maturity as compared to the same power at the time of the investment. This idea is a very important one. Assume a case where ten years ago a party invested $1,000 at 5 per cent and in the meantime commodity prices had gone up 50 per cent—$1,000 purchasing value of about ten years ago will only purchase $500 in commodities to-day. Having received $500.00 additional interest in the meantime, he has back his original investment of $1,000. and thus receives no income upon his investment.

Mr. Geisler, with due appreciation of the returns made upon an investment of time in the chapter, attached considerable importance to such an investment in our organization. His lecture was made doubly interesting through reference to the conditions covering the recent Chinese loan and the financial plans of the large motor car company which was recently placed in an embarrassing position.

Ray C. Smith Talks on "The Receiving Teller"

Ray C. Smith, assistant cashier of the Citizens National, gave a very interesting lecture upon "The Receiving Teller" at our meeting November 12th. The lecture was based upon some years of practical experience. No question of application of theory to practice presented itself to the meeting. The lecturer gave a detailed description of making a balance of the day's receipts through the classification system, using as an illustration about six classifications. In the event of an error it could be traced to any one of the classifications. Where it is not necessary to check the day's receipts in bulk, the saving of time is very evident. Mr. Smith made reference to the value of co-operation on the part of the depositor, and told how it could be secured in a diplomantic manner without extra service on the part of the depositor. He emphasized the value of the handling of the customer in an obliging manner and through the rendering of courteous and accurate service.

George B. Mundy, L.L. B. with Peck, Shaffer & Peck, delivered a very instructive lecture upon "The Claim in the Attorney's Hands." The course of it had heretofore been a mystery to us—and Mr. Mundy made it quite clear. We went with the claim into his office, heard the dictation of the first letter, the more vigorous second attempt, and were present at the personal interview which was finally arranged. We made an analysis of the condition, the prospects, made some collections, found some concealed assets, prevented a discharge in bankruptcy, and above all, learned of the great importance of having signed statements on file in the credit departments. This feature he emphasized very strongly—told of cases where the holding of such a statement in the attorney's hands has been of much benefit to the one filing the claim.

The lecturers spoke in a vigorous style, and there is no doubt that much practical knowledge was gained through attendance at these meetings. The usual discussions were handled in an able manner.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

The widely advertised and long anticipated minstrel show of the Milwaukee chapter, American Institute of Banking, was given its initial presentation in the Pabst theater Friday night before a packed house in which Milwaukee bankers and their families figured prominently. Under the careful direction of A. Caspar, a clerk in the First National, in the capacity of stage manager, every detail of the ambitious performance was worked out with a smoothness that would do credit to professionals. E. A. Reddeman, cashier of the Germania-National showed unsuspected versatility and carried off chief honors as interlocutor. Louis Petran, H. G. Rogers, and Charles Collins contributed vaudeville features of real merit, while the eight end men comprising Howard S. Swan, Theodore E. Lusk, James E. Hogan, E. Halsey, William Steiner, Walter W. Dueringer, Walter George and William Lochen sustained the merriment in a capable manner. Those who occupied boxes at the opening performance were Charles F. Pfister, L. J. Petit, Fred Vogel, Jr., James K. Ilsley, Oliver C. Fuller, Gustav Pabst, William Woods Plankinton, Albert Trostel, John E. DeWolf, and George H. Russell. The performance will be repeated to-night.

Bankers Attend Charity Ball

Members of the reception committee who led the grand march with which Milwaukee's eighteenth charity ball was opened in the Auditorium Tuesday night, included the following Milwaukee bankers: L. J. Petit, president of the Wisconsin National; Washington Becker, president of the Marine National; James K. Ilsley, president of the Marshall & Ilsley; Lyman Bournique, cashier of the Wisconsin National; and Oliver Clyde Fuller, president of the Wisconsin Trust Company.

Contemplate Pension System

Officials of the First National Bank and First Savings and Trust Company contemplate the institution of a pension system for employees of the affiliated institutions, details of which will be formulated before the opening of the year. Alexander Wall, credit clerk of the First National, is working out the plan for the pension system, which will be the first to be adopted by a Milwaukee bank.

New State Bank for Milwaukee

Articles of incorporation for another state bank for Milwaukee, to be located in the northeast section of the city, were taken out this week by W. I. Greene, real estate man, and David H. Davies, state treasury agent. The new institution, to be known as the East Side State Bank, will be capitalized at $50,000 and is expected to be open for business by February 1, 1913. The new bank is the first in the rapidly growing upper east side business section. Safety deposit facilities will be a feature of the bank.

Grain Competitions Popular

With four of its local county grain competitions successfully concluded, the Wisconsin Bankers Association anticipates an educational campaign among Wisconsin farmers this fall that will supersede all previous ones in the number of farmers reached and the amount of propaganda distributed. The four already held were at Hancock, Nov. 26th; Clinton, Nov. 30th; Waupun, Dec. 5th, and Grand Rapids Dec. 7th. Other competitions in the series will be held as follows: Shawano, Dec. 10th; Shell Lake, Dec. 10th; Wittenberg, Dec. 11th; Downing, Dec. 11th; Stratford, Dec. 12th; Eau Claire, Dec. 13th; Columbus, Dec. 17th.

Milwaukee Notes

Commissioner of Banking A. O. Kuolt spent all day Wednesday in Milwaukee's financial district.

A. C. Best, well known in Milwaukee financial circles, has entered the bond department of the Germania-National Bank. This department, which was organized only a year ago with E. A. Reddeman, cashier of the bank, in charge, will celebrate a highly satisfactory year at the close of business December 31st.

On Monday, The Milwaukee Electric Railway & Light company will pay the state treasurer $371,963.51 in taxes on its property and that of The Milwaukee Light, Heat and Traction Company. The taxes paid by the two companies in the last three years aggregate $1,048,389.92 or an amount equal to the entire cost of supporting the state rate commission for one year, according to President J. D. Mortimer.

¶ This Bank, being at the logical center of Wisconsin banking activity, and having an exceptional list of State and Foreign correspondents, offers its services to conservative Banks with the assurance that such a connection will be of mutual advantage.

COMMERCIAL MEN ENTERTAINED

Bankers, merchants, manufacturers and newspaper publishers from northern Illinois counties were guests of the members of the ways and means committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce, Wednesday noon, at the La Salle Hotel and during the afternoon visited the plant of the Western Electric Company. In the evening they were the guests of the members of the association committee on down-state fraternal relation at a dinner given in the La Salle. This is the group of business men that are developing the Illinois federation of commercial clubs.

AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION MEETS

The tenth annual meeting of the American Automobile Association was held at the La Salle Hotel Monday. Monday evening the annual banquet occurred, and there were present representatives from many western states, who also were delegates en route to the ninth annual convention of the American Road Builders Association meeting in Cincinnati, December 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th.

Former United States Senator Lafe Young, editor of the Des Moines Capital and president of the Iowa Good Roads Association, was the most notable speaker at the banquet and told in a strong and interesting manner of the improvement which has been made in Iowa earth roads as a result of their agitation for systematic dragging and of the passage of a compulsory dragging law. It was Senator Young's paper which started this agitation and which resulted in the completion of the river-to-river road from Davenport to Council Bluffs, a distance of some 360 miles, over which recently an ordinary roadster automobile was able to make the distance between sunrise and sunset. Senator Young expressed the opinion that the national government should give federal aid to roads of national consequence, such as a road from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and that in the improvement of their principal roads the state and county should furnish the means.

There was a strong delegation of Iowa bankers and business men present who left for Rock Island, Tuesday to attend a joint good roads conference to be held in Rock Island by representatives of the three cities of Davenport, Moline and Rock Island to consider the matter of developing interest in their part of the ocean-to-ocean road.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS URGES NEED OF CENTRAL RESERVE

very fact that the central reserve banks of New York must create a mass of stock exchange loans, for lack of any other large secondary reserve basis, in itself unduly promotes speculation in investment securities to the detriment of productive industry.

Ours is the only nation basing its banking credit system primarily on stocks and bonds.

Need for Central Reserve

Our many-reserve system has broken down under every great strain. In the panics of '73, '93 and 1907, which cost us untold millions of dollars, our scattered reserves were powerless to uphold the structure of credit. In the pinch, the thousands of smaller banks could not use their own little hoards of cash they had grabbed out of the central reserve banks, because the law forces every bank not only to build up a reserve, but to keep it intact at all hazards.

The cash our banks must hold for emergencies must not be used for emergencies. Thus says the law.

With a great single-reserve, where loans based on industry could always be rediscounted by the banks, the panic of 1907 never would have occurred.

We have enough gold in the banks amply to uphold the structure of credit. The reason the structure collapses periodically in the United States is that the cash reserves, divided into 25,000 small reserves, fail to do the work of supporting the structure that they would do if combined into a central reserve. Ours is the only great banking country without a central reserve; and it is likewise the only great banking country that suffers from money panics.

The country has the choice of allowing New York to continue as the keeper of the final reserves, or of establishing a co-operative central reserve at Washington, in which all the banks of the country will have a voice, and which no section of the country will dominate.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis, December 4th.—Business at the financial institutions during the past week has been active, the volume of business transacted being very large. The gains in bank clearings the past few weeks have been large as well as constant. There has been a very liberal demand for money, rates holding firm at 5½ to six per cent on call and time loans.

Cut Jefferson Trust Board

The board of directors of the Jefferson-Gravois Trust Company was reduced from eleven to seven members at the annual meeting of the stockholders on Monday. Two of the directorships were vacant and J. H. Byrd and W. E. Talley, two other directors, refused to stand for re-election. "We were unable to attend the directors' meetings and as the local men were managing the bank satisfactorily we reduced the board," said J. H. Byrd. "We will retain our stock in the bank." The directors elected Monday were: Anton Heisler, president; Anthony Collier, vice-president; Herbert M. Johnson, secretary and treasurer; L. S. Parker, A. F. Pollman, J. H. Niemeier and C. S. Marsh. G. H. Hoehn was re-elected assistant secretary and treasurer.

Members of Poor Mans Bank Committee Named

Festus J. Wade, A. L. Shapleigh, Henry L. Cornet, W. J. Kinsella and W. W. Hoxton will compose the committee which will plan the details of the Poor Mans Bank, which is to be organized by Col. James Gay Butler. Announcement of the starting of the bank was made by Mr. Butler last week. The organization will be a branch of the Fidelity Corporation of America.

Banks Ask Mail Change

At the instance of eight big shipping banks of St. Louis, Postmaster Thomas J. Akins has requested authority from the post office department at Washington for the delivery of registered mail at the downtown post-office as before the opening of the new post office. Since the main post office was moved to Eighteenth Street and Clark Avenue, all the banks have been obliged to send to the new post office for their registered mail, much of it being packages of currency. Each bank is obliged to send at least two messengers for this mail, and in addition to the time required for the trip and the carfare paid out by the messengers, where a special vehicle is not available, considerable risk of loss attends the transfer of these valuable packages. The action of Postmaster Akins followed the receipt of letters from the banks urging a change. The banks were: National Bank of Commerce, Third National, State National, Central National, Mechanics-American, Merchants-Laclede, Boatmens and the Mercantile National.

Rate Increase Needed

The prevailing opinion among bankers and railroad officials with respect to the report of the arbitration board in the eastern engineers' wage case is that it represents a happy solution of what looked like a very troublesome situation, that undoubtedly the increases in wages granted were in reality the least important feature of the report so far as the railroads are concerned. Railroad officials believe that if the suggestions of the report are carried out, the ultimate benefit derived by the railroads will considerably exceed the increases in wages.

H. S. Priest Resigns

Attorney H. S. Priest has asked to be relieved of his duties as director of the National Bank of Commerce, stating that he has not the time to devote to the work of a director and asking that some one be selected to succeed him. It is expected that the stockholders will be called upon to fill eight vacancies in the board at the forthcoming annual meeting. In an effort to settle the controversy between the present administration of the National Bank of Commerce and those representing the Thompson estate, the former has appointed a committee from the board of directors, which has been conferring with the Thompson heirs. This committee is headed by Sam M. Kennard and consists of J. M. Bell, E. T. Campbell, John A. Holmes and H. P. Knapp. It has been stated authoritatively that the present board of directors unanimously has agreed to retain B. F. Edwards as president.

Draft Good Roads Measure

The committee appointed by the Missouri Highway Association, recently organized in Jefferson City, to draft suitable good roads legislation for introduction at the coming session of the legislature, probably will submit two measures. The first will be a bill creating a state highway department which will be given supervision over the construction of permanent roads and the expenditure of state road money. The other will be a constitutional amendment levying a direct tax of 5 or 10 cents on the hundred valuation for the construction of permanent roads. This amendment probably will empower the legislature to impose the tax at its option. The Highway Association will meet at Jefferson City soon to approve the measures drafted by the committee of which George B. Ellis of Appleton City is chairman.

Declare Extra Dividends

Notice of an extra Christmas dividend of 3 per cent has been sent to stockholders of the Franklin bank. The dividend will be paid December 1st at the same time as the regular quarterly dividend of 3 per cent.

Stockholders in the State National have received checks in payment of an extra Christmas dividend of 2 per cent in addition to the regular semiannual dividend of 4 per cent. The payment of the dividend entailed the disbursement of $120,000.

Draft Forger Pleads Guilty

John D. Davis, vice-president of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, was in Philadelphia last week, where he attended the trial of E. B. Carr, who issued several false drafts in Philadelphia and other eastern cities, purported to be drawn by the Mississippi Valley Trust Company of St. Louis on the Louisville Trust Company of Louisville, Ky. Carr pleaded guilty and was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. The Mississippi Valley Trust suffered no loss through the transaction.

Realty Company Gets Charter

The Hot Springs and Little Rock Realty Company, Little Rock, Ark., a corporation with $250,000 capital stock, of which $155,000 is subscribed, has been incorporated. The officers of the corporation are: H. A. Bowman, president; W. S. Sorrells and Justin Matthews, vice-presidents; J. S. Longino, secretary and J. D. Arnold, treasurer.

Held for Bank Robbery

Neal Mulcahey and Charles Meirs, escaped convicts from the Kansas penitentiary, who are wanted on a charge of robbing a Rock Island train near Howe, Okla., October 9th, have been held to the grand jury at Huntsville, Ark., on a charge of stealing $14,000 from the First National at Huntsville last June.

Wilkins in sixteen months' time to those depositors who were not protected under the guaranty fund of state banks on interest-bearing deposits, and leaves only $20,000 unpaid. All of the depositors who were protected under the guaranty fund have been paid one hundred per cent on their deposits. In addition to paying the depositors Tuesday, the agent has been enabled to reimburse the guaranty fund a portion of the sum advanced to liquidate the claims of the protected depositors. The guaranty fund advanced $111,650 to pay those depositors who were protected under that fund. This fund has been reimbursed 15 per cent of that amount, or $16,747.50.

Two Development Concerns Chartered

Articles of incorporation of two companies have been filed in the state department, having for their purpose the development of the southwestern portion of the state. They are the Big Wells Farming and Nursery Company of Big Wells, Dimmit County, and the Las Vegas Irrigation Company of Las Vegas, Dimmit County. The charters were brought here by Attorney Townsend of San Antonio and Prof. F. W. Mally, agricultural director of the Cross S Ranch Farming Company, with headquarters at Crystal City. The capital stock of the Big Wells concern is $100,000, and the incorporators are: J. E. Franklin, St. Louis; M. E. Leming, Big Wells; William McMurray, Big Wells; F. W. Mally, Crystal City, and W. L. Mason, Big Wells. The Las Vegas company has a capital of $25,000 and its incorporators are J. A. Pierce, Franklin, Tenn.; Eli Howell and H. H. Hadley, San Antonio.

Prof. Mally, who is the former state entomologist, said that his company—the Big Wells Farming and Nursery Company—is to be an auxiliary of the Cross S Ranch Farming Company. The new company has 1,000 acres of land which is to be cultivated, 100 of which will be devoted exclusively to orcharding. Prof. Mally, for the past ten years, has been working on an improved plum which he says he has now perfected. This plum is a hybrid between a native Texas plum and the famous Burbank plum, and is a most prolific variety. Several hundred acres will be devoted to the cultivation of alfalfa and the production of hogs. This farm will be conducted on highly scientific lines, and irrigation will be used exclusively.

With Bank Fifty-five Years

John H. McCluney, president of the State National, St. Louis, on Monday celebrated the fifty-fifth anniversary of his connection with that institution. With the exception of William H. Thomson, vice-president of the Boatmens Bank, he is the oldest banker in St. Louis in point of service. Mr. Thomson holds the record over Mr. McCluney by six months. Under Mr. McCluney's administration of the last five years, as president, the State National has attained a reputation for conservatism. He began his service with the bank in 1857, as an office boy, in what was then the State Savings Association.

American Trust Shows Gain

A gain of $130,691 in deposits since the previous statement was shown by the American Trust Company of St. Louis in its statement following the call of the comptroller of the currency on Tuesday. The deposits at the time of the statement of September 4th were $3,277,295, while on November 26th they were $3,407,986.

Forty Million Dollar Phone Merger

The Bell Telephone Company of Missouri, the Southwestern Telephone Company and the Missouri and Kansas Telephone Company have been reorganized jointly under the name of the Southwestern Telegraph and Telephone Company, with a joint capital of $40,000,000. This exceeds by $10,000,000 the joint capital of the merged concern. H. J. Pettingill, president of the Missouri Bell Company, will be president of the new company. Other officers are J. P. Crowley, secretary, and Theodore N. Vail, Charles H. Wilson, U. N. Bethel and Royal Ferris, directors.

"The change is made," President Pettingill said, "to further simplify the plan, inaugurated last spring, of operating the Bell telephone companies in the Southwest under one organization with headquarters in St. Louis. One of the operating divisions created last spring extended over eastern Missouri, southwestern Illinois and all of Arkansas. In St. Louis and vicinity the Bell Telephone Company of Missouri operated. In Arkansas the company operated under the name of the Southwestern Telephone Company, and in northeastern Missouri in the name of the Missouri and Kan-

TAFT ON THE NEW DIPLOMACY

President Taft may well take pride in the vast expansion of our foreign trade under his famous "dollar" diplomacy. In his short message to congress, the president sets forth the benefits of the doctrine. He says:

"The diplomacy of the present administration has sought to respond to modern ideas of commercial intercourse. This policy has been characterized as substituting dollars for bullets. It is one that appeals alike to idealistic humanitarian sentiments, to the dictates of sound policy and strategy and to legitimate commercial aims.

"No evidence of prosperity among well established farmers should blind us to the fact that lack of capital is preventing a development of the nation's agricultural resources and an adequate increase of the land under cultivation: that agricultural production fast is falling behind the increase in population, and that, in fact, although these well established farmers are maintained in increasing prosperity because of the natural increase in population, we are not developing the industry of agriculture.

"As illustrating the commercial benefits to the nation derived from the new diplomacy and its effectiveness upon the material as well as the more ideal side, it may be remarked that through direct official efforts alone there have been obtained in the course of this administration contracts from foreign governments involving an expenditure of $50,000,000 in the factories of the United States.

"The successful conduct of our foreign relations demands a broad and a modern view. We cannot meet new questions nor build for the future if we confine ourselves to outworn dogmas of the past and the perspective appropriate at our emergence from colonial times and conditions."

The president again calls attention to the urgent need of cheaper credits for the farmer, in which position he has been backed up by the American Bankers Association.

OUR FIRST NATIONAL BUDGET

At the coming short session of congress, the nation will, the first time in its history, have an opportunity to consider a national budget. Give President Taft the credit for the innovation. Heretofore congress dickered and bargained back and forth between committees, each with its own appropriation bill, until enough agreements had been made to pass the bunch. The system has been called "log rolling" and other worse names. In the present effort an attempt will be made in a scientific way to determine:—

(1) How much money will be needed for the conduct of the government during the year beginning July 1st next.

(2) What money is on hand; and from what source is more expected.

(3) What shall be the amount appropriated to each function performed by the government.

Stated in the above manner, every business man, no matter how small his affairs; every farmer who plans ahead, every man in any way charged with the care of funds for others, will at once perceive that a national budget must be desired by all citizens who wish business-like methods applied to the one big business of the nation—the government. Furthermore, they will perceive that if a little business needs system, then a big business, involving $1,000,000,000 expenditures a year, needs it still more.

In past years a comprehensive statement of income and expenditures has not been made because practically impossible. Appropriation bills had no relation, each to the other, nor to income provided. Cabinet officers, committee chairmen and even minor officers in departments approached the nine "appropriating" committees for "specials" each carrying an appropriation. The confusion of present appropriation bills is indicated in the list of committees charged with the report of such bills. The committee on appropriations reports six appropriation bills:

Legislative, executive, and judicial; sundry civil; pensions; fortifications; District of Columbia; deficiencies.

The committee on agriculture has charge of the department of agriculture appropriations with the exception of a few deficiencies which the committee on appropriations looks after. Its overhead charges are, unlike all other departments, not included in the legislative, executive, and judicial bill reported by the committee on appropriations. The committee on rivers and harbors reports appropriations for those river and harbor improvements for which no contract authorizations have been made. Then there are the committees on foreign relations, military, naval, post-offices, claims, Indian affairs and a string of others.

Even lacking system as did the old plan it would have seemed better had it not been abused by political trading. It was a sort of financial foot ball game with the center rush, end men, etc., and each committee chairman priding himself on getting "everything through as proposed." Under the new plan as proposed by President Taft we shall have:—

(a) A BUDGETARY MESSAGE, setting forth in brief the significance of the proposals to which attention is invited.

(b) A SUMMARY FINANCIAL STATEMENT, setting forth in very summary form:

1. The financial condition.
2. A statement of the condition of appropriations and other data pertaining to the "general fund," as well as to the other funds of the government.

3. An account of revenues and expenditures for the last completed fiscal year; and

4. A statement showing the effect of past financial policy as well as of budget proposals on the general fund surplus.

(c) A SUMMARY OF EXPENDITURES, classified by objects, setting forth the contracting and purchasing relations of the government.

(d) SUMMARIES OF ESTIMATES, setting forth:

1. The estimated revenues compared with actual revenues for a period of years; and

2. Estimated expenditures compared with actual expenditures for a period of years.

(e) A SUMMARY OF CHANGES IN LAW, setting forth what legislation it is thought should be enacted in order to enable the administration to transact public business with greater economy and efficiency; i. e., changes in organic law which, if enacted, would affect appropriations as well as the character of work to be done.

America is just about the last of the civilized nations to adopt the budget system of making appropriations. Even the Bulgarians and the Chinks have their budgets. England, Germany, France and other such nations have used the system practically from the first. American colleges, American editors and all financial papers and students of economy have been urging the budget system for years. Taft was the first president who was willing to urge congress to do away with the old log-rolling methods. It will be an innovation and every banker hereafter will be an interested student of public financial conditions as revealed by our national budgets.

A FOWLER BILL IN CONGRESS

Charles N. Fowler of New Jersey, who served in congress for years and sat at the head of the committee on currency and banking, has prepared a financial bill for introduction at the short session. He charges that the Aldrich bill is "a gigantic conspiracy," and blames it all on the ex-boss of the senate. Mr. Fowler would enlarge the scope of the national banks to cover the savings field entirely and directly. He would give them the direct note issuing power as in Canada, where currency panics never come. He would have nationals do a trust company business also and thus make a clean sweep.

After this would come the crux of the Fowler plan which would extend the clearing house idea to all banks in 100 mile zones with boards of control in charge of note issues and other features. Supervision would be of the clearing house type of perfection. The famous ex-congressman has a beautifully worked out plan and it will repay well any banker who will study it. During the summer, Mr. Fowler spent several weeks in Chicago in an attempt to solve the intent of the National Citizens League. He wanted to know if the league was open to the espousal of other plans than that of Aldrich. He didn't say before he left that he had obtained much satisfaction but he did get his ideas before the big bankers of Chicago and received some encouragement from them.

Might not Col. Fowler after all prove to be the Moses of the situation and lead both democrats and republicans to the best way to help the country? He is open-minded as to suggestions for improvement, so he says, and he invites free criticism of the bill he has prepared.

MACVEAGH HAS CURRENCY BILL

Secretary Franklin MacVeagh astonished almost everyone on Wednesday by urging upon congress an immediate and radical reform of the currency and banking laws of the country. In outlining his idea of an adequate relief measure he said that aside from affording flexible and elastic currency and reserves, currency revision should bring the banks into organized co-operation and provide for a central agency through which they could work together, free of political or trust control. He added that the anomalous relation between the treasury department and the general financial world was part of the system to be reformed.

Mr. MacVeagh named as the provisions of his proposed bill the following:

A relief measure reforming the banking and currency system, the secretary declared, must include, among its necessary features, provisions:

For never-failing reserves and never-failing currency, and for the perfect elasticity and flexibility of both.

For the permanent organization and organized co-operation of the banks, which are now suffering and causing the nation to suffer by reason of their unorganized state.

For a central agency to represent and act for the organized and co-operative banks—this agency to be securely free from political or trust control—but with the government having adequate and intimate supervision of it.

For independent banking units—so independent that no one bank can be owned, controlled and shared in in any degree, directly or indirectly, by any other bank.

For the equality of all banks, national or state, both as to standards and as to functions—so that every requirement made of a national bank must be complied with equally by a state bank, and every function or privilege enjoyed by a state bank shall be enjoyed by a national bank.

For the utilization and fluidity of bank assets.

For the scientific development of exchanges—domestic and foreign.

For foreign banking as an adjunct of our foreign commerce.

For taking the treasury department out of the banking business.

In his argument supporting the above principles the secretary holds the government to blame for all recent panics. He laid stress on the crop moving requirements and never mentioned Wall Street. He wants the oleo law revised and pointed out a likely deficit next year.

ISSUES OF NEW SECURITIES

Issues of new securities in November by American railroad, traction and industrial companies amounted to only $140,000,000, but the total for eleven months ended Nov. 30 was $2,090,000,000. To this total the railroads contributed $1,030,000,000 and the industrials $1,060,000,000. The railroad issues were $25,000,000 less than their total in the corresponding period of 1911, but the industrial issues were increased $486,000,000.

JAPANESE BANK FOR LOS ANGELES

N. Yatsushiro, manager and director of the Suimitomo Bank of Osaka, Japan, states that he is in Los Angeles to look over the banking situation with the idea of establishing a branch of his bank in that city. He also intimated that the Yokohama Specie Bank, one of the largest institutions in Japan, intends to establish a large branch at First and Main Streets within the next few weeks to care for Japanese residents of that vicinity.

The First State Bank, Brady, Mont., has been incorporated with a capital of $20,000.

CHANGES IN SAVINGS BANK LAWS

George C. Van Tuyl, Jr., New York state superintendent of banks, will recommend in his forthcoming annual report laws requiring savings banks to accumulate surpluses or reserve funds, and other reforms.

"While the securities in which the trustees of savings banks are authorized to invest deposits are very strictly limited by law," said Mr. Van Tuyl recently, "human ingenuity as yet has been unable to devise any plan by which losses upon investments may be entirely avoided. The dangers of the situation were forcibly brought home to the thinking men connected with the savings bank system of this state by the great depreciation in savings bank securities which took place during the panic of 1907.

"It is hoped that a proper solution of this question may be reached during the coming session of the legislature. This department stands ready to render any assistance possible. It is needless to say that some sacrifices and compromises will be necessary in order to procure the passage of a law that will at the same time meet the situation and be generally satisfactory.

"Among the most important recommendations affecting savings banks to be submitted to the legislature by the superintendent at this time is that for a law to empower him to authorize branches of savings banks. The authorization of such branch institutions, would encourage thrift in districts not now served by existing savings banks.

"Another proposed amendment which would be valuable would be a provision to permit savings banks to consolidate; or, in other words, to make it possible for one institution to take over another on terms satisfactory to the superintendent of banks. In this manner certain struggling institutions that can now only obtain deposits by paying excessive rates of interest could be absorbed by stronger institutions without danger to their depositors or the savings bank system of the state."

American Land Bank System

"The crowning glory of the co-operative American monetary method will be the American land mortgage banking system I proposed," says Mr. Myrick's open letter to President Taft. "It calls for a land bank covering each state, incorporated under the national banking law. Such bank at all times shall have in cash or available securities what I call the land reserve, equal to not less than 5 per cent of the bonds it has outstanding, which are secured by the mortgages held in its treasury upon farms occupied and worked by their owners, or upon homes occupied by their owners.

"This method provides in a simple, systematic, business-like and effective manner for the little national co-operatives to act as the local representatives and supervisors for the national land bank in their state. The investment of the co-operatives in the land reserve, also the relation thereto of the regular national banks, are so adjusted as to secure their interest and co-operation, while avoiding the error of combining or mixing (1) commercial banking and personal credits with the function of (2) permanent credits and mortgage banking. These are two entirely different kinds of banking, which ever must be kept separate and distinct, yet may wisely co-operate to supplement each other.

"Under state law, there may be co-operative banks for deposits and loans affiliated with one or more land banks under state law. There is ample field for these institutions under both national and state laws, same as is now the case with commercial banks.

"Pray observe that the people do not ask for pap or privilege, subsidy or subvention. People of small means simply want equality of opportunity with those of larger resources, for mobilizing their more limited cash, credits, and co-operation through a sound banking system founded upon American money, each dollar of which is the equivalent of gold. Americans are eager to help themselves—let congress give them the chance. Self-help strengthens, gift-help weakens."

GOOD BOOKS FOR CHRISTMAS

"A Christmas Honeymoon" is a new story by Frances Aymar Mathews who wrote "My Lady Peggy Goes to Town" and a lot of other good ones. This is a story for those who love Christmas, and who is there that does not? and for those who love lovers, and who is there that does not? The tale begins in Washington before the Civil War and it ends in the New York of some thirty years ago. The descriptions of old-time New York give the real flavor of the time, but the winsome and wilful heroine and her gallant and obstinate lover are as true to-day as they were in the days when Betty and her husband lived. The whole book breathes the Christmas spirit in a singularly sweet and delightful fashion. The pictures are charming and suggestive of the past, and happily illustrate the story.

"The Littlest Rebel" by Edward Peple who wrote "The Prince Chap" and others is a fine Christmas book. The scene of this exquisite little masterpiece is laid in the South during the Civil War. Here the North and South meet, and "Virgie" stands between them—a rare little heroine. There is a pathos and humor in this story that will be appreciated by many readers. It is truly a book for young and old.

Both books are published by Moffat, Yard

Co., New York, at $1.00 and 75 cents respectively.

"Gordon Craig" by Randall Parrish is put out by A. C. McClurg & Co. of Chicago, which gives it insurance of a rare kind. Craig is a soldier of fortune, a type which will interest the young man. Take a young fellow of spirit, just discharged from the army and up against it financially, offer him ten thousand dollars for a risky piece of work, and he'll take it on just as Gordon Craig did. His job was to impersonate the missing heir to a valuable estate to save it from dispersal, and to do it he had to find a girl to act the part of his wife. Then things began to happen thick and fast. Craig and the girl got out of one situation only to fall into a worse one, and it was only their nerve and resourcefulness, that carried them through. Like all Mr. Parrish's stories, it's full of action and a sure enough thriller. This one fairly hums. Price $1.35 net.

"The Time Lock" by Charles Edmonds Walk ought to interest bankers. The combination of time lock features with an apparently unsolvable mystery furnishes the motive. Of course you like a real mystery story —one that will keep you guessing to the very end? "The Time Lock" is that kind of story, and it's head and shoulders above any mystery tale that's been written in a long time. The "Silent House" reluctantly revealing strange secrets; Paige Carew's unaccountable disappearance en route from Paris to London; the coffin-like box which appeared at Van Vechten's banquet; the beautiful girl in the crowd surrounding a murdered man—all have a part in revealing the secret of?

This fine story is put out by A. C. McClurg & Co. also, at $1.35 net.

"The Financier" by Theodore Dreiser sounds like another one for bankers. It is from the press of Harper Brothers, which is a sort of guaranty bond. "The Financier," is a tale of the lust for wealth arising out of civil war conditions. The career of a Philadelphia financier is followed from his boyhood, through success, to his imprisonment in the penitentiary for misappropriating city funds. His love affair with the daughter of a politician hastens his ruin. Unlike Mr. Dreiser's "Jennie Gerhardt" or "Sister Carrie," "The Financier" has a man for his principal character. Price $1.40 net.

Adds—Subtracts Just Push the Lever

This latest addition to the big Burroughs line does all the figure work of a regular adding machine—and besides performs the extraordinary feat of direct subtracting.

In many kinds of bank figure work the Burroughs Subtracting Machine cuts $\frac{1}{3}$ off the time required by any other adding machine.

The Fourth National Bank of Philadelphia uses this machine for Ledger Posting and Monthly Statements.

We have a System form (551) which shows daily deposits added to Old Balance, and withdrawals subtracted—the New Balance being obtained as automatically as pulling the handle.

Overdrafts are automatically caught, the machine refusing to print anything but an overdraft (marked OD) if more has been subtracted than added. This machine thinks.

We also have a little booklet, "Reconciling an Individual Account," which interestingly describes one of the possibilities of this machine.

Ask for this booklet and System form 551. Free demonstration if desired.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Although bank clearings in some of the Central West cities showed a decline for the week ending November 28th, the general condition of business remains good and financiers attribute the clearings decline to the fact that the marketing of farm products has reached its highest point for the year and the money received by the farmers has not yet reached general circulation. The month of November saw better standards of clearings for days, weeks and the month than for several years past. In Omaha the clearings for November were $73,221,560 compared with $61,811,450 for the corresponding month last year, showing a gain of $11,410,110. For the week ending November 28th, Kansas City fell into seventh place with Pittsburgh in the lead. This has happened rarely during the past year, but even then Kansas City showed a gain for that week of 15.7 per cent. For the week ending November 28th, Omaha had a gain of 23.3 per cent. Merchants generally are experiencing a gratifying opening of the holiday season and, while few expect to break any records for sales of Christmas goods, it seems to be the feeling that buying will be generous and of a kind that will afford uniform profits. In Kansas City, the early Christmas shopping crusade already has brought gratifying results. This movement was inaugurated under the auspices of the board of public welfare of the city and it has received the hearty support and co-operation of club women, trades unions, etc. Few retail houses will keep open at night during the holiday season except on Christmas eve. This has become a settled custom in Kansas City and the public has accommodated itself to the rule without inconvenience.

Walton H. Holmes Says Conditions are Splendid

Walton H. Holmes, president of the Pioneer Trust Company of Kansas City, was in a particularly enthusiastic frame of mind, when a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER called on him recently. His company has been making remarkable gains in deposits of late and all departments of its extensive business have been thriving. Therefore the unusually expansive smile upon Mr. Holmes' face when he declared: "Conditions are fine; splendid. The entire Southwest is entering the winter with all elements of business and finance at their best. So far as I can see, there has not been a ripple on the surface as a result of the election. If it has been felt in other places there has been no reflection in this quarter. Business in Kansas City and this territory is sound. For several years we have been undergoing a process of readjustment, and things have settled to a firm basis. There are very few failures and our business men have learned conservatism—not the conservatism of standing still, but of going forward carefully and with safety. Crops were all that we had hoped they would be. The live stock industry is flourishing, with almost unprecedented prices for cattle and hogs. There is plenty of feed for the stock and each farm now is a manufacturing plant, making high priced beef and pork out of roughage and corn. In my interviews with country bankers, I find the same spirit of satisfaction manifest and I look for the new year to open with a continuation of the same favorable conditions."

Missing Waco Bonds Found in Kansas City

Three laborers on the Kansas City public dump, were trying to excavate some brass to sell to a junk dealer last week, when they happened to uncover two registered mail pouches which were stolen from a mail car in Kansas City the night of July 5th, last. When the bag was opened some discolored papers were blown about by the wind. None of the men had any idea that these papers were valuable, but after they had been gathered up and turned over to the postoffice authorities, it was found that they were Waco, Tex., water bonds payable to bearer and worth $150,000. The bonds had been insured and the insurance company had paid out the money for them. Arrangements were made to reimburse the insurance company. Some small bonds were missing from the pouch as was also a quantity of jewelry that had been in the pouch when it was stolen. Kansas City bankers called at the postoffice and identified parts of their consignments. The Commerce Trust Company had the largest consignment and the New England National Bank and the Southwest National Bank of Commerce also were interested.

Missouri Banker to Jail

The little city of Clinton, Mo., has been thrown into a fever of excitement over the arrest of John Ogden, leading citizen and president of the Farmers Bank of Deepwater, twelve miles from Clinton. Ogden has had a sensational career. He went to Clinton eight years ago with his past veiled. Immediately he became a factor in local business and made money rapidly. He organized the bank at Deepwater and became its president. Every turn he made seemed profitable and he was an active church worker, commanding the respect and confidence of his neighbors, who frequently consulted him on business matters. His life seemed to be an open book, except that neither he nor his wife ever talked about events prior to their coming to Clinton. Suddenly a change came about that no one could explain. A week or more ago Ogden came to Kansas City and on his return to Clinton he began to frequent saloons and drank heavily. Suspicion being aroused, an investigation was made at the bank, which resulted in Ogden's arrest on a charge of forgery. The bank was closed temporarily. Then claims began to pile up and disclosures were made that indicated serious trouble for the banker. He was placed in jail and was unable to furnish $500 bond although he was reputed to be worth $75,000. It is said that a Kansas City bank lent Ogden $11,000 and two Kansas City commission houses, had given him $4,500 on a cattle mortgage, although it is alleged Ogden never owned any cattle. In all, the claims now total about $35,000. The loss at the bank is said to be comparatively small and will be protected by the stockholders, enabling the bank to continue business.

Fight Still On

The tangles in the affairs of the Great Western Life Insurance Company of Kansas City have not been straightened out, although the injunction enjoining the president from making the merger with the International Life Insurance Company of St. Louis has been dissolved. In the same opinion of the federal court the application for a receivership of the company was denied. This leaves affairs in about the same situation as at the beginning of the trouble, as there appears no indication that the dissatisfied stockholders will discontinue the fight against the merger. The fight, for the time being at least, is transferred to the Missouri department of insurance but the federal court has reserved the right to make further inquiry into the terms of the proposed merger and to see that any merger is on terms that will be just and equitable to all concerned.

Death of Omaha Banker

Gustave A. Wise, one of the most prominent financiers of Omaha and a director in the City National Bank and the City Trust and Safe Company of that city, died last week following an operation in a local hospital. Mr. Wise came to America from Germany when he was an infant and the family settled in Omaha. The boy grew up in Omaha and made money rapidly. He was a prominent Mason. The pall bearers were all directors of the City National, as follows: John R. Webster, H. S. Weller, W. G. Silver, B. F. Thomas, A. W. Jefferis and C. S. Hayward.

City, has resigned his municipal position. Mr. Holmes was appointed by Mayor Jost, who has adopted the policy of seeking the most prominent business men and financiers in the city for positions upon his boards and commissions. Mr. Holmes served with distinguished success as a member of the civil service board, but he found that it required too great a sacrifice of time.

State Bank Commissioner Swanger, of Missouri, issued a call for state bank statements November 30th, of the condition of state banks at the close of business November 26th.

Daniel Hughes, 54 years of age, died at his apartments in the Carlton Hotel, Kansas City, last week. He formerly lived in Liberty, Mo., where for eight years he was president of the First National of that city.

Edward Bealy, 24 years old, son of William Bealy, president of the Farmers Bank of Morrill, Kan., killed himself last week. No cause was given.

John E. Wagner, cashier of the First State Bank of Larned, Kan., is a candidate for the office of bank commissioner of Kansas under the new democratic administration. Mr. Wagner was formerly vice-president of the Kansas Bankers Association and is well known throughout the state. J. N. Dolley, who has been commissioner during the administration of Governor Stubbs, will retire next March.

Dr. W. S. Woods, formerly president of the National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City, but now living in retirement in southern California, has donated $19,200 to the William Woods College of Fulton, Mo., under a pledge he made some time ago to duplicate donations made by others.

C. G. Hutcheson, cashier of the First National of Kansas City, spent Thanksgiving in Halstead, Kas., with his mother.

The Texas department of banking has approved the following reserve agents for state banks: For the Rogers State of Rogers, the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas; for the Angleton State of Angleton, the State Bank and Trust Company of San Antonio; for the Hagerman State of Hagerman, the Chase National of New York and the Pioneer Trust of Kansas City; for the Guaranty State of Longview, the Hanover National of New York; for the First State of Mart, the Third National of St. Louis; for the First State of Talpa, the American National of Austin; for the Willis State of Willis, the South Texas Commercial National of Houston and the National Bank of Commerce of Houston; for the Bank of Dundee, the Hanover National of New York; for the First State of Bryson, the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas; for the First State of Hallville, the State National of Fort Worth and the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas; for the Farmers State of Clarendon, the Drovers National of Kansas City; for the First State of Bishop, the Alamo National of San Antonio, and for the First State of Gary, the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas.

The following out-of-town bankers called upon Kansas City banks last week: F. P. Metzger, president of the German-American State, Topeka; W. H. Holt, president of the Farmers State of Gage, Okla.; J. L. Hine, vice-president, and A. E. Keith, cashier, of the State Savings of Springfield, Mo.; F. L. Patton, cashier of the First National of Kingfisher, Okla.; J. D. Covey, cashier of the Benton County National, Bentonville, Ark.; Fred C. French, cashier of the First National of Hutchinson, Kas.

DAYTON CHAPTER

William Beiser of Cincinnati was one of the speakers at a recent meeting of the Dayton (Ohio) Chapter. Mr. Beiser's talk was based upon the subject of credits in banking, and, in addition to dealing at length upon the question of credits, he referred to the importance of maintaining the various local branches of the American Institute and items keeping the business of banking upon a plane commensurate with its importance in the realm of commercialism. "One of the most important things for a banker to learn is the means of determining whether or not a man is entitled to credit at a banking institution, and why he is or is not," said Mr. Beiser.

Bryon W. Moser of St. Louis, president of the Institute, spoke upon the plans and purposes of the organization. He explained that twentieth century methods demand twentieth century thought and preparation.

BOSTON CHAPTER

Boston Chapter recently held its third meeting of the season at the Boston City Club auditorium. There was an informal dinner at 5:30, after which the meeting was called at 6:15. Henry C. Long, Esq., of Cambridge delivered an address on "The Development of Massachusetts Waterways" and Rev. R. Perry Bush, D. D., of Chelsea spoke on "A Glimpse of Panama." A special program of vocal and instrumental music under the direction of Fullerton C. Vose had been arranged for this meeting and was warmly applauded. Robert H. Bean, is president of the Boston Chapter. Special attention is called to the annual chapter dinner on February 10, 1913.

sas Telephone Company. Naturally, this condition caused considerable confusion and some inconvenience to subscribers, to avoid which it is proposed to operate in all this territory, including Texas, under one name." It was said no new stock would be issued, except as exigencies might require, and that no change of operating or additions of real estate or buildings would be made, at least for a year.

St. Joseph Railway and Power Company Sold

The properties of the St. Joseph Street Railway, Light, Heat and Power Company, have been sold by E. W. Clark & Co., of Philadelphia, to Henry L. Doherty & Co. of New York. Doherty & Co., who own gas and electric properties at Joplin and Denver, have purchased all the outstanding common stock, valued at $3,500,000, at $60 a share. It has not been decided which one of the Doherty holding companies will take over the local properties. It is not believed that the sale of the street railway company will have any effect upon the local management.

ADAMSON BILL IS BLOCKED

Washington, December 3.—An amendment offered by republican leader Mann, proposing a rigid regulation of the issuance of stocks and bonds, prevented passage by the house to-day of the Adamson bill, that would authorize a special commission to ascertain the physical valuation of railroads and other interstate carriers, with the view of aiding the Interstate Commerce Commission in fixing equitable freight rates.

Debate on the bill, which was favorably reported by the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee at the last session, had been in progress for nearly five hours, and a vote was about to be taken, with practically no opposition in prospect when Mr. Mann moved that the measure be sent back to the committee with instructions that it be reported with his proposed section added. After an extended debate on a point of order against the amendment made by Representative Sims, in charge of the bill, the matter went over until Thursday by unanimous consent.

Mr. Mann's amendment would prescribe in detail how an interstate carrier should incur indebtedness, and would prohibit the issuance of stocks, bonds or notes except in return for money or other consideration approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

With a permanent corps of experts inquiring into the value of carriers' property, the proposed law would make it possible for the Interstate Commerce Commission to fix rates on the basis of profits to be realized on actual investments, instead of on paper valuations. Public carriers alone now "are allowed to charge an income on what they owe as well as on what they own," according to the committee's report.

FORRESTON BANK ELECTS OFFICERS

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Bank clearings in St. Paul gained more in November than in any other month. The gain for the eleven months is $44,867,548. The total for the year is $531,039,915. Bankers are hopeful of reaching the $6,000,000 mark. The figures to date are:

1912.	1911.
January $43,587,752.18	$41,987,103.50
February .. 44,987,933.40	36,552,849.00

May 42,883,673.11	40,817,611.35
June 44,864,088.10	42,683,160.83
July 45,632,541.22	44,207,643.14
August 42,930,592.15	40,255,129.21
September . 46,593,557.95	42,043,253.27
October 60,907,170.58	52,605,011.28
November ... 62,401,299.03	52,414,503.72
$531,039,915.79	$486,172,367.40

Following a day in which the Minneapolis bank clearings were $6,400,000 just after a holiday, E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National said: "There are three factors which go to make up the condition of firmness and stability we enjoy today—the firm foreign money market situation, business being transacted in large volume, and the continuous movement of crops. We are not getting as much benefit from the selling of grain as ordinarily by December 1st. The farmers are not selling their grain to the extent that they might. They are holding it for higher prices. The crop will keep coming in the next twelve months, and the marketing of the grain will give Minneapolis a steady, substantial business for a year.

"Money is being loaned in Minneapolis at 6 per cent, and the banks are pretty well loaned up. The situation is such as would inspire optimism, as the banks are taking care of all loans. I do not look for rates to go higher than 6 per cent, and it is possible that they will be a little easier about the middle of February."

Possible Liquidation by State

Liquidation by the state banking department of the State Bank of Commerce, Winnebago City, is said to be the outcome of a failure to reorganize the bank, although nearly all the depositors agreed to the plan. Litigation by disaffected persons is said to be probable.

New Building for Minneapolis Trust

Plans are being drawn by Eastern architects for a new building for the Minneapolis Trust Company, between the First National Building, part of which it now occupies, and the New York Life Building, which the First National has bought. It is on land included in the purchase, and immediately adjoins the site now occupied by the Trust Company. The plans are to be ready about January 1st. They have to be approved by the directors before assured. When the bank built at Fifth Street and First Avenue S a few years ago, it was understood that the Trust Company, which took a lease for ten years, might have to move when the bank needed the third of its building assigned to the Trust Company. The plot of ground is 66 feet front and the idea now is to have a one or two story marble front building with entrance from the adjoining building as well as from Fifth Street.

New Minnesota Bank

The Farmers State of Currie, Minn., was incorporated this week with $20,000 capital and $5,000 surplus. Theodore Zimmerman is president and C. M. Hanson is cashier.

Bank Issues Digest of Trade Conditions

The Security National circular just out says that underlying business conditions are about all that could be desired. It continues: "Although we had every reason to expect a great volume of trade at this time, few manufacturers were prepared for the business that has crowded in on them. Insufficient manufacturing facilities, a real scarcity of labor, and in some parts of the country a serious car shortage, all are hampering the expansion of business, but even with these deterrent factors, business is tremendous.

"There are a few conditions which are annoying, and among these is the uncertainty regarding next summer's tariff action. A revision downward is expected on several important lines and its effect already is being discounted. It is the general belief that the tariff measure to be finally passed by the new congress will be not far from the tariff bill recently vetoed by the president. Tariff changes cannot materially affect business until early in 1914 and the year 1913 will give a good account of itself."

Final Step in Merchants National Merger

Just as St. Paul was getting settled down after a long series of startling bank news items a group of husky men surrounded by detectives began to haul money through the streets and the people again were aroused with banking interest. More than $2,000,000 was removed from the Merchants National Building to the National German-American Building vaults, as the final step in the marriage of the two institutions under the name of the Merchants National. For thirty minutes the route of the truck carrying the money was under plain clothes martial law. The transfer was made with safety.

Will Erect New Building

A new building is to be erected on the site of the National German building by the stockholders of the new consolidated institution. The first step is for the stockholders of the two merged institutions to sell their respective buildings and then buy the National German building. The last statement to the comptroller put the value of the latter building at $250,000. A circular to stockholders intimated that the new building is to be a skyscraper and to cost $1,350,000, or $1,600,000 with the purchase money added. Appointed

Merger Involves $50,000,000

From bank statements $50,000,000 were said to have been involved in the recent bank changes. Assets of the affected banks are $47,782,831 and money required to raise up capital and surplus amounts to more than $7,000,000. These sums are tabulated thus:

First National	$13,552,101.22

St. Paul To Become Financial Center

What the effect is to be the Pioneer Press prognosticates as follows:

"The result of the various mergers and sales will be that St. Paul will now become the financial center it should have been long ago and millions of dollars will be added to the surplus and capital of the city. This will bring about a closer relationship with the hundreds of small towns and rural districts in the Northwest, and should increase every line of business in St. Paul.

"St. Paul now is going to have at least three big trust companies, the Northwestern, the Merchants and the Capitol. This has been one of the city's greatest needs, and many business men and firms have been compelled to carry on their business in Minneapolis, Chicago and New York for want of broad facilities locally. This will be entirely overcome now."

Organize Employees Association

Security National Bank clerks have organized the Security National Bank Employees Association to carry the savings of members so as to get the highest returns, and at the same time cultivate the saving habit. John G. MacLean is president; J. A. Bobb is vice-president and LeRoy Swett secretary; Edward Wagenhals is treasurer. Three bank officers, with the association officers, form the executive committee. President F. A. Chamberlain, Vice-president Perry Harrison and Cashier J. S. Pomeroy. The money is to be invested in commercial paper, farm mortgages and other 6 per cent investments. The bank will furnish the books and the members the work.

Compulsory monthly deposits make the distinctive feature of the new organization. This applies to only such bank employees as voluntarily join and not to employees as a whole. Every member of the new organization must deposit at least $5 monthly, except the one and two-year men who may deposit $2.50 monthly. Fines will be imposed upon members failing promptly to make deposit at the appointed time.

Election is Delayed

George A. DuToit of Chaska, chairman of the Minnesota Bankers Association committee appointed to select a successor to Charles R. Frost, who resigned the secretaryship to accept a position in New York, was in Minneapolis this week and said that the committee has made no selection and may not decide for several weeks. Mr. Frost, who was to have left Minneapolis December 1st for the East, will not leave until about January 1st.

Minneapolis Clerks Victors

With a score of 19 to 0 the Minneapolis bank clerks defeated the St. Paul chapter men Thanksgiving morning at the association ball park in Minneapolis.

Interesting Speakers Secured

The Minneapolis clerks for their December meeting arranged for W. L. Harris, a merchant, to speak on "Men and Machinery;" Gray Warren of the First National to speak on "The Evolution of the Transit Departments in Banks;" chalk talk by "Bart" of the Journal.

New Bank

Still another bank for Minneapolis is in sight in the wholesale fruit and commission district. A location is said to be the only lacking requisite. The capital will be $25,000. G. W. Towne of the Tri-State Investment Company, F. Alexander Stewart and M. F. Land are in the plan. Incorporation is expected about February. The Market State is the only bank in the vicinity.

Northwest Banking Notes

The Farmers State of Monterey is a new Minnesota bank with $10,000 capital. C. A. Johnson is president and M. S. A. Johnson is cashier.

Duluth is considering an anti-loan shark institution for early in the year similar to the two Twin City concerns backed by business men.

Bank clearings in Regina, Sask., are reported on the constant gain. The city has a new trust company with $1,000,000 capital, and a syndicate is to start a flour and feed mill. It is estimated 1,200 houses will be built in 1913. The Grand Trunk is to erect a million-dollar hotel and there will be a city expenditure for improvements of $1,250,000.

B. I. Keating of Enderlin, N. D., deputy state bank examiner, is talked of in political gossip as a possible head of the department in the new régime. Minot is urging S. L. LaDue of that city for the position.

At the last call, November 26th, Minneapolis bank deposits were the record for the city, or $115,938,318.79. The total was even larger on two other recent days, by $3,000,000. The deposits were $4,759,380 greater than September 4th and $9,290,364 than a year ago, December 5th. Commercial deposits were $4,456,337 greater than in September and $7,134,912 more than in December, 1911. Loans and discounts were $2,465,905 greater than in September, and beat the year ago record by $7,832,830. The deposits of four savings banks reporting on call were $21,132,813, or $428,717 greater than in September and $1,761,854 than in December, 1911.

St. Paul Nationals Show Gain

Six national banks in St. Paul showed a gain of $3,607,929 in deposits for Nov. 26th as compared with the previous call, Sept. 4th. The Merchants National, consolidated with the National German American as the Merchants made its reports as of Dec. 2d. The gains are as follows: Merchants National, $1,330,011; First National, $836,709; Second National $725,089; Capital National, $440,016; Scandinavian American, $152,519; American National, $123,585. Total deposits in the large banks were $47,442,134 and the outlying banks are expected to make the total $50,000,000. The report is the largest St. Paul record. The resources of the banks amount to $58,137,439.

Gas, electric and telephone corporations, of which there are four in Spokane, employ 3,335 persons, have an investment totaling $29,687,000, and an annual pay-roll of $2,800,000.

The report of the Buying-at-Home League shows there are 177 factories in Spokane, employing 5,998 persons. Their aggregate investment is $19,371,273, and annual pay-roll is $4,870,647.

Lumber mills and manufacturers of paper and wooden boxes and shingles lead with 1,556 employees and a pay-roll of $1,195,744. Capital invested in this industry is $3,840,000.

The miscellaneous firms include the manufacturing of yarn, carpets, step-ladders, condensed milk, rubber stamps, counter sales books, jewelry, powder, wool sweaters, macaroni, paper, stock foods and remedies, artificial ice, overalls, mackinaws, and clothing for the retail trade.

The quickening influence caused by bumper cereal and fruit crops in the Spokane country is being experienced not only in Spokane but in the smaller towns throughout the tributary territory known as the Inland Empire. Merchants in the towns in the agricultural belts report trade better than for a number of years. Banner yields, together with good prices, have brought a great deal of outside capital into many of the districts, resulting in substantial improvements in farm buildings and the purchase of improved machinery. Much acreage has been sown to fall wheat. The potato growing sections of the Inland Empire report remarkably large crops. Rosalia, Wash., alone shipping 100 carloads.

Thomas H. Brewer, president of the Fidelity National Bank, has started a campaign to have Spokane depositors supply their office girls with bags in which to carry money to the banks. "Spokane business houses almost invariably send girls to the banks with their deposits," states Mr. Brewer. "The girls carry these in the bank book, with the edges of the bills showing at both ends of the book. The bills are ordinarily held together with a rubber band and offer an easy bait to any 'grabbers' that might see them. A person snatching at them would get the entire roll. Such carelessness is the result of thoughtlessness more than anything else. Some sort of receptacle should be provided so that the money can be out of sight, and we are suggesting that the firms provide their girls with small sacks."

With the celebration of its sixth anniversary November 26th, the Western Union Life Insurance Company, a Spokane institution, passed the $15,000,000 mark in insurance in force. General Manager W. M. McConnell announced that November business on that date was well past the half-million mark, the policies being distributed over Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. R. Lewis Rutter, vice-president of the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company, is president of the Western Union Life Insurance Company, which employs 200 persons, including 181 licensed agents. The pay-roll of the company in commissions and salaries aggregates $160,000 per annum.

EDMONTON NEWS

Official announcement is made by the city commissioners of Edmonton that the municipality will expend approximately $1,500,000 for street railway construction, rolling stock and equipment and substations during the coming year. This is exclusive of the suburban lines to Calder and St. Albert. Three hundred thousand dollars is required for rolling stock. John Moir, street railway inspector, has submitted plans for a belt line system to serve the city within the six-mile circle. Under this arrangement the city, which owns and operates all the public utilities, will use 280 cars over 110 miles of track, giving a seven and a half minute service. The plan covers the entire district, no property in the six mile circle being more than four blocks from a car line. The commissioners will submit the plan to the council in a short time, and it is probable that construction work will begin next year. The belt system is independent of the work described in the opening paragraph.

Hon. Charles Stewart, minister of municipal affairs, announced in Edmonton that 227 local improvement districts, taking in all the settled acres in the province of Alberta, wound up their affairs on November 15th, when the rural municipality act, passed by the last legislature, became effective. The change involves a complete revision of the map of Alberta. Fifty-six rural municipalities have been entrusted with wide powers for self-government, and in addition there are 110 districts with limited powers. Nominations for councillors in the rural municipalities are called for December 2d, the elections taking place a week later. The nominations and elections in the improvement districts are scheduled for early in January. Meanwhile the department of municipal affairs will have charge. The department has two auditors at work in the various districts.

A. McKenny, superintendent of the seed department of the department of agriculture of Alberta, stationed in Edmonton, reports that 70 per cent of this year's grain crop, estimated at 64,000,000 bushels, has been threshed. The grain is of good quality.

A Zig-Zag Journey

WE received in a certain day's mail an item from a Portland, Oregon, bank, drawn on the First State Bank of Bonner's Ferry, Idaho, bearing the endorsement of a bank at Oklahoma City. This item was sent by the Oklahoma City Bank to Wichita, Kansas, thence to Denver, thence to Salt Lake, thence to Portland, and from Portland to the Old National Bank. Bonner's Ferry is in our immediate territory, and had the item been sent to us direct, we could have saved possibly ten days in its collection. Perhaps your items are traveling too slow. Ask for our folder on the Inland Empire and our facilities for collecting it.

Accounts of Iowa banks invited. Reserve agents for national banks

Charles H. Clark of the Mercantile Trust Co., Jersey City, N. J., has been elected cashier of the Peoples Bank, East Orange.

The board of commissioners of Edmonton has called for tenders on 400,000 of 511,533 square yards of paving, estimated to cost $1,734,786, to be laid next season. The city plans to install an asphalt plant and will bid for some of the work.

Des Moines, December 4th.—President Shade of the Iowa Bankers Association has announced his committees for that organization. They are composed of capable bankers in Iowa and it is thought that much will be accomplished. Because of the coming session of the Iowa legislature the committee on legislation probably will be of the most importance, although the committee on taxation will be a close second because of the efforts which will be made to get bank taxation upon an equitable basis. The committees as furnished by Secretary P. W. Hall are made up as follows:

Legislative committee, three members: Chairman, John McHugh, First National, Sioux City; J. K. Deming, Second National, Dubuque; A. F. Dawson, First National, Davenport.

Taxation Committee, three members: Chairman, E. M. Scott, Security Savings, Cedar Rapids; J. L. Edwards, Merchants National, Burlington; C. D. Ellis, First National Bank, Charles City.

Good Roads Committee, five members: Chairman, M. D. Gibbs, Bank of Northwestern Iowa, Alton; C. J. Wohlenberg, Holstein Savings, Holstein; T. J. Davis, First National, Marion; E. H. Rich, First National Bank, Ft. Dodge; H. T. Blackburn, Iowa National, Des Moines.

Resolution Committee, three members: Chairman, D. H. McKee, German Savings, Davenport; L. E. Stevens, Century Savings, Des Moines; Geo. S. Parker, Live Stock National, Sioux City.

Obituary Committee, one member: J. M. Dinwiddie, Cedar Rapids Savings.

Auditing Committee, three members: Chairman, M. A. Cox, Lyon County National, Rock Rapids; J. S. Wilson, First National Bank, Hull; John Kirby, First National, Estherville.

Bank in New Building

Another Des Moines bank now is in a new location. The Central State, one of the wealthiest institutions in Iowa, removed Saturday into its new building on Fifth Street. The new structure is not entirely completed but the officials of the bank decided they could not longer resist the temptation to move. The formal opening will be held later. The building is one of the most elaborate bank buildings in Iowa—in fact many assert that it cannot be beaten. It is strictly a bank building and will not be used for offices or salesrooms. The removal of the Central State marks the third transfer on the part of Des Moines institutions within the past month. The Mechanics Savings and the Home Savings have preceded the Central State with new homes. The Iowa Trust and Savings also will be quartered in a new home before winter sets in. Des Moines banks are prosperous and the officials are happy.

Des Moines Clearings

Clearings for the Des Moines banks for the month of November totaled $19,579,825.31.

This is an increase over the clearings for the corresponding month last year of approximately $2,000,000. November was an excellent month and the clearings for each week showed handsome increases when contrasted with those for corresponding weeks last year.

Want Farm Assessments Increased

Action to force the executive council to increase the assessments on farm lands has been started in the courts of Des Moines by the Iowa League of Municipalities. It is charged in the petition as filed by Secretary F. G. Pierce, of the above organization, that farm lands in general throughout the state are assessed at 40 per cent, railroads at 60 per cent and city and town property at 75 per cent. This he avers is entirely wrong. He insists that the assessments on farm lands should be as high as those on city property, and declares that the politicians who hold down the state offices favor the farmers in order to secure their votes. Mr. Pierce might have stated also in his petition that bankers pay the highest taxes proportionately of any class of citizens in Iowa. Bankers pay on an 80 per cent valuation. This is on its face so unjust that it is not to be wondered at that steps will be taken to secure a more equitable system at the hands of the next legislature.

Good Roads Enthusiast

F. Furst, president of a bank at Adair, and one of the wealthy farmers of central Iowa, was in Des Moines last week en route to his home from Canada. Mr. Furst is a good roads enthusiast. He has made a study of the highway problem and is convinced that the abandonment of the section lines will help a lot in making better roadways for the state. Mr. Furst thinks that the automobile is going to revolutionize the road question.

John Nathan Smith, formerly a well-known Des Moines attorney and at one time candidate for congress on the democratic ticket in the seventh Iowa district, has been sentenced to eighteen months in the federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth. Smith was convicted of bilking G. N. Thorley, his father-in-law, a banker at Springview, Neb., out of $5,000.

State Auditor Re-elected

was re-elected auditor of state by 10,104, which is considered a good showing, considering that he was contending against both the democratic and the bull moose parties. Mr. Bleakly leads the list of the republican candidates who had a three-cornered fight of this kind to face. With the bull moose vote in the republican party as formerly, Mr. Bleakly would have 40,000 to 60,000 plurality. There will be no change in the state banking department. Mr. Bleakly will oppose the proposition of transferring this department to the office of the state treasurer or making it a separate office. This plan always comes up at the legislature and probably will be up again at the forthcoming session in January.

No New Coins

Des Moines people who are relying upon bright, newly coined half-dollars and silver quarters for Christmas presents must do without this year, it seems. One of the bankers who wrote his perennial letter asking for shiny coins, received a letter from Lee McClurg of the treasury department to the effect that there will be nothing doing this year. Mr. McClurg explains that there is enough coin on hand to keep things moving and that it does not seem wise to purchase silver bullion for the sole purpose of furnishing bright new coins for those in quest of Christmas presents.

Bankers Indicted

Indictments have been returned by the grand jury at Fort Dodge accusing C. A. Isaacs, cashier of the Forest City National and H. M. Morrison, formerly cashier of the First National at Lake Mills, of making false entries with intent to defraud. There are thirty-nine counts in the true bill against Isaacs and nine counts in the indictment against Morrison. Both defendants were released upon furnishing $10,000 bail. The exact amount of money involved is not known.

New Banks for Perry and Sidney

A new savings bank has been organized at Perry by capitalists of that city. It will open for business about the first of the year. The capital stock will be $25,000. It is the purpose of those organizing the institution to procure a building and it is probable that they will erect a new structure of their own. John C. Bryan of Perry is to be president, Frank Woods will be cashier and the other officers are to be announced later. Rumors that a new bank is to be organized at Sidney have at last assumed definite shape. Articles of incorporation for the Fremont County Savings have been filed. P. J. Cilley, cashier of the Farmers Savings at Hamburg, is to be president of the institution, which is capitalized at $25,000. T. E. James of Sidney is vice-president; W. E. Craft, formerly a merchant at Shenandoah, is cashier. It is anticipated that the institution will build a structure in which to do business.

Discovers Stolen Property

Harry Farley, who lives south of Lorimor, while husking corn last week, found a quantity of stuff that was stolen from the Thayer bank when it was robbed last spring. The plunder was worthless, however.

Celebrates Anniversary

The Drake Park Bank, University Place, Des Moines, celebrated its first birthday last week. The bank was founded by Grant McPherrin, formerly of Clearfield, and one of the best known bankers in the state. In its first year the institution has gathered in 500 depositors and has deposits of $80,000, which is considered a first-class showing.

Iowa Notes

Roger Leavitt, president of the Cedar Falls National, has presented a bronze tablet to the First Congregational Church at that city in memory of its charter members. The tablet was unveiled Sunday morning, at which time an interesting program was given.

The bankers at Muscatine have put a basketball team in the field to wrest the honors of the city basketball league, which starts its schedule at once.

A jury in the federal court at Des Moines gave a verdict for the defendant in a suit for $3,867 brought by the First National at Hicksville, Ohio, against Robert O. Elzy, an Iowa farmer. The suit was brought on promissory notes and was unusual in that suits of that character usually are won by the institution in possession of the notes.

By JOHN J. BIDDISON

A falling off of nearly four million dollars in total deposits was shown by the national bank statements for the close of business November 26th, as called for by the comptroller of currency. Sioux City banks were revealed to have total deposits of $12,561,183.48, as compared with $16,210,935 at the last statement; and the cash reserve was $3,714,614.44, as compared with $6,710,527, still well within the requirements, but showing the heavy demand that has been made on the Sioux City banks to finance the crop movement that barely is started.

"Owing to the fine weather, business has been practically at a standstill in the smaller towns," said John McHugh, president of the First National, "the farmers being engaged in gathering the corn crop. There is an unusually good crop, and the funds necessary to harvest it, as well as the funds to buy feeding cattle in a great many instances, to which to feed a portion of the corn, has been furnished by the banks, notwithstanding that very little of the crop has been converted into cash.

"The harvest now being practically completed, there is indication of some marketing of the crop, and from now on this will proceed steadily."

Visiting Bankers

The following bankers were in Sioux City during the past week: C. E. McKinney, president, Sioux Falls National, Sioux Falls, S. D.; Guy Wilson, cashier, Laurel (Nebr.) National; A. R. Browne, cashier, First National, Alta, Iowa; and J. S. Wilson, cashier, First National, Hull, Iowa.

Banking Notes

A league of basket-ball teams representing the various banks of the city has been formed to play at regular intervals at the Y. M. C. A. The teams are from the First National, Live Stock National, Security National and National Bank of Commerce.

Miss Norma Brown, daughter of R. L. Brown, a banker of Aberdeen, has been chosen to head the domestic science short course of the South Dakota Better Farming Association, to be given at Aberdeen in December.

The building of the First State bank of White Owl, S. D., was destroyed in a fire there last week that practically wiped out the town. Until it can rebuild, the bank will be quartered in the rear of the post office, the only business block that was saved.

The Farmers and Merchants bank has been organized at Foster, Neb.

Elmer E. Swanson, teller at the Northwestern National for the last year, has resigned and gone to Arizona for the benefit of his health. His place is filled by A. J. Fos-berg, a promotion. A handbag was presented to Mr. Swanson, on the occasion of his departure, by his fellow employees.

The Balkan war has been cutting in on the postal bank deposits here. Greeks departing have resulted in a slight decrease of the total deposits, which at the close of business November 30th amounted to only $15,860. Demand for government bonds was slight.

CENTRAL TRUST APPOINTED RECEIVER

GOOD ROADS MEN MEET

The meeting of the officers and directors of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association at Bloomington Saturday, November 30th, brought out quite a number of bankers interested in this important matter. N. W. Duncan, president of the La Salle State, and George A. Wilson, president of the La Salle National, motored over from La Salle, a distance of some sixty miles. They brought with them Messrs. Neustad and Slicker, both interested in road development.

The purchase by the state of Illinois of the historic and scenic beauty spot of the state, Starved Rock, naturally prompts the La Salle people to be interested in the matter of developing a better system of roads, so that people who desire to do so can visit this attractive spot at any season of the year without inconvenience. George P. Blow of the La Salle Commercial Club, who is a member of the directory of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, was unable to be present but was represented by Mr. Thompson of the latter organization. Senator-elect Franklin of Lexington, McLean county, Representative Rowe of McLean and Representative Lyon of Sangamon county were state legislators present. The agricultural press was represented by F. L. Petty of the Orange-Judd Farmer, H. E. Young of the Farmers Review and C. V. Gregory of the Prairie Farmer. S. E. Bradt, vice-president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, chairman of the good roads committee of the Illinois Bankers Association, president of the First Trust and Savings of De Kalb and Thomas Sudduth, treasurer of the Improvement Association and a director of the Farmers National at Springfield, were among the bankers in attendance. Automobiles were furnished and upon the arrival of the afternoon trains a party was made up and taken to a piece of good road running south from Bloomington some six miles in extent, which has been built within the last few years. It seems that former state senator Frank H. Funk, recent progressive candidate for governor, was able to induce important land owners whose frontage touched this road to make substantial contributions, and with some help given by the city of Bloomington, the park system and the township commissioners, they have been able to build a macadam road from Bloomington to a point opposite Shirley, a station on the Chicago and Alton Railroad. The crushed rock has been joined with a California asphalt, which gives it a surface equal to that of the city boulevard. Frequent stops were made to inspect the road and all those in the party were extremely well satisfied with the tour of inspection. The trip was extended on through Funk's Grove, the seat of the original location of this family in Illinois, to McLean, an important grain shipping point on the Chicago and Alton. Here a piece of concrete pavement surrounding the little town park and which has lifted this city out of the mud at all seasons of the year, was a pleasant surprise to the visitors who inspected it. This is an example which Illinois counties might follow with advantage.

The McLean State Bank was visited there. This is a thriving institution and is well housed in a modern, up-to-date bank building. Vice-president H. M. Palmer, cashier Frank Waldrich and assistant cashier C. A. Carter received the visitors, and were pleased to call their attention to the exhibit of prize seed corn which had been brought to the bank by the farmers of the locality in response to prizes offered by the bank.

At McLean the party was joined by State Highway Engineer A. N. Johnson of Springfield, C. G. Miller of Cairo and James Donovan of Niantic, president of the Illinois Highway Commissioners Association, and the Hon. Homer J. Tyce of Green View, a member of the legislature and chairman of the legislative committee on bridges and highways, and C. A. Cuyler of Champaign, chairman of the good roads committee of the Illinois State Federation of Commercial Clubs. Others in the party included A. L. Faull of La Salle, H. M. Snate, secretary of the Springfield Commercial Club, R. J. Finnegan, a Chicago newspaper man and secretary of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, and William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois and president of the Highway Improvement Association.

The return trip to Bloomington was made over some well-dragged McLean county roads. The highway commissioners of this county apparently are above the average in intelligence and in devotion to the work which they have in hand. The result was that this section of roads over which the party passed was in an unusually smooth condition. The party was entertained at dinner in the Illinois Hotel as the guests of Eugene Funk of Bloomington, director in the Improvement Association.

In the evening a meeting was held in the K. of C. hall. This meeting was presided over by

WILLIAM G. EDENS
Prominent Chicago Banker and Good Roads Man, Who Spoke at Bloomington Meeting

Eugene Funk, who explained its purposes and stated that it was not the intention to advocate entirely the building of what are referred to from time to time as hard roads, but to work for the betterment of Illinois roads—better roads than those we now possess. Mr. Funk introduced W. G. Edens of Chicago, who urged upon the audience a study of this important question. Mr. Edens stated that too frequently it was heard that the agitation for better roads was entirely in the interest of the city folks and automobile owners. He pointed out the benefits to be derived by the farmers in having roads which can be used every day in the year, a matter which is of far more importance to the state generally than any pleasure which can be derived from motoring or from tourist travel, although that element, of course, respectfully must be considered. He also called attention to the conditions which surround us in adjoining states, pointing to the improvement made in the earth roads of Iowa simply from the effects of a compulsory road drag law, which requires that earth roads shall be dragged systematically; also to the legislation in Wisconsin where road development is financed by county and state aid, and to the decidedly better roads in Indiana where 40 per cent of their total road mileage is improved as compared with barely 10 per cent in Illinois with a total mileage of 100,000 miles; also calling attention to the fact that road materials now are being shipped from northern Illinois counties to northern Indiana counties, under a legislative enactment which permits Indiana counties to issue gravel road bonds for the betterment of their wagon roads.

S. E. Bradt of De Kalb followed Mr. Edens and gave an outline of what the bankers are doing in the matter of meeting the Illinois road problems. State Engineer A. N. Johnson outlined to the audience the possibility of a plan for developing some 2,200 miles of permanent roads, which, while it represents but 2 per cent of the total mileage of the state, would include every town in the state having over 3,000 population, with but one exception. Such a system of improving the roads would connect the principal points and would embrace sixty-six counties—about two-thirds of the counties of the state. The plan to finance such a scheme might include the automobile tax which now contains about $500,000, and the Illinois Central special tax and the receipts from the Illinois inheritance tax law might with propriety be diverted to the matter of road improvement, together with financial support to come from counties receiving the benefit of the improved roads. James Donovan of Niantic spoke briefly, pledging the support of the township commissioners to any plan that would deal fairly with all of the interests involved, defending the highway commissioners from what he regarded as unjust criticism at times by speakers who were not thoroughly familiar with the disadvantageous conditions under which many of the commissioners labor—inadequate tax levies, inexperienced labor, lack of engineering knowledge in the matter of bridge location and construction.

C. G. Miller of Cairo spoke strongly from the standpoint of the owners and users of automobiles and reported wonderful enthusiasm among the people of the lower Illinois counties in the subject of road improvement and prophesied that the time is not far distant when the people of the state will be willing to support road improvement by general taxation.

Thomas Sudduth told of his experience in attending good roads meetings in various parts of the southern section of the state and spoke particularly of the enthusiasm of the people of Greenup, Effingham, Vandalia and other points located along the line of the old national turnpike, extending from Terre Haute, Indiana, on the east, through southern Illinois to East St. Louis on the west, and of their strong demand that the national government rehabilitate this historic road. Mr. Sudduth also spoke of the interest of the people of Litchfield, Carlinville and other central Illinois cities in regard to the possibility of developing a state system of roads, one of which to extend from East St. Louis to Chicago.

The most interesting address of the evening was that made by the Hon. Homer J. Tyce. Mr. Tyce and some of his associates in the legislature have been investigating this subject during the past two years, having been selected by Governor Deneen for this important task. Mr. Tyce told of the statistics which have been collected from the medical profession of the state, from the 4,500 township commissioners and from the thousand or more rural letter carriers of the state; all of these people coming in daily contact with the road situation in Illinois. On some of the rural letter carrier routes during the past year the carriers were unable to make their trips for a period of time covering more than two months, owing to the condition of the roads and as a result of the severe weather. Mr.

Tyce stated that their report would be made to the members of the legislature immediately after that body has convened, and that as a result of their investigation they would unite for a strong bill covering the subject of road improvement.

The closing speaker was R. J. Finnegan of Chicago. Mr. Finnegan explained in detail the purposes for which the organization had been founded; also taking up and explaining the platform which had been adopted by the organization at its convention held in Peoria in September. The platform as presented by Mr. Finnegan is as follows:

1. State and county co-operation in the construction and maintenance of main highways and bridges.
2. A non-political state highway commission of at least three competent members, who shall devote their entire time to their duties.
3. Improvement (in such counties as elect to come under the provisions of the law) of main, continuous, inter-county highways connecting county seats and other important cities, principally at the expense of the state and county; such roads to be selected and improved by county authorities, subject to the approval of the state highway commission, and after improvement to be turned over to the state for perpetual maintenance.
4. Improvement, maintenance and control of remaining roads (about 80 per cent of the whole) under supervision of county and township authorities.
5. Effective measures to guarantee maintenance after roads are once constructed.
6. Use of the state automobile tax, together with such other funds as the legislature may appropriate, in the improvement of highways.
7. Extension of the employment of prisoners in state institutions in the preparation of material for road building, and the use of state prisoners—under state direction—on an honor system, in actual road work when practicable.
8. Payment of all road taxes in cash.
9. Compulsory dragging of all dirt roads.
10. Safety of road users, such as "Rules of the Road," and the proper construction and guarding of crossings at railroads and intersections of streets and highways.

The meeting was attended by a representative gathering of men and women of Bloomington, many important land owners being included in the audience. After the adjournment a meeting of the officers and directors of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association was held at the Illinois Hotel. Two additional vice-presidents, seven directors and an advisory committee of twenty-one members were created, all of which had been provided for in the constitution of the association adopted at Peoria in September.

SECRETARY W. B. HARRISON of the Oklahoma Bankers Association is active in the back-to-the-soil movement in his state.

HE traveled over the state on the Kaffir corn special train and was one of the headliners on the speaking programs.

FURTHERMORE, he can talk, and some of the brother secretaries could make a hit by getting him on a state program.

A WOMAN speaking no English has brought suit against a southwest side private bank alleging that while she deposited $1,200, her book shows credits of but $300. Thus it goes.

FROM its position as one of the most popular books of the day, "The Promised Land" has risen to be regarded not only a readable and worth-while book, but a real necessity to all, whether native or foreign born, who would rightly appreciate the opportunities and responsibilities of America. Social workers and patriotic societies are recommending the volume, glad to co-operate in this way with the author, Mary Antin, in her efforts to help the immigrant to know how he may secure the best advantages of his adopted country and how he may best serve it.

IN "The Boy's Book of New Inventions," by Harry E. Maule, just published by Doubleday, Page & Co., are a number of intimate pictures of the inventors at their work. These passages show the characteristics of the men behind a great many of the inventions which have done much to revolutionize our mode of living.

THERE could not be found a more instructive and interesting book for boys. It's a mental stimulant and will help an ambitious youngster.

WARE & LELAND continue to "advise caution" but would buy any first-class security on declines. Sounds about right.

VICE-PRESIDENT RALPH VAN VECHTEN furnished the centerpiece for a special financial advertising page in the Chicago Tribune on Wednesday.

IT was "good stuff" and told the people what advantages they have in the outlying banks in Chicago. Emphasis was laid on state or national supervision "same as the down-town banks."

IN reality, while not primarily so intended, it was a first-class article in favor of state supervision as proposed by the Dawes committee and Mr. Harris.

MR. VAN VECHTEN shows that the savings deposits outside of the loop district have doubled in the organized banks in five years, which is going some. The individual deposits have increased 63 per cent in the same time in the outlying territory.

WHAT'S the use? James A. Patten spent thousands to convict a get-rich-quick book agent and he has been out on bail now for three years, "pending an appeal," and is doing a land office business at the old stand.

WHY not, Mr. Patten, ask the court if he is out on an "indemnified" bond, the kind that was ordered cancelled in the Indianapolis dynamite trials. Might hook the crook in that way?

SUPERINTENDENT of Banking Kelsey S. Chase, of Minnesota, will ask the legislature to authorize a commission to pass upon applications for banking charters.

THE superintendent under the present admirable Minnesota banking law has not the power to refuse a charter upon proper request. He thinks most communities in his state are well supplied at present. Some of them over-supplied.

THIS power should be created in every new banking law and added by amendment to existing laws. When banking facilities exceed the legitimate demand the trouble begins. The conservative situation is at an end in the face of over-competition.

FLETCHER SAVINGS & TRUST, Indianapolis, is asking for competitive plans from architects for its new sixteen story building.

THE curious fact is recalled that the Bank of England, which is just now appealing against its rates, has the right to sell beer without a license. This privilege was granted to the bank in its charter of incorporation under the great seal, dated July 27, 1694. And so the bank, if it liked, could open a saloon in Threadneedle Street, or could send trucks round and deliver beer from door to door.

BROTHER ROGERS of Little Rock is right in it with the Bank of England for his bank operates on a state charter issued originally for a sawmill. No banking law in Arkansas of any kind.

THE most appropriate gift for a Christmas present for a young person is a savings bank book.

PRIVATE bankers are getting it hot and heavy in Illinois, and especially in Chicago. Looks as though the march of supervision out there is destined to wipe out the ill-advised opposition that carried the day at the Illinois convention.—Financier.

NOW it is said that Geo. W. Hyde of the First National, and Garrard Comly of the Shawmut, both of Boston, will be candidates for the A. B. A. treasurership at the Boston convention next year.

WE fear that some of the traveling "vice-presidents" of some of our New York contemporaries have been busy down that way. It hasn't been customary of late to elect any officer from an entertaining bank.

THE bank examiner would have had a light job in Francis J. Hadicek's "bank," for that enterprising financier (in court) disclosed that he "kept no books."

IF you called them rat-skin coats the ladies wouldn't buy. Nor would the husbands put up the three or four hundred asked. You must believe that they are "mole" skins.

WE need a pure food law adapted to the fur business—also to the advertising business.

SECRETARY C. E. WALKER of the Kentucky Bankers Association has sent out his proceedings book for the Louisville October 2d-3d convention.

"FARMER JOE" CHAPMAN is to speak on his hobby before the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday next.

FIRST NATIONAL, Grand Rapids, Wis., expects to increase capital to $100,000 and surplus to $50,000 at the January 14th meeting of the board.

"BANKING REFORM" says that its title line is now a democratic duty. Formerly it was a republican duty. Truly currency and banking isn't a party matter. Everybody get busy. CASHIER.

prominence to which it is entitled among the banks of the country.

PRESIDENT MOSER was over at Dayton, Ohio, last week and made a warm address upon the plans and purposes of the organization. He explained that twentieth century methods demand twentieth century thought and preparation. The address was well received by the members of the chapter.

ONE of the ablest special committees ever appointed was that named by the New York Clearing House to investigate and report on the subject of exchange charges. The membership of the committee embraced such men as James G. Cannon, Walter E. Frew, and Joseph T. Talbert. The committee reported practically that there is no present profit on check collections in New York City.

THE banks collected in fees considerably over two million dollars in 1911 which, according to the committee report, was offset by exchange cost and by a "proportionate share of postage, rent, stationery and salaries," together with a charge of a quarter of a million for cases where immediate credit is given on foreign checks.

OUT of town bankers will not readily concede that such items as rent and salaries should be included in this offset. Many of the charges included in a proportionate way are considered by those holding opposite views to the New York Clearing House, as fixed charges.

THE average daily collection of cash items in New York City reaches nearly seventy millions and the average time of clearing from Philadelphia is put down as 2.514 days, while the average time for collecting New York City proper is 3.885 days, taking nearly fifty per cent longer to collect New York City items proper than Philadelphia items. The time for collecting items from Chicago is averaged at 4.739 days, while the time for Greater New York, meaning New York City outside of the old district, is given at 4.053 days. Outsiders naturally will feel that the average time on the New York City and Greater New York items ought to be very much less than an average of four days. To the uninitiated, it would not seem that it ought to take a longer time to collect New York City items than to collect Philadelphia items, and that if Chicago can remit promptly in a fraction over four days, New York City proper ought to pay up in less than an average of four days.

THE committee has recommended that par facilities with certain restrictions be extended to Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey and New York state, the principal condition being that banks in these states shall remit at par in New York funds the same day they receive their checks. The report will go a long way to clear up the question of justification for the present rate of exchange charges in the metropolis.

WE learn from Secretary Hoopes of the Texas Bankers Association that the cotton crop of the Lone Star state this year will exceed four hundred millions. Notwithstanding the fact that this is the crop moving season, Mr. Hoopes reports that Texas banks are in funds for the purpose of buying commercial paper. When a big state like Texas is prosperous it means something.

CLOSE observation would indicate that the big Shawmut National in Boston has held all of the Eliot National business which it acquired by consolidation. To be exact, 91½ per cent of all accounts were transferred intact. Those not transferred were mainly small and unimportant. This speaks well for the standing of the Shawmut National with the general banking public in Boston.

PPRIVATE BANKER KIRBY testified in Judge Landis' court that he had $600 when he started his bank three years ago, and that at present he has nothing for the depositors who entrusted something like $60,000 to the doctor's fake institution. Joseph F. Triska, who loaned Kirby $10,000 on a "check" as a private banker, has sought better company by incorporating as the Southwest Merchants State Bank with a capital of $200,000. Triska decided in his own mind that supervised banking is a little bit safer to the man on the inside as well as to the man on the outside of the counter.

VICE-PRESIDENT C. B. MUNDAY has filed his list of stockholders for the new LaSalle Street Trust and Savings Bank of this city, which is a conversion from the LaSalle Street National. This institution has purchased a building of its own on LaSalle Street.

PRESIDENT L. E. STEVENS of the Century Trust and Savings at Des Moines has been elected president of the Commercial Club of that city. Mr. Stevens first built up the Century Bank to the place where he wanted it, and then started in to do what he could for the city of Des Moines. Some of his ideas he took with him from good old Ottumwa.

RICHARD TASKER FORBES, JR., selected a very proper location in which to be born. The city of St. Joseph, Missouri, is reported to have five candy factories and to be the largest producer of strictly high grade product in the United States.

DOWN in Connellsville, Pa., which is in the heart of the coke region, the First National, on a capital of first fifty and then seventy-five thousand dollars, has paid one million dollars to its stockholders. The situation seemed to justify an increase of capital responsibility from seventy-five to two hundred thousand dollars, which will be done December 19th.

BANKERS are being spoken of for many new positions under the incoming president. Illinois is plugging for Irving Shuman for comptroller of the currency, while out West they are asking to have Henry W. Yates, Sr., made secretary of the treasury. Way up in the Northwest they are betting that Joseph Chapman will be made secretary of agriculture.

PRESIDENT JOHN H. JOHNSON of the Peninsular State Bank at Detroit has purchased sites for two new buildings in which to establish branches. Johnson is about the most active element in Detroit financial circles. Just at present he is packing his trunk for an extended vacation.

BALTIMORE, like New York, has been looking into the matter of exchange charges. The clearing house practically has decided "to abolish the exchange rule" in hope that all of the trust companies in that city will come into the clearing house where they belong.

BALTIMORE is to have the big annual convention of the American Institute of Banking next year and plans are being laid already for giving the boys the best entertainment they yet have had. Those who were fortunate enough to attend the American Bankers convention in Baltimore can recommend the Baltimore brand of hospitality as something a little beyond expectation at all times.

COMMERCIAL BANK & TRUST COMPANY of Louisville has altered its charter so as to reduce the number of its directors from twenty to nine. The bank found that a body of twenty men rendered it very difficult to secure a quorum. Banks in Chicago and other cities are contemplating similar reductions. This sentiment is stimulated somewhat by the restrictions which are being placed on directors who do not direct. The inactive fellows who simply are a part to give it "class" or to gratify their business vanity are moving to get out from under. The general movement seems to be for larger banks with a smaller number of men on the directorate.

G. F. EMERY was our Santa Claus in the matter of tickets for the fat stock show. It was the best ever.

GET Scribner's short catalog of "Holiday Books" if you want to make it easy for yourself this Christmas.

KIRBY had six hundred dollars when he started the "bank" (pronounced b-u-n-k) and when he stopped it his depositors had sixty thousand dollars—in red ink.

BANKERS of Jacksonville, Ill., are interested along with others, in the raising of an endowment fund of $180,000 for the Illinois Woman's College of that city, $60,000 of which is expected from Jacksonville and Morgan county. E. E. Crabtree, vice-president of F. G. Farrell & Co., bankers, is general chairman of the endowment committee; H. J. Rodgers and Miller Weir, vice-presidents of the Jacksonville National, are on one of the soliciting groups; M. F. Dunlap and Ralph I. Dunlap of Dunlap, Russel & Co., and C. A. Johnson of the Elliott State are members of soliciting committees.

THE Illinois Woman's College is an old college and the largest school exclusively for women between the Allegheny and Rocky Mountains. Under the administration of Jos. R. Harker, the school has grown in twenty years from a membership of 40 to over 400 and the attendance is limited only by the accommodations. There are young women attending this school from thirty-five states of the Union.

E. M. WING, La Crosse, Wis., says, "I think everybody enjoys your 'Mainly About Banks and Bankers.' I know I do." Thanks for "them kind words."

MONDAY, December 2d, was the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Bergen of Virginia, Ill., and their friends remembered them with flowers, cards and best wishes for their future health and prosperity. Mr. Bergen is cashier of the Continental National Bank.

MILLER WEIR, cashier of the Jacksonville, (Ill.) National, was in Chicago this week on his return from New York, where he went on business for the bank.

ELLIOTT STATE BANK at Jacksonville, Ill., is contemplating extensive improvements in its office room. A mezzanine floor is to be built and an addition in the shape of an "L" to another street is to be added, making large space for directors' and customers' rooms. The Elliott has a beautiful room, but these improvements will be a great help.

D. C. WILLS, new member of the Big Council from Pennsylvania, would be a good man to look after the Wayne interests should that popular Philadelphian again shy his castor into the chairmanship ring.

THE new constitution may change things, but under the present document Chairman Davis cannot step into the vice-presidency.

CHAPMAN'S friends are thinking of putting him up for the vice-presidency at Boston as the direct step to the presidency. What shall be the fate of the ex-chairmen of council is yet to be revealed.

RALPH VAN VECHTEN RETURNS FROM IOWA

Ralph Van Vechten, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial National, returned this week from a trip to Iowa. There is considerable cattle feeding in that state and the farmers at present are borrowing money with which to purchase feed. Owing to the depreciation in the value of farm products these are not being marketed by the farmers as rapidly as usual. In view of the fact, however, that the railroads have about all the traffic they can handle, this probably is a good thing.

BANKERS ELECTED OFFICERS OF BUSINESS MEN'S ASSOCIATION

Nelson N. Lampert, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National, and John E. Shea, cashier of the Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings, respectively were elected president and treasurer of the Clark Street Business Men's Association organized this week at the Hotel Sherman. The purpose of the organization is to secure better lighting and business publicity for the street.

SEES NO RADICAL REDUCTION IN TARIFF

E. A. Hamill, president of the Corn Exchange National of Chicago, said: "In their tariff legislation I venture to say that Mr. Wilson and his party will terminate not far from the point where their predecessors in Washington terminated. The incoming régime will no doubt caustically pay their respects to that part of the Aldrich-Payne tariff bill especially favored by Mr. Aldrich; but otherwise I do not look for a radical revision. The very monetary requirements of the government preclude radicalism. The prosperity of the farmer and the well-being of the laborer must be and will be considered in tariff legislation."

W. T. ABBOTT ADDRESSES HAMILTON CLUB

W. T. Abbott, vice-president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, delivered an address on the regulation of private banks this week before the members of the Hamilton Club. He sharply criticised the improper use of the word "bank," and said that incorporation is not necessary if banks conducted by individuals are compelled to offer the same safeguards as the incorporated institutions.

INDIANA SOCIETY MEETS

The eighth annual banquet of the members of the Indiana Society of Chicago was held in the main banquet hall of the LaSalle Hotel on Saturday evening, December 7th, and brought together a large number of Chicago bankers who hail from the Hoosier state. There also were in attendance a number of Indiana bankers, business men and professional men, as well as the literary crowd: Wilbur D. Nesbit of the Chicago Evening Post presided as president, and modestly introduced himself as toastmaster. The principal addresses were made by ex-Vice-president

Past and Present Secretary of Minnesota Bankers

CHARLES R. FROST

GEORGE H. RICHARDS

Mr. Frost, the former secretary of the Minnesota association, recently resigned in order to accept a position with the National Surety Company with offices in New York. His work as secretary was of the highest order of excellence. He will serve the National Surety in an official capacity.

Mr. Richards, the new incumbent, formerly was assistant treasurer of the Farmers and Mechanics Savings of Minneapolis. He has been identified prominently with A. I. B. work. Several years ago he went into the automobile manufacturing business as one of the Veerace Motor Car Company, with offices at Anoka, a suburb of Minneapolis.

I. B. A. AGRICULTURAL COMMITTEE TO MEET

B. F. Harris, vice-president of the First National of Champaign, chairman of the agricultural committee of the Illinois Bankers Association, has called a meeting of the committee to be held at association quarters in the Rookery, Chicago, Wednesday morning, December 18th at ten o'clock, for the purpose of listening to suggestions from members of the committee as to the bill to be presented to the Illinois legislature when it convenes in January. The committee, in addition to Mr. Harris, consists of Irving Shuman, cashier of the First National of Sullivan; J. S. Gridley, cashier of the First National, Libertyville; W. G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, Chicago; R. R. Ward, vice-president of the Benton State Bank.

NO CHANGE IN MONETARY SITUATION

James B. Forgan, president of the First National, says there has been no decided change in the local money situation. There has been a slight return of money from the interior.

BANKERS HERE FOR SQUADRON MEETING

Among the out-of-town bankers who will be in attendance at the meetings of The Flying Squadron of America, an account of which appears elsewhere in this issue, are G. H. Mueller, vice-president of the Fletcher-American National, Indianapolis; E. L. Taylor, assistant cashier of Boatmens Bank, St. Louis; Haynes McFadden, publisher of the "Southern Banker," Atlanta, secretary of the Georgia Bankers Association; R. E. Bolling, assistant cashier of the First National, Dallas, Texas; Sol. Wexler, vice-president of the Whitney-Central National, New Orleans, La.

J. Fletcher Farrell, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National and F. A. Crandall, vice-president of the National City banks have been active in looking after local arrangements.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

A FAT roll of bills, containing $200, was dropped last week on the floor of the First National Bank. The officials returned the money to its owner after an honest finder had turned it in to one of the assistant cashiers. The bank refused to give either the name of the finder or of the owner.

NOW, if this had happened in the Kirby bank it doubtless would have gone to the "wire tappers"—or—to the insanity experts?

FOURTH NATIONAL, Philadelphia, has won distinction by devising a new customers' statement sheet which shows his balance as quickly as a watch will show the time.

THE new style sheet is a six-column affair in two sections. The statement part has three columns for listing checks, and one for deposits. The "balance" part has one column for "previous balance," and one column for "current balance."

ALL of the work is done on a big Burroughs, and is done quickly, and the company will furnish particulars from the Detroit office.

BANKERS TRUST, New York, is another example of "it pays to advertise." The board has declared a quarterly dividend of 6 per cent and an extra of 2 per cent. Stockholders of record December 27th will get the dividend which is payable December 31st.

THERE was a new brand of cabbages at the Land Show called the "Bull Moose." The heads were remarkably large but—cabbages just the same.

IT reads as if the supreme court meant absolute divorce for the Southern Pacific—no separate maintenance nor alimony, nor any other subterfuge.

LEWIS E. PIERSON, member of Austin, Nichols & Co., is said to have suggested that the present organization will be given up and new corporation, capitalized at $4,000,000, to be known as Austin-Nichols Corporation, will be formed. Invitation to join the corporation has been extended to eight large wholesale grocery houses and four will probably accept, giving up warehouses in Manhattan for new distributing center in Brooklyn. Mr. Pierson, who recently resigned as head of Irving National Bank, is to be president.

MORE power to yez, Lewis!

AFTER this year if you don't do your banking with the Fort Dearborn National, you can at least stop at the Fort Dearborn hotel when in Chicago.

PENSIONS for ex-presidents didn't prove to be popular. Too many don't like him.

FIFTY thousand motor trucks and delivery wagons is believed to be a conservative estimate of the number now in use in the United States. Carefully compiled reports made at the beginning of the year showed that there were then, in round figures, close to 30,000, and state and city registrations of motor vehicles compared with those of a year before proved that the number of these vehicles is doubling annually.

WE wrote to McLane Tilton, secretary for the Alabama Bankers Association, to know why he was so silent when we were just dying to hear from him and to get some help in the dull season toward keeping up the interest in our pet department. Some of what he wrote read:

"YOUR letter of the 4th received. Bless your heart, if I had known you were getting brain fag collecting personal gossip about bankers for that newsy and entertaining department in THE CHICAGO BANKER, I would have relieved you long ago, for, being a newspaper man myself, the assumption of your burden would have been easy and a pleasure. You should have sung out sooner.

"I always carry in stock a large assortment of monumental lies and unvarnished truth pertaining to the brethren, the former invariably applying to the brethren and the latter strictly to my own extraordinary and extortionate activities. A sample of the same is herewith enclosed for use or the blue pencil at your discretion."

"A RECENT test case involving a section of Alabama's banking law was decided by the chancery court in favor of A. E. Walker, superintendent of bank. The points raised were that Mr. Walker, as superintendent, had no authority to liquidate banks through his own officers and outside of regular court channels and, if said authority was granted by the act, the section was void for constitutional reasons. Neither objection was sustained by the chancellor, and thus another victory was won by the friends of sound banking in Alabama. The new law has worked splendidly and requires very little revision to be a perfect banking bill. These changes will be made at the next session of the legislature, unless all signs fail, for Alabama is firmly set in the opinion that the most rigid supervision and regulation is good both for the banks and business interests generally.

"THE Alabama Bankers Association will celebrate its coming of age by holding its 21st anniversary convention at Dothan, Ala., May 8, 9, and 10, 1913. Dothan is one of the smaller live towns of the state and will bend every effort to make the meeting justify the arrangement agreed upon last year, when the plan of confining meetings to Montgomery, Birmingham and Mobile was abandoned. If successful, next year a number of towns will aspire to the honor of entertaining the association.

"COMMITTEES have already been appointed and the program and entertainment features are well under way. The usual silver souvenirs have been ordered for the occasion and this year the ladies will be remembered, as well as delegates and the members of the Flying Squadron. Alabama's bank law has been called the best in America, bank stocks are taxed like other forms of property.

James B. Forgan on Clearing House Examinations

Chicago was the pioneer in clearing house bank examinations.

They were inaugurated there in 1906 after the failure of a national bank and two state banks. These institutions were under the direct management of one man who was president of the three. The condition of their affairs when disclosed surprised and appalled the other Chicago bankers. The liabilities of the private ventures of the president had gradually accumulated in the three banks until they had absorbed the entire capital and surplus of all three, amounting to $3,500,000, and 44 per cent of their aggregate deposits of $27,000,000, one-third of which was public funds.

The condition in the national bank had developed through a period of years during which the comptroller of the currency, through the semi-annual reports of his examiners, had been kept fully advised of what was going on. Among the assets were found nineteen fictitious loans for $90,000 each, represented by so-called memorandum notes. Each memorandum note purported to be secured by $100,000 of second mortgage bonds of the Wisconsin and Michigan Railway Company. This road was controlled by the bank president, and the bonds proved worthless. The first mortgage bonds of the same road, $952,000 of which (being almost the entire issue) were also among the assets of the banks, were finally disposed of at about twenty-three cents on the dollar. These memorandum notes did not, on the face of them, even pretend to be the obligations of bona fide borrowers. The ostensible signatures on them, although in different names, were all in the handwriting of the clerk who filled them out and who wrote plainly in red ink across the face of each the words "Memorandum Note." They could not deceive anyone who saw them and they did not deceive the national bank examiners who reported to the comptroller the facts in connection with them.

Another of the irregularities discovered was that so-called certificates signed by the treasurer of one of the president's railroads, purporting to call for $2,000,000 of its bonds when issued, had been treated and reported as bonds on hand. All the bonds permissible under the conditions of the mortgage securing them had previously been issued and sold and there could be no further issue of them until a contemplated extension of the road was completed. Some grading for this extension had been done but the work was abandoned and the bonds called for by the so-called certificates were never issued.

Up to the time of their failure all these banks paid substantial dividends to their shareholders, the national bank 12 per cent regular and 3 per cent extra and the state banks 10 per cent and 8 per cent respectively, besides which they showed substantial growth in their surpluses. The market quotation for their stocks was $380, $350 and $240 per share and there were sales at these prices.

Chicago's veteran financier tells members of Detroit Bankers Club why the system was adopted and how it works. Predicts that never again can such conditions arise in Chicago

Although cognizant of these irregularities and of the accumulating obligations in the bank of the president's private enterprises, the comptroller apparently could not, or at all events did not, take measures to stop them by other means than those of expostulation and reproof until matters became so bad that they simply could not be permitted to go further.

When at last drastic measures were decided upon the comptroller and the state auditor, acting together on a Saturday afternoon after the vaults of the three banks had been closed with time locks set for Monday morning, notified our clearing house committee that unless provision were made for payment in full of the deposits none of the banks would be permitted to open for business on Monday morning and they would be put in the hands of receivers.

Business conditions were strained and the time was therefore particularly unfavorable for permitting the failure of three prominent banks. The effects of such a calamity it was feared would have extended far beyond the confines of Chicago.

With but a superficial statement from the president of the condition of his various ventures, some of which were in course of construction, and with only a vague knowledge of the realizable value of their obligations, the clearing house committee hurriedly made a tentative estimate of the realizable value of the assets of the three banks and of the deficiency in them to meet their deposit liabilities. These estimates have since proved remarkably near the final outcome. To prevent a panic the remaining Chicago banks, facing an inevitable heavy loss, assumed the deposit liabilities of the three banks and took over their assets under a limited guaranty of the directors. This action, besides providing for payment of the depositors in full, relieved the bondsmen of their responsibility for the $8,200,000 of public funds in the bank and the shareholders of their double liability on their stock. These three classes of vitally interested individuals will probably never fully appreciate what the action of the associated banks meant for them. Subsequent developments have shown that in liquidation the assets of the three banks plus the double liability of their shareholders, had it been collected, would have been insufficient to pay their deposit liabilities.

The situation was thus protected from a general disturbance of public confidence, but it was done at the cost of a very heavy loss, foreseen at the time and since realized by the participating banks.

The statements of the national bank made five times a year to the comptroller's department, copies of which were rendered to the clearing house committee and on which it had implicitly relied, failed to disclose these conditions.

I have given you these details of this unfortunate affair because they show so clearly the limitations of governmental supervision of banks under our national banking law as it has been interpreted by the courts and by the legal advisers of the comptroller's department.

Let me draw your attention to a few of the legal restrictions which limit the comptroller's power to act in such cases.

1. Under the national bank act no obligation due a bank is considered bad until interest is past due six months and not then if it is secured or in process of collection.

2. The comptroller may appoint a receiver when he concludes that a bank is insolvent. But here again he has been hampered by the legal definition of insolvency, which is "inability to pay current debts as they mature."

3. The making of a national bank report to the comptroller, so long as it is in accordance with the bank's books, however erroneous it may be as to actual values, which alone disclose a bank's true condition, cannot be construed as a misdemeanor.

These legal restrictions are presumably the reason why some banks have been permitted to persistently publish to the public the figures of their statements as rendered to the comptroller of the currency after they are known to have met with heavy losses and have failed to provide for them by charging them to profit and loss. That this has been permitted in some cases is notorious. The case of the Chicago National Bank and a recent one in a large central city are conspicuous examples because of their size. Undoubtedly as a rule the published statements of the banks are reliable, but there are a few exceptions, with which, in view of the legal restrictions which govern his action, the comptroller finds himself unable to cope. These exceptions, however, frequently result in failures and catastrophes. The comptroller cannot legally take drastic measures with such banks until they perform some act of insolvency, or when he believes their capitals to be impaired, which being a matter of judgment in regard to the realizable value of their assets, is frequently difficult to prove.

Clearing houses as a rule are voluntary associations established primarily for the con-

It will be capitalized at $200,000 and have a paid-in surplus of $20,000. Among those interested in the new institution are several men prominent in Chicago's financial affairs, viz.: A. J. CHICAGO BANK PRESIDENT'S SON MARRIED

Edward Tilden II, son of William A. Tilden, president of the Fort Dearborn National of this city, was married this week to Miss Frances Garnett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Garnett, 4450 Vincennes Avenue. After a wedding trip the young couple will reside at 4460 Vincennes Avenue. Mr. Tilden is associated with Merrill, Cox & Co., commercial paper brokers of this city.

LIBERTY TRUST OPENS

Liberty Trust and Savings Bank, capital $250,000, opened on Thursday at Kedzie Avenue and Twelfth Street. Officers and directors are: President, Charles Hollenbach; vice-president and cashier, J. Louis Kohn; assistant cashier, E. F. Hanrahan; directors, Edward Morris, J. A. Spoor, A. G. Leonard, B. S. Mayer, C. M. MacFarlane, A. J. Harris, L. H. Heymann, Charles Hollenbach and J. L. Kohn.

D. H. McKEE TO GO TO DES MOINES

D. H. McKee, for the past five years vice-president of the German Savings at Davenport, and one of the best known financiers in the state, will remove to Des Moines early in the year to become manager for the Iowa Loan and Trust Company of that city. The latter concern is one of the wealthiest in Iowa. It has capital stock of $500,000 and surplus and undivided profits of $750,000. Mr. McKee will be associated with Simon Casady and G. B. Hippee, and the three of them own a large block of the stock. Mr. McKee started the bank at Mediapolis in 1896 and soon showed his aptitude for the banking business. When he removed to Davenport five years ago he was president of this Mediapolis Bank and two other country banks besides. Des Moines bankers are anticipating his residence in Des Moines with pleasure.

Mr. McKee is a member of the executive council of the A. B. A. from Iowa.

CHICAGO'S VISITORS

Among the out-of-town bankers seen in the financial district this week were William Butterworth, president of the People's Savings Bank and Trust Company, Moline, Ill.; W. A. Armstrong, cashier of the Peoples Trust and Savings, Galesburg, Ill.; George W. Boyden, president of the Farmers State Bank, Sheffield, Ill.; Charles Ireland of the Bank of Washburn, Ill.; E. J. Curtin, president Citizens Trust and Savings, Decorah, Ia. Mr. Curtin is an ex-president of the Iowa Bankers Association.

N. C. Gindorff, cashier of the German Trust and Savings of Dubuque, Ia., visited Chicago Wednesday. He reported that everything is moving along satisfactorily in a business and banking way in his locality. C. G. Riehey, president, and C. R. Pendarvis, cashier, of the Media (Ill.) State Bank, were Chicago callers this week. Mr. Pendarvis brought in three carloads of Henderson county cattle. Both of these gentlemen are interested in general farming and the road improvement campaign that is uppermost in the minds of most progressive Illinois bankers at the present time. They intimated that Henderson county shortly will be in line with a practical farm demonstrator. As Henderson county does not possess any other character of roads than earth roads, they express the belief that we must get away from the present manner of handling the road question before any headway can be made in the matter of road development. As the county is purely an agricultural county, the farmers of this locality frequently suffer serious business inconvenience from inability to get their product to the railroads on account of the poor roads. James Ringold, assistant cashier of the United States National of Denver, Colo., stopped off in Chicago on Thursday and remained for the meeting of the bank transit men to be held at the Hotel LaSalle Saturday, December 14th. Asher R. Cox, president of the Orchard City Bank of Xenia, Ill., passed through the city on Wednesday.

Edward Guthrie, formerly cashier of the Mattoon (Ill.) State Bank, and now mayor of Mattoon, was a Chicago visitor this week.

AGRICULTURAL CREDIT BANKS

Advices received from Washington are to the effect that Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, who is there to agitate the establishment of agricultural credit banks, and who has investigated the systems in vogue in Europe, will make public next week a letter from David Lubin, American delegate to the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, Italy, praising President Taft's efforts to bring financial assistance to the farmers.

NEW YORK BANKER MARRIED

Chicago banking acquaintances have received announcements of the marriage of Margaret Elizabeth Taylor, sister of Greer McClellan Taylor of Dallas, Tex., to Arthur Deskins Robinson, Monday, December 9th. The young couple will be at home at the Hotel Bretton Hall, Broadway and 86th Street, New York City, after January 6th. Mr. Robinson is the well-known traveling representative of the National City Bank of New York.

CONDITION OF STATE BANKS

Figures just made public by the state auditor indicate that Chicago state banks have resources of $604,048,993 and total capital, surplus, contingent fund and undivided profits, $86,716,717.95, an increase of $2,900,771.81. Total deposits, including due to banks, $507,320,711.21; decrease, $7,546,018.46. Total cash and due from banks, $123,620,409.01; decrease, $17,616,597.82.

Per cent of reserve to deposits, including due to banks, 24.36.

OLD PRIVATE BANK FAILS

The Somonauk (Ill.) Bank has closed its doors and is in the hands of a receiver. It has been in existence thirty-two years. The owners say that the bank is solvent and that when it resumes business it will be under state supervision. William H. Wright, the cashier, is in a sanitarium. It is said that although the depositors suspected something was wrong, they were kept in ignorance concerning the bank's affairs.

ST. LOUIS BANK DIRECTOR DIES

F. William Reipschlag, a director of the Franklin Bank of St. Louis, died this week.

Public Welfare

There are certain utilities that are absolutely necessary for the public welfare. Individuals require food, shelter, and clothing—municipalities require light and transportation. The former are our private necessities; the latter, our public necessities.

For this reason the companies that supply public utilities receive revenue from a dependable source, little affected during periods of industrial depressions. With the natural growth in population, the market for public utilities is also a constantly increasing one.

Send for our circular giving a selected list of public utilities securities to yield at present prices an average income of 5.75%.

"FLYING SQUADRON" TO HOLD MEETINGS

"The Flying Squadron of America," an organization effected last October and composed of representatives of banks in the larger cities, will hold three meetings to-day (December 14th) at the LaSalle Hotel, at 10 A. M., 2 P. M. and 7 P. M., when a banquet will be given. Sessions during the day will be devoted to discussion of transit arrangements. At the banquet in the evening F. O. Watts, formerly of Nashville, and now vice-president of the Third National of St. Louis, will be the principal speaker.

The object of this organization is to "foster, protect and advance the banking interests generally, as well as the banks represented by the membership; to encourage integrity and good faith, just and equitable principles, and to discover and correct abuses; to prevent and adjust controversies; to disseminate information and statistics; and, in general, to promote the welfare and social intercourse of its members."

G. H. Mueller, vice-president of the Fletcher-American National of Indianapolis, is president; F. J. Woodworth, third vice-president of the Third National of Cleveland, is secretary and treasurer.

It is expected that about eighty people will be present at the dinner.

F. A. Crandall, vice president of the National City Bank, and J. Fletcher Farrell, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National, are active on the local committee of arrangements.

Among out-of-town bankers who will attend the meetings are J. H. Ardrey, Dallas, Tex.; J. W. Staley, Detroit; James Ringgold, Denver; G. H. Mueller, Indianapolis; C. H. Moore, Kansas City; H. D. Ormsby, Louisville, Ky.; W. F. Allertson, New York; Sol Wexler, New Orleans and William M. Post, Milwaukee.

E. E. Bolling, assistant cashier of the First National of Baltimore, G. H. Mueller, vice-president of the Fletcher-American National, Indianapolis, and Haynes McFadden, publisher of the "Southern Banker," Atlanta, and secretary of the Georgia Bankers Association, were some of the advance guard who came to attend the meeting on Saturday.

GOOD TIMES IN NEBRASKA

S. H. Burnham, president of the First National of Lincoln, Neb., and his son-in-law, G. W. Holmes, secretary of the First Trust Company of that city, were Chicago callers this week. They report everything as prosperous in Nebraska, with a strong demand for money at good rates. Nebraska, like the other states of the Union, has enjoyed bumper crops this year. Mr. Burnham, in addition to being president of the First National, also is at the head of the First Savings and the First Trust of Lincoln.

CHICAGO MOTOR CLUB

The members of the Chicago Motor Club have inaugurated a series of noonday lunches under the leadership of their new president, Mr. Van Sicklen. The first meeting was held in the club rooms of the Lexington Hotel on Tuesday of this week. The entertainment committee provided a good program and there were addresses on the subject of club organization by President Van Sicklen and on good roads development by W. G. Edens.

ATTRACTIVE GREENEBAUM OFFERING

Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust Company of this city are offering to investors $1,500,000 five and one-half per cent bonds of the new Lytton Building being erected by the Hub at the northeast corner of State Street and Jackson Boulevard. The bonds are in denominations of $500 and $1,000, dated January 1st, 1913, maturing 3 to 17 years, interest payable semi-annually, January and July. It is estimated that the income from the building exclusive of that portion which will be occupied by the Hub will amount to three and one-half millions, or considerably more than double the amount of the total bond issue. The bonds are the first obligation of the Hub, which is recognized as the largest men's and boys' clothing establishment in the United States.

BANKERS ELECTED OFFICERS OF ASSOCIATION OF COMMERCE

At the election of officers and directors of the Chicago Association of Commerce held this week, J. J. Arnold of the First National Bank was elected vice-president of the foreign trade division and Joseph R. Noel of the Northwest State Bank was chosen as treasurer.

ELECTED VICE-PRESIDENT OF TERRE HAUTE BANK

Harry A. Schlottzhauer has been elected a vice-president of the First National of Terre Haute, Ind. Mr. Schlottzhauer formerly was cashier of the American National and Fletcher-American National Banks of Indianapolis, and since December, 1911, has been a national bank examiner.

GOVERNMENT NOT LIKELY TO DEPOSIT FUNDS

Chicago bankers are of the opinion that there is not much likelihood of the government depositing additional funds in the national depository banks of the country. Secretary MacVeagh has made inquiries at the reserve centers in regard to the necessity of such a course and his investigation has convinced him that there is no immediate need for such action. Now that the demand for funds with which to finance the crop movement has passed, it is believed that it will not be long before money is returning to the centers in liberal volume.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Relates to administra-

 matters interesting to
 our readers

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11th.—Congressman Nicholas Longworth, defeated candidate for re-election from the First Ohio Congressional District at the recent election and son-in-law of Colonel Roosevelt, will not be compelled to walk around until the bottom of his trousers become frayed, looking for a job. Rippy, manager of the Longworth estate, states that Congressman Longworth will become one of the vice-presidents of the Central Trust Company, one of the very conservative banking institutions of Cincinnati.

Panama Tolls a Closed Incident

Prompt action with reference to the British protest against the Panama toll bill was taken Tuesday by the executive branch of the United States government.

So far as the legislative branch is concerned, where the final action of the government must be framed, there was scarcely a ripple of interest in Great Britain's demand. The senate, final arbiter for this country in treaty matters, practically regards the Panama tolls question as a closed incident.

Concerning Vocational Education

The highest official of the United States Bureau of Education has declared his opposition to the main provisions of the so-called Cooley vocational school bill, which seeks to create two separate school systems in Illinois.

Commissioner Philander P. Claxton said for the general intentions of the measure:

"I know if I were in Tennessee, my home state, working for vocational schools, I would urge one combined system. Years ago I did champion a bill looking to the establishment of vocational schools in the state, and it was such a bill. I am firm in the opinion that a combined system is superior to the method which is indicated in the Cooley bill."

Commissioner Claxton's position is exactly that of the many school authorities of Chicago who advocate vocational education but insist that it shall be a part of the existing school system. The various bankers, committees in the states will be interested.

New Federal Judges for Chicago

Chicago and all the west will be glad to know that President Taft virtually has decided to promote Judge Carpenter to the Circuit Court of Appeals and to nominate Probate Judge Charles Cutting as the successor of Mr. Carpenter on the district bench in Chicago. He indicates his intention to send the appointments to the senate without delay. There are half a dozen other candidates but the two named would be first choice by ninety per cent of the people interested.

To Curb Underselling by Trusts

Trust methods of underselling independent competitors until they are driven out of business or until they are ready to be absorbed by the victors are forbidden by a bill introduced to-day by Senator Clapp of Minnesota.

The bill follows the South Dakota law, the constitutionality of which was upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States as recently as a week ago. The bill forbids any one engaged in the production, manufacture or distribution of a commodity, selling it cheaper in one section than in another in order to destroy or prevent competition. The only difference in price may be that caused by the variation in the cost of transportation.

Want Bright New Money

The Christmas demand for new quarters and halves is greater this year than ever before. The entire supply of new fractional coin at the Philadelphia mint has been exhausted and the treasury department is now drawing upon the Denver mint to satisfy the craving of the East for glistening silver. During the past few days the department has paid out $2,000,000 in quarters and $1,600,000 in halves and has been obliged to limit the big banks to a small proportion of their requests.

England Doesn't Like Sherman Law

The warning in Sir Edward Grey's Panama note that the British government will protest further in case an attempt is made to enforce that section of the Panama act which prohibits the use of the canal by railroad-owned or trust-controlled ships may, it is thought here, indicate a formidable European opposition to any attempt by this government to extend the operations of the Sherman anti-trust act beyond the confines of the United States. It is known that the British embassy is closely watching the developments in the pending suit against the trans-Atlantic steamship lines, though it is not expected to enter a formal protest against that attack upon British shipping interests until the legal proceeding comes to an end with a decision against the British companies.

Would Hasten Money Trust Quiz

An irate group of New York bankers and brokers surrounded Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the banking and currency committee of the House, when the committee adjourned its "money trust" hearing on Wednesday, and demanded that they be either excused or placed on the stand at once. The New York men have been in Washington since Monday, and they were told by Mr. Untermyer that they would have to await their turns for examination. In the group waiting to testify were Rudolph A. Keppler, former president and member of the law committee of the New York stock exchange; George W. Ely, secretary of the exchange; Frank Sturgis and John G. Millburn, of counsel for the exchange, and the following brokers: Walter Taylor, Henry K. Pomroy, Samuel F. Streit, P. J. Goodhart, G. W. Turner, John H. Griesel, Henry Content. John Aupergen, president of the New York produce exchange, is also awaiting examination.

CHICAGO TRIBUNE REPLIES TO FARMERS EXCHANGE BANK OF NEBO

In the town of Nebo, Ill., says the Tribune in an editorial, is the Minier State bank. There is also a private banking concern, "The Farmers Exchange Bank of Nebo." The Minier State bank seems to be able to do business under the banking laws and supervision of the state. But the Farmers Exchange bank remains as a private institution, and is at present so infuriated over the agitation for supervision of private banks that it spends money for a large advertisement in a local paper to abuse The Tribune and argue the evil of supervision.

These inflamed private bankers declare that organization and supervision "furnish protection, but they furnish it to the stockholder instead of the depositor."

The just and lucid reasoning in support of this theory is that in the organized bank its stockholders are liable only to twice the amount of capital stock, whereas the private banker is liable to the extent of all his possessions!

The value of that sweeping protection has been demonstrated strikingly in numerous cases of private banks, when depositors found themselves worse off than Mother Hubbard's dog.

The Tribune is not troubled about the opinion expressed of it by the Farmers Exchange Bank of Nebo. As it said recently of a similar outcry from a private bank in Elliott, it cherishes such enemies as a mark of public service. But the reasoning put forth is worthy of publication to show the public and conscientious legislators what the character of the opposition to supervision is.

The value of the "protection" to depositors of the Farmers Exchange bank may be all that it claims. We are not concerned with the sound private banks, but a child ought to understand that the existence of sound private banks does not do away with the necessity for ascertaining whether all private banks are sound.

A private banker has just been found who kept no record of deposits, except on loose slips of paper. He began with practically no capital. Now he has some. But from the first he has been a "bank."

The Farmers Exchange Bank of Nebo has paid money to advertise the reasoning of an ignorant and angry child. We trust its banking methods are better than its logic and its capital greater than its common sense and public spirit.

DECLARE DIVIDENDS

By C. C. Burford

The new building of the Ayres National of Jacksonville will be occupied by the bank on or about January 1st. This bank and office building will rank among the best in the state in equipment and in convenience. Jacksonville is a city of good banks and of good bankers as well, as the names of Dunlap, Russell, Farrell, Crabtree, Weir, Buffe, the Elliotts and others will attest. A more extended account of this beautiful bank building will appear later in THE CHICAGO BANKER.

Good Banks, Good Soil, Poor Roads

Andrew Smith, vice-president of the Indiana National and secretary of the Indiana Bankers Association, who accompanied the Indianapolis trade boosting expedition through central Illinois recently, was impressed with the prosperity of Illinois and of her banks but, like most Hoosiers, did not like the looks of Illinois roads. He has reasons for not liking Illinois roads. Mr. Smith is a modest man, and insists that his name is only plain Andrew Smith and not Andrew J. Smith, although many of his correspondents insist on placing the J in his name to insinuate, doubtless, that he was named for a president of the United States. Mr. Smith writes the following comment of his trip through central Illinois:

"I am glad to say the other gentlemen, as well as myself, who were in the party of Indianapolis Boosters, were very much impressed by the prosperous conditions which seemed to prevail throughout Illinois. Your good old black soil has certainly brought in a lot of money to the natives of your state. The only thing that did not impress me favorably with Illinois was her roads. What a great help it would be to the farmer if you had good gravel roads like we have here in Indiana. I was particularly struck with the prosperity of your banks. In fact I was amazed at the beautiful homes which the banks of Champaign occupy; more especially the First National. It looks like a magnificent City Bank, and I was pleased to congratulate the Messrs. Harris upon the splendid plant which they have. Banks in other cities which we visited seemed to be substantial and nicely furnished, with good safe equipment. They all told us that things were very prosperous throughout the section that we visited."

Banker and Wife Wedded Fifty Years

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Bergen, of Virginia, Ill., have recently celebrated their golden wedding and Mr. Bergen has also celebrated his fiftieth year as choir leader of the Presbyterian Church of Virginia. They were married December 2, 1862, near Virginia, and both of them are natives of Cass county, where they have always resided and have been active in church and public matters. Several hundred persons called on them on the golden anniversary day. Mr. Bergen is cashier of the Centennial National Bank of Virginia and "is a young man at seventy-two."

Gifford Has New State Bank

The state auditor has issued a permit to R. H. Morse, J. D. Morse and E. J. Morse of Gifford, Champaign county, to convert the private bank of Morse Bros. & Co., into a state bank to be known as the Morse State Bank. The capital will be $25,000 and the business will be conducted as heretofore. J. D. Morse is chairman of the Champaign County Bankers Association and R. H. Morse, who has resided in California for a number of years, is cashier of the Globe Savings Bank of Los Angeles. A safe, conservative banking business has always been done by the Morse family. The private bank at Gifford has been conducted for twenty-five years.

New State Bank for Urbana

State Auditor McCollough has issued a permit to S. W. Love, Ira Rigdon, J. E. Davis, C. B. Taylor and others, for the incorporation of the First State Trust and Savings Bank of Urbana to take over the business of the Farmers Savings and Loan Bank, a private bank. Mr. Love has been the president of the old bank and will continue as president of the state bank. He has served as mayor of Urbana. Mr. Rigdon has recently resigned as cashier of the Peoples State Bank of Mansfield, Piatt county, in order to aid in the new bank, and Mr. Davis is with the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Pesotum, Champaign county. The capital of the bank will be $100,000 and a new three-story banking and business block will be erected next spring. National City is the Chicago correspondent.

Two New Nationals

Application has been made to the comptroller of the currency for the organization of the First National Bank of Colfax, near Bloomington, to take over the business of the private bank of J. W. Arnold & Co. The capital will be $25,000.

Application has also been made to organize the First National of Des Plaines, with Oscar Fischer, Thomas T. Snell, George M. Whitcomb and Walter L. Plew as directors. The capital will be $25,000.

More Bank Robberies

The State Bank of Perry, in the southwest part of the state, was visited by blow-up men who secured amounts variously reported from $2,000 to $5,000. A citizen who tried to stop them was shot at four times. The robbers rode south from Perry and bloodhounds were at once placed upon their track.

The Farmers and Merchants Bank of Pesotum, Champaign county, a new institution established this fall, was also visited by blow-up artists. The banking room was damaged, all the glass in the room broken and the combination to the safe blown off, but fortunately the work stopped there, although the robbers were near their booty. The bank was using a temporary safe until their new vaults already ordered, have arrived. It is thought that the robbers were acquainted with conditions in the bank and it is believed that they came into Pesotum by automobile from Villa Grove, a town to the east. There is no clew.

The Bank of Penfield, in northern Champaign county, was attacked Tuesday night, December 10th, but no further damage was done than breaking the combination off of the vault door. This is the second attack upon this bank within two years. There may be some connection between this robbery and the one at Pesotum, above noted, as both are in the same county. Another attempted robbery was upon the Bank of Silvis, in Rock Island county, but no booty was secured. The crime wave spreading over Chicago seems to be over the state as well, and bankers should use the greatest of precaution during the season of long nights.

Illinois Notes

The Moline Trust and Savings Bank recently has purchased a choice corner in Moline for $160,000, or at the rate of $3,600 a front foot.

The Pontiac State Bank has increased its surplus from $30,000 to $40,000, and reports deposits of practically $750,000.

Following the good words about the prosperous industrial and banking conditions in Moline by Vice-president Nelson H. Greene of the Peoples Trust and Savigs Bank of that city, published last week in THE CHICAGO BANKER, comes the announcement that John Deere & Company will erect a ten-story office building in that city. Moline is one of the many busy cities in Illinois.

The Springfield board of education is considering establishing a penny savings system in the public schools of that city in order to teach habits of thrift to the children.

Springfield may send a number of business men on the trip to the Panama Canal which is planned for early next year by the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce.

The first National of Canton reports deposits of $900,133; the First National of Kankakee, $1,064,282; the Havana National of Havana, $663,184; the Farmers National of Springfield, $2,209,831; the State National of Springfield, $1,452,830, and the Illinois National of Springfield $1,654,937.

State Treasurer-elect William Ryan is spending a few days recuperating at West Baden, Ind., before he assumes office.

The assessed property of the citizens of Illinois has been increased $21,186,128 over the assessment of 1911. These figures include personal property, town and city lots and lands.

The Randolph County Driving Club and Fair Association has officers who are mostly bankers, as N. R. Lesseley, president of the Sparta State Bank is the president; E. B. McGuire, president of the First National of Sparta is vice-president, and William Watson, cashier of the Bank of Sparta, is the treasurer of the association.

Cashier E. C. Vandagriff of the Bradley State and Savings Bank, in a manufacturing town of the same name just north of Kankakee, was wired by the comptroller of the currency that a merger of banks in Wilburton, Okla., was contemplated, and that he might become receiver for the First National of that city during the merger. Mr. Vandagriff was forced to decline the offer.

A Douglas county good roads association has been formed at Tuscola, composed of highway commissioners, farmers, automobile owners and "everyone interested in good roads." Another step in the right direction.

The three national banks of Lincoln report good deposits, the First having $418,311, the German-American, $812,011, and the Lincoln, $1,037,865. The Lincoln State Bank is another good bank in that city.

The German-American National of Pekin reports deposits of $1,105,000. The bank is a "Roll of Honor" bank and "has for twenty-five years adhered consistently to safe and sound banking methods."

J. W. Crabb, president of the Tazewell County National of Delavan, had one car of cattle and two cars of hogs at the International Live Stock Show in Chicago and won two prizes. He secured first premium on his short-time fed specials, and second premium on his pure bred Chester White hogs.

L. C. Taylor, of the John Deere Plow Works of Moline, was on the program of the Logan County Farmers Institute at Lincoln, his subject assigned being "The Banker and the Soil."

Guaranty Trust Company of New York has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 6 per cent and an extra dividend of 2 per cent, payable December 31st to stock of record December 27th.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANKS

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

Milwaukee Chapter of the American Institute of Banking is $1,800 richer as the result of the minstrel show produced by members of the chapter on Friday and Saturday nights of last week. The Pabst theater was well filled at both performances. The proceeds will go into the general educational fund of the chapter which mainly is used in defraying the expenses of banking authorities invited to address the monthly meetings. The chapter plans to engage in a more elaborate entertainment next year.

Record in New Buildings

Milwaukee banks largely are responsible for the city's phenomenal advance in building during the present year. American contractor tables for December place Milwaukee in the front rank of cities as regards building. The gain over last year is $14,708,224 as compared with $11,507,531 or 27 per cent. The new buildings of the First National, Merchants & Manufacturers, and Second Ward Savings Banks contributed to the record breaking total.

Bank Cashier Weds

Ernst C. Kambe, cashier of the Merchants & Farmers Bank, was married last week to Miss Kathryne Warth of Milwaukee. Mr. and Mrs. Kambe will be at home at 420 Auer Avenue.

Celebrates Twentieth Anniversary

The Wisconsin National celebrated its twentieth birthday on Thursday. President L. J. Petit announced that the corporate charter had been extended twenty years.

Milwaukee State Organized

A new bank to be known as the Milwaukee State Bank, with offices in the old home of the Milwaukee National at East Water and Michigan Streets, has been organized with John F. Strohmeyer, J. W. McMillan, and William Filter as incorporators. Mr. Strohmeyer was president of the Milwaukee National before it consolidated with the First National and at present holds office with the latter organization. The capitalization of the new bank is $50,000.

Takes Case to Court

The Wisconsin Trust Company, trustee for the Nathan Hamburger estate, has commenced proceedings for a review by the circuit court of the assessment on stock of the estate in the Gimbel Brothers Company. The figure agreed upon by the board of review was protested by the trust company at the first hearing and the matter was taken to the courts.

Increase in Assessed Value of Railroads

Although the preliminary assessment of Wisconsin railroads announced by the state tax commission this week shows an increase of only $1,500,000 over the final assessment last year, the exemption of railroad terminals from state taxation by the last legislature means that the assessed value of railroad properties is in reality about $8,000,000 greater than last year.

Large Barley Receipts

Secretary H. A. Plumb of the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce believes that barley receipts for the year will reach nearly 18,000,000 bushels, placing Milwaukee far in the lead of all other cities in the United States as a barley and malting center.

Two New State Banks

Bank Commissioner A. E. Kuolt issued certificates of authority to the Lyndon State Bank and the Citizens State Bank of Trempealeau this week. Both are capitalized at $10,000. D. J. Puffer is president and Phil P. Hayes cashier of the former. Officers of the latter are: President, William Nichols; cashier, M. F. Utter.

HOOSIERS HOLD GOOD ROADS CONVENTION

The Indiana Better Roads Convention was held at Indianapolis this week, a large number of delegates being in attendance. The convention was held under the auspices of the federated commercial organizations of the city, with C. A. Kenyon acting as chairman. Indiana people are manifesting great interest in the movement which has been inaugurated for obtaining better roads. H. H. Rice was chosen chairman of the legislative committee.

Addresses of welcome were delivered by Vice-president-elect Thomas R. Marshall, Mayor Shank and ex-Vice-president Charles W. Fairbanks. Wednesday evening there was an illustrated lecture on the roads of the world. Talks also were made by D. Ward King, "The Road Drag Man," inventor of the King Road Drag; Jesse Taylor, editor "Better Roads," Jamestown, O.; Frank E. Gavin, president of the Indiana State Bar Association, and Logan Waller Page, director of the United States office of public roads. Thursday evening there was a vaudeville, smoker and refreshments at the German House.

The convention was held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The draft of a proposed bill completed under the direction of the Indiana Good Roads Association was presented to the convention. It provides a state highway board and a state highway commissioner and for the distribution of state funds to aid road building. Part of the bill reads: "The board shall consist of three members, one of whom shall be the state highway commissioner. The governor shall appoint two members of the board from different political parties. He also shall appoint the state highway commissioner, who shall be a competent civil engineer and experienced in highway construction and maintenance. As soon as practicable after the taking effect of this act, the governor shall appoint one member who shall hold his office until January 1, 1914; one member who shall hold office until January 1, 1915, and the state highway commissioner, who shall hold office until January 1, 1917. After the first appointments, the terms of office shall be four years each and until their successors are appointed and qualified. The governor shall fill all vacancies and may, after a hearing remove a member of the state highway board or the state highway commissioner for inefficiency, malfeasance or neglect of duty. A majority of the board shall constitute a quorum and be empowered to act on all matters pertaining to the duties of the board."

The members of the board are to serve without pay, with the exception of the commissioner, who shall receive a salary of $4,000 and devote all his time to the work. The highway commissioner is allowed to appoint three engineers, one clerk and one draftsman. An additional tax of not to exceed 1½ mills on each dollar of taxable property in the county may be levied, and the county is authorized to issue bonds in lieu of such taxes or in anticipation of their collection. For the purpose of providing the funds for the payment of the proportion of cost that is to be borne by the township, the township advisory board may levy a tax not exceeding 5 mills on all taxable property in the township which shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law to be levied and collected as other taxes are levied and collected.

In lieu of such taxes or in anticipation thereof the bonds of the township may be issued.

The duty of keeping the roads in repair devolves upon the state commissioner.

It is provided that fees derived from the registration and license of automobiles and other vehicles, and fines and penalties paid for the violation of highway laws, shall go into the state highway fund.

The total cost of improvement is to be paid by the state, unless the work is done by a county or township, in which event the amount paid by the state shall be one-half of the total cost.

The bill also provides:

"(a) The county or counties may, through the board of county commissioners, provide for the payment by the county of the entire 50 per cent of the cost and expense thereof.

"(b) The county or counties may provide for the payment of 25 per cent thereof, in which case the remaining 25 per cent shall be a charge against the township wherein such highway is located and the abutting property owners, of which 15 per cent of the total cost shall be paid by the township, and 10 per cent by the abutting property owners.

"(c) In case the road has been petitioned for by the township as provided for in Section 23, the township shall pay the entire 50 per cent and reimburse itself to the amount of 15 per cent of the total cost by assessment on the abutting property owners."

HARRIS TRUST PURCHASES BONDS

The Harris Trust and Savings bank and its eastern associates have purchased $890,000 Montreal Tramways company first and refunding mortgage 5 per cent bonds, due July 1, 1941. The Montreal Tramways company owns and controls the entire street railway system of the city of Montreal and suburbs, with the exception of about one mile of inter-urban line entering the city, and serves a population of over 500,000.

The same interests have purchased $1,000,000 Southern Power company first mortgage 5 per cent bonds. The Southern Power company provides with electric power and light the great southern cotton mill district of North Carolina and South Carolina, including a population exceeding 600,000.

Rates held firm at $5\frac{1}{2}$ to 6 per cent on call and time loans. Bank clearings have been very large and greatly in excess of those of the corresponding period last year.

Mechanics-American National Bank Letter

In its monthly letter on the business situation, the Mechanics-American National Bank has the following:

"The Southwest has scarcely ever done a better business at this season of the year than it is doing to-day. All the industries located in this city are feeling the stimulus, and the most conservative judges in the dry goods line, shoe trade, lumber industry and manufacturing lines take hopeful view of the outlook. What is more to the point, there is no indication whatever of a disposition to overtrade. Merchants, both large and small, are buying conservatively, but their orders are heavy owing to the low stocks and the long period of very cautious buying.

"There is no real concern felt in this section over the change in the national administration. In some industries the prospect of a tariff revision has been effective in making manufacturers defer plans or future business pending actual revision of the schedules. But the feeling is fast gaining ground that the honest business man has nothing to fear from the incoming administration and that congress will not go to extremes in the way of radical legislation. Recollections of the vicissitudes experienced during the recent period of business reaction are too fresh in the minds of business men and of legislators as well to lead them to support such changes in existing laws as would seriously unsettle business conditions. There are very definite indications that some excellent legislation will be forthcoming during the next year or so. It seems clear now that some attempt will be made to pass a new currency bill and that it will provide for such reforms as shall make it infinitely preferable to the one now on the statute books. The indications are that this work will be taken up before very long and that an honest effort will be made to formulate a bill on lines which shall be acceptable to the business interests of the United States. What is more to the point also is the fact that those in charge of this legislation appear willing to hear all sides and seem bent upon taking such action as shall win support from those who view the currency question from a non-partisan standpoint and with the sole idea of providing for the business interests of the United States a currency system which shall be of value to the whole people. It can be said that there is scarcely anything which would be of greater importance, as in a comparatively short time the Aldrich-Vreeland Emergency Currency Law, which was enacted just after the panic of 1907, will expire and then the banks will be upon precisely the same basis of a defective-currency system that they were before."

ACTUAL value received from their connection with us has increased our accounts from other banks 50% in two years. We therefore invite the business of others with the assurance of mutual satisfaction.

Bank Wins Globe Shoe Claim

The contention of creditors of the Globe Shoe and Clothing Company to rule out a claim of $22,000 of the National Bank of Commerce against the trustee of the company was turned down by Referee Walter D. Coles, after he had heard testimony on the point. Mr. Coles held the bank was not aware of check kiting which the Globe Company is alleged to have done.

To Fight Lumber Rates

Advices have been received by the St. Louis Lumbermen's Exchange that delegations of lumbermen from Nashville and Memphis, Tenn., will arrive in St. Louis probably Friday or Saturday to attend an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing at Hotel Jefferson, December 16th and 17th. This hearing will be devoted to an investigation of proposed advances on lumber beyond the Ohio River gateways to Canadian points, which the railroads claim have been forced on them by increased division demanded by Canadian lines. This heavily affects the South's cooerage interests, which ship extensively to Canada, and the advances are being contested by the lumber and cooerage interests of St. Louis, Nashville, Memphis and other points. Plans of coooperation of St. Louis and other cities in the more important fight against the wholesale advances on hardwood lumber from the southern producing section will be arranged.

County Banks Gain $500,000

According to figures compiled by Fred J. Hollocher, secretary of the County Trust Company at Clayton, the deposits in St. Louis county banks during the year ended December 1st show an increase of more than $500,000 over the previous twelve months. On December 1st, the aggregate amount of cash on deposit in the country banks and trust companies was $5,510,936. The aggregate assets were $6,702,493. There are nineteen banks and trust companies in the county.

Editorial Comment

CLEARING HOUSE BANK EXAMINATIONS

From the manner in which the daily papers played up the news features of his address, one would think that James B. Forgan went over to Detroit to tell the members of the Detroit Bankers Club the secrets involved in the failure of the Walsh banks in 1906. Nothing was further from that eminent banker's mind at the time. He simply diagnosed the situation in a careful, practical way as preliminary to the remedy prescribed by the Chicago Clearing House together with the results that followed. Mr. Forgan carefully pointed out how it is entirely possible, under national supervision as conducted to-day, for a bank to continue publishing misleading reports. It may not be known generally, as Mr. Forgan has declared, that "under the national bank act no obligation due a bank is considered bad until interest is past due six months and not then if it is secured or in process of collection." Mr. Forgan readily admits that the comptroller has full power to appoint a receiver when he concludes that a bank is insolvent, but he clearly showed also how the comptroller is hampered by the legal definition of insolvency which is "inability to pay current debts as they mature." Under the conditions here pointed out it is entirely possible for a national bank to continue to run with plenty of bad paper in its vaults if no part of it is allowed to become more than six months past due. This makes it rather easy for the industrious bookkeeper who may have something to conceal. Furthermore, it might have been many, many years before the Walsh banks would have been unable to pay current debts as they matured. This is evidenced by the fact that the Chicago National was paying six per cent dividends and the other two banks, ten and eight respectively. They were a long distance from the time when they would "not be able to pay current debts." It is shown in Mr. Forgan's address, printed elsewhere in this edition, that the public fully believed in the integrity of the published statements to the comptroller for the stock of the national bank was selling at $350 per share, and that of the other banks at slightly less prices.

This was the condition which caused the Chicago Clearing House, upon the motion of W. T. Fenton of this city, to adopt a system of examination of its own. Mr. Forgan points out that a current bank statement in Chicago along the lines of the examiner's report, must be reasonably accurate if the bank is to continue to enjoy clearing house privileges. The speaker announced it to be his belief that "no such conditions as caused us to organize our examination bureau, can ever again develop in any bank connected with our clearing house." This is a very emphatic pronouncement, but no one who understands the thoroughness with which clearing house examinations are conducted in Chicago will doubt it for a moment. Chicago has the reputation of being one of the very brightest spots upon the map when it comes to clean, straightforward, legitimate banking with exact conditions reflected in the published reports. Mr. Forgan's address will well repay careful reading and examination.

EVILS OF UNINCORPORATED TRUST COMPANIES

In the present campaign being waged so vigorously against the practice of allowing unincorporated associations of individuals to hold themselves out to the public as incorporated trust companies, a laudable enterprise is being forwarded. Innumerable evils have sprung up as a result of the laxity of the Illinois law.

The creditors of an unincorporated trust company have only the individual or individuals who constitute such "trust company" to look to for payment of their claims. The legal status of the persons making up such company is that of a partnership. In other words, each member of the firm is individually liable for the whole amount of the firm's debts. When, as is so often the case, the members composing the firm are men of little or no financial responsibility, and frequently of questionable integrity, this extraordinary liability imposed by the law upon members of a partnership does not prove as effective as it was intended to be. People who endeavor to deceive the public by representing themselves as embodying all of the elements of strength, conservatism and stability which one ordinarily associates with an incorporated trust company, can be actuated only by sinister motives. Having but little capital with which to operate, they are but poorly equipped to meet the claims of creditors. Exactly the same situation exists as in the case of a private bank. When insolvency occurs they either depart for parts unknown or hide behind the skirts of the bankruptcy court. It is quite obvious that something cannot be taken from nothing; the insolvent has no property; he is the only one against whom the creditors have any recourse. Consequently, they receive little or nothing on their claims; the matter is dismissed from the public mind; the state of Illinois goes about its ordinary business, none the wiser for its experience, and nonchalantly awaits the next failure.

It almost is impossible to conceive how any great body like the citizens of Illinois could submit patiently to this disgraceful state of affairs for so long a time as it has. One easily could imagine a similar situation prevailing in communities where the interests of the rulers were of primary importance and those of the people merely secondary. Awakened from its lethargy by disclosures made as a result of recent private bank failures, Illinois at last is beginning to appreciate that something must be done and that some sort of legislation must be enacted which effectively shall safeguard the interests of her citizens. It is greatly to be hoped that this effort will culminate successfully, and that our state shall not have the finger of scorn pointed at it as one of the few states where questionable practices are allowed to go unchallenged.

BANK TO FIGHT LOAN SHARKS

Col. James G. Butler, a public-spirited citizen of St. Louis, contemplates the establishment of a bank capitalized at $100,000, the primary purpose of which shall be to prevent unfortunate people from getting into the clutches of the loan sharks.

Illinois has suffered long from the practices of unscrupulous persons who take advantage of their impecunious victims by extorting from them usurious rates of interest. The Illinois statute provides that the legal rate of interest in this state shall be five per centum per annum, with the privilege of contracting for seven per cent per annum. Chapter 74, section 5, page 1406, reads: "No person or corporation shall directly or indirectly accept or receive, in money, goods, discounts, or thing in action, or in any other way, any greater sum or greater value for the loan, forbearance, or discount of any money, goods or thing in action, than as above prescribed."

It probably will be conceded by everyone that the legislature would have found it difficult to use any language of a plainer import. It also will be conceded that the law is not complied with, for the papers contain frequent references to the woe and misery resulting to unfortunate borrowers who, sometimes, in order to obtain a small loan, are obliged to repay several times the original amount as a consideration. Truly, it is remarkable the resourcefulness and ingenuity displayed by some people in their efforts to evade the law. If this misdirected energy could be turned into legitimate channels, probably the possessors would succeed in doing things which would excite favorable comment from the rest of the world.

Col. Butler's proposition is worthy of especial commendation and ought to prove effective in driving these human sharks out of business.

OHIO BANKS UNDER SUPERVISION

After the first of the year, all private banks in Ohio will be subject to supervision and inspection, when the new amendment to the constitution goes into effect. Two hundred and thirty-eight banks will be affected by this provision, which stipulates that any corporation, firm, partnership or person which uses the word "bank" or "banker" or "banking" in designating its business shall submit to supervision and inspection. While the amendment was fought by some of the private banks, the majority of them realizing that submission to state regulations will help their business materially, offered no opposition to the measure.

INVESTIGATE MISUSE OF WORDS "BANK" AND "SAVINGS"

The banking department of New York has been busy investigating the cases of concerns improperly using the words "bank" and "savings" as a part of their titles. In a statement recently issued by Superintendent Van Tuyl, he says:

"One line of special inquiry was that into the affairs of concerns making illegal use of the words 'bank' and 'savings,' and of corporations doing an unauthorized banking business. This involved an investigation into the status of certain private bankers whose operations had resulted in deceiving the public, and also into the operations of certain large department stores in first-class cities. The banking department has insisted upon the discontinuance of illegal practices. Private bankers have been warned against offending against the law prohibiting the use by them of the words 'bank' and 'savings' and in every instance they have preferred to heed the admonitions of the superintendent rather than incur the penalties attending violations of the provisions of the status. Department stores have been compelled to comply with the legal requirements. The situation with respect to the business conducted by these department stores is, however, not regarded as altogether satisfactory, and the matter of strengthening the law with reference to them and other private bankers so as to bring them under adequate supervision is receiving the attention of the authorities of several states.

"Four of the large trust companies in New York have branches in foreign cities. There are at present four branches in London and two in Paris. These branches have been examined periodically under the direction of this department by firms of chartered accountants. During the past year the branches have been examined by the department's examiners who were sent abroad for the purpose.

"During the past year the banking department has taken occasion to criticize the defective accounting systems in banks and recommend changes which would correct the defects complained of. In the past much loss has been occasioned by carelessness and ignorance and the superintendent has felt it a duty to insist upon the books of banking institutions being properly kept and the interests of the depositors and stockholders safeguarded. This is true not only in the accounting, but also in the credit departments. When necessary, or upon the request of any banking institution, an examiner of this department is assigned to the duty of installing a new system of accounting."

venience of their members in effecting their daily exchanges. In this process, however, the members have to trust each other for large amounts in the shape of daily balances payable in cash. Each bank member therefore becomes interested in the integrity of all, and all in each. But beyond this, in view of the awful calamities caused by bank failures and of the fact that the failure of one clearing house bank affects the confidence of the community in all, they become vitally interested in the maintenance among themselves of conservative management and proper business methods. Hence, only such banks as can stand a satisfactory preliminary examination are admitted to membership and only those whose condition continues to be satisfactory to a duly appointed committee can enjoy clearing house privileges. Members and non-member banks clearing through members are required to render to this committee copies of the statements they make to the comptroller or to the state auditor five times a year.

These disclosures in connection with the failures of these three banks showed the associated banks of Chicago that statements so rendered, which up to that time had been all the clearing house committee had to rely upon and which, as published, form the basis of the standing and credit of banks with the public, could not be implicitly relied upon. It was therefore unanimously resolved to adopt a system of supervision under which there could be some assurance that such conditions could never again develop in any bank connected with the Chicago Clearing House Association. There was therefore organized a bureau of examination in connection with the clearing house.

The strength of this bureau lies in the fact that it was thus evolved by the voluntary action of the associated banks for their individual benefit and protection. We were fully aware that external supervision under whatever authority it may be exercised does not absolutely guarantee sound and safe banking in individual cases. Honorable and intelligent initiative management can alone be relied on for the ultimate success of individual banks. But judicious and intelligent supervision in the mutual interest of all fosters and encourages conservative management in each. We further saw that it would not do to have the entire business of the individual banks disclosed to a committee made up of competitors in the business. We therefore devised the plan of appointing a competent examiner with a sufficient force of assistants to make as thorough an examination as possible of each bank at least once a year and report his findings in full detail to its directors. In this way as thorough an examination is made of each bank as would be made if the directors of their own initiative employed an outside expert to examine their banks and report to them. The examiner's complete report of each bank is sent to its president, the directors are all notified of its existence and are asked to personally peruse it and to acknowledge to the examiner the receipt of his notice. If, in the course of his examination, the examiner finds any bad debts, depreciated assets or other losses unprovided for, so that at a fair valuation the assets do not offset the liabilities, including the capital, surplus and undivided profits, as shown in the balance sheet, or if he discovers any irregularities in connection with the bookkeeping or management, he reports such findings to the clearing house committee. The committee does not see the examiner's complete report as rendered to the directors. All that is found satisfactory is so reported to the committee without detail. If conditions are so bad as to make it necessary the committee has the right to call for a copy of the complete report so that it may deal intelligently with the case, but this is only when bad business so permeates the bank as to render its condition precarious. Thus, as nothing but bad and undesirable business comes to the committee's attention, the members of it have no advantage through their position in competition with the other banks for desirable business.

Neither the examiner nor the committee is hampered with restrictive rules and regulations. The examiner simply examines and reports upon the condition of each bank as he finds it the same as any other expert examiner would do if employed by the directors for the purpose. Anything affecting the integrity of a bank's statement as rendered under oath to the government and to the clearing house and as published is reported to the clearing house committee. This is the whole matter in a nutshell. We have simply established two rules applicable to all banks connected with our clearing house association and even these are unwritten. The first is that our statements as made and published must reveal the true conditions of our banks on the basis of their assets at a fair valuation being sufficient to offset their liabilities including capital, surplus and undivided profits. In other words their capital, surplus and undivided profits must always be represented by the approximate value, reasonably estimated, of their assets in excess of the amount of their liabilities to the public. The second is that from an ethical standpoint the management of our banks must be honorable and straight, and their records and reports reliable. The clearing house committee, duly elected once a year, are, with the examiner's reports to guide them, the judges as to whether the statements rendered to them by the banks five times a year are reasonably correct from the standpoint of these two unwritten rules. As already stated, we are not hampered with technical rules or regulations or even with legal definitions or interpretations. We investigate and treat all on a reasonable business basis. Our committee might find difficulty in defining a bad debt while they could recognize one if they saw it. They might regard as a bad debt an obligation on which interest had been paid six months in advance instead of having to wait until it is six months past due before they can so consider it. They regard the making and publishing of erroneous statements of a bank's condition as morally wrong, and therefore not permissible among banks associated together for their mutual benefit and protection, even if the making of such is not legally regarded as a misdemeanor. And they do not have to wait until a bank is actually insolvent in a legal sense before they can call it to time. A bank's statement must, on the basis of the examiner's report, be found reasonably accurate by the committee or it cannot continue to enjoy clearing house privileges.

As to the ability of an examiner to pick out and report on bad debts and depreciated assets, he soon acquires a sufficient knowledge of local conditions to enable him to do so with reasonable accuracy. He subscribes to the commercial agencies and has the entire banking fraternity with which to consult as to the standing of any obligor or as to the value of any security. The longer he is on the job the more information he acquires and the more proficient he becomes. Besides having been for several years a bank inspector myself I have had considerable experience with bank auditors and examiners and my observation is that anyone of ordinary intelligence with a bank training and with adequate sources of information at his command can very soon classify a bank's assets with reasonable accuracy.

It has been my practice to divide bank assets into five classes and for convenience to name them in dairy terms such as cream, sweet milk, skim milk, sour milk and sediment. The cream consists of such prime investments, whether in notes or bonds, as can be relied on to be paid at maturity or as can be readily sold and converted into cash. The sweet milk is that line of desirable loans made to good customers who keep satisfactory average balances and whose legitimate business requirements the banker is under obligation to consider and must consider in order to keep their business. The skim milk is represented by business which is not quite as good as it was thought to be when it was taken on and therefore requires special care and attention, although no loss on it is anticipated. The sour milk is business which has become so bad that at least partial loss can be reasonably anticipated on it, which should be provided for. And the sediment is business so bad that a large percentage of loss on it is so inevitable that it can no longer be considered a legitimate or desirable bank asset and should be charged off.

The cream and the sweet milk are readily recognizable, the skim milk will as a rule disclose some complication or other indications of conditions connected with it which make it undesirable as a bank asset at its face value. With these three classes segregated there are left the sour milk and the sediment. To keep a bank as sweet and clean as a model dairy these two last named classes of assets must be constantly eliminated. When discovered by the examiner they are reported to the clearing house committee because if a bank's statement is to disclose its true condition the loss on them should be provided for. There is little fear of the members of the committee competing for such business.

As to the practical working of clearing house examinations in Chicago during the six years of their existence I can only say that it has proved in every way most satisfactory and successful. There has been neither friction nor unpleasantness. Bank directors realize the great benefits derived and are unstinted in their praise of them. They are greatly assisted by these reports in keeping themselves informed on the condition of their banks and they readily co-operate with the clearing house committee in the correction or elimination of anything open to criticism. Our experience has been that the banks have almost unanimously adopted every suggestion made by the committee. I cannot of course discuss such details as would show its efficacy. I can only say that the results have been most satisfactory to all concerned and that much good has been accomplished for the Chicago banks individually and collectively.

The organization being entirely voluntary partakes somewhat of the nature of a gentleman's agreement, under which each bank binds itself to conduct its business under proper methods. The effectiveness of the method lies in the fact that they are all measured by the same standard, viz: that their statements as rendered to the Clearing House Association must be satisfactory to the committee, in view of the examiner's reports upon them, otherwise they cannot continue to enjoy clearing house privileges.

In no sense, however, does the committee assume responsibility for the individual management of the banks or for the quality of all the loans current in them. This responsibility must always rest on the officers and directors of each bank.

All the committee undertakes is to pass judgment, based on the examiner's report, on the reasonable integrity of each bank's assets and the general reliability of its statement. In the fact that the members of the committee are posted on local credits and financial affairs lies the superior efficacy of clearing house

"A.B.A." Cheques are the Travelers' Cheques sanctioned and authorized by the American Bankers Association.

"A.B.A." Cheques are established and recognized in every part of the civilized world. Their standing and availability, in every country, are certainly unsurpassed, probably unequaled, by any other form of travelers' credit.

"A.B.A." Cheques are issued by thousands of American Banks and are their own cheques. The issuing bank retains its own identity in the transaction and at the same time supplies an international banking facility to its customers.

"A.B.A." Cheques are advertised extensively in the great National magazines and their popularity is constantly increasing. The people are asking their Banks for "A.B.A." Cheques.

supervision. But the committee is not omnipotent; it is only an ordinary human agency. It has no control of the initiative management of the banks under its supervision and under ordinary circumstances they are only examined once a year. The committee fully realizes the heavy responsibility laid upon it. It has no easy problem to decide as to when or what action should be taken in connection with the condition of a badly managed bank. Conditions must become bad indeed and expostulation must have been exhausted before any supervisory authority, however constituted, will assume the responsibility of action that might lead to the closing of a bank's doors. If it were otherwise and such action were taken simply because something of minor importance in the bank was considered unsatisfactory, such authority would be accused of causing a solvent bank to close and would be blamed not only by its stockholders, but by its depositors in whose behalf the action would be taken.

We have had no difficulty in securing the co-operation of all our banks and it can now be relied on that no such conditions as caused us to organize our examination bureau can ever again develop in any bank connected with our clearing house.

Bank supervision by examination on the part of a clearing house committee, while probably the best and the most effective external supervision possible, has its limitations, which should be recognized by the intelligent public, and should not be held to a degree of responsibility which it does not assume.

Chicago's lead in the inauguration of an examining bureau in connection with its clearing house association has been followed by Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Kansas City, (Mo.) Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Paul, New York, New Orleans Nashville, Oklahoma City, Philadelphia, Portland, (Oregon,) San Francisco, St. Louis, and St. Joseph, (Mo.) Three of these cities, viz: Kansas City, Milwaukee and St. Joseph, instead of having their own examiners, employ certified public accountants to make their examinations. So far as I have learned, and I have heard from nearly all of these cities, clearing house bank examinations have proved eminently satisfactory to all the banks in them.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

After more than a month of complicated legal controversy in which certain policy holders sought to prevent the transfer, the Great Western Life Insurance Company of Kansas has received the sanction of both courts and the Missouri insurance department to consolidate with the International Life Insurance Company of St. Louis. The latter stages of the battle were marked by much bitterness and personal conflicts. The Missouri insurance commissioner brought to his assistance in the matter the insurance commissioners of Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas, sitting as a board to pass on the application to consolidate. The International will take over all the policies, liabilities and property of the Great Western, which has a capitalization of $17,000,000. It means the end of the Great Western and under the agreement the stockholders of the Great Western will receive $200 a share for their stock or they may elect to take three shares of stock in exchange in the consolidated company. The head offices of the Great Western Company will be moved to St. Louis and incorporated with those of the International.

The Great Western Life Insurance Company was organized in February, 1907, by O. L. Van Laningham of Kansas City. The sale of annuity certificates, a device to raise ready money soon after the organization had been completed, caused the courts of Nebraska and Oklahoma to oust the company from doing business in those states. A commission appointed by the Missouri insurance department to examine into the company's methods, criticized the manner of doing business. Charges of fraud were filed in the federal court and the resignation of Mr. Van Laningham followed. The insurance commissioner found that the directors, by a series of manipulations, had "skinned" the stock. C. S. Jobes, vice-president of the Pioneer Trust Company, was appointed receiver. The receivership was lifted in August, 1908, more complications resulted and the company has been in a turmoil ever since.

Addresses A. I. B.

Prof. C. E. Cockrell, of the Texas Christian University, addressed the Dallas, Tex., Chapter of the American Institute of Banking the night of December 6th, on "Wealth and Money." His address was part of the educational work of the chapter, which meets every Thursday night and has an address by some distinguished speaker twice a month. Prof. Cockrell studied political economy at Oxford University before going to Texas and his lecture was of pronounced interest. After the lecture the chapter adopted suitable resolutions on the death of Charles J. Grant, auditor of the American Exchange National Bank of Dallas, who died recently. He was an enthusiastic member of the chapter and had done much to make it a success.

Central West Banking Development

The recent report of the secretary of the treasury throws an interesting light upon the development of the banking business in the states of the Central West. For the twelve years covered by the report—from March 14, 1900, to June 30, 1912—it is shown that 134 national banks were established in Kansas, 161 in Nebraska and 408 in Oklahoma. On the face of this report, Oklahoma seems to have outstripped her northern neighbors, but many of the Oklahoma banks were known as "wet weather" speculations and at the close of the twelve year period Oklahoma had fewer national banks to her credit than had been established in the same length of time. In Kansas there was more conservatism. That state at the end of the twelve years, had the banks with which she started and enough of the 134 new ones to bring the total number of national banks within her borders to 211. There were 93 new banks chartered by the government in Kansas in twelve years with a capitalization of $25,000 each; eleven new banks with a capitalization of more than $25,000, and less than $50,000, and thirty new national banks with a capitalization of more than $50,000, bringing the total capitalization of the 211 national banks in Kansas to $12,017,500. In Oklahoma there were 408 new national banks chartered with a capitalization of $13,640,000. But on June 30th of this year there were but 293 national banks in Oklahoma which were reporting to the comptroller. Nebraska, which made the best showing of any of the states under consideration, gained 161 new national banks and now has a total of 245, with a capitalization of $16,240,000.

Kansas City Banks Growing

Although no radical changes are shown in the statements of the Kansas City national banks in comparison with the call of September 4th, last, the statements reveal the steady growth that has been manifest among these banks for years. Of the fourteen national banks in Kansas City reporting, all show a heavy increase in loans and discounts, cash and sight exchange and total resources. Deposits show a slight falling off which is accounted for by the increase in the loans and discounts item. Deposits and state banks and trust companies have increased so that the total of all deposits of Kansas City banks is higher than three months ago. The statement is a good one in the view of bankers. It shows that the banks have maintained an exceptionally sound condition with a gratifying growth. The element of safety has not been lost sight of. The ratio of cash and sight exchange to deposits is above the actual requirements of good banking, with many millions to spare.

Omaha Banks on Sound Basis

The national bank call shows financial conditions in Omaha on a sound basis with an increase of the total deposits of $3,831,705 over the showing made on December 5, 1911. Omaha bankers report plenty of money for business men at the opening of commercial activities with the coming of the new year. The State Bank of Omaha, the only state bank in the city, has $181,016 on deposit, which is creditable when it is remembered that this institution is only a few weeks old. The bank deposits of various smaller cities in the Central West show that Lincoln, Neb., has $11,300,000; Oklahoma City, $12,000,000; Wichita, $11,500,000 and Topeka $10,000,000. These figures indicate steady growth and prosperity.

Bank President Resigns

George Clarence Smith, for the past four years president of the Peoples National of Kansas City, Kan., has resigned and O. W. Shepherd, one of the wealthiest men in that city, has been elected to succeed him. The circumstances leading to this change are rather mysterious and involve the charge that Mr. Smith is $6,000 behind in his personal account with the institution. He has been in poor health for several months and recently, it is said, he was visited at his home by a committee from the bank's directory, with the demand that he resign. Later Mr. Smith went to a hotel in Kansas City, where he was found with his wrists cut. He was taken home and is now under the care of a physician. Mr. Smith had no bad habits, and it is not believed that his troubles at the bank were of sufficient moment to cause him to want to take his life. It is the general belief that he is merely completely broken in health. Mr. Smith came from Ottawa, Kan., four years ago, where he had been cashier of the First National Bank. He helped build up the Peoples National of Kansas City, Kan., and was very popular. His family have been prominent socially and his home was one of the best in the city.

Would Curb Professional Bank Promoters

Bank Commissioner John E. Swanger of Missouri, has become aroused to the danger that lies in the activities of professional bank promoters. Many of these promoters have been working in Missouri of late and the institutions started by them generally have been unsuccessful. Commissioner Swanger warns the public against buying bank stock from anybody except persons with whom the purchasers are acquainted. He has authorized a statement in which he says: "These professional promoters only seek to organize institutions for the purpose of the 'rake-off' on commissions which they get for selling the stock or, perhaps, in some instances, in order to get themselves a job for a little while to enable them to profit wrongfully by use of the bank's funds, and are not interested in the organization and conduct of a safe and solvent banking institution. I desire to stop professional bank promotion in Missouri. If there is any banking institution organized in any place in the state, it should be organized only to supply a well defined need, and not for the purpose of giving somebody a commission or a job."

It now practically is certain that the sale of the stock of the Kansas City Stockyards Company has been consummated in Boston. A recent telegram from Kidder, Peabody & Co., indicates that 87 per cent of the stock has been registered for transfer, which is 12 per cent more than the original limit set by the negotiators. The time for sending in the stock for sale expired December 2d, but an extension has been allowed for thirty days. It is understood that the new corporation will be known as the Kansas City Stockyards Company of Maine, and that it will assume active control on January 1st. No change in the local management is contemplated.

George F. Orde, vice-president of the First National of Minneapolis, and Otto M. Nelson, assistant cashier of the First National of St. Paul, were in Kansas City recently to investigate the country clearing house system which has been in operation with the Kansas City Clearing House for several years. Mr. Orde said that the system in use in Kansas City would be recommended for adoption by the clearing houses of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The United States supreme court has reaffirmed its decision that the Kansas corporation law, closing Kansas state courts to foreign corporations without a certificate to do business in that state, is unconstitutional. Two years ago this law was declared unconstitutional as a burden on interstate commerce.

Charles Snodgrass, bond clerk in the office of the state treasurer of Kansas, has resigned to accept appointment as cashier of the Citizens State Bank of Geneseo, Kan.

The vicissitudes of politics have deprived J. N. Dolley of his job as bank commissioner of Kansas. Mr. Dolley was chairman of the progressive committee and Kansas elected a democratic governor who has little use for the politically active Dolley. Mr. Dolley has gained a wide reputation as the author of the Kansas "Blue Sky" law which has been copied in a number of other states. His successor has not been appointed.

J. D. Lankford, state bank commissioner of Oklahoma, has made a call for the payment of the special assessment levied September 11th for the benefit of the Oklahoma guaranty fund.

Kansas City will sell on December 19th to the highest bidder, $200,000 of waterworks bonds bearing 4 per cent, and $200,000 sewer bonds bearing 4½ per cent. They are remnants of bonds voted in 1910 and will mature in 1930.

The First State Bank of Pryor Creek, Okla., has been closed by the state banking board. The assets will reimburse the depositors. Bad loans which impaired the capital of the bank caused the failure. The bank has $50,000 capital and surplus of $5,000.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Arguments for national banks making loans on farm lands were advanced at the opening session last week of the fourth annual meeting of the Northern Minnesota Development Association in Crookston, by Senator A. D. Stephens, leading banker and former president of the state association.

"We are sending a commission to Germany," said Mr. Stephens in his address of welcome, "to hunt up a word of twenty-four letters to help our farmers with a new banking system. It would be an insult to most any of you to say that you haven't as good heads as the Germans. Many of you may not know that lying in the pigeon-holes at Washington is an amendment which, if used, will answer the proposition better than the German method with all its complexities. It simply allows the national banks to make loans on farm lands. That amendment will release the best part of $800,000,000 for use in developing our agricultural resources."

Second Arrest in Winnebago Case

John Sharp, president of the State Bank of Commerce, Winnebago, Minn., was arrested last week at Dexter, Minn., on a warrant sworn to by W. J. Regan, bank examiner, at the instance of the state superintendent of banks. The charge is falsifying statements and obstructing the examiner in his duties. H. W. Parker, vice-president and cashier, returned from West Point, Ga., where he had remarried and lived under an assumed name, was indicted by the grand jury, charged with having embezzled $2,000 from the bank.

Receive New Coins for Christmas Distribution

Nearly $50,000 new coins were received this month by commercial banks of Minneapolis for use as Christmas gifts by customers, and change in stores. A limited supply of dollars and half dollars fresh from the mint is available. One bank has sent back one hundred $1,000 bills for replacing the upper right hand corners. The bills have not been put in circulation since printed, but counting them has worn the corners, the bank officials report.

H. J. Schwartz Released

H. J. Schwartz, Royalton banker convicted of embezzlement and sentenced to the Minnesota reformatory on an indeterminate sentence, was released December 11th, due to a commuting of the sentence by the state board of pardons to ten months. Schwartz is said to be planning to go into the hotel business in Canada.

Farmer Banks in Washington

With presidents, directors and depositors from the ranks of the farmers, Whitman county banks in Washington are said to be pretty nearly controlled by the ruralites. The farmers own 90 per cent of the real estate and improved city property of the county, made wealthy, as they have been, by wheat and hog raising. The capitalization of the farmer banks is $12,000,000. The smallest of the thirty banks in the county is $200,000 capital. Deposits amount to more than $35,000,000 and most of the money is loaned back to the farmers on mortgages and invested in bonds. The banks are able to send east to buy bonds. It is said the value of the rich lands is advancing faster than the interest can be computed. Although the farmer-bankers are not engaged regularly in the banking business, they keep close watch of affairs and meet frequently. They select active officers from the East and pay them good salaries. Employees of the banks, it is reported from Pullman, Washington, are well-to-do, own fine homes in the towns and run automobiles. So attractive are the positions that a waiting list is on file. The farmers have organized also to pool grain, fruit and stock and sell on a co-operative basis.

To show the steady growth of the Dakotas and Minnesota in fifteen years, notwithstanding short crops in 1910 and over into 1911, S. H. Bezoier, assistant cashier of the Security National, has prepared figures to show constant increases in bank deposits, except for one year in South Dakota. Minnesota and North Dakota both maintained gains, notwithstanding the fact that the latter state lost heavily in wheat and flax in 1910. The decline in South Dakota was only from $90,000,000 to $78,000,000 with a quick recovery. The figures are as follows:

Banks of Fargo in their prosperity are said to reflect the general banking condition in North Dakota. The deposits on the last call show $7,000,000, an increase of almost $1,500,000 since last year.

NEW BOOK OFFERINGS

"Greyfriars Bobby," by Eleanor Atkinson, is from the press of Harper Bros., New York. This is a brilliant story and aims to be in the canine world all that "Black Beauty" was to horse lovers. The tale is given out as "true" to the last word. It may bring the tears in profusion, but in every case smiles will follow. It's a rare treat.

Illinoisans in particular, and all westerners in general, will like "Lincoln's Own Stories," compiled and edited by Anthony Gross and published in attractive form by Harper Bros., New York. Stories of, by and attributable to Lincoln, have been going the rounds of American light and heavy literature for many years past. The process is likely to continue until the end of time—or, at least, until some such wondrous man, with parallel gifts for apt anecdote, shall again arise as guardian and savior of the republic. A mighty slender chance, that—yet nature's molds are infinitely protean, and with each generation comes a fresh crop of stories. These are not new, except so far as their novelty of adaptation lends renewed currency. About the worst that could be said of Lincoln's fashion of cutting argument short with anecdote, is that he set up a mannerism into which nearly all public men after him fell, either eagerly or reluctantly. Not until Lincoln had made the anecdotal method historical was there profusely evolved the chronic story-teller in law, in business, in the doctor's shop or in the parsonage.

"Home Life in Germany," by Mrs. Alired Sidgwick, comes from the Macmillan press, and no book could be pleasanter to read nor give more truthfully the home life of the Germans. A third edition proves its popularity, and it deserves to be liked. It is particularly complete in the variety of phases of domestic and social life which it dwells upon. Children, schools, women, girlhood, marriage, housewives, servants, food, hospitality, amusements, inns and restaurants, life among the poor, the cities—all are discussed in a conversational and intimate way. The author's good humor, joined with her common sense candidness, captivates the reader. There is no attempt at an interpretation of the broader and deeper life of Germany, and this may disappoint some readers. But as a description of home life the book is most interesting and entertaining.

"The Freshman" is the book for the boy. It is by James Hopper, published by Moffat, Yard & Co., New York, and no better study of the psychology of student athletics is to be found in fiction. The development of a first class football player out of a "prep" school student by the right sort of trainer, as told by the author, is a revelation of what can be done in this line of education. Those who oppose college athletics will find in "The Freshman" an answer to more than one of their arguments.

"Winning the Southwest," by Glenn H. Bradley, is published by A. C. McClurg & Co. of this city and is another book for the boy. Bradley gives his portrayal through detailed stories of the conquests of seven of the famous leaders in the building of this designated empire of free country. These heroes are Kit Carson, famous scout; Frank R. Stockton, a foremost leader of the navy, who first proclaimed American rule in California. Then Richard Wootton, better known as "Uncle Dick" Wootton. "Uncle Dick" was a Southern man with sympathy for the Confederate cause, but just the same he was a mighty man, who made history in Colorado and New Mexico. He lived more than forty years on the frontier and was prominent in the advance of civilization. Sam Houston, a brilliant figure in our national history, a monument of adventurous valor in Texas and in other Southern states, reckless fighter and a splendid citizen. Stephen W. Kearney, who won New Mexico for the Union and assisted in the conquest of California. George A. Custer, the indomitable warrior against Indians and a martyr of national progress. John C. Fremont, a splendid figure in the history of the West. These stories of heroes brim with history of the Southwest. There are fine portraits of these heroes in the book.

An interesting story of Ireland has flowed from the G. A. Birmingham pen:—Birmingham is the Rev. James O. Hannay, late of Connaught parish. In "Priscilla's Spies" (Geo. H. Doran Company) there is the same ebullient spirit, ingenuity of invention and rattle-brained Hibernian humor that have raised the Birmingham stories to the rank of minor Irish classics.

The story tells of Priscilla's discovery of strangers camping on an island in Rosnacru bay. The clever young girl scents mystery and adventure, and, with the aid of a companion, she goes out in a toy yacht to solve the spy problem. The supposed spies turn out to be an eloping couple from London, who had bought tickets to the farthest point in the kingdom to which they could be carried.

How Priscilla, with much aid from turbulent natives, brings about reconciliation with stern and wildly pursuing parents is the storyteller's fanciful theme. It is all gay, fanciful and elusive, leaving the reader finally to wonder what the mischief he has been laughing at.

"Business now is active everywhere throughout the East, not only in manufacturing and distributing lines, but in the building trades and all other industries," said R. B. Paterson, president of the Spokane Dry Goods Company, a $1,500,000 concern, on his return from a six-weeks eastern trip.

"I observe that Spokane is getting an increasing share of the prosperity waves sweeping across the country, and high tide is sure to reach us ere long," added Mr. Paterson.

"The coming change in administration with the certainty of tariff revision seems not to create any sense of alarm, the general thought being that the forthcoming bill will be substantially the same as that passed at the last session of congress and subsequently vetoed by the president. Thus the industries affected by the changes in the important schedules covering the products of wool, cotton, and metals, already are pretty well understood and anticipated. The New York dry goods market is more active than it has been since 1907."

For the second year in succession the Spokane & Eastern Trust company closed its fiscal year November 30th, with interest on no mortgages in default. The company does an extensive loan business in the Spokane country and at the close of the fiscal year has $2,000,000 of loans in force. The interest on all the loans had been paid when the books were closed November 30th.

"The fact that the company has closed the year with no interest payments in default," said R. Lewis Rutter, general manager and secretary of the company, "indicates not only that the borrowers are well selected, but that they are prosperous. They must have money or they could not pay as they have done. The unique position of the company in this regard is a sure indication of good times in the sections where our loans are placed and further indicates that there is no scarcity of funds in the Spokane country."

A Thanksgiving day announcement was that Spokane has been made Pacific Northwest headquarters of the Holt Manufacturing company, builders of combined harvesters and "caterpillar" gas traction engines. The company has leased a five-story warehouse building and a site on which construction of a five-story office building has been started. It does a million-dollar business in Spokane annually.

Thomas H. Brewer, president of the Fidelity National, has started a collection of large vegetables grown in the Spokane country. He has a White China radish weighing 17 pounds, grown without irrigation at Genesee, Idaho. The radish is 26 inches in circumference and 20 inches long. A cabbage from the same place weighs 23 pounds and is 18 inches in diameter.

Dividends of $100,000 from two mines in the Spokane country are being distributed at the office of Finch & Campbell in Spokane. A dividend of $50,000 is disbursed by the Standard Silver-Lead Mining Company, Silverton, B. C., bringing that mine's total 1912 dividends to $425,000. Another $50,000 is paid by the Kendall Gold Mining company, Montana. This mine has distributed $1,475,000 to date.

Deposits in the Spokane postal savings bank November 30th totaled $57,242, a gain of $3,707 during the month. Postmaster W. P. Edris has asked for improved facilities for this department.

Spokane's 16 banks gained $801,459.97 in deposits the last year, up to the time of the statement issued November 26th, on call of the comptroller of the currency. Total deposits are $32,478,034.52, as against $31,676,574.55 December 5, 1911. A healthy increase is shown in loans, indicating that the banks are loaning money readily on good securities. EDMONTON NEWS

Two hundred and forty thousand dollars is the extent of a grant, made by the city council to the sisters of the Misericordia Hospital, to be sanctioned by the ratepayers of Edmonton at an election to be called for some time in December. The sisters have agreed to give the city a representation of three members on a board of seven, and to give a mortgage to the municipality on the site to be occupied by the hospital building. This contains a clause to the effect that if the lands or buildings cease to be used for hospital purposes the grant becomes a loan, payable upon demand.

Among the firms buying sites to locate branch houses in Edmonton are the Massey-Harris Company, implements; The Canadian General Electric Company of Toronto; Pochontas Trading Company, head offices; Franco-Canadian Investment Company, Ltd., head offices, capitalization, $3,000,000; the General Construction Company; Western Canada Co-operative Supply Company, head offices, and the London and Glasgow Trust, Ltd., head offices, capitalization, $1,000,000.

The Quebec Bank has bought the Norwood Building in Jasper Avenue, between Howard and McDougall Avenues, for $175,000 and will open a branch there. The frontage is 50 feet. So far no instructions have been given by the bank, regarding its intentions in connection with a new building. The ground floor is

The Royal Bank of Canada will open branches in Norwood and South Edmonton next January. For the present these will occupy rented premises, but it is expected that buildings will be erected. During the last twelve months the bank's business has had commensurate growth with the general expansion of the city. A year ago the staff numbered thirteen. To-day there are thirty-two. The absorption of the Traders Bank by the Royal Bank was brought about last summer.

Count Francis de Bosdari, of Rome, Italy, who arrived in America four months ago, will make his home in Edmonton for a year to study Canadian financial and real estate conditions. He spent several months in a brokerage office in Montreal before coming to Edmonton.

H. J. Logan, K. C., liberal representative for Cumberland County, Nova Scotia, in the federal house from 1896 to 1908, when he retired on account of failing health, has come to Edmonton as the representative of British capitalists, who will make heavy investments in the city and country. He has opened offices in the Rudyk Building.

Western Canadian Investment and Development Company, Ltd., has been incorporated under a federal charter, with head offices in Edmonton and a branch in Toronto. The officers are J. J. English, retired merchant of Hastings, Ont., president; Edward Gee, South Edmonton, vice-president; Henry R. Mountfield, Edmonton, secretary-treasurer; H. Bewley Stevens, manager. Other directors are: G. H. M. Baker, president of Baker Lumber Company, Lindsay, Ont., and Dr. Mellow, and Dr. J. D. Berry, of Port Perry, Ont.

Six hundred and ninety-eight miles of steam lines were constructed in Alberta during the first ten months of 1912, according to a statement prepared by the provincial department of railways. The present mileage in operation in the province is 2,798, as against 2,100 miles in 1911. The mileage in previous years follows: 1910, 1,782; 1909, 1,505; 1908, 1,366; 1907, 1,284; 1906, 1,267; 1905, 1,060. The increase from 1909 to 1912 is without a parallel in the Dominion of Canada.

The Canadian Northern Railway company actually built during the ten months of 1912 a greater mileage than the total of all previous years. At the close of 1911 the road had 329 miles of line. This year it has 792 miles, an increase of 463 miles for the year. The Grand Trunk Pacific built 235 miles, giving the company 619 miles in the province.

The Canadian Northern Railway and the branch line company have 448 miles of grade ready for steel. The Grand Trunk Pacific has 34 miles, and the Edmonton, Dunvegan & British Columbia has eight miles of steel laid and 70 miles of continuous grade completed. Track laying will continue throughout the winter at the rate of 6,500 feet a day.

The work that actually has been completed is the best evidence of the growth and progress of the province of Alberta, which to-day has a population of 500,000, as compared with 372,000 in 1910. This railroad construction also is an index of the development in commercial, industrial and agricultural lines and the resultant prosperity of the cities and towns.

The Canadian Pacific Railway company and the Alberta Railway and Irrigation company, which was absorbed by the first named early in 1912, controlled the situation in the province in 1905. The Canadian Pacific operated 946 miles of lines and the Alberta Railway and Irrigation company had 114 miles. The Canadian Northern entered the field in 1906, when it built 178 miles of road, which was increased to 220 miles the following year. The Canadian Pacific also made extensions bringing its mileage to 1,320.

The Grand Trunk Pacific crossed the eastern provincial boundary in 1908, adding 40 miles to the total trackage in Alberta. It was the only company that carried on new construction that year. The company built 89 miles in 1909, when the Canadian Pacific increased its mileage to 1,042. The Grand Trunk Pacific added 164 miles to its main line and built 118 miles of branch roads in 1910, bringing the total of all lines to 1,782 miles. The Grand Trunk Pacific completed 384 miles in 1911, while the Canadian Northern built 329 miles. To-day the Canadian Pacific has 1,387 miles.

WALKER BROTHERS OCCUPY NEW BUILDING

Officers and directors of Walker Brothers, bankers, Salt Lake City, Utah, issue an invitation to their correspondents and friends to meet them in their new banking quarters in the Walker Bank building. This is one of the old financial institutions of Utah, having been organized in 1859. The new quarters, which were ready for occupancy December 9th, are in keeping with the character and growth of the banks' business. The structure is a modern steel office building, in which the bank will occupy practically the entire first floor. This institution is capitalized at $250,000, carries surplus and undivided profits of $200,000, with a line of deposits amounting to three millions. M. H. Walker, the president, is a pioneer in the development of Utah, and a prominent factor in the commercial and financial life of the state. L. H. Farnsworth is vice-president; E. O. Howard, cashier, and J. H. Walker and W. E. Lake, assistant cashiers. When passing through Salt Lake to or from the coast, it will be worth while to stop off and see the new home of Walker Brothers' bank.

SEEKS TO PREVENT DEFAMATION OF CREDIT

Senator Works of California has introduced a bill in congress, the purpose of which is to punish people who endeavor to destroy the credit of any individual, partnership or corporation. Violation of the proposed law is punishable by a heavy jail sentence and fine. Senator Works proposes to amend the penal code of the United States, approved March 4th, 1909, by adding the following to section 245:

"Any person who shall, himself, in his own name, or for or in the name of some other person, corporation, association or co-partnership, by threat, intimidation, persuasion, or otherwise prevent any other person, corporation, association or co-partnership from securing loans or credit, or otherwise securing financial aid in organizing or carrying on any lawful interstate business; or who shall by misrepresentation or otherwise destroy, or attempt to destroy, the credit of any person, corporation, association or co-partnership engaged in such interstate commerce; or who shall wilfully and for the purpose of preventing or hindering the organization or prosecution of any such lawful business by another, or destroying the same, commence or prosecute any action at law or in equity in any of the courts, state or federal; or who shall knowingly or wilfully conspire or confederate with any other person, corporation, association or co-partnership to do, or otherwise obstruct or prevent the carrying on of any lawful interstate business by another, shall be guilty of a felony and be fined not less than one hundred nor more than $10,000, and be imprisoned at hard labor not less than one or more than fourteen years."

ABOLISH COLLECTION CHARGES

The New York Clearing House Association has voted to abolish collection charges on checks originating in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts. The practice of charging for the collection of out-of-town checks by clearing house banks was a subject of inquiry last spring by the Pujo committee of the house of representatives, investigating the so-called money trust. It was alleged that the profits of the clearing house banks on such collections amounted to $50,000,000 annually.

INCREASE NUMBER OF DIRECTORS

The Bank of Montreal has increased its board of directors from twelve to fourteen. One of the new directors elected at the annual meeting succeeded the late Sir Edward Clouston. The three elected were: C. B. Gordon, president of the Dominion Textile Co.; Huntley Drummond and Forbes Angus, a son of the president of the bank.

DEPOSIT DECREASE DUE TO CROP MOVEMENT

That the decrease in deposits of Chicago's banks, as shown by the recent call and as compared with the figures exhibited at the preceding call, may be attributed to financing the crop movement, is the opinion of leading bankers and financiers. It is believed that a large volume of this money soon will be returning and that the banks again will be in an easy condition.

BUMPER CROPS FOR IOWA

Iowa raised almost $400,000,000 worth of crops last year. The largest crop was corn, with 421,368,000 bushels valued at $151,698,674. Oats is second with 256,949,700 bushels, worth $55,876,419. Hay is a close third with 5,850,740 tons, valued at $55,275,723. Iowa planted 336,286 more acres of corn last year than ever before. The total acreage was 9,199,610.

Des Moines, Dec. 12th.—Two bank calls in Iowa, one for the savings banks for November 20th and one for the nationals for November 28th, have resulted in considerable figuring on the part of the bankers of Iowa. It is apparent that the deposits will not show up well in the compilation following these calls, particularly with the national banks in the larger cities. There has been a demand for money that is not unusual at this time of year but which works against the showing bankers would like to make. However the four national banks in Des Moines rejoice in the showing that their deposits on November 28th this year totaled approximately $15,603,938 as against $14,611,435 at the time of the corresponding call a year ago. After the first of the year the deposits, it is thought, will again mount up. Just at present considerable money is needed in Iowa to handle the movement of the crops.

"Hair Cut Loses Case"

E. D. Rayburn, vice-president of the First National at Montezuma and one of the well-known bankers of central Iowa, gave Assistant Attorney-General, Henry Sampson, a quarter with which to get his hair cut and thereby hangs a tale. The merchants at Montezuma gave away an automobile as a stimulus to trade. Later the grand jury got after them and indicted over fifty of them including Banker Rayburn. Attorney-General Cosson, determined to push the cases, as he desired an opinion upon the raffle laws of the state. Accordingly he sent his assistant, Sampson, to Montezuma. The first case tried resulted in a complete acquittal for the accused defendant, R. J. Smith, who happened to draw the automobile. And now Sampson says that, like his illustrious predecessor of Biblical lore, he lost his strength when he had his hair cut. Had he not taken the quarter tendered him by Mr. Rayburn and had he preserved his locks, he would have won his case—at least, that is what he says. In the meantime, Mr. Rayburn is a hero at Montezuma and he is getting many times the value of the quarter in good advertising.

Good Roads Aid Business

Ellis Robb, national bank examiner for northwestern Iowa, was interviewed while in Des Moines recently. Mr. Robb, like the majority of the bankers of Iowa, is an enthusiast on the subject of good roads. He believes that good roads add immeasurably to the business done in any city or town in Iowa. He calls attention to the alertness of the business men in Eldora, his home town, and asserts that the tremendous business done there can be traced directly to the work that has been done in putting the highways into that town in first-class condition and keeping them so.

Would Pay Convicts Wages

J. E. Varnum, cashier of the Eldon Savings, was in Des Moines last week talking about the convict labor problem—a subject that is prominent in Iowa just now in view of the coming session of the legislature, which is expected to take some sort of action. Mr. Varnum formerly was instructor in the state reformatory at Elmira, N. Y. He attacks the methods that prevail in Iowa on the ground that the state could be making money instead of losing it as at present. Not only would the state lessen taxation but it would in addition be teaching the convict some means of livelihood if it would adopt a system of paying the convicts what their labors are worth and selling the output in the open market, he says.

Bank Merger

A merger of the Iowa Loan and Trust and the Central Trust of Des Moines is contemplated. The Iowa Loan and Trust is one of the oldest and strongest financial institutions in the city, with capital of $500,000 and deposits of over $1,000,000. G. B. Hippee, Simon Casady and J. D. Whisenand are heavy stockholders in the institution while J. D. Whisenand, E. E. Clark, Lee B. Bartholomew and Simon Casady are heavy stockholders in the Central Trust.

Banker Accused

It seems that the indictment of H. M. Martinson, former cashier of the First National at Lake Mills, has caused more than ordinary gossip in that city. The federal grand jury accuses Martinson of making false reports to the comptroller of the currency at Washington. Martinson went into the bank following the withdrawal of P. M. Joice and much of his work was along the line of straightening out the tangle left by Joice. After he quit the Lake Mills institution he acted for president Paulson of the First National at Albert Lea for awhile and was successful in some realty ventures. He is not now with that institution, however.

Arrest Alleged Forger

J. E. Dufort was arrested at Des Moines last week charged with forgery of several checks drawn on the Des Moines National. The checks were not large in number, but when Dufort was searched the police found $475 in his pocket, so the officers say. The checks were drawn on the above institution and Dufort apparently was getting ready to pass them one at a time. Dufort was representing a magazine while in Des Moines. It is claimed that he did time in Manitoba, Canada, for forgery.

Bankers Presented with Vases

One of the pleasant features connected with the opening of the new building of the Central State in Des Moines last week was the presentation to President Simon Casady and vice-president J. D. Whisenand of two handsome silver vases by G. E. MacKinnon and Fred Walker, president and cashier of the Mechanics Savings which is also in a new building across the street. When Mr. MacKinnon reached Des Moines seventeen years ago, he went to work for the Citizens National but left there two years later to become paying teller for the Des Moines Savings under Mr. Casady. Mr. Walker was then a messenger boy in the institution. Later Mr. MacKinnon went to the Central State as assistant cashier and took Mr. Walker with him. Mr. Whisenand later promoted both of them. When Mr. MacKinnon resigned as cashier, Mr. Walker succeeded him. Now Mr. MacKinnon is president of the Mechanics and Mr. Walker is his cashier. But neither has forgotten the training received under the two pioneers, Simon Casady and J. D. Whisenand, and the cups are tokens of appreciation as well as evidences of continued friendship.

Prominent Bankers Die

Two well-known Iowa bankers died last week. Peter Kiene, a leading Dubuque financier, was one and John W. Dobbin, president of the First National at State Center, was the other. Mr. Kiene was 66 years old and prominent as chairman of the board of directors of the American Bankers Insurance Co., of Chicago. Death was due to paralysis. Mr. Dobbin was 80 years old and had been ill with pneumonia.

Praises Iowa Farms

E. D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust of Chicago, addressed the Des Moines Bankers Club at its December meeting. Mr. Hulbert was scheduled to speak at an earlier meeting but was forced to cancel the prior date. He spoke upon currency questions and did not speak especially highly of the Aldrich plan. In an interview Mr. Hulbert paid high compliment to Iowa farms and farmers. He declared they are the salt of the earth. "The bank with which I am associated has about $5,000,000 outstanding in loans to the farmers of Iowa," he said. "We never have had to foreclose on an Iowa farm loan nor have we had any trouble collecting interest on the loans made to this class of citizens."

Interesting Legal Question

The question of whether a county can collect taxes from a bank after they have been refunded to the institution is an interesting question that has come up to the supreme court from Adair county. The title is Adair County vs. W. F. Johnston and First National of Fontanelle. The bank paid taxes on government bonds. Then the courts held that such taxes cannot be assessed. Thereupon the supervisors refunded the money to the bank. Afterwards the supervisors began to think they had acted hastily and they sought to recover the money. Judge Fahey held in the district court that since the bank had paid an amount irregularly assessed, there was no recourse. However, the attorney-general holds that the bank voluntarily paid the tax in the first place and that it is stopped from seeking to collect money which already has been paid.

Postal Banks Lose Deposits

The complaint is general from Iowa post office banks that the war in Europe is decreasing the deposits in these institutions. For instance, Mason City post office reports a falling off of $3,000. The legitimate banks also are feeling the effects, but it is thought that the postal banks are suffering more in proportion.

Alleged Bank Robber May Be Murderer

Thomas Robinson, arrested at Fort Dodge for the murder of Marshal E. B. McFarland of Gowrie recently, is believed to be wanted for bank robbery at Marysville, Kas. Kansas officials believe they can "stick" Robinson for fifteen years in Kansas but the Iowa authorities believe they have a case that is good for a life sentence in Iowa.

Mrs. Van Vechten Dies

Mrs. Emma Van Vechten, widow of the late G. E. Van Vechten, pioneer Cedar Rapids banker, died at Cedar Rapids last week. She was well known all over Iowa, especially among the women's club workers. The deceased was an aunt of Ralph Van Vechten, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago.

Iowa Notes

H. P. Dowling, Thomas N. Franklin, F. F. Wunder and W. E. Cooper have joined with M. Dowling of Omaha in the purchase of the Bank of Kirkman. The purchasers are identified with Shelby county banking interests. They will make it the Kirkman Savings on January first. H. O. Loutenhizer of Des Moines will be cashier. The institution was purchased from its founder, Frank DeKlotz.

George M. Reynolds of the Continental Commercial of Chicago was in Des Moines last week a guest at the home of his brother Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National. Mr. Reynolds gave out many interesting statements while here relative to his views on financial questions.

Jack Bennett was the victim of the first accident in the building of the new Central State Bank building in Des Moines when he fell off a ladder while cleaning up the structure. He was badly hurt.

Zaman Knapp, assistant cashier in the Union National at Ames, was married recently to Miss Laura Storms, daughter of A. B. Storms, formerly president of Ames College. The wedding was at Indianapolis.

The capital stock of the Farmers Savings at Templeton has been increased from $10,000 to $15,000.

L. L. Beinbauer has been chosen cashier of the Farmers State at Dows to succeed O. M. Benson who resigned.

The Newhall Savings at Newhall has filed amendments to its articles increasing the capital stock from $15,000 to $30,000.

A new bank at Allendorf with a capital stock of $12,500 is in prospect. D. D. Garberson, Harry Russell and Henry Rerick are said to be behind the organization.

L. H. Groth has been chosen assistant cashier of the Citizens State at Elgin.

Clyde Wilcox, formerly president of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank, Bushnell, S. D., has been elected cashier of the Platte (S. D.) State Bank.

C. J. Weiser, president of the Winneshiek County State at Decorah, has been chosen one of the directors of the Canadian Bond and Mortgage Corporation at Winnipeg. The capitalization of the latter concern is $5,000,000.

Joseph Samuels, president of the Nishna Valley Bank of Riverton, has purchased an electric adding machine and to run it, he has established at his home an electric plant by which he runs the machine and lights up the institution at the same time.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIRDSON

An important change in South Dakota banking circles was effected by the consolidation at Plankinton of the Commercial State Bank and the Farmers and Merchants State Bank, under the name of the latter concern. The combination gives the bank a $25,000 capitalization. The officers will be: President, Arthur Harris; cashier, J. E. Morris; assistant cashiers, Robt. McIntosh and P. F. Nolin. It is stated that Mr. Morris will assume the presidency after the first of the new year.

Country banks continue to draw heavily on the Sioux City institutions for the movement and financing of crops and for the purchase of feeding stock. The movement is almost phenomenal, even for this season of the year, and may continue for quite a time, in view of a manifest disposition on the part of farmers either to hold their corn for a rise or to put it into beef because of the large crop and correspondingly low price.

Reports from Mason City, Ia., are that deposits in the postal savings bank there have decreased from $10,000 to $7,000, practically all the loss going into the Balkan war as direct contributions or transportation for volunteers.

The following bankers were in Sioux City the past week: Geo. L. Parker, president of the First National of Hartington, Neb.; D. M. Inman, president First National, Vermilion, S. D.; T. A. Anthony, cashier First National, Wausa, Neb.; H. W. Wentzy, president, Security Savings Bank, Rapid City, S. D.

STRONG IOWA BANK

Security Trust and Savings of Charles City, Ia., is the largest bank in Floyd county. It has capital of $100,000 and undivided profits of $23,737.84. Deposits amount to $2,293,664.89. There are no bills payable, no rediscounts and no indebtedness to the bank on the part of any officer, director or stockholder. Officers are as follows: Adelbert E. Ellis, president; Charles D. Ellis, vice-president; Morton Wilbur, cashier and Melvin W. Ellis, assistant cashier.

BANK ROBBERS BUSY IN IOWA

Bank robbers who have remained dormant in Iowa for a few weeks broke out afresh Tuesday night. They entered the Citizens State at Goldfield, dynamited the time lock and opened the combination. They made a haul of $4,000 and escaped in a carriage. The robbery was not discovered until the following morning. The same night, robbers looted the depot at Percy and secured tools with which they sought to rob the Farmers Security at that town, but were frightened away.

BANK MAKES RAPID STRIDES

The last statement of the Central Trust Company of Illinois shows deposits of approximately $40,000,000, with capital of $4,500,000, surplus of $1,000,000 and undivided profits of $972,724.54. This bank is but ten years old, having been organized by former Comptroller of the Currency Charles G. Dawes. During the last three years it has, by consolidation, taken over the business of the following banks: Royal Trust, Monroe National, Western Trust and Savings, Prairie State and Metropolitan Trust and Savings, making the Central Trust Company of Illinois one of the leading financial institutions of the West. It stands seventh in the list of Chicago banks in the volume of business, and has total resources of $46,423,228.91.

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

CAMPAIGN OF EDUCATION IN SAVING AND THRIFT

E. C. McWilliam, president of the New York Chapter, American Institute of Banking, and also secretary savings bank section, American Bankers Association, delivered a most interesting address at the Connecticut Savings Banks Association at Hartford on December 6th. Mr. McWilliam said in part:

"Permit me first of all, on behalf of the officers of the savings bank section, American Bankers Association, to express their very deep appreciation of your courtesy in extending me an invitation to meet with you to-day. The American Bankers Association has no desire to usurp the prerogatives of any state association, but rather seeks that co-operation, of which your courtesy is a marked illustration, toward carrying forward constructive work which shall make for the general improvement of all; and there is no better channel for such work than the state association, with their intimate knowledge of local conditions.

"I was very glad to come here to-day and say just a word regarding the educational campaign we are about to institute throughout the country, and in the forwarding of which we desire your help, for frequently written words will be interpreted differently by different people, whereas the meaning may be made plain by word of mouth.

"A number of years ago in course of my every-day affairs, I became impressed by the very evident ignorance of the majority of people regarding the nature and functions of savings banks. This was evidenced by the ridiculous questions which were asked by people in all walks of life. My reasoning led me to believe that if this pertained in New York it must be equally apparent elsewhere, and upon inquiry I found such to be the case. Further reflection led to an investigation of thrift conditions throughout the country and a comparison with other countries, with the result that I became of the opinion that here lay an obligation which we of the savings banks could not shift, for I found that while our savings are the greatest in point of amount, our percentage of savings depositors, including those in all classes of banks, is the smallest in the world. And gentlemen, I claim that a country's thrift should not be measured by the amount of its savings deposits, but rather by its number of savings depositors in proportion to its population. I found sections of the country where the majority of people buried their money in the ground rather than trust banks, and the practice of purchasing money orders payable to oneself is very prevalent.

"With these facts I went before our executive committee last May and suggested that we institute a campaign of education in saving and thrift among the people of the United States. This was favorably acted upon and referred to our methods and systems committee for action.

"As to the methods to be pursued, we are suggesting that in all states the start be made by seeking the establishment of the school savings system wherever practical, believing that no better start can be made than with the children, and that there is no better way for them to learn thrift than by practicing it. We are then suggesting educational advertising either by individual banks or communities, pamphlets, lectures by savings bank men, and in short anything which in the opinion of the state committees will prove an effective channel for directing thought toward thrift and the curtailment of extravagance.

"I would not have you believe that I feel that the people of your beautiful state especially need educating along these lines, for I am not unmindful of the fact that half the population of Connecticut possess savings accounts of one kind or another—a condition which, if it prevailed throughout the Union, would make our economic position impregnable; but there are at least three fields where I believe you can do good work—among the children, the foreigners, and in saving the 'sucker' from himself.

"Regarding that class whom we rudely call 'suckers,' it is our duty to drive home the old proverb that 'it is better to be safe than sorry.'

"Now this class is developed largely from among those who, being unable to increase their daily income in proportion to their expenses, think they discover a method by which fifty per cent to one hundred per cent may be made on an investment of, say, one thousand dollars or so, and I am told that the best so-called 'sucker lists' are made up from preachers, teachers, and doctors, and from among those ignorant of financial matters, such as working women, widows with proceeds of life insurance policies to invest, and other impractical people who receive legacies. More than half a million of these people lost over one hundred twenty million dollars to 'wild cat' schemes which were uncovered by the post office inspectors last year, and this probably was not half the losses due to such causes. I believe it is our duty to protect these people by persistent education, the result of which will undoubtedly save thousands a year in deposits to savings banks."

PITTSBURGH CHAPTER

By J. M. LUTHER SECRETARY

The Pittsburgh Chapter year opened on October 8, 1912, with an open meeting, entertainment and Dutch lunch. The auditorium and headquarters were filled to overflowing. President B. O. Hill in his initial address appealed to the members for their co-operation in making this a banner year, and the chairmen of the various committees outlined their work for the year, reporting progress already made. The evening was one of enjoyment and good fellowship, marked by no little enthusiasm by all.

On October 12th, we were honored in having over one hundred and fifty members of the Cleveland (Ohio) Chapter as our guests. They arrived about noon on a special train, and remained with us over Sunday. Saturday afternoon was given over to athletic contests, and the evening to a banquet at the Fort Pitt Hotel, after which all adjourned to the Grand Theatre, where a special performance in honor of our guests was given. Sunday was spent in sight-seeing and attending a recital at the Carnegie Music Hall. We enjoyed their visit and all seemed to have had a pleasant time.

On the evening of December 3d, we expect to have United States Treasurer Lee McClung as our guest at a banquet, after which he will address the Chapter, and on December 17th, we expect to have Comptroller of the Currency Lawrence O. Murray with us. We are looking forward to these two evenings with great expectations.

The Pittsburgh Chapter is scheduled for a return debate with the Cincinnati (Ohio) Chapter, on February 12, 1913, to be held in Cincinnati, for which great preparations are being made. Pittsburgh Chapter won in the debate held here last winter, which proved one of the best drawing cards of the season. The subject for discussion has not yet been announced, but whatever it may be, Pittsburgh will endeavor to keep up its reputation and make it worth while.

It was hoped that a debate could have been arranged with the Chicago Chapter last winter, but on account of the lateness of the season when the matter was taken up, it was abandoned. We trust that arrangements can be made this year. A debate between the Chicago and Pittsburgh Chapters should prove of unusual interest.

The educational program that has been arranged this year, we believe to be the best in our history. Each year we endeavor to improve on the past; our instructors are the best that can be had, and are of national reputation.

Those in attendance at our weekly lectures are a unit in expressing their satisfaction, and our meetings are unusually well attended. Our educational committee deserves great credit for the interest they have taken in their work. They have succeeded in providing a course that appeals to bank men in all branches of the profession.

Falling in line with the movement to provide a post graduate course for those who have obtained their Institute certificates, and for those who wish to go deeper into the study of finance, the Pittsburgh Chapter has organized the Chapter Forum which has adopted the course of study as outlined by the American Institute of Banking. We sincerely look forward to this branch of Institute work for great returns.

Pittsburgh Chapter is also publishing a magazine called "Chapter Clearings," devoted to the interests of the Chapter, and which is a factor of considerable importance in retaining the interest of inactive members, and stimulating those who are active.

MEMPHIS CHAPTER NEWS

E. L. Rice, vice-president of the Bank of Commerce and Trust Co., Memphis, Tenn., addressed the Memphis Chapter recently on the requirements of a bank clerk. Following are some of his remarks:

Recently there was organized in New York a society for the Promotion of Efficiency. I would suggest that every bank clerk might adopt this as his slogan, to work with the view of becoming more efficient in his labor, to fit himself more effectively to handle the problems which present themselves, and I know of nothing which will more assist him than this constant interchange of ideas with his fellow clerks, which the American Institute of Banking affords. It is possible I may be able to offer some suggestions which may be of benefit to some one here, and if I can, I will be amply repaid.

My banking experience began a great many years ago, probably before many of you had seen the light of day, before adding machines had made their appearance, and typewriters were few, when all bank work was done with pen and pencil, when co-operation between banks was unheard of, and everyone was for himself, and cared nothing for his neighbor. Since that time great strides have been made in every line of business, and the banking business has not been behind. During all of this time the efficient bank clerk has always had the advantage over the inefficient. There may be times when it seems that "pull" in one sense or another will give some the advantage, but I believe that the time will come when the efficient clerk will win, if he only has the patience and perseverance to continue his work. And here I would like to say that I think a young man should not spend too much time in the banking business unless he expects to make it his life work. After he has decided on this, he can make a success of it, if he will devote his energies to the work.

There are a great many things which are necessary to make a successful bank clerk. In the first place, I will mention "work." He must be absolutely fearless when it comes. He must not only not shirk, but he must always be ready for it. I use the word "must" advisedly. I have never known a bank clerk who ever amounted to anything if he feared extra work, if he always whined about it being another's work. In order to prepare himself for advancement, he is necessarily bound to do other work than his own, to familiarize himself with the work of another, so that he can take the place of that other when he is advanced or retires.

Another qualification which I will mention as necessary is courtesy, and when I say courtesy, I do not mean pleasant treatment of customers alone, but I think a bank clerk should try to be pleasant at all times and in all places to everyone he comes in contact with. His influence can be much more far-reaching than he can possibly imagine. How does he know when someone who may have only a little of this world's goods may speak a word for him which may change his whole life? Small things frequently influence great things in the banking world as well as in other lines.

Another qualification is accuracy. In this life no man can live to himself alone. We are all dependent upon others, and while the work of a bank has been systematized so that one clerk's error does not work as much hardship on as many people as it did years ago, still he must avoid careless, slipshod methods if he expects to do efficient work. Do not understand me to mean that I would expect you to be perfect, for I know we will all make errors. What I do mean is that you should so safeguard your work as to minimize your chances of making errors, and to use care and caution.

You must, in order to attain "efficiency," have a "sane mind in a sound body." No bank clerk can give effective work to his institution if he spends his leisure time in excesses. He must care for his body in order that his mind may be clear to handle the work as it comes to him.

There can be no effect without a cause. As a general summing up, I may say a sound, healthy body, with a clear mind, a desire for work, an unselfish courtesy, an unerring accuracy, are some of the things which will help toward the "promotion of efficiency."

CLEVELAND CHAPTER

By C. W. STANSBURY

Cleveland Chapter held its regular meeting in the chapter rooms in the Rose building on Tuesday evening, November 26th. Applications received brought our membership up to 199 and our total membership up to 400. Of this we justly are proud. C. R. Megerth, office attorney of the Guardian Savings and Trust Company, read a paper on the "Negotiable Instruments Law," starting with the demand and reasons for such an act. This was the first of six papers to be read at the meetings this winter, each one being by a different officer. Following our policy of having at least a part of our meetings participated in by the boys themselves, W. T. Walford, receiving teller in the Bank of Commerce, N. A., read a paper on the "Receiving Teller's Department." This was followed by an informal debate as to whether banks should make collection charges on out-of-town items accepted as cash.

Our law class, which is studying the A. I. B. course in banking and finance, is in a flourishing condition and is well attended. Meetings are held every Tuesday evening in the chapter rooms at 6:45. At this hour it is possible to hold class meetings and regular bi-monthly meetings on the same date.

CHICAGO CHAPTER, AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF BANKING

W. W. WALTON

J. Paul Goode, Ph. D. of the University of Chicago, gave a stereopticon lecture before the chapter on "Hawaii—A Geographical Interpretation," last Tuesday evening, December 10th. Professor Goode's lecture was not only interesting, but educational as well.

The Hawaiian Islands are composed of a group of many islands, the more important being Hawaii, Maui, Molokai, Oahu, Kauai and Nihau. A portion of the island of Molokai has been set aside to be used as a leper colony. These islands are the result of volcanic eruptions, the base of some of these islands being five miles deep in the sea. The volcanos in these islands differ from those in other parts of the world in that their lava is molten stone and they do not have eruptions of a violent nature.

The Hawaiian Islands without question is the Land of Paradise; the temperature is never lower than 54 degrees or higher than 80; bathing is always in season; the winds always blow from the northeast and at about the same velocity at all times, and the soil produces in abundance; there is no poisonous plant or animal life on these islands. They are also known as the cross roads of the Pacific, all vessels now making Honolulu their port.

These islands are the result of volcanic eruptions, and in recent years there have been many smaller islands gradually appearing from time to time until now there are a great many of these small islands. The more important islands all show evidence of volcanic process, and the lava caused by these volcanos has made the coast of these islands so ragged that it is impossible to land at very many points.

The natives of the islands are now becoming quite extinct, owing to the vast importation of foreign labor, which has become quite a serious question, and at the present time the natives represent the minor portion of the inhabitants of the Hawaiian Islands.

The chief industry of the islands is the raising of sugar cane, although pineapple raising is becoming quite an industry and it is stated that the largest pineapple canning factory in the world is located in these islands. Views of fruits and vegetation of the islands were quite inviting and those who dislike the cold winters undoubtedly had a longing to live in such a beautiful country where climatic conditions are so ideal.

John P. Scanlan, of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank, favored the chapter with several vocal selections before Professor Goode made his lecture.

Friday night, December 20th, will be ladies' night, which will be in the nature of a musical and dance, and everyone attending is assured that he will have a real pleasant evening.

The Banquet Committee now has arrangements well under way for the twelfth annual banquet to be held in the Hotel LaSalle Saturday evening, January 18, 1913.

WINNEBAGO BANKER SENTENCED

Blue Earth, Minn., December 11th.—Harry W. Parker was given an indeterminate sentence to Stillwater prison by Judge James H. Quinn this afternoon. He told the court he had repaid the Winnebago bank the $2,000 which he confessed he had embezzled, with interest, and said he was quite sure he could account for every dollar of the bank's funds which now appear to be missing. Parker has promised to do all he can to straighten out the tangled affairs of the State Bank of Commerce at Winnebago, and will be allowed to return to his old home in the custody of the sheriff to examine the books and accounts and throw what light he can upon them. He will not be taken to prison right away.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.'S USEFUL BOOKS

Among the useful books brought out by Doubleday, Page & Co., late in November and early in December are the following:

"Practical Cooking and Serving," by Janet McKenzie Hill, new edition.

"Composition," by Arthur Wesley Dow.

"The Music Lover's Cyclopaedia," by Rupert Hughes.

"The Garden and Farm Almanac" and "The Business Almanac and Investor's Guide" for 1913.

Each of these books has a special field, for which it was written as the result of a specific demand.

A charter has been issued to the Selma (Cal.) National Bank, capital $50,000, which succeeds the Farmers Bank of Selma.

B. B. Harris, for many years agent for the Illinois Central at Colfax, Ill., has resigned his position there and will become the cashier of a bank at Lafayette, Ill.

the George F. Orde theory of roping him to a substantial tree.

MAYBE you do not know that Louisiana was the first state to encourage a strictly farm bank?

AT the last general election there was adopted an amendment to the constitution of Louisiana exempting from taxation for a period of twenty years companies organized for the sole purpose of loaning money on farm lands at interest not to exceed 6 per cent net to the borrower.

THESE trust companies will be under the supervision of the state bank examiner, and will market Louisiana real estate securities in the money centers.

OF course we expect that "Jim" Wheeler will file a priority claim on the plan if Macfadden of North Dakota doesn't beat him to it. They've got the habit.

YES, and we're with them all along the line. The northwest carries the back-to-the-farm banner all right.

ONE of our good private banker friends has sent in a vindicating sort of circular, printed in red ink. Hope his boasted surplus isn't entered on the ledger in the same color.

THE bank is over at 51st and Halsted and the circular tells "Why this bank has and retains the confidence of this community and its large patronage." Please imagine "Bank" and "Confidence" to be in large caps.

FURTHERMORE, Charles Detrick, who is president, cashier, etc., explains in the same lurid color "Why it (his "bank") is one of the safest, soundest, and most substantial banks in Chicago." All this in red ink.

DETRICK claims to have loaned ten millions and "has not sustained a cent's loss." This will make J. E. Blunt, H. S. Henschen and other down-town bankers very jealous.

THEN in still redder ink, if possible, Detrick concludes "I challenge any (he means any other) bank in the State of Illinois to come up to this mark of efficiency." So do we.

WE shall refuse to be bound by the bull moose conference report unless John L. of Hoopston prepared the resolutions. He knows how to put in those little "saving clauses" of the pure I. B. A. brand.

IF any banker in Illinois dreams that the private bank revelations now going on in county and federal courts in Chicago are not being printed with "scare" heads in every newspaper in the country he will have a sad awakening when he counts the final cost. The state is the sufferer, next to the poor depositor.

THEY tell us that the new governor of Illinois is trying to convince Irving Shuman that the real path to glory lies in the office of superintendent of banks for this state and not in the comptroller's office at Washington.

MURRAY hasn't left much undone that is desirable and the bank supervision field in Illinois is very promising. It is said that Governor Dunne and Mr. Shuman hold twin opinions on the question of supervision. Then we may get a "Blue Sky" law which would help some.

ILLINOIS would be well served if Mr. Shuman would take up the work of the banking department at Springfield. The state auditor is declared in on the deal.

ON seeing a fine picture of Alexander D. Campbell in the Texas Bankers Record, J. W. Hoopes is said to have wired:

"Introduce me to your photographer. I want to see if he can do as much for me."

HARRIS TRUST of this city not only declared the regular dividend of 3% at its recent meeting, but also declared an extra of 5%. Both dividends are payable January 2d to stockholders of record at the close of business December 18th.

IT never was our intention to get Colonel Farnsworth into difficulties by referring in this department to the hotel situation at Boston. It was stated in a paragraph a couple of weeks ago that the headquarters hotel at Boston had reserved three hundred rooms for the A. B. A. Col. Farnsworth now believes that nearly every banker in the United States reads THE CHICAGO BANKER, for he has had more than enough of applications to fill the three hundred rooms from those who saw the notice.

THE information came to us from Boston direct but failed to state that the three hundred rooms in question had been placed at the disposal of the hotel committee of the Boston bankers, which committee is undertaking to make assignments even for members of council and officers of the association. This will let Col. Farnsworth out of a corner on the room question such as was unjustly raised at Detroit.

IT will be something of an innovation to have all of the reservations handled direct by the committee, but probably it is the correct way to do it. The official reservation list for the association officers and members of council will occupy very much less than half of the three hundred rooms mentioned. The hotel committee has asked for a list of officials entitled to reservations, which indicates they are going to attend to the whole matter.

LETTERS are being received by personal friends of P. C. Kauffman, secretary of the Washington Bankers Association, stating that he is back at his desk in the Fidelity Trust and on his way to complete recovery. Mr. Kauffman underwent a very serious illness which necessitated the first layoff in twenty years for that active individual.

A LOSS of 18 points in Union Pacific since the supreme court's decision separating it from the Southern Pacific would indicate that there is to be trouble in securing a successful San Francisco outlet. If the supreme court decision will not allow the Union Pacific to use the Central Pacific lines it will be "hung up" in a business way for some time.

PASSENGERS on the Chicago-Los Angeles convention special will remember the long and inexcusable wait which the Union Pacific gave them at Denver and the never-to-be-forgotten attempt to haul seventeen Pullman cars with one engine over the mountainous route.

These same passengers will enjoy the present situation, especially if they have not been owners of U. P. shares.

SOME times we almost forget that there is a secretaries' section in the American Bankers Association and for the simple reason that these systematic gentlemen conduct their business in such a way that it attracts very little general attention. They have an arbitrary way of arranging their program by assigning subjects to speakers without their knowledge and consent in advance.

FOR this very reason some of the very best productions offered at a national convention come up through the secretaries' section. These lively gentlemen make an attempt to settle all mooted questions for the year at this annual conference.

RUMOR now has it that under a plan being formulated by the officers of this section it will take on a new degree of usefulness as a part of the great American Bankers Association. Secretary W. B. Harrison of Oklahoma, is sending out letters to the chairmen of all the principal committees in the A. B. A., asking for suggestions as to how the usefulness of the secretaries' organization may be increased. It is said to be his intention to bulletin all replies to all of the state secretaries with the request that the matter be referred to the various state executive councils and committees so that uniformity of action can be established.

A SYSTEM of interchange of information between state secretaries is being established by the issuing of bulletins from Secretary Harrison's office. All state secretaries who are loyal to the section will furnish material for these bulletins by sending in all information and suggestions gathered to Mr. Harrison.

THIS new method of operation is being carefully worked out and President W. C. Macfadden of the section is said to believe that it will be complete and comprehensive and will promote and establish uniformity of all state associations.

SOME of the more enthusiastic supporters of this new plan believe that when it has been successfully carried out, it eventually will lead to the re-organization of state associations into an association of state clearing houses. At least this feature of the work has had serious consideration and considerable discussion.

IT would not be surprising if the matter would go on and later result in the establishment of a state reserve association under control of the state clearing houses, legalizing certificates issued by such associations against deposits of approved collateral securities. This may sound a trifle ambitious but to those who have been looking into the matter, it has been apparent that the best brains and highest integrity of the banking business can be found in the working ranks of the state organizations over which the secretaries themselves maintain such a great influence. CASHIER.

CONVERTS TO STATE BANK

H. V. Moore Banking and Trust Company of Monticello, Ill., has by action of its stockholders, converted to the Moore State Bank. This is one of the strong down-state banking firms, located in a prosperous agricultural district.

ISSUES APPEAL TO FARMERS

G. A. Ryther, vice-president of the Live Stock Exchange National of Chicago, has issued an appeal to all farmers to engage actively in the live stock industry, which offers better inducements than ever before.

"THUS two vexing problems for bankers have been well settled long ago. All the usual departments are maintained in the association and the agricultural committee is about to launch a state-wide fight against the boll weevil and to encourage scientific farming, with especial attention to soil and seed studies and intensive cultivation.

"W. P. G. HARDING, president of the First National of Birmingham, is behind a movement to establish a million-dollar farmers' loan and trust company which is also backed by the Alabama Land Congress. A like company is in actual process of organization at Montgomery, headed by a number of the state's leading business men.

"THE object of these concerns is to meet what President Taft has pronounced to be the crying need of the nation—long time loans to farmers, at reasonable rates, on real estate securities.

"I STARTED one of these companies on a small scale last year to operate in two counties only, St. Clair and Talladega. The first year's business was very successful as appeared from the annual statement of the Bankers Investment Company published last week.

"W. W. CRAWFORD, president of the American Trust and Savings Bank, Birmingham, is smiling from ear to ear these days at the prospect of soon moving into his new quarters. The twenty-one upper stories of the new American building was turned over to tenants in October, but the banking room, occupying the entire lower floor as well as basement, has been delayed in completion. The bank now expects to move into its permanent home before the holidays. It will be as fine as anything in the South.

"JAMES R. STEVENS, clearing house examiner for New Orleans, is said to be a candidate for comptroller of the currency. He will have very strong and enthusiastic backing from the South. For a number of years Mr. Stevens was the executive of a bank in his home city, Huntsville, Ala. He then served as national bank examiner for Alabama and New Orleans. His experience peculiarly equips him for the post, as it has brought him in close touch with manufacturing interests in the Birmingham district, with import and export business at the ports of New Orleans and Mobile, and with agricultural and business interests generally.

"THE South has not had a comptroller in twenty years and, if any change is to be made, feels that it is entitled to the place. Mr. Stevens will make a strong bid for it, as many of his supporters will be found close to the president and to the big committee chairman in the new house and senate, most of whom will come from states where the Stevens influence is strongest. Birmingham, Underwood's home city, will be behind Stevens to a man, as will all the banks of Alabama and many others from the cotton belt."

ALL of above quotations are from Mr. Tilton. Now for other fields.

IT may be supposed by the uninitiated that the secretary of a state bankers association takes a lay-off during the winter season. Such is not the case and it will be the business of this department of THE CHICAGO BANKER to keep those gentlemen stirred up and to report proceedings.

TAKE the supposedly sleepy old state of Pennsylvania, where D. S. Kloss of Tyrone presides at the desk. He became secretary to the Pennsylvania Bankers Association in 1898 and has been a continuous performance ever since. Under his administration the membership is three times what it was in 1898.

FURTHERMORE, the Pennsylvania association is in good standing with those of other states and always has a surplus in its bank account. It was among the very first of all the states to adopt a group system and it attributes to that fact its splendid standing of to-day.

THE Pennsylvania association refunds to each group forty per cent of all the dues paid in by the members residing within that group, which makes the separate units practically independent so far as funds are concerned. The returns which the state association get for this forty per cent donation is reflected in the well-being of the association at large.

A STATE convention in the Keystone commonwealth is not an accident. Their good programs come by the route of grave thought and successful arrangement. It already has been decided that the principal event for next year's convention will be a heavy-weight discussion on that much mooted banking question: Resolved, that national banks be given the powers of trust companies. It might not be a bad idea for other states to vary the currency discussions from previous conventions by taking up this particular one.

PRESIDENT A. S. BEYMER of the Pennsylvania bankers is cashier of the Keystone National at Pittsburgh. He has a strong and able personality and brings much ability into the management and affairs of the association. An observing Pennsylvania banker has prophesied that Mr. Beymer's administration will be one of progress.

COL. J. S. AISTHORPE, chairman of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association, spent two days of the week in Chicago making arrangements for the annual meeting of the council, which has been fixed for Wednesday, January 22d, 1913.

IT has been arranged to hold the business session in the afternoon, with a dinner at six o'clock in the evening, both events taking place at the Congress Hotel. Col. Aisthorpe has secured a "top notch" to address the banquet entertainment, but is not yet ready to announce his name.

THE Colonel can be depended upon to get the affair entirely away from the ordinary meeting of this kind. He will have the program printed in plenty of time to be circulated so as to stir up a full attendance.

SECRETARY ARCH B. DAVIS of the Kentucky Bankers Association is not off hunting alligators in Florida. He spent the first week of the present month going over the affairs of the state association with the newly elected president, J. E. Buckingham of Paintsville. It was decided between President Buckingham and Secretary Davis to hold a meeting in Louisville the latter part of January or the first of February, to be attended by all group chairmen and secretaries. Kentucky bankers are bound to develop the group system to its highest capacity and the Louisville conference will be directed towards meeting the situation so far as group meetings are concerned, in an attempt to make them more profitable to the members. Mr. Davis is not prepared to give out details at the present time.

IT also was decided between the two officials named to bring before the next meeting of the executive council the subject of a "Blue Sky" law for Kentucky such as they have in Kansas. The association has given direction that such a bill be prepared by the council and its passage urged by the next general assembly.

A LITTLE note from W. C. Macfadden of the North Dakota Bankers Association, said: "I think 'Mainly About Banks and Bankers' is the first part of your paper read by every banker in the country."

SECRETARY P. W. HALL of the Iowa Bankers Association admits that he reads "Mainly About Banks and Bankers" even before he reads Mr. Jarnagin's splendid Iowa letter, and always before he takes up the general news of the paper.

SECRETARY ANDREW SMITH of the Indiana Bankers Association testifies to his enjoyment of "Mainly About Banks and Bankers" and concludes a very friendly letter with this: "You know I think THE CHICAGO BANKER the best paper of its kind in the world."

THERE are three bills which Secretary Smith and his association are going to try to have passed at a coming session of the legislature. They are the uniform negotiable instrument bill, the Kansas "Blue Sky" law and the proposed law relative to false statements to obtain credit. The Indiana Bankers Association regards these three proposed laws as very important to the banking interests of that state. The association is asking the help and co-operation of every banker in the state to get the measures through the legislature. Each banker is specifically asked to take a personal interest in it.

W. J. CHURCHMAN, who ten years ago was cashier of the Capital National at Indianapolis, but who has been absent from the city for a long time, has returned to Indianapolis and is taking steps toward organizing a new state bank in that city.

SECRETARY W. FRANK KEYSER of the Missouri Bankers Association, was completely taken by surprise when he was presented with a valuable gold watch at Charleston, Mo., at a meeting of Group 12.

E. B. Clare-Avery, assistant cashier of the Merchants-Laclede National of St. Louis, made the speech of presentation on behalf of the "Flying Squadron." This useful present serves as a token of the high regard in which the popular secretary of the M. B. A. is held by the bankers who attended the recent Missouri group meeting in Keyser's special.

IF the market break keeps up, that is, if stocks keep going down, put in an order for something good, way below where you expect to get it. If you get it you make a pile. If you don't, you lose nothing.

THEY do say that the Pennsylvania is trying to sell Norfolk and Western to avoid government attention. Every little helps to beat down prices.

WARE & LELAND, and you can bank on their opinion, say that you should "reduce holdings on strong spots." And that's all they do say.

KIRBY "savings bank" was long on promises and short on performance. It issued buttons, mirrors and pocket banks for dimes and promised one dollar to the bearer when he brought in a new depositor. The new depositor got a dollar too. Everything else went to the Doctor.

B. F. HARRIS and T. R. were both in town on Monday. So was Joseph Chapman, but then he's no bull moose and doesn't count.

CHAPMAN was en route to Cleveland to tell the chamber of commerce how to keep the boy on the farm. He has abandoned

R. C. Keller

Rumors were current in Chicago on Friday to the effect that R. C. Keller, vice-president and cashier of the Colonial Trust and Savings, is to be comptroller of the currency under President-elect Wilson.

JOHN BURIANEK FOR BANK EXAMINER

Friends of John Burianek, cashier of the Peoples Savings Bank, Cedar Rapids, are pushing him for a national bank examinership. It was mainly owing to Mr. Burianek that the Peoples attained its great growth and erected the finest "country" bank building in the state. Recently the bank was sold to new owners and Burianek will retire January 15th. He was asked to remain, and likewise was offered other positions in Cedar Rapids. His friends hope to land him as an examiner, for he is just the kind of timber Comptroller Murray is looking for. He is young, ambitious and experienced.

George E. Allen

Educational Director for the A. I. B. George E. Allen of New York, was in Chicago this week en route to St. Louis on chapter business. Allen represents the farmers' committee of the New York Bankers Association, and is likely to succeed Chas. R. Frost as N. W. Conference secretary or to become secretary of the A. B. A. committee on agriculture and education. Either position would be in able, kindly hands.

ADMINISTRATIVE COMMITTEE MEETING IN JANUARY

The meeting of the A. B. A. administrative committee which was postponed last month on account of a temporary illness of President C. H. Huttig, likely will be called for St. Louis in January. F. O. Watts, when in Chicago recently, gladly told of Mr. Huttig's improvement. He has resumed his daily visits to the bank.

J. A. McCormick

James A. McCormick, vice-president of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company, was elected treasurer of the Sanitary District of Chicago on Thursday. He succeeds Geo. M. Reynolds, who acted for the late republican administration. The members of the board wanted to name Andrew J. Graham, but Mr. Graham said: "Ordinarily, I might take it, but not from my friend Reynolds." At the same time, Mr. Reynolds urged Mr. Graham to disregard him in the matter. 'Twas ever thus between men of class.

J. B. FORGAN RUNS THIS BANK

No Chicago banker should be called upon to refute the foolish stories set afloat by the Pujo committee in Washington. All the West resents the braggart claims that any New York financier, or bunch of them, controls Chicago's three largest banks. Mr.

ST. LOUIS

F. A. CRANDALL
CHICAGO

Mr. Watts is vice-president of the Third National of St. Louis and an ex-president of the American Bankers Association. He spoke at the banquet held by the reserve city bankers last Saturday evening, endorsing the objects of the organization and calling attention to the opportunity of the association to co-operate with the A. B. A.

Mr. Crandall, who is vice-president of the National City Bank of Chicago, was chairman of the local committee having in charge details relating to the meetings. Mr. Crandall presided at the sessions of the association and discharged his duties in an able manner. He represents the American Institute of Banking on the executive council of the A. B. A.

Hitchcock of the First National listened to a daily reporter's tale of woe and curtly said: "Huh! J. B. Forgan runs this bank."

The same was said less briefly for the Continental and Commercial National by Mr. Van Vechten and by Mr. Mitchell for the Illinois Trust. The men who "run" the Chicago banks live in Chicago and sit in the president's chair.

LIABILITIES $25,400; ASSETS 3 CENTS

How a small bank was started on $1,000, the principal drawn out when deposits furnished enough money to do business on, and how the institution failed fifteen months later with 3 cents assets and $25,400 liabilities in deposits, was told Municipal Judge Newcomer on Thursday.

St. Lawrence Chandler, cashier, told how the Cosmopolitan Bank operated at 250 Washington Street (old number). He sued for collection of a $500 note from Morris Siegel. Siegel said he gave the note to bolster the bank's assets, receiving nothing in return, and the suit was dismissed.

Samuel A. Bell of Green Bay, Wis.; Milo F. Lewis, a Chicago lawyer, and Chandler started the Cosmopolitan Bank in September, 1909. Chandler said the two other partners left him alone and soon after he found the bank had no assets. Then it closed.

COMMERCIAL PAPER HOUSE EXPANDS

Hathaway, Smith, Folds & Co., one of Chicago's most highly rated commercial paper houses, is to open a branch in San Francisco to the better care for its growing Pacific Coast business. Frederick A. Collmann from the Chicago office will be in charge.

IMPORTANT COMMITTEE MEETING

All bankers who are members of Subdivision II, banks and bankers, ways and means committee, Chicago Association of Commerce, should be present at the meeting of the committee to be held in the main dining room of the LaSalle Hotel, Monday, December 23d, at 12.15, to elect members of the ways and means committee for the coming year.

JAMES B. FORGAN IN NEW YORK

James B. Forgan, president of the First National of this city, is in New York this week. He expects to return to the city on Monday.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

W. E. C. CLIFFORD, assistant cashier of the First National of Champaign, has been appointed assistant treasurer of the state of Illinois by William Ryan, Jr., the treasurer-elect. Mr. Clifford has been with the First National for seven years as paying teller and assistant cashier and is considered one of the most capable young men in the state, having had wide business experience as well as training in the bankers' field.

M R. CLIFFORD can congratulate himself that he did not allow himself to be led astray by the blandishments of his senior officer, B. F. Harris, who proudly wore an elaborate set of "Bull Moose" horns during the recent campaign.

O. L. HISER, treasurer of the Illinois Bankers Association, has sent out a letter calling attention to the fact that the governmental authorities are becoming quite active in this state in making an over-zealous application of the Illinois tax law to the banks. Mr. Hiser understands that bankers generally received the circulars from the Internal Revenue department, but that many of them appeared to take no interest in the situation.

T HE joker which Mr. Hiser points out in the decision of the department at Washington relates to the form of making returns. The Washington authorities claim that deductions heretofore made on account of state tax should not be allowed because this tax is levied under the Illinois statutes against the stockholders and not against the bank.

T HE government ruling, according to Mr. Hiser, is based upon a part of Section 35 of the Illinois state revenue law regarding the assessment of state and national banks. Mr. Hiser contends that it is a well founded rule in law that statutes should be construed as a whole and not by parts of sections. Under such a construction he believes that the state would lose its power to tax Illinois, non-resident stockholders who thus would escape taxation. What Mr. Hiser has to say about the subject will be found elsewhere in this issue and these paragraphs merely have been intended to call attention thereto.

J OHN C. HARRINGTON has been elected cashier of the Daly Bank & Trust Company of Anaconda to succeed Stockton Veazey, who goes to the First National at Great Falls as vice-president.

M R. HARRINGTON has been with the Daly Trust as assistant cashier for two years since his return to Anaconda from Chicago where he was employed with a bank for the previous three years. President E. J. Bowman looks upon Mr. Harrington as one of the coming bankers of his state.

I T has been announced that W. G. Edens of this city will appear on at least two Pacific state convention programs the coming season. Editor Baker of the Pacific Banker suggests that it be made unanimous and Mr. Edens be invited to speak at all the Pacific state conventions on the "Back-to-the-Farm" movement which is an engrossing subject out there.

S ECRETARY C. S. WEBSTER of the Vermont Bankers Association announces his annual meeting for February 21st, at Rutland. The Vermont organization is one of the most alive of the younger associations.

T HE GRANITE TRUST COMPANY, a new incorporation, will open for business January 3d at Hardwick, Vermont. No particulars as to the official list as yet.

S ECRETARY P. C. KAUFFMAN of the Washington Bankers Association has been one of the most active men in his state in contending for state supervision of private banks. He takes a deep interest in the Illinois situation and makes the following comment:

"I WANT to congratulate you on the splendid fight you are making in favor of supervision and incorporation of private banks. We have the same fight on here. A few years ago we succeeded in getting a section added to our bank bill, providing that all private bankers should be compelled to advertise themselves in their stationery and over the bank as "private bankers," and should not use the word Bank, Savings Bank or Trust Company or any similar designation, unless they were incorporated and came under the supervision of the state bank examiner. We trust to finally succeed in having the law so amended as to compel private bankers to submit to inspection and supervision the same as those that are incorporated."

S ECRETARY W. W. BOWMAN of the Kansas Bankers Association has announced his 1913 dates as Tuesday and Wednesday, May 6th and 7th, for the holding of the twenty-sixth annual convention at Hutchinson. A strong program is in preparation.

T HEY are having a little of bother in the state of Washington with a gang of swindlers operating all over the state with forged drafts. Secretary Kauffman has sent out a list of the names of the institutions drawn upon as well as a list of the names of the institutions purporting to have issued drafts. All of the information contained in the bulletin was furnished by the Wm. J. Burns National Detective Agency employed by the state.

I RVING SHUMAN, to rest up from his political exertions in the recent campaign, is off on a brief trip through the great Northwest and will make short stops in Colorado, Utah and California. There is a strong probability of Mr. Shuman being placed in charge of the banking department of the Illinois auditor's office under the incoming administration.

J. W. LYDER, cashier of the Northern National at Duluth, has made a little kick intimating that Duluth should be more conspicuous on the map so far as banking news is concerned than it is at present. Immediate steps are being taken to rectify this situation for no other points in the Northwest seem to be growing more rapidly in banking importance than Duluth and its side partner, Superior.

D EPOSITS in Duluth banks, both national and state, are growing as they never have grown before. This is shown by the last call whereby both state and national banks reported on the same date.

T HE total deposits of the Duluth banks on that day amounted to thirty millions which is the largest that financial center ever held at one time. The state banks held less than one million dollars of this amount, showing the strength of the nationals to be paramount.

O THER banks write in to tell us that North Dakota and South Dakota should be more conspicuous in the banking news of the day and we hereby tender the use of our columns

Washington Bankers Indorse the Lever Bill

Washington, D. C., December 18th.—Having listened to an explanation of the Lever agricultural extension bill, as presented by its author, Representative Asbury F. Lever, of South Carolina, the Bankers Association of the District of Columbia, at its meeting at the New Willard Hotel this week, with the leading financiers of the city present, including the directors as well as the active officials of practically every banking institution in the national capital, unanimously indorsed the measure, and named a committee to urge its adoption by the senate at once, it having already passed the house of representatives.

Soon after Mr. Lever had taken his seat, having reviewed the federal attitude toward the "greatest profession," pointed out the necessity for inauguration of intensive farming, and complimented Secretary of Agriculture Wilson for his masterful upbuilding of the Department of Agriculture, Charles J. Bell, president of the American Security and Trust Company, introduced the following resolution:

Text of Resolutions Adopted

"Resolved, That the Bankers Association of the District of Columbia, realizing the great benefit which the whole country will derive from the extension of scientific education to include the farming industry, and realizing the interest which bankers elsewhere, individually and through their state associations, are taking in this subject, unanimously indorse the Lever agricultural extension bill, which passed the house of representatives of the United States this year without a dissenting vote, and has been approved by the committee of the United States senate.

"Resolved, That this association urge the senate of the United States to enact this measure into law without delay, to the end that state legislatures meeting in January, 1913, may take immediate steps to secure the benefits of the law for their own states."

The resolution unanimously was adopted, and a committee composed of Mr. Bell as chairman, W. V. Cox, John Joy Edson, George W. White, and himself, was appointed by H. H. McKee, the president, to wait upon the senate and advocate the measure.

"Doctors" for the Farms

His bill, Mr. Lever said, is built upon the idea of furnishing to every agricultural county in the United States a trained man who will be to the farmer what the physician is to the family—one to whom the agriculturist may go for advice as to methods to pursue to correct the evils which beset his land.

To accomplish this purpose, the measure proposes a federal appropriation of $3,000,000, to be expended over a period of ten years, with the states of the Union subscribing an equal amount. Belgium and other European countries, the speaker declared, through the introduction of intensive farming methods, are producing from two and one-half to three times as much per acre as America. Were this country to approach this European scale, he added, it would be equivalent to the discovery of a colony equal in size to the present territory of the United States.

Special session of the Bankers Association of the District of Columbia called by Secretary John Poole to hear Congressman Asbury F. Lever of South Carolina in detailed explanation

"Agriculture Greatest Asset"

"Agriculture is this nation's greatest asset," he said, "the agricultural products being worth approximately $41,000,000,000, or practically four times as much as the capitalization of the nation's railroads, and probably four times as much as the total capitalization of its national banks.

"Should the farmers of the country determine to go upon a strike for twelve months, every bank in the nation would be compelled within a few brief months to close its doors; not a railroad would be able to turn a wheel, and every city in the land would be, within six months, upon the verge of starvation."

"This problem of agriculture," he continued, "which many of the unthinking are inclined to laugh and sneer at, is the most important up for solution at the hands of the American people. The high cost of living is a vital question for the people of the city. It will never be solved until we have solved the problem of production of food and raiment, and reached a more direct route for the passage of these products from the man who produces them to him who consumes.

Conditions Near Washington

"How many of you bankers are aware that within a radius of 500 miles of the national capital there are living 44,200,000 people—48 per cent of the country's population? More than 65 per cent of this vast number are non-producers of food and raiment. You bankers are the intermediaries by which the producers are made to produce, and the consumer to secure his necessities at prices within his reach.

"In 1830 more than 70 per cent of the nation's population was living in the rural districts; to-day but 53 per cent of the population is rural. In other words, nearly half of the population is not producing food and clothing. The farmer struggles to educate his boys and girls, and they in turn go to the city. Our political doctors are telling these young people to go back to the farms. I do not agree unless you are going to guarantee that farm conditions are going to be just as good, just as wholesome, and just as attractive as the conditions which maintain in the cities.

"We sent out bulletins to teach the farmer, but about 99 per cent of them are thrown away, or used to kindle the fire on cold mornings. We then sent out speakers to explain. The farmers did not in many cases take the advice offered. It is not that the farmer is a fool, but that he has been the worst humbugged man in the land. Now to convince the farmer you must demonstrate to him right on the farm. That is what we mean by extensive teaching, talking, writing, and demonstrating.

"The department of agriculture has shown through its demonstration work that we can double production. On 8,000 one-acre plots in South Carolina, cultivated under improved methods, 1,580 pounds of cotton were produced per acre, whereas the average acre yield under the old method was 720 pounds. On 5,000 acre plots scattered throughout the state, an average yield of corn per acre was 38 bushels, whereas the average state yield was 18 bushels. This shows that the time has come when the farmer needs more than strong soil, strong mules, and strong plows. He needs a trained brain. The revision of the tariff, the reformation of the currency are no more important problems—in fact, they do not approach in their possibilities of benefit this problem of agriculture.

Points to Exodus to Canada

"Last year an army of able-bodied farmers from the Northwest emigrated to Canada. Do you realize the economic loss? In antebellum days a negro was valued at $1,000. We must place a valuation of at least $5,000 on each of these farmers. Figure up what the nation lost. The men moved out because western farm lands were too expensive. Under the old system of agriculture they could not secure a proper return on the investment. But why do they go into Canada, I ask, when right here under the dome of the Capitol land may be secured for from $30 to $50 per acre, which is equally as good as any to be found elsewhere?"

America, Mr. Lever declared, has, through its department of agriculture, its state agricultural colleges, and its experiment stations, collected more agricultural data than any nation on the earth. It has failed to get it to the farmer, however, he added. His demonstrators will select plots as different sections throughout each county, and there show to the

COUNCIL COMMITTEE PREPARES PRIVATE BANK BILL

A subcommittee of the council judiciary committee, consisting of Aldermen Mayer, Hazen and McInerney has prepared a draft of a private bank bill which will be recommended for passage to the state legislature. The bill provides for the issuance of certificates by the auditor of state and requires applicants to set forth under oath their financial standing. In large places the minimum capitalization permitted for a private bank is $50,000; in cities of less than 50,000 population the capital need not exceed $25,000 and the total amount of money borrowed from the bank by its owners cannot exceed one-twentieth of their assets invested. The owners also are prohibited from using the money of the depositors for real estate operations or for barter and trade in commodities. The words "bank" or "trust company" can be used only by persons holding a certificate. Persons doing business at the time the law goes into effect will be given three months in which to comply with its provisions.

PLANNING FOR MICHIGAN CONVENTION

Michigan bankers already are beginning to plan for their 1913 convention. A large number of Wolverine bankers were guests of the Lansing Clearing House on Friday of last week at a six-course dinner served in the grill room of the Hotel Downey, at which plans for the next annual convention of the M. B. A. were discussed. B. F. Davis, president of the City National of Lansing and of the state association, presided. G. T. Barker, president of the Home Savings of Kalamazoo, gave the Lansing bankers a number of valuable pointers as to how the bankers ought to be treated when they assemble in Lansing for the next convention. Mr. Barker was chairman of the executive committee which had in charge the entertainment and comfort of the Michigan bankers when they met in Kalamazoo. Remarks were made by J. Edward Rowe, E. S. Porter and John S. Weston, directors of the Chamber of Commerce, promising the hearty co-operation of that organization in the entertainment of the bankers. A committee consisting of the local clearing house board and the presidents of the four banks was named to take charge of definite convention plans. They will select subcommittees and choose the date and look after other details of the convention.

CHICAGO WIRE HOUSES LIGHTEN LOADS

Most Chicago houses report they have generally sold out their lines of long stock, and their customers show little disposition to again enter the market. Nothing develops of an especially encouraging character, though occasionally prices of some securities look temptingly low. There has been no evidence to date of the public entering the market. Indeed, throughout the entire advance in the list no general buying in volume appeared. For some reason the public has held off. It may be automobiles have had more attraction than stocks. Certainly that business has grown larger and has necessarily absorbed a great deal of capital that otherwise might have been invested. The extensive purchases of machines is not fully explained by the transfer of investments in horses and carriages to automobiles. There has been a class of buyers for machines that would not find it convenient to indulge in horses and stables.

HUGE GAIN IN BANKING POWER

The banking power of the United States, as revealed by figures recently made public by comptroller Murray, has more than doubled during the last twelve years. The banking power of the nation, represented by capital, surplus, profits, deposits and circulation, reached during the year the record total of $22,548,707,000, an increase of 5.69 per cent over 1911 and 27.8 per cent over 1908. Since 1900 the banking power has increased 111 per cent; during the last twelve years the number of banks has increased more than 107 per cent, and their volume of business shows an increase of more than 127 per cent. The aggregate capital of eighteen of the national banks represents 16.72 per cent of the total.

DIVIDENDS

Northwest State has declared a quarterly dividend of $1\frac{3}{4}$ per cent, payable January 2d to stock of record December 24th. This increases the annual rate from 6 to 7 per cent and maintains the record of 1 per cent increase each year since 1910. Washington Park National has increased its rate from 6 to 8 per cent and Stockyards Savings from 8 to 12 per cent.

NEW ORLEANS BANK MAY INCREASE CAPITAL

An increase in the capital stock of the Hibernia Bank and Trust Company of New Orleans from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 has been recommended by the board of directors. The proposition will be acted upon at the annual meeting of stockholders January 14, 1913.

Jas. B. Lamberton of Victoria, Ia., has succeeded Wm. Ontjes as cashier of the Sioux Falls (S. D.) Savings Bank. Mr. Ontjes has been advanced to vice-president.

Public Welfare

There are certain utilities that are absolutely necessary for the public welfare. Individuals require food, shelter, and clothing—municipalities require light and transportation. The former are our private necessities; the latter, our public necessities.

For this reason the companies that supply public utilities receive revenue from a dependable source, little affected during periods of industrial depressions. With the natural growth in population, the market for public utilities is also a constantly increasing one.

Send for our circular giving a selected list of public utilities securities to yield at present prices an average income of 5.75%.

J. N. Dolley Replies to Investment Bankers Association

My attention has been called to the fact that the Investment Bankers Association of America, in convention assembled at New York City, criticised the Kansas "Blue Sky" law as being paternalistic and against the interests of the investment banker. It was claimed by some at that convention that it was based on the wrong principles and that it should not be left to the judgment of any certain man or set of men to pass upon the prospects of any kind of investment covered by the Kansas "Blue Sky" law, and it further was insinuated that it should be arranged in such a manner that applicants could make the proper application, pay a certain fee and secure the permit, without the supervising department taking the time thoroughly to investigate the applicants or the securities they might handle; or, in other words, make the law a revenue producer, rather than for the protection of the investing public. Such a course, would make the law absolutely useless and ineffective.

I believe that the Kansas law is founded on exactly the right principles, with the exception that special provision should be made for the investment banker, or any other person, firm or corporation dealing exclusively in stocks and bonds. The Kansas legislature, when it meets next month will be asked to amend the law so as to provide for a special blanket permit for the investment banker and others dealing exclusively in stocks and bonds, requiring them to file the statements, etc., required by the law in regard to their own bank or firm, so that the banking department may investigate their reputation, both as to the class of securities they handle and along other lines. When they satisfy the banking department that they handle nothing but first class securities and their reputation along other lines is found satisfactory, the bank commissioner may issue them a permit entitling them to handle such stocks or bonds as they desire by merely filing a list from time to time of such securities as they are handling, doing away with the necessity of investigating each particular issue, but reserving the right to revoke such permit at any time it is found that the banker or company in question is handling questionable securities.

With this provision in the law, I see no reason why any legitimate investment banker should object to it. The only delay in the matter would be when the investment banker makes application, when it would be necessary to investigate the applicant thoroughly, which should not take long. After the appli-

Distinguished author of the famous "Blue-Sky" bill defends its provisions but agrees that an amendment relieving the burden it imposes upon legitimate bond houses should be added.

Bankers likely to accept his ideas cant had been granted a permit, they would be at liberty to proceed with their sales, as fast as they desired. The investigation of the applicant cannot be disposed of without defeating the purpose and effect of the law, and I believe that every legitimate investment banker courts proper investigation.

The investment banker who deals in nothing but first class securities is in favor of and ought to be protected by legislation which will prohibit the sale of worthless securities by some member of their profession, and there are many of them who deal exclusively in a class of securities that are questionable or absolutely worthless.

This provision should have been put in the Kansas "Blue Sky" law at the time it was enacted, but it was not thought necessary for the reason that Kansas had no large investment bankers or other firms and corporations dealing exclusively in stocks and bonds at that time.

The Kansas law has saved the Kansas people more money during the time it has been in operation than it takes to run our entire state government, and this money was largely saved to a class of citizens who can least afford to lose it, whose knowledge of business is limited, and they are more or less at the mercy of the dishonesty and shrewdness of this class of confidence men and thieves. I believe that any law which accomplishes such results should be upheld by our citizens and all honest and reputable business organizations, and if found against the interest of any special class of legitimate business, but at the same time in the interest of a large majority of our people, that special class should seek its amendment in that particular and not condemn the whole law, and give the enemies of legitimate business, who in this case is the illegitimate investment banker, a chance to use their actions and statements in defeating one of the best laws ever enacted. This is practically what the Investment Bankers Association has done.

The legitimate investment banker should be heartily in favor of legislation along the line of the Kansas "Blue Sky" law, and I trust that when it is amended as I have suggested, making special provision for them, that they heartily will endorse and support it and not make the mistake of insisting upon its being so amended as to destroy its effectiveness.

I am pleased to say that the greater number of the investment bankers of the country deal mostly in legitimate and honest securities, but I wish to say that many of them deal largely in worthless stocks, bonds, securities, and other "Blue Sky" investments, that need close supervision by the government and state to protect not only the more or less helpless investing public, but as a necessary protection to the honest and legitimate investment banker. The government and state are making decided progress as to close supervision of banks and reducing to the lowest possible minimum the loss to the depositing public through failed banks. The government and states can do as great or a greater work supervising the sales of stocks, bonds and other securities to the investing public. I might say as a comparison, the public has been robbed of $10 through dishonest sellers of stocks, bonds and other securities where they have been robbed of $1 through failed banks.

If anyone will take the time to investigate conditions here, they will find that the Kansas people strongly are in favor of the law and that it is being supported by all legitimate companies.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By R. A. ALBERTSEN

Relates to administrative and department matters interesting to
our readers

Washington, D. C., December 20th.—National banks are observing more strictly the statute requirements of a reserve of 25 per cent of deposits, according to the annual report of Comptroller of the Currency Murray. The comptroller during the last year has conducted a vigorous campaign to compel delinquent institutions to maintain the minimum amount. On April 18th last, Chicago and St. Louis reserve banks were deficient .13 of 1 per cent, but on June 14th, St. Louis alone of the three central reserve cities, was deficient. On September 4th, New York and Chicago were slightly deficient.

Government Fairness to Big Business

Charles Nagel, secretary of commerce and labor, would sharply define and restrict the powers and discretion of the proposed federal commission to regulate industrial corporations. In his annual report submitted to President Taft, the secretary opposes the endowment of such a commission, if created by congress, with far-reaching powers equal to those exercised by the interstate commerce commission over railroads. He disapproves the suggestion that the commission have authority to fix prices of commodities. Epitomizing his doctrine for governmental supervision of business, Mr. Nagel says:

"Instead of pressing federal regulation as far as possible, the real desideratum in legislation affecting the country's business should be to preserve, to the greatest extent consistent with the public welfare, the element of self-regulation. The effort should be to lay down principles of conduct sufficiently specific to impose desired restraints, at the same time leaving a wide field for individual achievement."

U. S. to Conserve Water Power

A comprehensive water power policy for streams upon the public domain and navigable streams not on the public domain, is urged by the secretary of the interior, Walter L. Fisher, in his annual report submitted to President Taft. As important to the welfare of the country he recommends an enlarged application of the leasing principle as applied to the public domain in general; a comprehensive leasing law for coal, oil, and other mineral lands, and laws providing for the classification of public lands according to their respective characteristics and appropriate uses, and administration in accordance therewith. Secretary Fisher also declares in favor of legislation for the development of the transportation facilities and the coal lands of Alaska, and for the withdrawal from entry of public lands in the West needed to conserve the water supply at the sources of streams.

Defend System of Bank Clearings

In reopening the "money trust" investigation, the Pujo committee to-day started on a new line of inquiry and called to the stand a number of bankers to testify as to the operations of clearing houses. In nearly every instance the witness was asked if he would favor regulation and the incorporation of clearing houses. The answers were either opposed to the suggestion or the witnesses answered that they were not prepared to express an opinion on that matter. Even bankers whose institutions had been refused permission to clear through clearing houses refused to say they favored incorporation and regulation.

Why Does He Do It?

Mr. Underwood's declaration that they are going to revise the tariff "from agate to zinc," raises screams charging partiality. Why do they neglect absinthe, acetate of lead, aconite, acorns and agar-agar at one end of the list, and zwieback at the other?

Flinn Carrying T. R. Banner

Former Senator William Flinn of Pittsburgh, who was here this week, left no doubt to-night about the future of the Washington party in Pennsylvania. It will go on, he said, with its candidates for all the offices to be filled at next fall's election. The city and county organizations are to be perfected immediately after the first of the year. The new party will have a candidate for mayor of Pittsburgh, for coroner, sheriff and district attorney of Allegheny county. And a particularly hard battle will be made to elect the latter official.

no effort at amendment of the Sherman anti-trust law until after the supreme court has passed upon a number of additional cases pending before it. That tribunal has, within the past several years, decided a number of suits brought under the Sherman law against combinations in restraint of trade, into which it has put much of interpretation, and much of direction and guidance for offices of the law charged with its enforcement. It is fair to presume that these lines of reasoning and application will be followed in the decisions yet to be handed down. After these decisions are made, it may be as plain to congress as it has long been to others that the Sherman law, rightly interpreted and enforced, is in need of no material amendment.

farmer what cultivation under the method which their experimenting has revealed will result in.

Sees Menace in Idle Men

In making his appeal for the support of the bankers in the "Athens of America," Mr. Lever pointed to the fact that recently in Madison Square, in New York, he found one morning probably 1,000 men asleep on the benches. The men, he said, he was told would not work.

"I could see in those idle men the greatest menace to the safety of the country," declared the speaker. "When the red flag of anarchy goes up, and the rumble of revolution resounds, it will not be the cities, but the hills and valleys, the home of conservatism, that will supply the defense for the nations."

A. G. Clapham, president of the Commercial National Bank, presented the report of the committee recently appointed to confer with the clearing house of New York, with a view to having that institution place Washington banks upon a parity with the banks of Baltimore, Philadelphia, and other cities, by making this city a "discretionary" point. Mr. Clapham said that he had corresponded with the inland exchange committee, which recently recommended that certain of the eastern states be relieved from the payment of exchange. As this committee has completed its work, Mr. Clapham said that it would be necessary for Washington bankers to deal directly with the clearing house committee.

Referred to a Committee

This committee, he said, would doubtless, if it were desired, place Washington on an equal footing with regard to exchange with the banks of the eastern states, but, he added, it appears to be the opinion that the Washington bankers do not care to assume the privileges by being compelled to make daily remittances to New York. The question was referred to a committee composed of the presidents of all the national banks in the city. Mr. Bell made the motion.

M. I. Weller, president of the East Washington Savings Bank, endeavored to have the association sanction the immediate introduction in congress of the bill which it had prepared, providing a method of incorporation for banks which desire to do business of state banks. At present all such organizations are required to incorporate in some of the states.

If adopted, it would occasion all banks operating under charters of states to reincorporate under the new law. As Mr. Weller and his associates, however, could not give assurance that the bill, if introduced in the present congress, would be passed without amendment, the question went over to the next meeting.

Five banks were admitted to membership in the association. They are the Citizens Savings Bank, the McLachlan Banking Corporation, the United State Savings Bank, the Washington and Southern Bank, and the North Capitol Street Savings Bank. The Seventh Street Savings Bank filed application for membership, which will be acted upon at the next meeting.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

D. A. Wyckoff, cashier of the First Trust and Savings Bank of Alton, and formerly treasurer of the Illinois Bankers Association, reports the best of industrial and financial conditions existing in his city, and states that Alton now is entering upon one of its most prosperous periods in its long and historic life. While Alton is one of the old cities of the state, rich in historic incidents like the Elijah P. Lovejoy murder in 1837, other stirring episodes of the slavery agitation, the last of the Lincoln-Douglas debates in 1858 and other interesting events, yet the community is aroused to-day as never before to the wealth of commercial and industrial activity before it. Mr. Wyckoff writes in a very interesting way as follows:

"Alton is enjoying one of the most prosperous eras in its existence of one hundred and twenty-three years. This primarily is due to its industrial, commercial and civic awakening, for which the board of trade, organized sixteen months ago, chiefly is responsible. Our venerable city has been rejuvenated. A new spirit prevails.

"Within the past three months, through the board of trade, Alton has landed a new $1,500,000 state hospital for the insane, a $50,000 foundry and machine works and a $750,000 hoop steel mill. This, it is estimated, will increase the population more than 3,000 within the coming year.

"In addition to this, the Illinois Glass Company is spending $1,000,000 for new machinery, additional buildings and general improvements. The Standard Oil Company also is doubling the capacity of its Wood River Refinery. In the spring, work will be begun on the construction of a $200,000 drainage district in Wood River township, which will transform several thousand acres of lowland into the best manufacturing sites in the American bottoms.

"The Piasa Light & Power Company, which has invaded the local field and captured the city lighting contract for twenty years, will erect a plant to cost $200,000. The Alton Gas and Electric Company, its rival, will double the capacity of its present power-house at a cost of $150,000. The competition between these two companies is giving Alton manufacturers cheaper power than can be furnished from the Keokuk dam. The Western Cartridge Company has made surveys to build a new plant and to triple the capacity of its present one. It will employ about 600 persons when in full operation.

"Before the holidays, 'White Ways,' with a new system of ornamental lights, will be established in the leading retail districts. New stores are being constructed and the obsolete retail establishments are being remodeled and brought up to date. Nine large state conventions have been secured for Alton for 1913. As a result of this activity, our five banks are enjoying increased business, with better prospects than they ever have had before."

W. E. C. Clifford Assistant Treasurer

W. E. Cass Clifford, paying teller in the First National of Champaign, has been appointed assistant state treasurer by Treasurer-elect William Ryan. He will take up his duties in Springfield January 2d, succeeding in that position Andrew Russel, the well-known Jacksonville banker. The appointment comes as an honor to Mr. Clifford, as he is in no sense a politician, yet has been a democrat all his life. Mr. Ryan desired an assistant who was not a politician. Mr. Clifford will have full charge of the office with twenty-two men under him.

Mr. Clifford was born in Champaign, is a former student of the University of Illinois and a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity. He has served as secretary and Exalted Ruler of the Champaign Elks, and is prominent in the Knights of Columbus. He attended the national Elks convention in Portland, Ore., last summer. The Harrises and Cashier Capron of the First National of Champaign are delighted with his appointment, although they are losing a valuable man, and a wide circle of friends congratulate him.

Two New State Banks

State Auditor McCollough has issued a permit for the incorporation of the Farmers State Bank of Eureka, a few miles east of Peoria. Eureka, county seat of Woodford county, is in the center of a rich agricultural community. The new state bank will take the place of the Farmers Bank, a private bank, and the permit was issued to J. P. Darst, J. A. McGuire, M. L. Harper, who were president, vice-president and cashier respectively, of the private bank, and T. J. McGuire. The capital will be $50,000.

A permit has been issued to John R. Potter, Wayne Stubblefield and E. E. Darnall, for the incorporation of the Farmers State Bank of Hopedale, Tazewell county. This is the second bank for Hopedale, the other being the Hopedale National. The capital will be $25,000.

the mutual understandings between the banks are no longer sufficient, so that the clearing house association is the solution of the problem. C. L. Telling, cashier of the Commercial Trust and Savings, is secretary, and A. M. Bushnell, president of the American Bank and Trust Company, is the treasurer. The six banks of Danville have each a director on the clearing house board.

Savings Deposits Gain

A summary of the state bank reports of November 27th, made by the state auditor, shows a large increase in savings accounts and in surplus. Total deposits, however, decrease, owing very largely to the slow marketing of the corn crop. There are 618 state banks in Illinois, including Chicago.

Illinois Notes

Daniel Crabb, cashier of the Tazewell County National of Delavan, and a former treasurer of the Illinois Bankers Association, has returned home from New York City, where he has been recuperating his health, which has recently been very poor.

Louis N. Seaman and Melvin C. Jocelyn, formerly cashier and assistant cashier respectively of the Elgin National Bank, are under indictment charged with misappropriation of the funds of the institution. They pleaded not guilty.

The Illinois State Savings of Pontiac reports deposits of practically $400,000. E. M. Johnson is the president and M. H. Greenebaum is the cashier.

The Bank of Niantic, near Springfield, was damaged by fire, the flames originating in the basement. The building of the Bank of Grafton, near Alton, has been destroyed by fire.

H. G. Herget, one of the vice-presidents of the Herget National of Pekin, was recently elected first vice-president of the Illinois Manufacturers Association.

Freeport had a "Made-in-Freeport" exhibition which showed that over fifty articles were made in that busy community. These shows have been held elsewhere in the state and are good advertisers for busy cities like Freeport, Peoria, Bloomington and many others.

The state educational commission will recommend a bill in the next general assembly providing for vocational education in the public schools of Illinois. While there will be considerable opposition to the bill, yet the bankers of the state hope that it will be passed. State Superintendent of Instruction Blair is in favor of the bill.

Sir Knight William B. Melish, grand master of the grand encampment of the Knights Templar of the United States and Canada, has notified the Champaign Commandery that he will visit their asylum on Christmas Day. While in Champaign he will be entertained in the family of his son-in-law, Sir Knight B. F. Harris, vice-president of the First National of that city and formerly president of the Illinois Bankers Association.

B. F. Caldwell, formerly president of the Farmers National of Springfield, spoke recently at the noon day luncheon of the Springfield Commercial Association on "The Mutual Interests of Sangamon County Farmers and Springfield Business Men." The Champaign Chamber of Commerce planned a luncheon for the fellowship of city business men and farmers of the county. The old differences between the town and the country are rapidly disappearing.

State Auditor-elect James J. Brady, with whom Illinois state bankers will necessarily have dealings during the next four years, has taken the house at 721 South Douglas Avenue, Springfield, where he will be at home with his mother and sister. Retiring Auditor James S. McCollough, who during the past sixteen years has become widely acquainted with the bankers of the state, will return to his old home in Urbana, near which city he has valuable real estate holdings.

FORT DEARBORN TO HOLD ELECTION

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Fort Dearborn National will be held in the banking rooms of the bank at 10 A. M., Tuesday, January 14, 1913, for the purpose of electing directors and the transaction of any other business which may come before the meeting.

EMPLOYEE OF UNION TRUST DIES

William R. Gibbons, employed by the Union Trust Company of Chicago as a watchman, was killed last Saturday night by the accidental discharge of a revolver. Gibbons formerly was a Chicago policeman and was known to many as "Smiling Bill." He was preparing for a bath when his revolver fell from his pocket and was discharged.

S. W. STRAUS & CO. TO INCREASE CAPITAL

The board of directors of S. W. Straus & Co., mortgage and bond brokers with offices in Chicago and New York, have approved a proposition to increase the capital stock of the company to $1,100,000. Some new names have been added to the list of officers, which is as follows: S. W. Strauss, president; S. J. T. Straus, first vice-president; Lawrence F. Stern, second vice-president; Melvin L. Straus, secretary; Sidney H. Kahn, treasurer; Nicholas Roberts, manager of the bond department; Charles H. Gokler, auditor and H. B. Matthews, publicity manager. The company was founded in 1882. S. W. Straus, the president, also is head of the Franklin Trust and Savings, which recently opened for business on the South Side. During the short time this bank has been in existence it has had a phenomenal growth.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

Milwaukee banks are sharing in the holiday rush of business which, unlike that of the retail stores, will continue until January 1st. Interest is being figured on depositors' accounts and business men generally are engaging in new ventures and winding up old ones with a consequent heavy exchange of money. There also are heavy dividend and interest disbursements to arrange for the corporations.

Large Dividends for Milwaukee Banks

It has been estimated that Milwaukee's eighteen larger banks will pay out dividends to their stockholders of approximately $718,400 by January 1st. The combined capitalization of these banks is $8,980,000 and does not include that of several smaller banks, private in nature, and operated mostly for the accommodation of savings accounts. Total dividends received by Milwaukee stockholders of banks and corporations both local and out-of-town, are estimated at $4,000,000. This includes $718,400 from the banks, $387,500 in quarterly dividends of the Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light Company, and $1,600,000 from Milwaukee manufacturing concerns.

Secretary Bartlett to Speak

Secretary George D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association goes to Mosinee Saturday to speak at the Mosinee agricultural contest, which is one of the closing ones of the series held this fall under the auspices of the W. B. A.

Banker Supposed to Have Been Buried May Be Alive

A persistent rumor to the effect that Fritz Karste, a former banker of Sheboygan, Wis., who was believed by everybody to have been buried last May, still is alive, has been circulated of late. It is said that he was seen on the streets of Hamburg, Germany. The bank with which he was connected was found to be short a large sum of money. It also was believed that Police Chief Scheck died last spring, but now it is reported that he is in Germany looking for Karste. It is said that the Karste "funeral" was conducted with great secrecy.

Wisconsin Bank to Increase Capital

At the annual meeting of the First National Bank at Grand Rapids, Wis., on January 14th, the stockholders will vote on the plan perfected by the directors to increase the capital stock of the bank to $100,000 and the surplus to $50,000.

Wisconsin Notes

Walter Kasten, assistant cashier of the Wisconsin National, has returned from a tour of the state banks having accounts with the Wisconsin National.

The new building of the Curtis State Bank at Curtis is nearly completed and will be the scene of a New Year's housewarming by the bank on January 1st.

The State Bank of Crevitz, Marinette county, was authorized by Commissioner of Banking A. E. Kuolt this week. The bank is capitalized at $10,000. J. O. Rollins is president, B. P. Gould vice-president, and H. Redding cashier.

Mrs. Anna H. Wells, widow of a pioneer banker of Fond du Lac, died last week at that place. An estate valued at $53,000 is distributed among three nephews and two brothers, according to the terms of the will.

The First National Bank and the First Savings and Trust Company are contemplating a pension system for employees. The details of the system are at present being worked out and will be announced later.

Work on the new home of the Citizens State Bank of Fond du Lac is progressing rapidly, and the fixtures will be ready for installation in a few days. It is expected to have the building ready for occupancy by January 1st.

Roy D. Chapin, president of Hudson Motor Co., and Henry Ford, president of Ford Motor Co., have been elected directors of the old Detroit National.

The First National Bank of Tifton, Ga., has been placed in voluntary liquidation to be consolidated with the National Bank of Tifton.

E. Crook, cashier of the Farmers State Bank of Winner, S. D., has been elected president and Bryce Campbell takes his place, after two years as assistant.

¶ This Bank, being at the logical center of Wisconsin banking activity, and having an exceptional list of State and Foreign correspondents, offers its services to conservative Banks with the assurance that such a connection will be of mutual advantage.

Association of Reserve City Bankers Formed

The traveling representatives and transit men of many of the important reserve city banks of the country assembled at the Hotel LaSalle on Saturday, December 14th, at the call of G. H. Mueller, vice-president of the Fletcher-American National, Indianapolis. Some two years ago, during the Indiana state convention at Indianapolis, Mr. Mueller acted as host at a dinner to the reserve city men attending the convention. The entertainment was repeated again last October at the Columbia Club during the Indiana convention, when the suggestion was made that it might be well to form a permanent organization to study conditions and to endeavor to improve on certain banking customs prevailing in many of the reserve centers, as well as those indulged in by the interior banks, which, if made uniform, would be to the advantage of both the city and interior banks as well as to the general public.

Subsequently a call was issued under the name of "The Flying Squadron of America," but when the meeting was called to order in the college room of the LaSalle Hotel last Saturday, one of the first statements made by President Mueller was the one which changed the name of the organization to the "Association of Reserve City Bankers," which finally was adopted as more suitable. Then followed the reading of the by-laws by E. E. Gates, attorney for the Fletcher-American National of Indianapolis. The only feature of the by-laws which caused any discussion was that portion relating to membership, and the question was raised as to whether it should be based on the banks or the individuals representing the banks; it finally was decided that the individual bankers should constitute the membership. The name of the bank with which the individual is connected will be called, and as many representatives of the bank as desire to pay the annual dues of $10 can be identified with the organization, but upon a roll call in any matter pertaining to the business of the association, the bank whose name is called shall be entitled to but one vote. Adoption of the by-laws, the enrollment of delegates present and their election to membership constituted the morning's proceedings. The meeting adjourned at 11:30, to assemble again at 2 o'clock.

Promptly at the time set, the afternoon meeting was called to order by President Mueller, who made an announcement as to the afternoon's program. The election of officers held immediately after convening in the afternoon, resulted in the choosing of G. H. Mueller as president; C. S. Haughwout, cashier of the First National of Denver, was elected vice-president. The secretary and treasurer will be chosen later by the board of directors, which is as follows: Thomas Hildt, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, Baltimore; James G. Wakefield, assistant cashier of the Corn Exchange National, Chicago; H. D. Ormsby, cashier of the National Bank of Kentucky, Louisville; J. W. Staley, vice-president of the First National of Detroit; Harry J. Haas, assistant cashier of the First National of Philadelphia; J. D. Gillespie, acting manager of the Dallas (Tex.) Clearing House; E. B.

Clare-Avery, assistant cashier of the Merchants-LaCiede National of St. Louis.

The first paper of the afternoon session was presented by C. R. McKay, manager of the transit department of the First National of Chicago, who strongly presented the Chicago situation as it relates to the handling of city and country checks under the present clearing house rules. He also made suggestions as to changes which might be made with advantage to all concerned. The next speaker was Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House. Mr. Thralls gave in a clear and convincing manner the story of conditions that prevailed in Kansas City and surrounding territory before they investigated and adopted the Boston or New England clearing house plan for handling country checks, and then told in a most interesting way of the results which have been secured to the Kansas City banks as well as to the general public by this change. K. H. Woodward, assistant cashier of the Colorado National of Denver, told of the situation in that city with respect to clearing house charges, giving the reasons for their position. The necessity of shipping gold, owing to the location of the United States mint at their point, to create eastern exchange, places them in rather a peculiar position.

The next speaker was J. W. Staley, vice-president of the First National of Detroit. Mr. Staley made a most convincing speech and expressed himself strongly and forcefully for reform. In passing, he awakened the delegates from Philadelphia and caused those from Pittsburgh to take notice by referring to Philadelphia as "our respectful but somnambulist, historical city" and "Four per cent Pittsburgh." Mr. Staley urged the association

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis, December 18th.—The demand for money during the past week has been more than fair and came from all classes of customers. Rates held firm at $5\frac{1}{2}$ to 6 per cent on call and time loans. New York exchange has been in very good demand. The volume of business transacted at the financial institutions has been large and entirely satisfactory.

Urges Long Farm Loans

The establishment of mortgage banks in the United States was suggested as a solution for the question of "Farm Finance" by George Woodruff, president of the First National of Joliet, Ill., who spoke at a luncheon of the Business Men's League in the Mercantile Club to-day. "Under such a system," he said, "a farmer could borrow $1,000 on his farm at 8 per cent, payable semiannually. At the end of thirty years he would have completely paid off the loan and would have a clear title to the farm, which he probably partly paid for with the $1,000 he borrowed. Six per cent of the 8 per cent would be for interest, 1.227 per cent for amortization and .773 per cent for expenses and profits." "Under such a system," Mr. Woodruff added, "the farmer always will have an institution ready to advance him money without delay on a long-time amortization principle. He always will get as good a rate of interest as any one else, will never be compelled to pay renewal commissions or fees and will not be subject to the many legal charges now made in connection with frequent renewal of loans."

The need for the establishment of agricultural personal credit banks also was discussed by Mr. Woodruff. The many small banks in every town in the country practically supplant the personal credit institutions in Europe, he said. However, American banks lack a great central organization to which they can turn in time of need. If a plan for a national reserve organization can be worked out, the small country bank will be able to command for its local agricultural interests credit facilities equal to those of any other industry in the nation. Mr. Woodruff said that the United States is going through a great social revolution because the pioneer days of the nation are over and it is beginning to confront the social and industrial problems that European nations have battled with.

Title Guaranty Extra Dividend

An extra dividend of one per cent was declared by the Title Guaranty Trust Company at the monthly meeting of the board of directors last week. The extra dividend is an addition to the regular quarterly dividend of one per cent. The two dividends will be paid January 1st, to stockholders of record December 20th. The capital stock of the Title Guaranty Trust being $2,500,000, $50,000 will be disbursed in the two dividends.

To Build New Mexican Road

Preliminary to the construction of a new railroad to Mexico, J. Gilman Miller, representing capitalists of St. Louis, has been spending several weeks in the republic looking over the ground and gathering data on the advisability of such a project. Mr. Miller says: "I believe the trouble in Mexico will be settled soon and then there will be a great opportunity for capital. At the present time I am not in a position to say just where we propose to build our railroad, but with the reports I have to make there is no doubt that within the next three months actual work on the road will commence."

Modena Bank Robbed

Five men robbed the Bank of Modena of $3,000 yesterday morning, terrorized two hundred inhabitants of the town by shooting at everyone whom they could see, and escaped, presumably in buggies. It required four charges of explosives and forty minutes' time to blow the safe. The building was wrecked.

Callaway Bank Deposits Gain

Deposits in the twelve banks of Callaway County on November 26th, were $1,827,973.46 according to statements made by them to the federal and state banking departments, showing an increase of $103,029.58 over December 5, 1911. The loans on November 26th amounted to $2,290,826.59, which was $129,242.28 more than the loans of the same period last year. In 1911 the banks had $120,000 borrowed, while now they have $163,000 borrowed.

Defunct Bank to be Merged

Arrangements have been completed by John K. Woods, national bank examiner in charge of the First National Bank of Wilburton, which recently closed its doors, whereby the Latimer County National Bank will take over the assets of the First National and pay all the depositors in full. The bank failed for $65,000 because of poor collections.

Texas Corn Crop Larger

According to the last report issued by the secretary of the Department of Agriculture, the acreage planted to corn in the Lone Star State in 1912 was 7,300,000 acres, compared with 9,240,000 acres in 1911, a decrease of 1,940,000 acres. Notwithstanding the decrease in acreage, the total production of the 1912 crop was 153,300,000 bushels, which exceeded that of 1911 by 83,950,000 bushels. The production per acre in Texas increased from 9.5 bushels in 1911 to 21 bushels in 1912. The Texas crop not only increased in quantity but also in quality. The quality in 1912 was 78 per cent, compared with 61 per cent in 1911, an increase of 17 per cent.

$250,000 Bank for Texas

An application has been made to the comptroller of the currency to organize the Merchants National Bank of Dallas, Tex., capital $250,000. A charter has been issued to the First National Bank of Mount Calm, Tex., capital $50,000, which succeeds the J. B. McDaniel Bank of Mount Calm.

Offers Reward for Bank Robbers

Governor Colquitt of Texas has offered a reward of $500 for the capture and conviction of each of the Kyle bank robbers. It is understood a like amount will be offered by the Texas Bankers Association. The Kyle State Bank was robbed early Monday morning by four masked men who bound and gagged the watchman, locked him in a box car and escaped with $17,000 of the bank's funds. Three charges of nitroglycerin were fired and the vault of the bank was wrecked.

Knoxville Bankers Arrested

Warrants were served yesterday on W. H. Gass, president, and W. W. Willis, cashier of the Knoxville (Tenn.) Banking and Trust Company, charging them with receiving a deposit after having knowledge of the financial embarrassment of the bank. They waived examination and made bond for their appearance in criminal court. The warrant was a sequel to the closing of the bank's doors on

Bloomfield Bank Reopened

The City Bank of Bloomfield which was closed three weeks ago by George and Rudolph Houck and E. J. Williams, directors and principal stockholders, on discovering that A. D. Wilcox, cashier and cousin of the directors, was short, has been reopened with funds enough in its vaults to pay dollar for dollar all its obligations, including its deposits. Before it was known by anyone that the bank was in trouble, the directors called in the state bank commissioner and placed a written guaranty on the door that all depositors would be paid. Its capital and surplus were $30,000. This was wholly dissipated and the deficit totaled more than $90,000. One hundred thousand dollars' worth of property owned individually by the Houcks was turned over by them to make good the loss. The cashier has been arrested, charged with embezzlement, and has given bond. Other charges are expected to be made against him. Carl Webber, president, and F. A. Branock, cashier, of the reorganized bank, are in charge solely to wind up its affairs and pay all obligations. Very few deposits have been withdrawn from the reorganized bank. On turning the bank over to the officials of the reorganized company, Bank Commissioner Plank said that much credit was due all those who had participated in its organization.

The Kewanee (Ill.) National has been converted into a state bank under the name of the Kewanee State Savings Bank and Trust Company. It had been a national bank twenty years.

TRUST COMPANY FOR ST. LOUIS

It is rumored that St. Louis is to have a new trust company with capital stock of $200,000. Several prominent men are said to be interested in the new enterprise, among whom are Governor Hadley, Jesse Tolerton, Walsh M. Wade, Walter S. Dickey, F. E. Miller and L. E. Shattuck, the last two of Kansas City and Springfield respectively.

CRITICISES CONSTRUCTION PLACED UPON ILLINOIS STATE REVENUE LAW

The following letter has been received from O. L. Hiser, cashier of the State Bank of Lexington, and treasurer of the Illinois Bankers Association, in which he complains against the construction placed upon section 35 of the Illinois state revenue law:

"We are in receipt of a letter from the Springfield internal revenue office, saying to us that the department at Washington has ruled that 'while it has been the universal practice of incorporated banks, in preparing their returns of annual income, to include in their deductions, under item 7 (a), the taxes paid on their capital stock; as this tax, levied under the Illinois state law, is assessed against the stockholders and not against the bank, it therefore is not an obligation of the bank, and not a proper item for deduction in preparing their return' in compliance with the requirement of the federal income tax law.

"This ruling is based as set forth in the letter, upon a part of Section 35 of the Illinois state revenue law, regarding the assessment of state and national banks. That part of said Section 35 as set out in the letter reads as follows: 'The stockholders of every kind of incorporated bank located within this state, whether such bank has been organized under the banking laws of this state, or of the United States, shall be assessed and taxed upon the value of their shares therein.'

"Upon a part of Section 35 down to a comma after the word 'therein,' a ruling has been made which means that every incorporated bank located within this state, if its annual net income exceeds $5,000 per year, shall pay a tax to the federal government, upon a tax, imposed and collected by the state government.

"The remainder of the first sentence of the first paragraph of said Section 35, after the word 'therein,' reads as follows: 'In the county, town, district, village or city where such bank or banking association is located, and not elsewhere, whether such stockholders reside in such place or not.'

"I understand it to be a well-founded rule of law, that in construing a statute the statute should be construed as a whole, and not by parts or sections. It is clear to my mind that the remainder of the first sentence in said Section 35, as above quoted, means that the bank is to pay the tax, otherwise non-resident stockholders not being liable under our law to taxation on personal property, would escape taxation and the state would lose what it of right should have. The remainder of Section 35

SAFEGUARDING ILLINOIS DEPOSITORS

Some time ago there appeared in these columns an article pointing out the inconsistency of permitting unincorporated associations to employ the words "trust company" as a part of their titles, without being compelled to comply with the statutory regulations relating to trust companies in this state. The same thing may be said of an individual or individuals calling themselves a "bank." In the case of incorporated banking associations in Illinois there are numerous provisions of the statute designed to protect the interests of the depositors and to render the business of banking safe and reliable. The same argument used in regard to unincorporated trust companies may with propriety be used in the case of an unincorporated bank, i. e., it is absolutely absurd to compel a strong corporation composed of men of the highest financial standing and character and adequately capitalized, to conform to certain statutory regulations, while unincorporated banks, often representing exactly the opposite of the elements embraced in an incorporated institution, are permitted to carry on their business absolutely unrestricted.

The Illinois statute provides that when any association of individuals desire to incorporate as a bank, they shall apply to the state auditor for permission to organize, stating their place of business, the amount of capital and name of the association under which they desire to organize, and the duration of such association, all of which shall be under their hands and seals and duly acknowledged. Each director elected by the stockholders is required to take an oath of fealty to the bank stating that he diligently and honestly will administer the affairs of the bank, and will not knowingly violate or permit to be violated any of the provisions of the banking act. In addition each director is required to own ten shares of the capital stock of the bank free from any lien or encumbrance. Each stockholder is individually liable and responsible to the creditors of the bank, over and above the amount of stock held by him, to an amount equal to his respective shares, for all liabilities of the bank accruing while he remains a stockholder. Within thirty days after the organization of the bank a certified list of stockholders must be filed in the county recorder's office, giving the number of shares held by each stockholder; and thereafter a certificate of all transfers of stock shall be filed, not later than ten days after such transfer; no transfer of stock shall operate as a release from liability.

Provision also is made for reports of condition, exhibiting in detail resources and liabilities, such reports to be called for at least once every three months by the auditor of state. Examination of the affairs of the bank is to be made as often as the state auditor shall deem necessary. Restriction is made as to the largest amount which may be loaned. The statute says: "The total liabilities to any association, of any person or of any corporation or firm, for money borrowed, including in the liabilities of a company or firm, the liabilities of the several members thereof, shall at no time exceed fifteen per cent of the amount of the capital stock of such association actually paid in and unimpaired, and fifteen per cent of its unimpaired surplus fund." At no time, however, shall the total amount loaned exceed thirty per cent of the bank's capital. It also is stated that undivided profits shall not be construed as a part of the surplus. Every director who sanctions a loan above the limit prescribed by law is personally liable for all damage sustained as a consequence of the violation.

Provision is made as to the minimum capital stock which shall be permitted, which varies according to the size of the city or town in which the bank is to be operated.

The legislature has provided all of these safeguards for the protection of depositors in our big, strong banks; absolutely no provision is made for the protection of the depositors in our "store banks."

THE CITY COUNCIL COULD HELP

It is quite commendable that the members of the Chicago city council should be concerned about the control and supervision of the kind of private banks which prey upon the unsuspecting portion of the public. Several attempts, however much they may have fallen short of success, are entirely to the credit of the city legislature. A sub-committee appointed by that body, composed of Aldermen Mayer, McInerney and Hazen has prepared a bill to be submitted to the legislature at Springfield for passage at the coming session. Among other things the draft provides "that any person or persons desiring to establish a private banking institution must have an invested capital of at least $50,000" in the city of Chicago. In country towns the capital invested is not required to exceed $25,000 and proprietors of banks will not be permitted to borrow more than one-twentieth of their assets. Proprietors are to be debarred by law from using the depositors' money in real estate operations or for any of the purposes of barter and trade as is so customary at the present time.

Especial attention is called to the fact that the titles "bank" and "trust company" shall be used by no person or firm doing business unless holding a certificate from the state. This practically puts private banking under supervision, protects the capital invested, prevents use of the deposits for private speculation or business purposes and brings a measure of supervision which, in the absence of anything better, will be quite welcome in this field.

There are other ways in which the city council might improve the situation vastly by an effort within themselves. A stroll along South Clark Street from Madison to 12th Street reveals at least forty-three glaring signs, many of them electric, such as "National Loan Bank," "Rational Loan Bank," "Peoples Trust and Loan Bank," "Security Loan Bank" and a dozen other variations from those quoted, but all using the word "bank" very conspicuously. This is contrary to law inasmuch as it is a deception upon the public. All of such places should be compelled to state that they are "Pawn Shop, License No. 51," or whatever its number may be. No pawn broker should be allowed to run without a license, and his license number should be stated on the sign as well as the actual title of the business conducted. It is doubtful if any action by the council is necessary beyond a resolution calling the police department's attention to this imposition upon the public. It would rid the city of Chicago of its most indefensible "private bank," for every pawn broker is a private banker if he stands behind a sign announcing himself to the public as a "bank." The attention of our esteemed contemporary, The Chicago Tribune, is called to this situation which, with its powerful influence, could improve conditions in this respect promptly.

TROUBLES OF PRIVATE BANK DEPOSITORS

A private banker, never having become incorporated or subjected to supervision or control of either the national, state or municipal government, occupies exactly the same position in the eyes of the law as does a private citizen. The assets and liabilities of his business are a part of his personal estate and are included with those of his private ventures. Consequently when he dies the debts of not only his banking business, but of all of his private enterprises as well, are liens against his estate, which, like that of any other individual, must go through the probate court for settlement. The depositors of the bank share pro rata with the other creditors of the estate, for it has been held by the courts that the relation existing between a bank and a depositor is simply that of debtor and creditor, which does not entitle the latter to a preference in the distribution of the assets.

While the banking business conducted by a private individual may be perfectly solvent, the liabilities of his other private ventures may be of such magnitude as to render his estate as a whole insolvent. In other words, the depositors in his bank are obliged to stand the losses suffered by him in businesses absolutely foreign to that of banking. Only the other day we read of a saloonkeeper who died while running a private bank as a side line; he also conducted a barbershop and a steamship agency. The depositors will share in the assets of his estate with the creditors of the saloon, barbershop and steamship agency. If any of these prove to be a failure, it is more than probable that the depositors will be very much disappointed when the estate is wound up. The same situation would prevail should the insolvent decide to avail himself of the emergency defense of insanity.

One does not have much sympathy for educated people so careless as to place their funds in unstable banking institutions; he cannot, however, help but feel for the ignorant foreigners who have come to this "land of promise" with the hope and expectation of accumulating a little something as a provision for the proverbial "rainy day." To them the word "bank" has a certain trust inspiring significance creating a feeling of the utmost faith and confidence. They do not know that there is any distinction between state, national or private banks; they place all banks in one class—as a place where they can deposit their savings and withdraw them any time they so desire. They do not know anything about the probate court nor of other creditors. Is it any wonder, then, that they sometimes resort to attempted acts of violence when the savings gleaned as a result of years of toil are denied them?

The argument has been advanced on behalf of the private bankers opposing supervision in Illinois that because conditions are "rotten" in Chicago, it does not necessarily follow that they are in the rest of the state, all of which will be conceded; but why should a private banker on a perfectly solvent basis and who is conducting his business honestly oppose an opportunity to show to his clients the exact status of his bank and the manner in which the money of its depositors is being used, thereby taking them into his confidence? The answer is that he doesn't. It is the crafty, hard-hearted, dishonest man who is willing to allow a lot of simple, uneducated people to contribute to his support with money earned by the sweat of their brows, while he in return gives them nothing but the "honor" and "prestige" of being depositors of his "bank." There is a vast difference, too, between "personal" and bank taxes.

PRESIDENT PHILLIPS SENDS OUT REPORT OF ROAD COMMITTEE

John D. Phillips, of Green Valley, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, is out with a circular letter under date of December 10th, sending a copy of the report of the bankers' committee on good roads to every bank in the state. Mr. Phillips puts the matter up to the bankers strongly and says that Illinoisans are to be congratulated that they live in the greatest agricultural state in the Union, but it is a sincere regret that we must acknowledge that our roads and our road laws rank among the poorest of any state in the Union. To secure information and to follow this up with desirable legislation, has been the constant effort of the members of the good roads committee of the Illinois Bankers Association. Mr. Phillips requests the bankers to read the report of the road committee carefully and to cause it to be printed in some one of the local newspapers. In the campaign of education now being waged, in which the bankers have taken an early and active part, much will be done toward securing adequate legislation.

Who Shall Control Our Financial Destiny?

J. Harsen Rhoades, a New York banker, in an address before the "Finance Forum" makes an urgent appeal to the country

About two years ago—the date is immaterial—I was discussing banking and currency reform with a leading Wall Street banker. If I mentioned his name, you would recognize him at once as a man of influence and ability. I said to him, "Why doesn't your firm take more interest in banking and currency reform? If we are to have real reform, you know as well as I that it is the big able man who must put his shoulder to the wheel." He replied, "Are you aware that a partner in our firm has given many hours of his valuable time to licking the Aldrich plan into practical shape?" I was surprised at his words, for at that time—two years ago—I had no idea that such was the case, and said, "If what you tell me is so, why has he so effectively concealed the fact?" His answer was significant, even typical, of the times: "Why, man alive, don't you know that if the country were aware that a partner in this firm was even interested in the Aldrich plan, that plan would be doomed?"

Now I believe that in estimating the people's verdict my friend was mistaken. Every man, no matter what his own status may be, demands from others the truth. He was reading into the minds of the people a suspicion which could not exist unless fostered by secrecy. It is secrecy that breeds the germs of suspicion, and it is suspicion that undermines our reasoning powers and makes us see things which do not exist. I believe that if a partner of that influential house had gone to the bankers' convention at Los Angeles, had struck out from the shoulder, and said to those men assembled from all parts of the Union—"Gentlemen, I am from Wall Street. I am sincerely interested in banking reform, and have given much thought to the subject. I am here to help and to be helped. Do you care to hear me or do you not?" Gentlemen of the Finance Forum, I believe if that question had been put at that time by a man I have in mind, banking reform would no longer be a dream, but a reality.

I do not wish to be misinterpreted. It is not for me to dictate to any man a course of procedure. I merely tell the story to impress upon you the misunderstandings which must be overcome before banking reform is an accomplished fact. Now, I went to Los Angeles. I saw able bankers from Chicago, able bankers from St. Louis, New Orleans, Cleveland, able bankers from all parts of the country. I heard them speak. I saw them mingle with the crowd. But I neither saw nor heard the shrewdest of them all, the bigger men of Wall Street.

Real banking reform will be a vision until the brainy banker of the East and the brainy banker of the West co-operate; nay, until the men of the North, East, South and West confer with one another, learn one another's views and trust one another's motives. I wish to impress upon those who hear me, and upon those who do me the courtesy to read what I have to say, that I am a Wall Street man. I wish them to understand who I am and where I come from, I want them to do me the honor to believe that my motives are disinterested. I want them to know that when I ask for the brainy man of Wall Street to join us in this great reform, it is because we need him. Wall Street is not so filthy as some would think. Selfish men are there, yes, and everywhere—cold, calculating, hard-headed money makers, if you will, but not necessarily thieves at all.

Let me tell you another story: Just previous to the panic of 1907 my firm, a borrower of money from a large trust company, was informed that the rate on the loan had been raised to 50 per cent. The collateral consisted of gilt-edged bonds, and the loan had been standing for some time. Knowing one of its officers—as a matter of fact, a personal friend—I called upon him, and among other things said: "Is not my credit sufficiently good to warrant a lower rate than 50 per cent? You are a lender of money with a service to perform. Do you think it just to bleed me?" He replied, "I agree that such rates seem extortionate; but we are not facing a theory, but a condition, and it is the duty of an officer of this company to its stockholders to take advantage of every opening that presents itself." Now, gentlemen, from his standpoint he was not dishonest, nor was he doing wrong. He was merely taking advantage of his opportunities. The fault lies where? Not with him, but with his conception of his duty to his stockholders versus service to the public and with a banking system that invited him to do as he did. I do not blame him, but you do. But are you not equally culpable in maintaining a financial system which furnishes him with these opportunities?

It was not until the panic of 1893 that we American people as a whole began to appreciate the weaknesses in our financial structure. We then gave thought to the subject, but we accomplished little until after the crisis of 1907. Since that date so much progress has been made that there has now been presented to the American people a well rounded plan of monetary reform, commonly known as the Aldrich plan, which calls for the establishment of a national reserve or central reservoir for the bank reserves of the country. The completed scheme, however, bears little of the earmarks of Senator Aldrich's work. I shall, nevertheless, at the outset, call the scheme the Aldrich plan, if for no other reason than to show my respect for the man who fathered it. If there be those who can, I for one cannot be so small and narrow as to reject his or any other man's plan because the personality of the author may not be to my or someone else's liking.

Gentlemen, where are we at? There should be peace in the financial world, not distrust and bitterness. It is asserted that we need and must have the suffering and the lesson of another panic—a mean and cruel thought. It's claimed that we cannot have the national reserve because Mr. Aldrich's name is attached. It's said that we cannot have it if it be known that a Wall Street man has had a hand in preparing it. Such thoughts are childish and unworthy of men. What difference does it make who the author may be? What difference does it make whether he be black or white, tall or short, suave or blunt, sincere or insincere—if the plan he proposes commends itself to our good sense? Put on your thinking caps, my friends, and think. It's the meat on the platter that must be digested, not the man who prepared it; it's the thought in an argument that must be considered, not the man who advanced it.

I have spoken thus warmly because I wish you to see things as they are, not as some would paint them. Sometimes it seems as if the nation were honeycombed with mean, suspicious thoughts. A man can scarcely rise to speak before another charges a false and ugly motive. He who tries to end an evil should be helped, not handicapped by base and mean insinuations. We should think, and think fairly—not jump to our conclusions.

The Aldrich plan, as revised, was endorsed by our American bankers at their convention at New Orleans subsequent to its approval by many state organizations. It would seem, however, that for one reason or another the scheme has not met with popular approval, yet it contains much of merit. It would be a grave misfortune if, after the sacrifice of so much time and thought, we should feel compelled to discard it as a whole. I am one of those bankers who are positive that in centralized power lies the true solution of our financial difficulties, I care not whether it be the Aldrich plan or any other plan: but when I say centralized power I mean centralized power, no chicken-hearted compromise. Therefore, I am the more unwilling to throw the plan aside. My purpose this evening is to suggest an amendment, with the earnest desire that interest in the project be revived and the more conspicuous flaws eliminated.

I propose a main body, in whose hands we American people must place the financial destiny of our nation, that shall not be elected by the bankers nor by any special interest, but shall be singled out for that great honor and service by the president of the United States. My purpose is to adopt the method of procedure of the appointment of the justices of the supreme court, who, as we know, are appointed for life by the president, subject to confirmation by the senate. I would make one qualification, that the president shall appoint one-half of the board from the eastern section of the country, and one-half from the western, the zones to be divided by a line running north and south through the center of population, which line of demarkation tends to move further and further west as the country develops.

I propose that this board—the court of finance—shall be reduced from the unwieldy number of forty-five, as recommended under the monetary plan, to fourteen. Of this number six shall be practical bankers, one of whom shall be appointed to act as governor general, six shall be appointed from the industrial, commercial, farming and other interests, and two shall be academic students of banking. There shall also be as ex-officio members, the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of commerce and labor, and the comptroller of the currency, making seventeen in all. With the exception of the ex-officio members, these men shall devote themselves for life to the exclusion of all other interests, through the work of the national reserve, to the service of the nation.

The court of finance, which I propose, is the supreme tribunal to whom the American people must entrust the financial destiny of their nation. These are the men who must be above suspicion. It is they who will set the standard of membership in the national reserve, with authority to accept or reject an

It is they who will control the discount rate—raise it to check speculation in the East—raise it to check speculation in the West—raise it when the financial seas are disturbed—lower it when the seas are calm. The question before us is not whether the financial destiny of the nation shall be in the hands of a few, but who shall be the few, and how they shall be made, so far as lies within our power, subservient to the will of all.

CHICAGO VISITORS

W. Butterworth, president of the Peoples Savings Bank and Trust Company of Moline, Ill., and president of Deere & Co. of that city, was a Chicago visitor on Thursday. Mr. Butterworth says that there is a great deal of interest among the farmers of Rock Island county in the matter of organizing for good roads, and that they propose to perfect an organization of Rock Island county good roads advocates. The Tri-City Good Roads Association composed of representatives of the cities of Moline, Rock Island and Davenport, Ia., already has effected an organization to work in behalf of federal aid for an ocean-to-ocean highway which will utilize the river-to-river road from Davenport to Council Bluffs, which is in good condition the greater part of the year owing to the systematic compulsory drag law in force in Iowa. Mr. Butterworth also proposes to give a demonstration of what can be done in practical, permanent road building by having a modern road from their city factories in Moline to their demonstration farm some two miles distant from the city of Moline.

George W. Boyden, vice-president of the Farmers State Bank of Sheffield, Ill., was a caller in the financial district on Thursday. Mr. Boyden believes that the farmers generally in Bureau county want better roads and that the time is ripe for the organization of the present sentiment into a county association with a view of supporting some sensible plan for road improvement.

John R. Mitchell, president of the Capital National of St. Paul, was a Chicago caller this week.

A. P. Grout, president of the Farmers Institute, Winchester, Ill., and a member of the banking firm of Neat, Condit and Grout of that place, spent several days in Chicago this week. Mr. Grout devotes a considerable part of his time at this season of the year to attending the county meetings of the farmers' institutes, where the bankers, members of commercial clubs and members of the farmers' institutes gather together to discuss the subjects that likely will bring benefit to the respective communities interested. Mr. Grout is an alfalfa enthusiast and is president of the Illinois Al-

Kansas City bankers have been waiting with eager interest for two important announcements, both of which were made last week within a day of each other. One of these was the official report of the secretary of the Kansas state board of agriculture on the crop valuation of that state for 1912 and the other was information of a similar character from the Missouri board of agriculture. The report of Secretary Coburn of Kansas gave the value of the crops and live stock of that state for 1912 at $580,000,000 and the Missouri report shows the value of the Missouri crops at $750,000,000. Thus the total return to the farmers of the two states of Kansas and Missouri for the year is about 1½ billion dollars. And Kansas City is on the dividing line between these states and in the heart of the splendid prosperity indicated. There may be little wonder that the bankers of Kansas City are smiling with optimism. The state crop reports make even a better showing than any of the more conservative bankers had dared to predict. However, it was not the mere totals that brought the most satisfaction to careful bankers and business men. Both reports emphasized the fact that the farmers have been diversifying their crops as never before and that with the development of more intelligent farming there is less danger from year to year of serious crop shortages or total failures. Kansas, for instance, produced a fourth of all the alfalfa raised in the United States and that state is becoming a stock-fattening commonwealth. Although corn and wheat continue to lead all other field crops, they do not now monopolize the attention of the farmers to the exclusion of many other valuable products.

Death of Judge E. L. Martin

Judge Edward L. Martin, a Kansas City pioneer business man, railroad promoter and financier, died Sunday, December 15th at Excelsior springs, Mo., where he had gone in the hope of recovering his health. He was born March 12, 1842, at Maysville, Ky., and at the age of sixteen he entered a Cincinnati bank removing to Kansas City in 1870. He organized the Kansas City Distilling Company and afterward consolidated this concern with the Distillery and Cattle Traders Company. Leaving the distilling business he organized the Merchants Bank of Kansas City and was a director in several other financial institutions of the city. He helped organize the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Trust Company and was its first vice-president. This became later the Guardian Trust Company. Judge Martin was one of the first men of influence to express faith in Arthur E. Stilwell, the future railroad organizer, and it was Judge Martin who helped to promote the Kansas City, Pittsburg and Gulf Railroad, of which he was president for a number of years. In 1900, Judge Martin organized the Kansas City Suburban Belt Railway and his means furnished the financial backing of this project. In the constantly widening field of his activities he reorganized the Kansas City Street Railway Company and was the largest stockholder of this enterprise. He was the founder of the Kansas City, Lawrence and Topeka railway and many other enterprises of importance, including the bridge across the Missouri river now used by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad at Kansas City. Judge Martin was a charter member of every important commercial organization for forty years. In addition to his financial and industrial interests he was an enthusiastic local political leader and, although he never sought office he was elected mayor, and at the time of his death was a member of the county court, having been re-elected at the recent fall election.

Judge Martin was, in fact, one of the leading citizens of the Southwest and he was a foremost element in every important development for forty years. Of most engaging personality, he united all the most desirable qualities of man and citizen. He was beloved by all of Kansas City and especially by the school children, as he had been identified with the board of education for more than twenty years. It would be impossible even to enumerate the many philanthropic enterprises with which he was engaged but his charity was broad and unostentatious. One of the movements of which he was most proud was the Firemen's Relief Fund of Kansas City which Judge Martin started more than a score of years ago and which has grown to important proportions. For twenty years every certificate and every scrap of stationery used by this organization has borne the picture of its founder. The funeral of Judge Martin was held in Kansas City Wednesday, Dec. 18th, and in respect to his great character and public services all the clearing house banks closed in the afternoon, the city council adjourned and passed suitable resolutions and the entire fire department acted as a guard of honor. Seldom has any citizen of Kansas City ever been so universally beloved.

Want State Banker for Commissioner

At the recent election Kansas went Democratic and for the first time in many years there is to be complete change in the political complexion of all appointive officials. The position of state bank commissioner is one of the most desirable of the executive appointments and Governor-elect Hodges has been having a great deal of trouble making his selection. The present incumbent, J. N. Dolley, will leave the office shortly after January 1st. Governor-elect Hodges offered the place to Charles Sawyer, a national banker of Norton, Kan., and formerly a national bank examiner. This appointment has aroused a storm of protest, not on any personal ground, as Mr. Sawyer is very popular and is recognized as well qualified for the place, but because Mr. Sawyer is a national banker and the state bankers of Kansas feel that the state bank commissioner should be one of their group. They object to a national banker having supervision over more than 900 state banks. The bank commissioner is charged especially with the management of the state guaranty fund and there is an opinion that Mr. Sawyer is not in sympathy with this fund or the law which created it. Many state bankers pretend to see in this appointment a move to repeal or impair the bank guaranty law and other recent banking legislation. The state bankers have appointed a committee to take up the matter with Governor-elect Hodges. Among the members of this committee are John Wagner, of Larned; Thomas Sweeney of Lawrence; M. A. Householder of Columbus and J. D. Joseph of Whitewater.

Street Railway Difficulties

The troubles of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company of Kansas City have multiplied of late. The hope entertained by stockholders that a reorganization of the company might be effected and the property saved from further legal entanglements has been eliminated by the order of Federal Judge Hook granting permission for a suit of foreclosure in default of the payment of notes secured by a mortgage on the property. The suit involves an issue of the Kansas City Railway and Light Company bonds to the amount of $10,200,000 which were floated in 1903 and expire in May, 1913. The company is now operating under a federal receivership, the receivers being Ford Harvey of Kansas City and R. J. Dunham of Chicago. Pending action by the city on a proposal to extend the company's franchise, experts under the direction of Bion J. Arnold of Chicago, are making an appraisal of the property. If an order to sell the property follows the foreclosure suit, the system may be dismembered or sold as a whole. It is valued in the neighborhood of $30,000,000.

Mr. Grout is a member of the advisory board of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association and is giving much thought and consideration to the subject of good roads. He finds that the sentiment among the farming classes, as he comes in contact with it at the institute meetings, is growing favorable to a change in the present system in order that we may get the principal highways in Illinois in such a condition as will permit of their being used every day in the year and the roads become permanent in character, there being no doubt about it that the farmers are the ones who benefit the most from a system of good roads whereby farm products can be marketed when market prices are the most favorable.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

A. J. Wentzel, cashier of the United States National, was instrumental in having Superior, one of the Twin Ports cities, included in the Centennial Memorial Flotilla trip in commemoration of Perry's victory on the lakes. He attended a conference at Buffalo of persons interested in the big celebration next summer. At Buffalo, Mr. Wentzel found Duluth and Superior had been left out of the plan and he presented the claims successfully.

F. M. Prince Back from East

F. M. Prince, president of the Minneapolis First National, returned from New York, said: "While Christmas trade is active in New York and general business good, there is a touch of the blues down there because the stock market has had a fall. Wall Street is indeed the New York barometer and New York people do not like to see stocks go down."

"The Union Pacific-Southern Pacific merger decision and the probable way of undoing the thing in accordance with the supreme court's interpretation of the law is a main financial topic in the east. Meanwhile the stock market has gone down. Business, as one sees it in commercial circles, is active and of large volume."

"There seems to be no likelihood," said Mr. Prince, after a talk with the comptroller of the treasury, "that the government will have to take any measures toward putting money into the national banks. There seems to be enough money for all legitimate purposes."

"The east has looked for the possible development of three unfavorable things in the northwest, which might have been here before this. They were a car shortage, a coal shortage and a money scarcity with high interest rates. The extraordinarily long continued fair weather of the fall warded off these things. Money rates are higher than they were some months ago, but by no means high, as that word is understood. Six per cent commercial money is not high money."

"General business is good in the East. One sees it in the streets and commercial offices. If he happens, however, to come in contact with Wall Street people he will get a blue expression, for Wall Street usually gets pessimistic on the whole country when stocks go down."

Buys Cattle in East

The First National of Pilot Rock, Ore., has bought 150 head of dairy cattle in the East and is shipping them West for distribution among the farmers. The purpose is to make good the guarantee of the Commercial association to supply milk from a given number of cows for the new creamery. The average price paid was $55, and the freight charges will be $17, or $72 each.

Superior Postal Savings

In November the postal savings bank at Superior, Wis., showed the biggest total of receipts since the office was founded. More than $10,000 was taken in and $3,000 withdrawn. Total receipts to date were $57,000 credited to 566 depositors.

Big Deal Made

A syndicate of Minneapolis and St. Paul has financed $1,200,000 preferred stock for the Rogers Lumber Company. This will pay off the company's indebtedness and help carry its heavy timber holdings in Oregon. The company must pay a premium for bonds retired within twenty years, and provision has been made for retirement at the end of twenty years. The company had $1,000,000 common stock. The stock is 7 per cent, dividends payable quarterly, beginning January 1, 1913. It was fully subscribed at the first meeting of the syndicate. The Minneapolis Trust Company and the Wells and Dickey Company are the receiving companies.

E. W. Decker

E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National, has been made president of the Men's club of the church which he attends —the Plymouth Congregational. The club plans some big meetings with experts as speakers to instruct voters, especially the cat-low ones.

Large Increase in Capital Probable

If business of the Second National continues as it has been going, it is predicted by C. H. F. Smith, vice-president, that a trust company will be the outgrowth of the Northern Savings Bank, which the American controls. This plan may not be ready for the annual meeting, January 14th. The proposed increase of capital of the bank from $200,000 to $400,000, as arranged by the directors, is to come up at the annual and it is expected the stockholders will ratify the move for the increase. Mr. Smith said, "We have been considering the increase of stock some time. While it was tentatively decided upon several months ago recent bank changes in St. Paul have hastened the action." The new stock is to be issued at par. Business in the last two years is said to necessitate the increase. The bank is to pay 3 per cent semi-annual interest December 31st, leaving $125,000 in surplus and undivided profits. It is possible the board may be increased from ten to fifteen directors. It is prophesied that Ben Baer will be returned as president. Mr. Smith as vice-president; L. H. Ickler as vice-president; H. B. Humason as cashier; P. A. F. Smith as assistant cashier. The directors are Otto Bremer, C. C. Emerson, Harold Thorson, J. W. Cooper, B. L. Goodkind, J. H. Weed, Ben Baer, L. H. Ickler, H. B. Humason and C. H. F. Smith. The bank was organized in 1903, at Sixth and Minnesota Streets. Six years ago it moved to Fifth and Cedar Streets. Loans and discounts are $1,428,189 and deposits $2,188,014.

Will Ask $1,000,000 Bond Issue

The common council of St. Paul will be requested to ask the legislature for a bond issue of $1,000,000. The council will be asked to order $150,000 bonds for 1913 authorized in 1906 by the legislature. The issue is planned to cover work to last five or six years, principally for improving the water supply. The $150,000 issue is for water purposes.

Northwest Notes

Twenty-five banks in Otter Tail county Minnesota, show gains in deposits over last year. The total on deposit in the county is $4,466,750, as compared with $3,669,920 a year ago. A large part of the crop still is to be marketed.

Large St. Paul banks are expected to pay the city 2 per cent on daily deposits after January 1st. The Merchants National, Capital National and American National have given assurance they will pay 2 per cent and it is understood the First will do the same. The deposit averages $400,000 to $800,000.

The Twin City Fire Insurance Company, Minneapolis, is announced to have taken over the controlling interest in the United American Fire of Milwaukee and will move it to the Twin City company's new quarters in the Elks building. The assets will be $1,000,000. The territory includes Wisconsin, Minnesota, eastern North Dakota, South Dakota and western Canada.

P. J. Leeman, assistant cashier of the First National; R. A. MacGregor, assistant at the Northwestern and E. L. Matteson, cashier of the Scandinavian American National, attended the transit meeting in Chicago. Geo. F. Orde, vice-president of the First, recently recommended adoption of the Kansas City plan to the Twin City Bankers club. It is expected some plan will be worked out. Minneapolis alone has an average of 50,000 country checks a day.

Dr. Robert O. Earl is named president in the articles of incorporation filed of the Swedish American State Bank, St. Paul. The capital is $25,000. It is expected to open May 1st, at 991 Payne Avenue. On the board are Dr. Earl, Lewis Swenson, merchandise; P. M. Reagan, manager Hamm Realty Company, J. O. Molin, examiner with state insurance commissioner; C. H. Lindeke, Jr., manager Diebold Safe Company.

Knitting Company Stock Subscribed For

One million dollars preferred stock of the Northwestern Knitting company, Munsing underwear, has been subscribed locally, mostly by stockholders in the Northwestern National Bank and the Minnesota Loan & Trust Company. The company has put in the new issue and has increased its common stock from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000. The new preferred is 7 per cent cumulative, with quarterly dividends. The sinking fund is regarded adequate. The company was organized in 1887 and has 1,300 employees. The plant covers a city square.

Northfield Banks Prosperous

Bank statements of Northfield, Minn., are indicative of the general prosperity in southern Minnesota. The First National has assets of $1,047,000 and the Northfield National of $1,042,000. The figures are unusually large and are explained by increasing business in pure Holstein cattle, which is bringing thousands of dollars a month to the farmers of the district.

Offer Prizes for Hog Raising

The First National of Fargo, N. D., will offer prizes for hog raising next season. With other institutions the bank two years ago offered prizes which increased the cultivation of corn in the state. Now something is to be done to raise something that will utilize the corn. The corn acreage has more than quadrupled in that time. It is hoped to raise enough interest in hog growing that a packing house will follow. Prizes are to be offered for the largest hog, the most Rooseveltian family hog, the most rapid development of pigs to a certain age, and other features, limited however to the four-footed animal.

Seven hundred and seventeen banks in North Dakota have more deposits than ever before. The advance has been evident since 1898. At that time the deposits were only $9,000,000. By 1902 they had reached $19,000,000 and the report for 1912 will show $73,000,000 or more. The banks have grown in number from 203 in 1902 to 217 in 1912.

By far the most engaging topic being discussed by bankers and citizens generally is a list of highly valuable acquisitions just made by the Spokane park board.

Among these the most important is a donation of 105 acres of land on the Spokane river, one and one-half miles from the center of the city, the gift of M. B. Connelly, D. W. Twohy, W. H. Cowles, John A. Finch, R. L. Edmiston, William A. Corey and J. D. Sherwood, all prominent Spokane men. The land is located on both sides of the river, at and around the junction with Latah creek, and is ideal for park purposes. Its value is approximately $125,000.

As the city already has a park and stadium site just below the lower falls, a half mile closer in, the two will connect with a boulevard or path skirting the river.

Another large donation received by the park board is a 39 acre tract west of the city, a scenic and historic spot known as Indian Canyon. For generations it has been the home of the Spokane tribe of Indians. This is the gift of the Ontario Land Company.

In addition to these, a site containing between 80 and 100 acres, adjoining the up-river pumping station, will be condemned by the city commissioners. The land is to be taken to protect Spokane's water supply, and will be devoted to park purposes.

Spokane bank clearings during November amounted to $20,626,467. This is an increase of 9 per cent over clearings for November, 1911.

The consolidation of two fire insurance companies into one concern with admitted assets of more than half a million dollars is announced by the Western Empire Fire Insurance Company of Spokane, one of the companies concerned.

Stockholders of the Western Empire voted to consolidate with the Los Angeles Fire Insurance Company of Los Angeles. The name of the new company will be the Los Angeles Fire Insurance Company of California and the home office will be in Los Angeles.

The consolidation will become effective at noon, December 31, 1912. J. Harvey Patterson, vice-president and general manager of the Los Angeles company, will continue in the same capacity with the new company. T. S. Lane, former president of the Western Empire, F. P. Greene, former treasurer of the Western Empire, and Ernest Carstens, president of the German-American Bank of Seattle and a director of the Western Empire, will become directors of the new company. Mr. Greene, a resident of Spokane, will become treasurer of the new company and will retain his residence in Spokane, becoming the representative of the officials of the company in the Northwest.

The outstanding liabilities of the Western Empire Insurance Company, such as the policies in effect, are, under the terms of the consolidation, taken over by the Los Angeles company. The Western Empire turned into the consolidation more than $100,000 worth of first-class bonds and mortgages in exchange for Los Angeles stock and will convert additional assets into cash and mortgages.

The Los Angeles company is admitted to transact business in California, Washington, Montana and British Columbia. It has applied for admission to Idaho and undoubtedly will enter the states of Illinois and Louisiana to take over the business of the Western Empire Company written in those states, according to Mr. Greene.

The Los Angeles company will, however, withdraw from Pennsylvania and discontinue its far Eastern business for the present. The company intends to enter the state of New York early in the new year.

Dividends amounting to $60,650.50 were disbursed December 9th in the twenty-third regular payment of the Trustee Company of Spokane, owner of the Wolverton, Hyde, Temple Court and Empire State buildings. A thousand or more unit owners in these buildings profited by the dividends, which bring the total paid by the company to $460,669.47, of which $126,900.50 has been disbursed this year. The first was distributed in 1907 and amounted to $3,125. The annual report shows the average earning of these units for 1912 to be over seven per cent net.

In the five months that compromise freight tariffs, agreed upon by Spokane shippers and the railroads, have been in effect, $58,000 has been saved in freight charges on sixteen commodities, according to a report of Percy P. Powell, a prominent shipper. Among the commodities named are nails, wires, pipe, chains, belts, glass, linseed oil, fruit jars and soap. It was stated that $4,000 was saved on one shipment of 800 tons of pipe.

Thaddeus S. Lane of Spokane, president of the Independent Telephone Companies of Washington, Idaho and Montana, has resigned the presidency of the Great Falls Automatic Telephone Company of Great Falls, Mont., which Mr. Lane founded. Other Spokane officials who also resigned are F. W. Buff, vice-president; John F. Davies, secretary, and John McGinnis, treasurer. The Great Falls Company has been purchased by the Mountain States Telephone Company, a Bell subsidiary. Independent companies will have physical connection with the plant for a period of 48 years.

J. P. M. Richards, president of the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company, has gone east to New York and Boston for three or four months.

Los Angeles

J. Fujihira, manager of the San Francisco branch of the Yokohama Specie Bank of Japan, confirms the rumor that this institution expects to establish a branch in Los Angeles in the near future. The new branch will be operated under the supervision of the San Francisco institution.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Bank of Glendale will be held on February 11th for the purpose of increasing the capital stock of the institution from $25,000 to $50,000.

Superintendent of Banks Williams has announced a third dividend of four per cent by the Bank of Shasta County, which was payable December 12th. This brings the total to 87 per cent.

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Bank of Vacaville, E. R. Thurber was elected a director of the bank to succeed F. B. McKevitt, who has resigned, as his duties as manager of the California Fruit Distributors and in other lines of endeavor at Sacramento, required his constant attention.

Charters have been issued to the First National Bank of Coachella, capital $25,000; J. M. Westerfield, president; H. A. Westerfield, cashier, and to the Selma National Bank, capital $50,000; W. T. Forkner, president; C. W. Christensen, cashier.

Articles of incorporation of the Winnemucca (Nev.) State Bank and Trust Company have been filed. The building is now under construction. The bank is incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000, and the stockholders are: C. B. Evans, Thomas Nelson, E. P. Ellison, J. Knight, J. W. Knight, J. Pingree, W. K. Ebling, T. McConnell, J. Lamerains, J. B. Fayant, John Etchert, L. G. Campbell, W. L. Wilkerson, P. Hogan, P. B. Robertson, G. Miller and others.

tion legitimately to bring about a change such as will enable Detroit, for instance, to handle all Michigan business on a par basis, with the possibility of a country clearing house as the agency by which this change could be accomplished.

H. D. Ormsby, cashier of the National Bank of Kentucky, Louisville, which institution was organized in 1834, spoke for Louisville and that section of the country. Mr. Ormsby deprecated the fact that apparently certain banks in reserve cities seem to discriminate against Louisville, and said that action of the Louisville Clearing House in formulating a set of rules for the purpose of offsetting such discrimination had worked very little to their advantage. He told of the inability of the representatives of Louisville, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Columbus, Cleveland and Pittsburgh when called together several years ago, to reach a successful conclusion of this important subject, owing to the difference in the manner of handling items and of the different interest rates which prevail in practically the same general territory. Mr. Ormsby was frank and generous in his expression that some plan might be evolved out of the present organization that would be of assistance to the general situation, and that the members of the Reserve City Association might work in hearty co-operation with the members of the clearing house section of the American Bankers Association in finding a way out of the present difficulties. President Mueller and several other speakers promptly acknowledged the splendid work which has been done by the members of the clearing house section of the A. B. A., and spoke of their desire to co-operate in this work.

Harry J. Haas, assistant cashier of the First National of Philadelphia, spoke for that municipality and reminded Brother Staley of Detroit that Philadelphia is the sleepy old city that gave to the country its first national bank, its first trust company, its first savings bank, its first postoffice, the first United States mint and the first postmaster-general, in the person of Benjamin Franklin, and that all these institutions still are doing business at the old stand. He said that Philadelphia would be found lined up with the rest of the country in whatever decision was reached after a full and free discussion, and that it can be depended upon to do everything possible in bringing about a proper solution of the problem.

Edward A. Seiter, vice-president of the Fifth-Third National of Cincinnati, presented a paper on ideals in banking. E. B. Clare-Avery, assistant cashier of the Merchants-LaCade National of St. Louis, told of the rules of the St. Louis Clearing House with respect to clearing house examination and told of the advantages of this system over that which prevailed formerly when the examinations were limited to national and state examinations. Mr. Avery is a forceful, convincing speaker. He speaks with confidence and has a splendid voice and clear enunciation, making him always a popular speaker on the program of any bankers' meeting.

It appears that one of the activities of this new association will be to urge clearing house examinations upon such reserve cities as do not have it. This is an important field in which much good can be accomplished, as there still are a number of cities which do not have this form of supervision.

Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House, dramatically told of the experience of the banks of that place during the flurry of 1907, when it was necessary to issue $8,000,000 worth of clearing house certificates and script to take care of their local situation.

He called attention to the fact that if we were to have another financial flurry or panic, the Aldrich-Vreeland bill passed as an emergency measure after the trouble of 1907, should the Kansas City and St. Joe Clearing Houses jointly take advantage of it, would allow them to secure but $3,000,000 in currency, and furthermore, drew attention to the fact that the Aldrich-Vreeland bill will expire by limitation in 1914 and urged that this matter be given careful consideration.

President Mueller then stated that the next order of business would be the selection of the place for the next annual convention of the organization. The names of the following cities were presented: Cincinnati, St. Louis, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Dallas, San Antonio and Albany. Upon a roll call St. Louis was declared the winner, and the next meeting will be held there in December, 1913. Much good-natured rivalry occurred over the selection of the place for the next meeting. Leon N. Walthall, cashier of the West Texas Bank and Trust Company of San Antonio, sparred back and forth concerning the respective merits of San Antonio and Dallas as convention cities. E. E. Gates, the attorney for the Fletcher-American National of Indianapolis, who kindly prepared the draft of the constitution and by-laws for the association, Haynes McFadden, editor of the "Southern Banker," and secretary of the Georgia Bankers Association and Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House, were made honorary members of the organization.

The committee on local arrangements consisted of F. A. Crandall, vice-president of the National City, chairman; J. Fletcher Farrell, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National; John F. Hagey, assistant cashier of the First National; James G. Wakefield, assistant cashier of the Corn Exchange National, and Wilber Hattery, assistant cashier of the Continental and Commercial National. These gentlemen handled the matter of arrangements in a most satisfactory manner, looking after the comfort of all of the out-of-town visitors and arranging as well for the dinner in the evening.

George Hoyles Dunscomb, assistant cashier of the First National of Chicago, who was on the original organization committee at Indianapolis, was compelled to be out of the city on business, but wired his congratulations from California suggesting that they "preserve" the original name.

After dinner the only speaker of the evening was introduced by Chairman Crandall—F. O. Watts, vice-president of the Third National of St. Louis, an ex-president of the American Bankers Association. Mr. Watts told some good stories and endorsed the objects of the association, speaking of the service they might render the parent organization, the American Bankers Association, and feelingly spoke of the obligation he owed to the junior bankers of the country for assisting in his elevation to the presidency of the A. B. A. through the necessary steps from chairman of the council, through the vice-presidency, until finally the goal of his banking ambition was realized.

Notes

H. S. Zimmerman, assistant cashier of the Mellon National of Pittsburgh, brought all of his winter clothing, including a fur cap, expecting to find Medicine Hat weather in Chicago. Together with "Rosey" Wilson of the National City of Indianapolis, he was required to lay in a new supply of wearing apparel suitable for the balmy weather which prevailed during the meetings.

STRONG DUBUQUE BANK

German Trust and Savings of Dubuque, Ia., with a capital of $100,000 and undivided profits of $96,489.31, published a mighty good statement under the last call of the Iowa banking commissioner, showing deposits of $1,791,939.49. Peter Klauer, a leading manufacturer of Dubuque, is president of this bank; A. F. Heeb, the principal brewer, is vice-president and N. C. Gindorff is cashier.

Des Moines, Dec. 20th.—The first meetings of the recently appointed legislative and taxation committees of the Iowa Bankers Association were held in Des Moines Thursday. In addition the executive council met so that it was the biggest meeting of bankers held in Des Moines for many weeks. Sessions were held in the office of Secretary P. W. Hall in the Fleming building. Much important business was transacted, a full account of which will be given in these columns next week. Special interest arises in the committee meetings because of changes in the taxation and other laws which the bankers will ask of the coming general assembly. The bankers invited to the sessions and directly interested therein were President Shade of Rock Rapids; F. B. Yetter of Davenport; Charles B. Hannan of Council Bluffs; C. J. Wohlenburg of Holstein; E. W. Townsend of Lake City; T. S. Hanson of Northwood; F. A. Schuetz of Lawler; Eugene Sullivan of Panama; A. E. Hindorff of Newton; B. E. Hakes of Williamsburg; J. W. Reihman of Grand Mound; Webb Hultz of Chariton; S. F. McConnell of Bloomfield; H. S. Young of Winfield; E. J. Curtin of Decorah; John McHugh of Sioux City; J. K. Demming of Dubuque; A. F. Dawson of Davenport; E. M. Scott of Cedar Rapids; J. L. Edwards of Burlington; C. D. Ellis of Charles City; M. D. Gibbs of Alton; C. H. McNider of Mason City. This list comprises the members of the executive council and the members of the two committees named.

Investigate Alleged Robber

Secretary Hall and Detective Gust Patek have been doing some investigating of the past of Joe Hartman, who is in jail at Spirit Lake on the charge that he is one of the men who robbed the Lake Park State of $3,000 September 20th. They have found that Hartman's realname is Sam Murphy and that he has a criminal record. He has been one of a bunch of yeggs working out of St. Paul.

Secretary Hall a Strategist

Secretary Hall relates an amusing game of peek-a-boo which he played with "Decatur Red" in the jail at Fort Dodge. "Red" is in the calaboose as one of the three men who shot and wounded the marshal at Gowrie some time ago. Since his arrest, "Decatur Red" has been identified as one Crossen who did time at Anamosa and his various aliases include "Rusty" and "Red Watson." He is wanted in Kansas for bank robbery in the northern section of the state and also as one of the gang which robbed the bank at Swan Creek, Ill., some years ago. When Secretary Hall went into the jail, "Red" saw him coming and dodged into his cell. Mr. Hall watched him furtively out of one corner of his eye and managed to get a glimpse of "Red's" profile as the latter peeked out of the cell. A few minutes later, the sheriff in a tone of voice intended to be heard by "Red" invited Mr. Hall into another section of the jail. The two men passed down the corridor. Suddenly, Mr. Hall dodged back and caught "Red" face to face. It was "Red's" turn to dodge, and he did, back into the cage. But Secretary Hall got a good look at his visage. Whether he would know him again however is a question. The officers believe they have a case against "Red" and his pals which will insure for them a life sentence.

Clearing House Association Meets

The Des Moines Clearing House Association held the best annual meeting of its history in Des Moines last week. It was the best because it showed an increase in deposits for the year of over $24,000,000 over the preceding year. The clearings for the year totaled $234,266,878.97, while for the preceding year they were $209,659,412.51. This is a showing of which the bankers are justly proud. The heaviest clearings for any one month were for October when the total was $23,563,545.71. The officers elected were D. J. Van Liew, president; L. E. Stevens, first vice-president; C. T. Cole, Jr., second vice-president; secretary and manager, George E. Pearsall; member of clearing house committee, Arthur Reynolds, chairman; J. G. Rounds, Homer A. Miller, Simon Casady and A. C. Miller.

Attack Tax Law

Suit to knock out the Iowa bank tax law on the ground that it is unconstitutional in that it discriminates against bankers has been started at Council Bluffs by the First National. The state has filed a demurrer alleging that the suit is improperly brought, in that it should be brought by the individual stockholders and not by the bank itself. It is expected that the outcome will be of unusual interest. However the bankers hope to be able to knock out the law when the next legislature meets and such a case may not be necessary.

Senator Dubious as To Agricultural Credit System

Senator A. B. Cummins is not enthusiastic over the plan of President Taft for a farm loan and credit system. The senator says he will not give his final opinion on the plan until he has made a more complete investigation, but he believes that a system which might be successful in European countries would not necessarily be so here. In the West, for instance, he says there are many little banks with money to loan, while in Europe one does not find two or three banks in every town. Senator Cummins believes that the plan of the president is in effect the same as that of the building and loan associations where a number of people band together and put up securities for long time loans at low rates of interest. If the farmers wish to enter a system of this sort they must do so now and without any special legislation. Moreover, farmers are officers and directors in many banks in this country and understand the banking business thoroughly.

"Blue-Sky" Law for Iowa

It is certain that the coming legislature will have a "Blue-Sky" law similar to that in Kansas. Senator Webber of Ottumwa has a bill all ready to introduce when the legislature convenes and Senator-elect Thomas of Kent likewise is preparing to introduce a similar measure. Senator Thomas made his campaign for election on this issue. His plan proposes to compel all corporations organized within or without the state to secure a state permit before offering any stock for sale. Before granting such permit the state must make a thorough and complete investigation.

May Supervise Private Banks

Whether legislation for the control of private banks in Iowa will be proposed at the forthcoming legislative session is a question of unusual interest among bankers just now. Those who have looked into the "Blue-Sky" law proposition, for instance, say that the Kansas law would involve the private bank question in Iowa, hence they are discussing the applicability of the statute to Iowa. It is given out that one legislator is known to have promised that he will introduce a bill for consideration by the general assembly providing for state inspection of private institutions. If he does, it is safe to predict that there will be something of a rumpus. So far as the legislative committee of the Iowa Bankers Association is concerned, it is understood that it will fight shy of the proposition.

Win Tax Victory

The Iowa League of Municipalities won its first victory in its effort to force the executive council of Iowa to equalize the taxes of the state when Judge Bradshaw in the district court at Des Moines overruled a demurrer filed by the attorney-general. The latter claimed that the executive council cannot be called into court but the judge disagreed with this view. This suit is of intense interest to taxpayers. It is the contention of the plaintiff that farm land is assessed at forty per cent, railroads and corporations sixty per cent and city property eighty-five per cent. The League proposes, if possible, to force an equalization.

Banker Sells Interest

A. B. Funk, for years president of the Spirit Lake National, has sold his interest to B. B. Van Steenburg and H. H. Buck. The purchasers have been connected with the bank and are well known in financial circles. Saturday Mr. Funk's wife died and it currently is reported that he will locate in the West.

Iowa Notes

A new bank to be known as the People's Trust and Savings will be started in Iowa Falls, January 1st. The president will be W. S. Walker; vice-president, H. L. Walker of Cedar Rapids; cashier, S. J. Osgood; assistant cashier, Clifford H. Warnock.

G. D. Ellyson, formerly with the Marquardt Savings, later the Commercial Savings, was called to Bedford last week to appear as a handwriting expert in a will case involving a $75,000 estate.

Secretary P. W. Hall of the I. A. B. says he has placed more new insurance and bond business for the association in the last three months than the combined business of the Dakotas and Minnesota. The amount thus realized as commissions is used by Secretary Hall in paying protective costs for the members who belong.

The Farmers Savings at Kalona has purchased an additional room and will add to its business rooms.

M. M. Heptonstall has been made vice-president of the Farmers Savings at Sac City. He has been for the past few years cashier of the institution. C. E. Harding, formerly cashier of the State Savings at Yetter has succeeded him as cashier.

W. W. Little has been made cashier of the State Bank of Early, succeeding the late G. S. Needham who died recently after an illness of three weeks. Mr. Little has been assistant cashier.

E. R. Haines comes from Sherwood S. D., to become cashier of the First National at Britt.

F. W. Converse, who recently sold his stock in the Iowa Savings at Estherville to M. J. Groves, will go to Los Angeles to make his home.

The German Savings at Melvin now is doing business in its new structure.

A. L. Ward, well-known banker at Fairmont, has set aside $150,000 for a home for dependent children. This act of philanthropy has attracted wide attention over Iowa.

Asa T. Davis, teller in the Fidelity Savings at Marshalltown, was married recently to Miss Charlotte P. Southwick.

Roger Leavitt and C. A. Wise, prominent Cedar Falls bankers, were in Des Moines last week on business.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON

The approaching end of the year 1912 is occasion for reflection with not a little satisfaction on the part of Sioux City bankers, over the year's accomplishments. It has been a year of exceptional activity, of general prosperity, good profits, general business peace. There have been business failures, with possible losses to creditor banks, but in general these institutions have been able to successfully "cover up," and losses have been discounted before they occurred. Loans have been quite heavy and comparatively easy to get until by the late fall and early winter crop movement the demand became sufficient to cause a certain tightening of the purse strings.

Clearings for the year will show quite a marked excess over those of 1911, which, however, were not a criterion of conditions as they were, poor business year though it was. Bank consolidations last year cut down the clearings still more after crop failures had done their work. This year phenomenal crops, together with new banks, have brought the clearings up to an average of nearly 25 per cent greater than for 1911, and the first of December witnessed the total clearings up to that time well in excess of what they were for the full year previous. The total for December will be well above $150,388,133.97, for 1910 clearings which hitherto have held the record.

Bank Examiners H. M. Bostwick and N. E. Haugen, with their clerk, have been busy the past week examining the national banks of Sioux City. There is every evidence that they find them in their usually stable and smooth running condition.

South Dakota politics, not yet settled from the disturbances of a general election, is already beginning to be ruffled by the prospects of another election two years from now. In this the bankers will be represented by at least one of their number. Geo. H. Randall, president of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company, of Rapid City, confesses an ambition to become governor of his state. Being a good democrat, he submerges this to the extent of saying that he will be a candidate only on condition that E. S. Johnson, of Yankton, who almost won this time, does not care to make another try for the office.

Friends of Mr. Randall have been trying to get him to seek appointment as examiner, but he asserts he has no ambition along this line.

Having lately returned from a visit at the Chicago land show, particularly proud of the South Dakota exhibit, Mr. Randall has started a movement to secure state appropriations for carrying on a publicity campaign in the east and middle west for the state as a whole. He will co-operate with Immigration Commissioner Deets in asking for $250,000 to be spent in maintaining permanent exhibits in at least six big eastern centers.

H. J. McMahon, vice-president of the First State Bank of Philip, S. D., has announced that he will seek appointment to the post-mastership of his home town. He is a retired sheep man.

When the safe of the First State Bank of White Owl, S. D., was opened after the fire that destroyed the town, it was discovered that $100 in gold had been melted down and that a considerable quantity of currency had been charred.

C. S. Allen has been elected president, M. M. Cummins, vice-president, and T. C. Torrison, cashier of the State Bank of Martin, S. D.

Johnson Brothers, owners of the Andes State Bank, Andes, S. D., have sold it to the Ravinia State Bank, of Ravinia.

The following bankers were in Sioux City the past week: W. H. Shaw, president of the Hutchinson County Bank, Parkston, S. D.; W. S. Short, president of the Northwestern State, Orange City, Iowa; Herman Fortin, cashier, Farmers Bank, Salix, Iowa; John C. Clary, president, Commercial Bank, Hornick, Iowa; Clyde Wilcox, cashier, Platte (S. D.) State Bank. State Bank Examiner J. H. Muldowney, of Nebraska, was in Sioux City Thursday calling on his friend Large at the First National.

FARMERS STATE, DYERSVILLE, IA.

Farmers State of Dyersville, Ia., is numbered among the ranks of the Roll of Honor Banks, having capital of $30,000 and surplus and profits of $43,661.90. Deposits are $946,394.26. The bank was established in 1896. Officers are John T. Sudmeier, president; Bernard Vaske, vice-president; John A. Schnieders, cashier. Directors include the officers and John A. Steger, M. C. Kremer, Henry Vorwald, George Schindler, John Deppe and Laurence C. Smith.

THE BANK OF PITTSBURGH, N. A.

The Bank of Pittsburgh, National Association, was founded in 1810 and is the oldest bank in the United States, west of the Allegheny Mountains. It has capital stock of $2,400,000, surplus and undivided profits of $3,354,708, circulation of $2,178,400 and deposits of $20,432,286.63. Officers are as follows: Harrison Nesbit, president; Wilson A. Shaw, vice-president and chairman of the board; James J. Donnell and J. D. Ayres, vice-presidents; W. F. Bickel, cashier; J. M. Russell and E. M. Seibert, assistant cashiers, and George F. Wright, auditor.

HELP FIGHT TUBERCULOSIS

The Red Cross Christmas seal—little messenger of hope and cheer—is again with us. Although the little stickers cost but one cent each, they are the best investment in good health one can make. Modern science has demonstrated conclusively that tuberculosis, the great white plague, is a preventable disease if consumptives are cared for properly.

Red Cross seals help to provide hospitals, day camps, sanatoria, dispensaries, open-air schools, visiting nurses and other means for the care of consumptives. That there is need for such work is shown in the fact that there are upwards of 1,000,000 cases of consumption in the United States alone. If these sufferers are allowed to go uncared for they spread the disease among others, so that every Red Cross seal purchased is a sound investment in your own health and that of your family.

Every cent derived from the sale of Red Cross seals, after the actual cost of printing is deducted, goes into the fight on tuberculosis in the immediate vicinity in which the stamps are sold. The Chicago Tuberculosis Institute, which is doing such splendid work along preventive lines, is supported by voluntary contributions of philanthropic persons and from the sale of Red Cross seals in Chicago. Through its committee on factories the Institute has caused a system of medical inspection to be inaugurated in some of the largest manufacturing plants in the city. By means of this medical inspection, the first symptoms of tuberculosis are detected and in many instances the workers are cured without loss of time. Without such a system of medical inspection the disease is allowed to run on until it is beyond the stage where it can be cured.

Every one can help a little in the fight by buying Red Cross seals. The actual care and treatment of consumptives must be left to experts, but funds are necessary to carry on the work and the Red Cross seal offers an easy and practical way of providing such funds. Place the seals on the back of your Christmas letters and packages. They convey a message of good cheer at this season of good will, but they do much more than that.

CALIFORNIA BANKERS ORGANIZE THE GROUP SYSTEM

A large number of bankers representing the banks in northern California met at Sacramento December 7th for the purpose of organizing a group of the California Bankers Association. J. M. Henderson, Jr., president, Sacramento Clearing House, called the meeting to order, stating the object, and introduced as the principal speaker F. H. Colburn, of San Francisco, secretary, California Bankers Association. Mr. Colburn addressed the assemblage, explaining the group system, which had received the endorsement of the state association at its last annual meeting.

The organization was completed by the election of the following officers: Alden Anderson, Sacramento, president; C. W. Bush, Woodland, first vice-president; Fred E. Wadsworth, Yreka, second vice-president; Egbert Brown, Sacramento, secretary; W. B. Swain, Marysville, treasurer.

The bankers of California are unusually well organized. In only a very few states of the Union has the A. B. A. more members than in the "Land of Sunshine, Fruit and Flowers;" moreover, the California Bankers Association is both progressive and aggressive in behalf of its members, particularly in legislative affairs and in protective work. Such being the case, the bankers in the interior sections of the state were hesitant about adopting the group system until urged to do so by Secretary Colburn, who pointed out that the bankers of a district may with benefit to themselves, act in matters of local importance which would not necessarily be of interest to bankers of other sections of the state.

Following the inauguration of the group system the visiting bankers were entertained by the Sacramento bankers at a dance, and on the following day were taken on an extended automobile ride, opportunity being given en route to witness the operation of one of the mammoth gold dredging machines which are working the gravel beds near the Feather River.

BOND MEN'S CLUB

The Bond Men's Club of Chicago has sent out its first annual year book, containing a list of the officers, directors and committees of the organization, as well as a copy of the constitution and by-laws, together with a complete list of the members. The club is composed of representatives of most of the principal investment bond houses of Chicago. The organization is unique inasmuch as there are few similar clubs in the United States composed purely of bond men in one city.

The purpose of the club, as is stated in the preamble, is to promote the social and educational welfare of men in the investment security business. In this connection the club meets every Thursday for lunch at the Hotel LaSalle. Twice each month some speaker of prominence, either in the bond business or in some business closely allied with the investment bond business, addresses the club. Recent speakers have been W. M. L. Fiske, resident partner of Wm. A. Read & Co., Chicago; Andrew Cooke, of Cooke, Holtz & Co., Chicago, and Geo. B. Caldwell, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, and president of the Investment Bankers Association of America.

Officers are as follows: E. E. Quantrell of N. W. Halsey & Co., president; W. T. Bacon of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company, vice-president; Frank F. Winans of the Northern Trust, secretary; Donald Scott of W. A. Read & Co., treasurer. Directors are E. E. Quantrell, B. J. Clarke, C. F. Glore, W. T. Bacon, Frank F. Winans, Donald Scott and J. R. Kimball. Committees are: Program, C. F. Glore, chairman; J. A. Stevenson, A. C. Allyn. Membership, J. R. Kimball, chairman; B. F. Taylor, G. W. Peck. Finance: B. J. Clarke, chairman; P. W. Chapman, S. W. White.

only has to do with the ascertaining the value of the shares of capital stock and for that reason, on account of the amount of space it would require, I do not quote it. The assessor the board of review and the state auditor all have officially held that the popular construction of the above section of our revenue law imposed the tax upon the bank, in that the assessor and board of review have made the assessment against the bank, and the state auditor has accepted the report of the banks containing the deduction for taxes under item 7(a). I believe there is no class of business better able or more willing to pay its just taxes than ours; but as I see it, the above ruling is erroneous and unjust, and it seems to me that a vigorous protest ought to be made to the end that the ruling may be revoked. If it is permitted to stand, I feel that it will work an injustice upon the banks in this state, and I sincerely hope that a proper interest may be aroused to the end it may be rightfully adjusted."

AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION TO MEET

Illinois State Automobile Association and the Illinois Highway Improvement Association will hold a joint meeting of officers and directors at Cairo at the Halliday Hotel, Saturday morning, December 21st. A. J. Williford of Nokomis, cashier of the Nokomis National, is president of the State Automobile Association; W. G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, is president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association. There are many Illinois bankers in both of these organizations who are interested in securing legislation calculated to improve the conditions of the country roads.

George W. Havens has been elected president of the Ladoga (Ind.) State Bank.

MAINLY ABOUT BANKS AND BANKERS

present to receive those who will attend and a luncheon will be prepared.

THERE is a probability that Mr. Noel's committee will be invited to attend the banquet of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association called for January 22d at the Congress Hotel. In case his committee is invited it is his purpose to hold a session in the morning of that date so that it may not interfere with the regular business of the council.

WORD comes from Secretary E. G. McWilliam of the savings bank section that there is every probability that the school savings bank will be an established fact in New York City before long. Work has been progressing finely in Brooklyn also and Mr. McWilliam believes their plan to be the best that has yet come to his attention.

IT is expected that the school savings bank plan will be presented to the Illinois Teachers Association convention at Peoria on the 27th by Messrs. Armstrong of Galesburg and Sipfle of Pekin, both of whom are members of Chairman Noel's committee.

SECRETARY W. F. KEYSER of Missouri is considerably agitated over the recent performances of a man in his state who gave his name as John L. Morgan. Mr. Morgan succeeded in negotiating drafts at Raymondville purporting to have been drawn by the Bank of Billings on the Third National of St. Louis. This Mr. Morgan has left a trail of spurious paper all over the state. A reward of $50 is offered for his capture and full description has been furnished.

SECRETARY W. B. HARRISON of Oklahoma made a talk recently before the school teachers of Garfield county. He announced it as his conviction that "no teacher should be granted a certificate to teach in rural schools without having passed an examination on the elementary principles of soil fertility and crop production."

THIS good doctrine goes straight to the point and will be endorsed by all of those who have been taking an active part in the "Back to the Farm" movement.

HARRIS TRUST & SAVINGS BANK of Chicago is remembering its many friends among country banks with a specially prepared list of municipal bonds showing quite a comfortable yield. This list is for their convenience during the holiday investment period.

PLANS have been made to furnish more complete banking news from both North and South Dakota as well as from the Duluth and Superior region where commercial and financial growth has been so astonishing.

THE GUARANTY TRUST COMPANY of New York distributed on Thursday to its force of three hundred and fifty employees a Christmas bonus of ten per cent of their yearly salaries.

"MR. BROWN'S EXPERIENCE" is the newest and perhaps the best of the Guaranty Trust (N. Y.) booklets. It tells how Brown became a model patron of every department of the bank. Good stuff.

"THE BANKER," published at Pittsburgh, is "devoted to the bankers in Pennsylvania and in the United States." This upsets our classification lists. Shall we put down R. E. James, Joseph Wayne, Jr., A. S. Beymer as "bankers in Pennsylvania" and not "in the United States" unless they cross over into Jersey or West Virginia?

WE hear that Lewis E. Pierson, Brooklyn grocer, sent Rollin P. Grant, New York banker, a big Christmas turkey.

OUR good friend and fighter, J. N. Dolley of Kansas, has replied to the Investment Bankers of America resolutions adopted at the Waldorf-Astoria.

THAT'S a long way from Kansas and perhaps the young men forgot the active, persevering personality of the banking commissioner of the Sunflower State.

IN another column of this paper Mr. Dolley has his say in full and it's worth reading, just as anything is from his pen. He's an original without any very presentable counterfeits.

HE says: "I do not believe it was the intention of the Investment Bankers Association to use its influence and recommendations in assisting or aiding the enemies of the supervision by the states and government of the sale of stocks, bonds and other securities."

THERE is a combined effort all over the country by the great army of dishonest promoters and dealers in blue sky securities to check the onward march of progress and supervision by the states and government. The objections raised by the Investment Bankers Association of America are of only minor consequence and can be very easily overcome."

HIS general article tells of concessions he is willing to make to the legitimates and the promise is that good will come out of it all.

THE whole investing public is interested.

A FRIEND of ours was down Green Valley way the other day and found President John D. Phillips, of the Illinois Bankers Association out in the corn field, not actually husking it, but superintending the work.

THERE were twelve teams surrounded by huskers in the one field, and one man had a record of 180 bushels for the day. Chapman, Vincent, Curtin, Edens, Harris and the rest of you near farmers please take note.

AFTER husking J. D. is going in for a little more activity in the association work. The annual council dinner will be in Chicago, January 22d, with Col. J. S. Aisthorpe in the chair.

R. N. BALLOU calls attention to the fact that the National Produce is there with the dividend as usual.

C. C. BURFORD, down at Urbana says Christmas business never was so good. CASHIER.

AGRICULTURAL COMMITTEE MEETS

Chairman B. F. Harris of the committee on agriculture and vocational education of the Illinois Bankers Association was in Chicago Wednesday, where he called a meeting of the committee at the offices of the association in the Rookery at 10:30 A. M. There were present W. G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois; J. S. Gridley, cashier of the First National of Libertyville and R. R. Ward, vice-president of the Benton State Bank. Irving Shuman was unable to be present owing to a business trip in the West. The committee considered all of the matters pending before it which relate to national field and farm demonstration work and the vocational education bill now pending before a conference committee. The committee will co-operate with the committee on good roads in the matter of formulating plans for presenting these matters to the Illinois legislature. W. G. Edens again was selected secretary of the committee.

for such items as our good friends in these two states may care to transmit for publication.

PRESIDENT JOHN D. PHILLIPS of the Illinois Bankers Association, in a recent bulletin to the membership makes the claim that we live in the greatest agricultural state in the Union, but that he admits with sincere regret that "our roads and our road laws rank among the poorest."

PRESIDENT PHILLIPS enclosed to the membership a good roads pamphlet prepared by the good roads committee under the chairmanship of S. E. Bradt of DeKalb. This pamphlet tells what Illinois is doing as well as what other states are doing.

PRESIDENT PHILLIPS believes that this is one of the most important issues before the people of the state to-day and urges all bankers in the state to assist in producing legislation along intelligent and practical lines at the next session of the legislature.

WE could suggest another subject likely to come before the next session of the legislature in which President Phillips could be of great assistance were it not for his present environment. Do not let everybody guess that we are thinking of state supervision for it might be something else.

HOWEVER, the pamphlet which has been sent out on the subject of good roads is a very able document and should produce good results. The members of the committee responsible for its publication are S. E. Bradt, DeKalb, chairman; Thomas Sudduth, Springfield, secretary; O. P. Bourland of Pontiac; L. L. Emmerson of Mount Vernon and O. W. Hoyt of Geneseo.

WHAT do you think of those pussy-footed gentlemen known as the "Flying Squadron" slipping into Chicago for an annual meeting and jollification without ever tipping it off even to THE CHICAGO BANKER that they were coming?

BEING composed largely of publicity men and new business experts, this remarkable change of policy as from individuals to that of an association becomes one of the seven wonders of 1912 at least.

WE have been told, but do not know from experience, that newspaper men were "not admitted." We shall be glad to publish a correction if this is not true, for it ought not to be true in this day and generation.

H. E. OTTE of the National City Bank has returned from a business trip to Kansas City fully assured that the prosperity of that section of the country is entirely beyond the "recall."

PRESIDENT HENRY M. CARPENTER of the Monticello (Ia.) State Bank is sending out his Christmas greetings this year in the shape of a beautiful calendar. Mr. Carpenter is one of the new members of the Big Council from Iowa and very popular in his state. His one purpose in sending out his Christmas greetings in such beautiful shape is to give pleasure to the friends and customers of the bank.

W. M. D. MOORE, who has been a very useful and efficient vice-president in the First National at Joliet, will be found at the State National Bank of Omaha as a vice-president and cashier after January 1st. President George Woodruff gives his blessing to Mr. Moore and declares him to be "one of the best in the business."

SECRETARY F. H. COLBURN of the California Bankers Association assures us that a recent group meeting at Sacramento received more newspaper attention than the average state convention. Colburn is a great believer in the group system and has succeeded in bringing the bankers of his state into almost unanimous accord on the subject.

J. P. HINTON, cashier of the Hannibal (Mo.) National, was unanimously chosen chairman of the executive committee of the Young Men's Christian Associations of Missouri at a meeting held at the Mercantile Club in St. Louis this week.

MR. HINTON'S election follows several years of earnest service in Y. M. C. A. work, three years of which have been spent on the state executive committee. During this time he has been one of the strongest forces in the work, and his election to this position is a merited recognition of his efforts.

AS president of the Missouri Bankers Association, Mr. Hinton made a great record. We believe his address before the Kansas bankers on "The Functions of a State Bankers Association" to be the best of its kind.

SECRETARY ANDREW SMITH had it printed in full for his membership among the Hoosiers. Any president-elect would profit by its careful study.

MR. HINTON disbelieves (hear! hear!) in association house organs, in dealing in lead pencils and typewriter ribbons and says so. He truly was a high-grade president.

GEORGE H. NORTON, who travels out for one of Chicago's enterprising bond firms, is quite a character in his way. He believes in personal advertising and goes at it systematically. When Mr. Norton thinks his firm ought to be a subscriber to a publication and they are not willing to, he foots the bill himself.

MR. NORTON is the man who distributes three-cornered lead pencils at the group meetings in Illinois and at holiday times sends out souvenirs, calendars and memorandum books to his own customers all over the state and he does it all at his own expense.

THIS has built him up quite a personal clientele and it is almost certain that his customers would stick by him no matter what bond company he might be traveling out for. It is a point worth consideration by those similarly situated.

KNAUTH, NACHOD & KUHNE of New York, who do such a tremendous business in travelers' checks, have sent out a letter dated December 16th, advising that there is every probability that the drastic liquidation which has been taking place in the stock market has put prices at about the lowest level for the year. This is worth attention by those who may have funds to invest.

SECRETARY P. W. HALL of Iowa gives a large part of his precious time to the protective work of the association. His study of the crook and his ways has led him to believe that the same energy and ability displayed in a legitimate calling would bring a very much larger income to the crook than he gets for preying upon banks and other institutions.

MR. HALL thinks it unfortunate that men of such great business capacity as some of them demonstrate in defrauding bankers do not apply their time and exert their personal magnetism in some regular business pursuit.

PRESIDENT CHARLES SHADE of the Iowa organization is not quite as much of a farmer as our own John D. Phillips of Green Valley. However, he is equally as busy a man at this time of the year.

MR. SHADE lives at Rock Rapids, where he is president of the First National, but he also is president of four other banks in as many different prosperous towns in his section of Iowa. In addition to that he is taking charge of a nine million farm loan business and has the life department for one of the largest insurance companies in the East for his state.

MR. SHADE before his election supposed that the position was largely an honorary one and that the secretary did all the rest. He has found out that the secretary does about three men's work but that necessarily there is much left for the president to do. The correspondence of the office takes up considerable time and the Iowa association with its many activities furnishes opportunities for the president to keep his hand in. Up to date the present administration has been one of progress and harmony.

COMMERCIAL NATIONAL of Washington, D. C., is making quite a hit by distributing free of charge a substantially made, cloth bound removable cover for the Washington telephone directory. The cover is furnished to those who will call for it and contains a handsome advertisement of the bank on the front cover.

ALEXANDER WOLF, counsel for the Bank of Commerce and Savings of Washington, D. C., delivered a lecture before the Washington Chapter, A. I. B., on Thursday evening, his subject being "Savings Banks."

THIS was the next to the last lecture of the banking and finance course, the concluding number being by Corcoran Thom, vice-president and trust officer of the American Security and Trust Company. This concluding lecture will occur on January 9th.

THE BANKERS ASSOCIATION of the District of Columbia held a special session this week at the New Willard in Washington to hear an explanation of the famous Lever agricultural extension bill presented by its author. Representative Ashbury F. Lever of South Carolina said he was pleased to note that the active officials of practically every banking institution in the national capital were present. At the close of his remarks the Lever bill was unanimously endorsed by the association and a committee named to urge the passage of the measure. See full report elsewhere.

MOST of the western pro-farmer advocates favor the Page bill as more nearly complete than the Lever bill but are willing to accept the Lever enactment if the Page bill cannot be passed.

CONGRESSMAN LEVY has introduced a bill in congress to reduce the treasury reserve to thirty millions. The proposed bill also provides that national banks may loan 20 per cent of capital and surplus on real estate and prohibits country banks from considering their debit balances in New York and other centers as legal reserve.

THE Levy bill is quite an innovation and will have considerable effect on the relation of liabilities to assets if passed. Opinion in Washington is that the bill will not become a law. Secretary John Poole of the Bankers Association of the District of Columbia is keeping a close eye on the situation.

CHAIRMAN JOSEPH R. NOEL has called a meeting of the committee on education in savings and thrift under the auspices of the savings bank section of the American Bankers Association, to meet at the City Club, 315 Plymouth Court, Chicago, at 12:30 next Monday, December 23d. Chairman Noel will be

ROGERS PARK NATIONAL

The following have been chosen as officers of the Rogers Park National, organized recently: James J. Barbour, president; Thomas T. Snell, vice-president; W. H. Creber, cashier; directors are James J. Barbour, Thomas T. Snell; Otto E. Freund, W. H. Himmel and H. C. Snell.

The stock of the new bank was subscribed at $120 per share, the premium constituting a surplus of $10,000. The new institution will open for business in the near future at Greenleaf Avenue and North Clark Street.

James E. Miller

James E. Miller, formerly assistant secretary of the Knickerbocker Trust Company of New York, has been elected a vice-president of that institution. He will be in charge of the up-town office at 34th and Fifth Avenue. He entered the employ of the Knickerbocker Trust as a minor employee and his advancement from the beginning has been rapid. He was graduated from Yale in 1904.

NEW YORK BANKER FOR SECRETARY OF TREASURY

Friends of C. A. Pugsley, president of the New York Bankers Association and of the Westchester County National of Peekskill, are urging President-elect Wilson to consider the name of the New York man in appointing a secretary of the treasury. A resolution to that effect was adopted at the recent annual meeting of Group 6 of the New York association.

ELECTED VICE-PRESIDENT OF TRUST COMPANY

Edwin W. Adams has been elected a vice-president of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company of Baltimore. He has been assistant cashier of the National Bank of Baltimore for some time and prior to that time occupied a similar position with the Bank of Baltimore until its absorption by the Third National. He will assume the duties of the vice-presidency when the company moves into its new home.

NEW YORK BANK TO PENSION EM- PLOYEES

National City Bank of New York has announced the establishment of a system of pensions, death benefits and gratuities for the officers and employees of that institution, who now number more than 450. The entire expense of this plan will be borne by the bank. The pensions will be calculated on the basis of 2 per cent of the average salary for the three years immediately preceding retirement, multiplied by the number of years of service. The maximum pension is not to exceed 60 per cent of such salary, or the sum of $5,000. The directors of the bank, however, may reward by an additional allowance any officer or employee who has rendered especially meritorious service. Retirement is to be optional at sixty years of age and compulsory at sixty-five, unless an officer or employee is requested

New Vice-President for New York Bank

HERBERT P. HOWELL, whose election as a vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce of New York becomes effective January first, has been at the head of the credit department of the Carnegie Steel Company for the past eleven years. In that time Mr. Howell has come to be considered as a credit man possessed of great ability and of peculiarly accurate information; more than that, as a credit man who has the facility of securing correct information along credit lines and of being able to impart it to others clearly and with exceptional thoroughness. Because of his unusual ability in this line, his counsel and opinions on credits have been constantly sought by most of the banks and trust companies throughout the country.

Mr. Howell is but thirty-nine years of age. All but sixteen years of his life have been spent in the service of the Carnegie Steel Company. His associates believe that one of the chief elements contributing to Mr. Howell's successful management of the credit department has been his method of conducting its relations with the steel trade. It has been one of his ideas that to advance relations at once cordial and effective it was necessary for either the head of the department or his assistant to visit the trade with considerable frequency. He has put this idea into practice through the years that the department has been under his direction. It is believed by many of Mr. Howell's friends that the personal knowledge thus directly acquired enabled him to give evidence of the qualities which first attracted the attention of eastern bankers.

by the board of directors to continue longer in the employ of the bank. The death benefits provided for are payable on the death of an officer or clerical employee in active service or a pensioner on the retired list. An amount equal to two years' salary of such officer or employee is to be paid to his family or dependents. The sum so paid, however, is not to exceed $10,000. Upon the death of a pensioner twice the sum which he had been receiving as an annual pension is to be paid to his family or dependents.

PLAN TO REORGANIZE MICHIGAN GROUPS

Secretary (Mrs.) H. M. Brown of the Michigan Bankers Association is out with an important bulletin to the members of that organization, calling their attention to a plan to reorganize the bankers' group system in the Wolverine State by increasing the number of groups from seven to ten.

WILLIAM L. ROSS

William L. Ross of the Tillotson and Wolcott Company, Cleveland, has resigned that position to open and manage a bond department for the Second Ward Savings of Milwaukee.

NATIONAL BANK FOR AUSTIN

Application to organize the Austin (Chicago) National, with capital stock of $100,000, has been approved by the comptroller. Among those interested are Francis E. Pray, Louis Masen, M. J. Collins, P. Junkenfeld and William F. Giles.

CHICAGO VISITORS

C. H. Worden, vice-president of the First National of Fort Wayne, an ex-president of the Indiana Bankers Association, and Charles A. Wilding, president of the Tri-State Loan and Trust Company of Fort Wayne, were recent Chicago callers. These gentlemen expressed themselves as well satisfied with conditions in their section. They reported that farm products are being marketed slowly.

George A. Anthony, president of the Kewanee (Ill.) National, which shortly will liquidate as a national institution, the intention being to conduct its business hereafter as a state bank and trust company, visited Chicago recently.

W. C. Hadley, president of the State Bank of Collinsville, Ill., was here last week. Mr. Hadley is of the group of southern Illinois bankers who believe that we should begin at once in the improvement of our country roads. Collinsville is located on the line of the old national turnpike running from Washington, D. C., to St. Louis. The people of his city and county are enthusiastic in the desire that the national government appropriate money to rebuild this historic roadway.

CHICAGO BOND MAN MOVES TO TEXAS

HAPPY New Year to you all. A special acknowledgement is made to kind and thoughtful friends who have sent greetings and remembrance cards.

NO, the New York Clearing House Association didn't vote to "abolish collection charges" of any kind. It simply was a piece of misinformation. In an editorial the correct version was given but the "irresponsible sub-editor," as the late Joseph Medill was wont to say, was responsible.

"STERLING Debenture Bonds" no longer will be advertised, praised and endorsed by our New York contemporaries. Some of them are said to have used pressure to get the ads. Remember them?

PRESIDENT WILLIAM A. HEATH of the Chicago Bankers Club thought the members were living too high at the Blackstone and the LaSalle so he had them out to the Transit House for a square meal on the substantial.

IT was the regular December meeting, Saturday night, and was well attended. Fletcher Farrell says the eats were fine.

JOHN FLETCHER of the Drovers told the bankers of the vast business done at the yards, which for more than ten years has averaged above a million dollars a day. Little wonder the stockyards banks prosper so.

ELBERT HUBBARD, the imported talent, was expected to be amusing, but in reality, so the papers say, was quite abusive and did not keep to the subject, which always is disappointing.

IN another column, G. W. Nye, of Garfield (Wash.) National takes quite a fall out of our J. Edwards Smith, correspondent at Minneapolis. Mr. Smith was off in his punctuation of the dollars and cents quoted, the "points" being placed just one figure too far to the left.

THUS $1,200,000 becomes $12,000,000 and $20,000 jumps to $200,000.

WARREN W. SMITH, cashier of the South Chicago Savings, "is pleased to announce" that his bank not only voted the regular quarterly dividend of two per cent, but also an "extra" of two per cent. It will help out on the stockholders' Christmas bills.

A. PIATT ANDREW (where have we seen that name before) has sent out a statistical pamphlet on the "Money Trust." It contains valuable data for those who are looking into the subject. Especially so for those who intend to speak or write on the question.

TREASURER of Illinois Bankers Association, O. L. Hiser, State Bank of Lexington, has sent out greetings cards. We hear that President J. D. Phillips will do the same for the association to all member banks.

W. D. VINCENT of Spokane has been elected a vice-president of the Merchants Association of that city. It is a sort of a boosters' club, a game at which Vincent shines.

YARDE, OTIS & TAYLOR, Chicago, made quite a hit with a little booklet, "The Christmas Spirit or the Bond that Ties." It tells why and how you should select only the best bonds. It was very clever in design also.

THOSE of you who remember the fine treatment bankers received on the big Chicago-Detroit Special, should try "The Wolverine," the 23-hour New York special, next trip East. C. C. Clark, who was "on" the Detroit job, is at 228 S. Clark Street and will fix you up.

"THE River-to-River-Road is due primarily to the desire of J. W. Eichinger, of the Des Moines Capital, to perform a newspaper feat. Any man who can transform an Iowa mud road to a nearly perfect highway, 380 miles long, at an estimated cost of building and maintenance for the first year of $3.00 a mile, has grasped a new idea in road building. This road from Council Bluffs to Davenport is a success and is commanding the attention of the entire country and Canada," says Stewart Ives de Kraft, in Harper's Weekly.

WHY will not a Springfield or Peoria paper do as much for Illinois. Get Eichinger's plan.

PRESIDENT F. C. DANFORTH of the South Dakota Bankers Association announces that the executive council met at Huron, and with other things of importance set the time of the holding of the next state convention on the 25th and 26th of June at Watertown, S. D.

GEN. WM. R. HAMBY, ex-president of the Texas Bankers Association, writes to say "I have been a subscriber to your journal for quite a while. Do not let me get in arrears."

THEN the General, true to a certain accomplished Texas editor, slyly suggests "You will find all of the Texas news in the Texas Bankers Record." This with our compliments we pass on to Miss Riddle.

J. N. DOLLEY made another hit almost as great as the "Blue Sky" law. Applicants for banking positions in Kansas are given examinations and certificates just as school teachers are. Fine scheme.

IN another part of this paper it is told how a lady obtained a bank cashiership on the strength of her fine examination papers. Keep your eye on Dolley.

A BANKER out there says of the plan "the examination of proposed bank officers for positions in state banks is proving very successful and is doing a very effective work as to raising the standard of efficiency of management of the Kansas State banks."

F. B. CARSON perhaps could have kept up his bank—"The Chicago Bank"—near 63d and Cottage Grove for a long time so far as the city or the state are concerned.

HE only offered 100 per cent interest but he foolishly distributed his offers by mail. The government got him for a misuse of the mails and thus opens up a new avenue of supervision.

SUPPOSE none but real banks could use the mails for bank literature of any kind? Get it?

"THE Chicago bank reserves the right to return part or all of your deposit with 100 per cent interest at any time and without notice," is one of the baits sent out. Promises to "make you president of a small bank" were frequent.

MANY of the depositors are said to be willing to remit the 100 per cent, if they can recover the principal.

Meeting of German Bankers Congress at Berlin

The Fourth Congress of the German Bankers Association, which was held at Munich recently, presented a contrast to its previous meetings in a twofold way. The association was born in the struggle over the Boerse law, its original purpose was to convince public opinion of the evils of that measure, and particularly to influence the government in the direction of its reform. With the removal of the worse features of the law in 1908 that end was in the main attained.

The disappearance of the Boerse law made one of the contrasts referred to, and the congress was able to devote its entire time to discussing practical banking and financial problems. Only one political grievance, the law imposing a tax upon bank cheques, came in for occasional reference by the speakers, but it did not find a place in the program of topics for discussion. The subsidence of more or less political discussion gave occasion for the second contrast, the more friendly attitude, namely, of the various governing authorities toward the association than was shown at previous congresses. When the bankers first organized at Frankfurt in 1902, the imperial government was represented, indeed, by a subordinate official, but his participation was of the most formal character; and at none of the following congresses was the government more than a mere passive observer.

At Munich there was a striking change. The imperial chancellor and the home office were represented by Under-Secretary of State Dr. Richter, who is the government's specialist in banking matters, and the imperial treasury also was represented. The Reichsbank was represented by its vice-president and another director; the Seehandlung and the Preussische Zentral-Genossenschaftskasse, two Prussian State banks, sent their presidents, both of whom took part in the discussions, as did also one of the directors of the Reichsbank. Moreover, the sessions were attended by most of the members of the Bavarian Cabinet, one of the ministers of Hesse, and by numerous members of the Reichstag and various state assemblies. Professor Riesser, who was the moving spirit in creating the original organization, was chosen for the fourth time to preside over the Congress.

In giving an account of the discussions of the Congress here, the topics will be taken up in the order of their importance. The recent efforts of the Reichsbank to improve its position by charging extra interest at the quarters' ends and also to induce the credit banks to build up larger stocks of cash and to enlarge their balances with the Reichsbank, undoubtedly have formed the most interesting subjects of discussion in banking circles of Germany for above a year. It was, therefore, only a natural result that the discussion of the topic, "The Occasional Excessive Demands upon the Reichsbank," their causes, and the means to remedy them, easily occupied the foremost place in the attention of the bankers assembled at Munich. The principal paper on the subject was read by Professor Karl Helfferich, formerly president of the Anatolian Railway, now one of the directors of the Deutsche Bank. Dr. Helfferich widely is recognized as one of the foremost students of banking and currency problems in Germany.

By means of a formidable array of statistical material he showed that the demands upon the Reichsbank at the quarters' ends had increased threefold since 1895, whereas it had not been able to increase its resources in due proportion. The cash reserves, the gold stock in particular, have remained rather stationary. The phenomenon was attributed to the fact that the deposits, since about the same year, have not adequately increased. In explanation of this unsatisfactory movement he pointed to the immense economic development of the country, which has enlarged the requirements for currency and aggravated the periodical fluctuations in the demand, whereas the use of cheques and other substitutes for cash has not kept pace with the general monetary activity. At the same time the entire economic and social development of the country has tended to concentrate payments at the ends of the quarters.

In proposing remedies for this state of things he uttered a warning against any measures that might retard the development of industry and trade. Cheques must be more extensively used, and to this end the stamp-tax must be abolished. Small bank-notes—denominations of 20 and 50 marks—must be issued by the Reichsbank in larger amounts as means for strengthening its gold stock. The view was particularly insisted upon that the Reichsbank must require its customers to increase their balances in order to promote its efficiency, but this policy must not be undertaken by any rule of general application, but by dealing with each account individually in accordance with sound banking principles. Dr. Helfferich had no fault to find with the methods of conducting business at the head office, but the managers of the provincial branches, he claimed, often show an excess of zeal in obtaining bills for discount, instead of insisting upon the maintenance of ampler cash balances by their customers. He admitted that any increase of deposits must result in a certain contraction of credits; but this presupposes a reduction of the unduly high interest rates paid by German banks on deposits. The deposits of the banks in general are sufficient indeed to secure their safety and liquidity, as was shown during the Morocco crisis of last year, when the German banks certainly came out no worse than foreign banks. The problem, however, is not one affecting the general credit banks alone; the savings banks, co-operative societies, co-operative banks, and all other institutions must take part in its solution. The postoffice cheque account system, which has sprung into great importance in the few years of its existence, must keep its surplus in a more liquid form by attaching itself to the Giro business of the Reichsbank. It also is of special importance that the various governmental financial authorities maintain larger balances with the Reichsbank and conduct their operations with more regard for money market conditions. The Imperial Treasury still contributes towards the pressure at the quarters' ends by handing in bills for discount. The banks, said Dr. Helfferich in conclusion, are willing to work for a reform in methods of making payments and for promoting the efficiency of the Reichsbank, and through their co-operation the evils under discussion can be removed; but for a complete reform the participation of all financial institutions and the various government treasuries and other boards is necessary.

Dr. Paul von Schwabach, head of the Bleichroeder Bank and formerly British Consul General at Berlin, mentioned various factors as accounting for the pressure at the Reichsbank. There has been an enormous increase in the general volume of payments in Germany; the loans of the empire and the German states have called for larger amounts for meeting interest charges; agriculture has made larger demands; prices of commodities have risen; and at the quarters' ends the general credit banks have to supply themselves with cash by having the bills in their portfolios rediscounted at the Reichsbank. General economic conditions have made it necessary for them to do this to a growing degree in recent years. The concentration of banks is another cause. The Reichsbank, too, has established its branches in every part of the empire, and these exert themselves systematically to obtain a larger share of the bills coming upon the market. Bankers often have discussed remedial measures in their meetings, but no definite solution yet has been found. The much-praised panacea of increasing the cash reserves of the banks is very difficult to apply owing to the contraction of credits involved. He doubted the practicability of legislative or administrative measures in this direction, because it would be impossible to fix a criterion for determining what new credits should be granted and what

ALABAMA BANKING LAW UPHELD

That the superintendent of banks for Alabama has the right to institute suits for the purpose of reducing to his possession the assets of insolvent banking institutions has been decided by Chancellor L. D. Gardner of the southeastern chancery division. This decision was brought about as a result of a suit started by A. E. Walker, superintendent of banks, against the Montgomery Bank and Trust Company, a suit involving the assets of the bank of Geneva. The defendant demurred, claiming that the bank regulation act of 1911 was unconstitutional on the grounds that the provisions contained in section ten of the act are not included in the title of the act; second, that if so, it was the taking of property without due process of law. The chancellor ruled that the title of the act set forth the authority of the superintendent to enter such suit, and that inasmuch as provision was made for a hearing before the banking board with the subsequent right of appeal, it could not be construed as taking property without due process of law.

NEW YORK BANK DIVIDENDS

Liberty National has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 5 per cent and an extra dividend of 5 per cent, payable January 2d. Fulton Trust has declared a semiannual dividend of 5 per cent and an extra dividend of 2 per cent, payable January 2d to stockholders of record December 23d. Brooklyn Trust has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 5 per cent and an extra dividend of 10 per cent, payable January 2d, to stockholders of record December 21st.

LOUISIANA BANK MERGER

Two Louisiana banks, the First National and the Lake Charles National of that place, are to consolidate. Application has been made for a charter for the Lake Charles Trust and Savings Bank. The trust company will be operated in connection with the First National, which will be the name of the consolidated banks. The merged banks will have a capital of $400,000 and deposits of more than $1,500,000.

FOR REGULATION OF PRIVATE BANKS

A bill to regulate the private banks of Michigan is to be presented at the next session of the Michigan legislature by Representative James Henry of Battle Creek. Mr. Henry proposes to place some sort of regulation of the kind imposed on state banks on all of the privately owned banks in the state.

GROUP 8, NEW YORK

Members of Group 8 of the New York Bankers Association will hold their annual banquet January 20th at the Waldorf-Astoria. The list of the principal speakers has not yet been compiled. This group includes the banks located in Manhattan.

STOCKHOLDER MUST ASCERTAIN CONDITION OF BANK

In the case of Little vs. the Owensboro Savings Bank and Trust Company's Receiver (150 S. W. Rep., 334) the court of appeals of Kentucky holds "that a person purchasing stock from a bank and receiving dividends thereon for several years without taking any steps to ascertain the true condition of the bank cannot, after it has become insolvent and proceedings have been instituted to wind up its affairs, rescind the purchase on the ground of fraudulent representations as to the bank's condition, and the fact that the stockholder lives at a considerable distance from the bank, and that it would be inconvenient for him to ascertain the condition of the bank, does not change this rule."

BALTIMORE BANK MERGER RATIFIED

At a joint meeting of the committees representing the Merchants National and the National Mechanics Banks, more than 70 per cent of the stockholders of each approved the merger of the two institutions. The name of the merged banks will be the Merchants-Mechanics National Bank of Baltimore. The capital stock will be increased from one million to two millions.

PROPOSE TO INCREASE DIRECTORS

A proposition to increase the number of directors from seven to not exceeding twenty-five, will be acted upon January 14th by the stockholders of the National City of Cleveland. It also is proposed to increase the capital stock from $250,000 to $500,000.

DOUGLAS COUNTY WORKING FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT

S. Y. Whitlock, cashier of the First National of Tuscola, Ill., one who has taken an active part in the development of the group system in this state and in affairs pertaining to the Illinois Bankers Association, is interested in the good roads work of his locality. Douglas county, of which Tuscola is the county seat, enjoys a reputation of having some well dragged earth roads. Mr. Whitlock says that George Seip and Edward Rideout of Tuscola, are two gentlemen who have been most active in the local good roads campaign. An organization of farmers and business men, of which Mr. Rideout is president, recently has been perfected. Early in January they are to hold a mass meeting in Tuscola at which competent speakers interested in the good roads agitation will be present and address the farmers and business men of Douglas county. It is the sort of work that Mr. Whitlock is doing in Douglas county, giving a large portion of his time and efforts in bringing the business men and farmers together, that will help to bring about a new era in road development in Illinois.

STATE BANK OF SPRING GREEN (WIS.)

H. H. Lins, acting assistant cashier of the State Bank of Spring Green, Wis., visited Chicago several days last week. Mr. Lins says that crop conditions have been very satisfactory in their part of Wisconsin, and that the deposits of the State Bank of Spring Green have shown a substantial increase since the call of September 4th, at which time they were $274,920; under the call of the state auditor November 26th, they amounted to $312,413. F. B. Hyland is president; Joseph Lins, vice-president; T. W. King, cashier. The board of directors, in addition to the officers, contains the names of Thomas McNulty, Mary Sales, and John Schoenmann. The bank was organized in 1900 with a capital of $25,000. It now has surplus and undivided profits of about $9,000.

MICHIGAN MAY HAVE GUARANTY LAW

Word comes from Michigan that Representative L. G. Wolcott of Marshall will introduce a bill at the coming session of the legislature providing for a guarantee of bank deposits. He says that he expects a great many bankers will oppose the proposed law.

ALBANY BANK MERGER

Albany (N. Y.) County Bank has been absorbed by the New York State National of that city. The New York State purchased two-thirds of the capital stock of the Albany County Bank. The combined capital of the two banks is $750,000, with surplus a little less than a million. The New York State has deposits of $19,600,000 and the Albany County Bank of more than a million.

Public Welfare

There are certain utilities that are absolutely necessary for the public welfare. Individuals require food, shelter, and clothing—municipalities require light and transportation. The former are our private necessities; the latter, our public necessities.

For this reason the companies that supply public utilities receive revenue from a dependable source, little affected during periods of industrial depressions. With the natural growth in population, the market for public utilities is also a constantly increasing one.

Send for our circular giving a selected list of public utilities securities to yield at present prices an average income of 5.75%.

MASSACHUSETTS MAY HAVE "BLUE SKY" LAW

A bill providing for regulation of firms dealing in stocks, bonds and other securities has been filed at the state house by Representative-elect John J. Lydon of Boston. Mr. Lydon plans to place the matter of such regulation and supervision in the hands of the banking commissioner. The bill contains a provision to the effect that foreign investment companies operating in Massachusetts must agree to allow action to be brought against them by the service of process of the secretary of the commonwealth. Each company is required to file a detailed statement setting forth the plan upon which it proposes to transact its business, a copy of all contracts, bonds or other instruments which it proposes to make with or sell to its contributors, a statement which shall show the name and location of the investment company and an itemized account of its actual financial condition, the amount of its property and liabilities and such other information concerning its affairs as the bank commissioner may require.

PENNSYLVANIA BANK MERGERS

Dollar Savings Fund and Trust Company of Pittsburgh will take over the Second National of Allegheny. Second National stock will be bought in at $380 per share. For the present both banks will continue to run as separate institutions; some time in the future, however, they will combine as one.

First National and the Yough National of Connellsville, Pa., will be consolidated in the near future. The combined resources of the two banks are three and one-half millions. It is proposed to turn the Yough National into a trust company, which will be operated by the same interests as the First National.

POINTS OUT NEED OF INCREASED RAILROAD FACILITIES

James J. Hill, in a speech delivered at the annual dinner of the Railway Business Association, held last week at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, said:

"The commerce of the country can escape disaster only by additions to and enlargements of terminals. Between 1909 and 1910 freight ton mileage grew 11 times as fast as trackage, and five times as fast as equipment. When the railroad yards are filled with cars that cannot be moved, the railroad loses a portion of its earnings; but the business man loses a larger share of his trade, and the workingman his employment.

"The public assumes that if enough cars are provided they can be moved on schedule time from point of origin to destination, wherever these may be. This is not the real trouble. What is really needed is the greater movement of cars. There is but one possible remedy—enlarged terminals."

The impairment of the credit of the railroads was attributed to decreased earning power and increased expenses.

Mr. Hill further said that the railroads are entitled to confidence and relief because they have displayed efficiency. He declared that the capitalization per mile of the railroads in this country is much lower than some of those in Europe.

"It is the duty of every business organization," said Mr. Hill, "of every business man, of capital interested in safe investment and labor interested in sure and remunerative employment, to help swing the country into line behind the only policy that can help and save them all. No pledge of national credit, no subsidy in cash, no immunity or privilege is asked; only freedom to raise on reasonable terms the capital without which the work cannot be done; implying necessarily freedom to earn on that capital the return without which it will not be forthcoming, and enough additional to make and keep railway equipment and service equal to the progress of invention and improvement and to the just expectations of the people."

PLAN TO PRESERVE FORESTS

Harry E. Kelley, Fort Smith banker and capitalist and reputed to be the biggest landholder in Arkansas, has set aside 10,000 acres of timber land in Phillips and Monroe counties, in the southeastern section of the state. Mr. Kelley believes that under his system this tract will supply lumber as long as those who follow him handle the forest under scientific methods. The Kelley conservation forest is the largest privately owned institution of its kind in the world.

PRIVATE BANKS CONVERTED TO STATE

C. E. Bingham & Co., of Sedro-Woolley, Wash., the biggest private bank in the state, have taken out a state charter under the name "C. E. Bingham & Co. State Bank." The capital stock is $50,000. It was the oldest existing private bank in the state.

The private bank of Davis & Bassett at Ephrata, Wash., recently was chartered under the name of "Grant County Bank" and several other private banks are arranging their affairs preliminary to applying for charters. This action is entirely voluntary on the part of the bankers. At the last session of the legislature a measure providing for the regulation of private banks was killed by private banking interest, but since that time two large private banks have failed, so that sentiment steadily is developing against them.

AKRON TO HAVE A MORRIS BANK

According to an announcement from the offices of the Fidelity Corporation of America in Norfolk, Va., Akron, O., is to have a new bank which will be one of a series of "industrial banks" that are being started in various cities with a view of competing with the loan shark and which are being operated under a copyrighted plan, known as the "Morris plan." This bank will afford the small borrower, persons in moderate circumstances, and those temporarily embarrassed, dignified and conservative credit facilities and, in addition, will encourage systematic saving. Although it caters by design to the small borrower and deprives the loan shark of his victim by supplying him with money at human instead of inhuman interest charges, it is by no means a charitable institution and is not handicapped by loan losses that are a feature of eleemosynary loan establishments.

DEDICATION OF LINCOLN HALL

President Edmund J. James of the University of Illinois is sending out invitations for the dedication of one of its new buildings—Lincoln Hall—for February 12th, the great emancipator's birthday. Collegians from many of the noted universities will be on the speaking program. The governor will be there and there will be a noon luncheon and an evening reception. Lincoln Hall will be devoted to the study of the humanities. It is a magnificent memorial and as a purely college building is strictly of the first rank.

Southern Illinois Convenes at Cairo in Good Roads Movement

Cairo bankers, commercial men and motorists entertained the officers and directors of the State Automobile Association and the Illinois Highway Improvement Association at a joint meeting held in Cairo on Saturday last. The sessions were held in the Halliday Hotel. C. G. Miller, a director of the Cairo National and president of the Cairo Automobile Club, acted as host at a luncheon to the entire party at the Halliday. After luncheon the visitors were taken in automobiles, under the direction of Mayor George Parsons, a director in the Alexander County National, James H. Galligan, cashier of the same bank, and C. G. Miller, for an inspection of Alexander and Pulaski county roads. The first piece of hard roads encountered was the sample mile recently completed just outside of Cairo, which is built of crushed stone with a tar binder, and although put in shortly after the bad floods which visited the Cairo region last year when the Ohio and Mississippi rivers badly overflowed, yet it was found to be in fairly good condition.

Several miles out from Cairo the national government maintains a cemetery for the patriotic dead who participated in the campaigns in Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi—some ten thousand Union soldiers being buried here, the names of many of them unknown. The worst piece of road encountered during the trip of forty-five miles was a piece of road that led to the cemetery from the direction of Cairo, and which is owned and controlled by the United States government. The party passed through Mound City in Pulaski county and found the officers of the First National and of the First State Bank of that place engaged in looking after a busy Saturday afternoon's business. Part of this trip was made

Good roads advocates inspect Alexander and Pulaski county highways and discuss legislation necessary to improve Illinois country roads. Automobile and other organizations participate in the proceedings over an old gravel road, which was the first road ever built from Cairo to Chicago and still is in a fairly good state, owing to the character of local gravel available for repairs. Passing through Villa Ridge and up through Mounds, at the First State Bank of that place a member of the old banking family of Karraker was found on the job caring for the demands of the customers of that institution. The return then was made toward Cairo. An entire stretch of state-aid road was inspected and found to be in excellent condition. This road was constructed of crushed stone and water-bound. The trip was extended out along the Beachwood road on the side of the Mississippi river, over a mile of macadam road with a Cash Creek gravel binding. This piece of road was but recently built as an experiment and is expected to give splendid satisfaction. James R. Fulkerson of Jerseyville, a former member of the state highway commission, was in the party and made a careful inspection of these roads, it being his first visit to Cairo. He and other members of the party were surprised to find that Alexander and Pulaski county roads are in the main in fairly good condition. The interest being taken by the farmers, who now are liberal purchasers of automobiles, as well as the city folk, justifies the belief that this end of the state will make rapid strides in the matter of road development. In fact, the Cairo amendment, so-called, to the platform of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, provides for legislation that will enable the state immediately to begin on an elaborate system of state-built highways. Cairo business interests not only are interested in the matter of road development, but must of necessity rebuild and strengthen their river levees, having suffered from flood in the spring of 1912. Some fifteen or twenty miles of splendid brick pavement have been built in Cairo during the eight years of incumbency of Mayor George Parsons, and many of their substantial public improvements have been effected during this time.

After the return to Cairo an informal dinner was served in the Colonial Hotel to the visiting good roads advocates by the members of the Cairo commercial and automobile clubs, local business men and bankers. C. G. Miller presided. After dinner, the entire party stepped into the splendidly-appointed club rooms of the Cairo Lodge of Elks in an adjoining building, where the public had been invited to attend. A large sized audience greeted the speakers. Among the speakers at this meeting were James R. Fulkerson, Jerseyville; Emory Andrews, lawyer, Mattoon; J. S. Aisthorpe, president of the First Bank and Trust, Cairo, chairman of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association;

Our experience is of value to you because it is gained in the successful building of 78 dams to date (August 1, 1912), of all heights up to 150 feet and having an aggregate length of over 4½ miles. We have inaugurated a system of bimonthly bulletins on pungent engineering topics as viewed from the Bankers' standpoint. Send us your name for our mailing list.

T. M. Beatty of the State Automobile Association, Quincy; W. G. Edens of Chicago, president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association; Henry Paulman, secretary and treasurer of the State Automobile Association and manager of the Pierce-Arrow agency in Chicago. Director Grinstead followed Mr. Paulman in an interesting address, and Attorneys Lansden and Gilbert of Cairo each made appropriate remarks, bringing the meeting to a close.

Southern Illinois is interested in this good roads movement and will join with other sections of the state in urging a comprehensive legislative program. In speaking on proposed legislation necessary to "pull Illinois out of the mud," Mr. Edens said:

"That Illinois has wretched public highways, that they are wretched because our system of road building and maintenance is antiquated, and that something must be done to improve our roads and to modernize our method of caring for them are subjects on which no citizen interested in the general welfare of our state will have a negative opinion. Illinois is ready for a change and is looking for the legislature at its coming session to enact a new road law. The question of the hour is: What kind of law is needed?"

"In movements such as the good roads movement it always is wise to consult public opinion. The general sentiment of the state is a criterion to follow. If the legislature enacts a law which the sentiment of the state demands, there will be general commendation of its action and the people readily will give the new order of things a thorough trial before they offer criticisms; and if such criticisms come they will be made in a spirit more kindly than if the general sentiment of the state is not followed.

"It was to discover this public sentiment that the Illinois Highway Improvement Association called a state convention at Peoria on September 27th. The object of the association is to correlate all efforts toward the improvement of our roads and our road laws, so that there will be unity in calling the convention; therefore, the association invited every interest known to it to take part in the deliberations. Each member of the legislature was invited to nominate two delegates from his district. Each commercial club of the state and the central bodies of the bankers, the Farmers Institute, the labor unions, the women's clubs, the automobile clubs, the teachers, lawyers, doctors, postmasters, mail carriers, highway commissioners and manufacturers were asked to send delegates. In consequence the 300 men and women who attended represented organizations with memberships aggregating several hundred thousands and with property holdings running into the millions. They were the most cosmopolitan gathering of road improvement enthusiasts which ever met in Illinois.

"In discussing what sort of law Illinois ought to have, the suggestions contained in the platform of a body such as the Peoria convention may naturally be made a basis.

In the first place, it was the unanimous sentiment of the delegates that the present law should be changed. Illinois occupies a foremost place as a manufacturing, farming, mining and fish producing state. Yet, she is twenty-fourth on the list of states according to highway improvement. The present road system of the state was called "complex, wasteful and inefficient," and the following paragraph was incorporated in resolutions adopted at Peoria.

"A great network of 95,000 miles of country wagon roads is left to the haphazard efforts of 4,800 highway commissioners, working independently of each other, poorly paid, largely inexperienced, who are provided with inadequate funds."

"It was agreed by the delegates that the present township system of building roads must be abandoned. It was recognized that modes of travel have changed since Abraham Lincoln rode the judicial circuits of Illinois, although methods of building roads have not changed a great deal. It was recognized that local communities ought not to be burdened with the responsibility of keeping up roads that are used for inter-county and inter-state traffic and a declaration was made for state and county assistance in the constructing and maintaining of main-traveled highways.

"It may be profitable to discuss the legislative recommendations of the delegates in their order.

1. State and county co-operation in the construction and maintenance of main highways and bridges.

"In every state where progress is being made in road improvement there is state and county co-operation in the care of main highways. The state benefits by improved roads. In its early days Illinois gave to railroads thousands of acres of land for the purpose of encouraging the improvement of rail transportation. As yet it has done little for the public highway, which is the farmer's railroad. It takes him from his farm to the town; it carries his crop from the field to the loading station. In some of our Illinois counties the public roads are impassable to loads for more than 100 days in the year. That means business, social, educational, religious stagnation for nearly a third of every year. It means that the farmer has to hurry his crop to market during a season of good roads. The mud in the road during bad weather rather than the price of corn at the market impels him to sell his crop. If all the money that our farmers lose by the unseasonable marketing of crops were saved for a single year it would build hundreds of miles of road that would be usable the year round. Land values suffer from bad roads. If it is the business of the state to erect schools and provide teachers for our children, it also is the business of the state to see that children are able to travel to

By C. C. Burford

The season of Christmas shopping for 1912 was one of the best, if not the best, ever experienced by the bankers and business men of Illinois. With but few discordant voices, the business men in different localities report the largest sales in the history of their business. The country roads were good during the entire season and automobiles could be used throughout the weeks of shopping activity. This was in sharp contrast to the conditions of last year when the roads were "something fierce" and when even a stout team of horses could with difficulty make progress. Illinois roads are like the little girl in "Mother Goose" who when "she was good was very good and when she was bad was horrid." Improvements in highways now contemplated by various civic associations, including various bankers associations, will place Illinois roads in such a permanent shape that they can be used every Christmas season and throughout the year with ease and comfort.

Grain moving is slow owing to the scarcity of grain cars. Grain elevators are full in most cases and in many localities have refused to take corn faster than cars can be secured. Farmers have stored an immense amount of corn this year and with the constant moving of grain later, as is certain under these conditions, there will be plenty of money in the hands of the farmers and bankers through the winter. The same conditions of storing grain, reported in THE CHICAGO BANKER from Minneapolis, prevail in Illinois. There are the best of indications for prosperous conditions during the later winter.

A Busy Christmas for Bankers

Bankers over the state probably were busier this Christmas season than they ever have been before. The weeks of good weather and of good roads made a long shopping season possible and while the farmers have been able to market only a part of their grain, yet the farmers of Illinois are in such a general prosperous condition that they have either money on hand or have abundant credit at both banks and stores, so that their Christmas buying could proceed.

Many banks made a specialty of new money, which meant extra work in the pre-Christmas days, while the Christmas savings funds planned by numerous banks also were causes of additional work, but both of these features are so much appreciated by the public that the extra work cheerfully is done by bankers. The Joliet National of Joliet and the Eastern Illinois Trust and Savings of Kankakee were especially active with their Christmas savings plans.

LaSalle National Favors Good Roads

The LaSalle National of LaSalle publishes a monthly bulletin, a summary of financial conditions both local and national, and in the last number the people of LaSalle county are urged to improve the roads leading to Starved Rock, State Park and Deer Park. These parks are spots of great natural and historic value and the coming of many tourists and motorists will mean a large revenue to the people of the county. Few places in the Central West are more beautiful than are these and the LaSalle bankers are anxious for the motorists of the country to see them. George A. Wilson is president of the LaSalle National, C. Diesterweg and Wayne Hammer are vice-presidents, and W. L. Parks is the cashier. Mr. Wilson motored to the recent good roads round-up at Bloomington, accompanied by N. W. Duncan, president of the LaSalle State Bank, and other business men.

Bank of Pesotum in New Home

The new banking room of the Bank of Pesotum, Champaign county, recently has been occupied by the bank. The flooring outside of the fixtures is of tile and behind the counters of hard oak. The bank is lighted by acetylene gas and heated with furnace. The vault and office fixtures are of the best type made. A. W. Bragg, president of Bragg, Helm & Company of Tuscola and other Douglas county banks, is the president, and H. D. Blake is the cashier. The correspondents are the First National of Chicago and Bragg, Helm & Company of Tuscola.

The formal opening was held Saturday afternoon, December 21st, and hundreds of friends of the bank called. The good weather and good roads made a large attendance possible. Music was furnished by an orchestra, and flowers were distributed.

Farmers and Bankers at U. of I.

A number of names well known to Illinois bankers appear in the program of the short course in agriculture offered to the farmers of the state by the University of Illinois from January 13th to 24th.

William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, Chicago, and president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, will lead the discussion on road making, following an address by A. N. Johnson, state engineer, on "Illinois Roads." A. P. Grout, president of the bank of Neat, Condit and Grout of Winchester and president of the Illinois Alfalfa Growers' Association, will speak on the work of that organization. "Road Improvement" will be discussed by Homer J. Tice, of Greenview, a member of the legislature and well known to farmer-bankers. Professor Cyril G. Hopkins, who has appeared on various bank association programs, will discuss "The Use of Commercial Fertilizers," while W. G. Eckhardt, in charge of the DeKalb county agricultural work, who spoke at the last convention of the I. B. A. in Peoria, will discuss "Problems and Work to be Done by County Agricultural Advisers." In fact, the program resembles many of those constructed by ambitious bankers for group meetings in these latter days of farm and road development.

The name of the late Isaac Funk will be placed in the Illinois Hall of Fame during the short course, with appropriate exercises. Mr. Funk was the founder of the wealthy Funk family of Bloomington, prominent farmers and bankers. Next year the name of B. F. Harris, Sr., late of Champaign and founder of the Harris family of that city, will be placed in the Hall of Fame.

Lexington Bank in New Home

The Peoples Bank of Lexington, McLean county, has moved into its new banking room, which is one of the best equipped among the smaller cities of the state. The bank was established in 1910 and has capital of $30,000. C. S. Arnold is the president and L. B. Strayer is the cashier. The correspondents are the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago and the Peoples Bank of Bloomington.

Another good bank in the same town is the State Bank of Lexington, of which O. L. Hiser, treasurer of the Illinois Bankers Association, is the cashier. The president was the late E. H. Hyneman who died since the recent Peoria convention, and who was the father-in-law of Mr. Hiser. The next president will not be elected until the January meeting of the board of directors. The bank was established in 1895, has capital of $30,000, and the correspondents are the First National of Chicago and the Corn Belt Bank of Bloomington.

Mr. Hiser's bank, the State Bank of Lexington, acted as Santa Claus to many of the 340 school children of the town, besides those from eighteen country schools in the vicinity being invited. Each child who called at the bank Saturday afternoon, December 21st, was given a bag of candy, while the women received a Christmas remembrance book and the men were treated to apples, candy and cigars. This idea was originated by the late Mr. Hyneman and many tributes were paid to his memory by the callers at the bank on "Santa Claus" day.

Illinois Notes

A new state bank will be organized at Brimfield, Peoria county, with Charles L. Dungan, Henry A. Blundy and Horace A. Cady as incorporators and to be known as the Exchange State Bank of Brimfield. The capital will be $50,000.

E. P. Farwell, Chicago representative of the Babson Statistical Organization, spoke recently before the commercial students of the University of Illinois, on "Monetary and Banking Statistics as a Guard to Business Conditions."

Forty-two miles of good roads were built in 1912 in Illinois under the supervision of the state highway commission. These roads are valued at about $250,000 not including the stone which was furnished by the state.

W. F. Firke, president of the State Bank of Mansfield, who by his methods of feeding geese on a large commercial scale has become known as the "gooseman," announces that he has placed about 5,000 geese on the eastern markets during the holiday season of 1912. Mr. Firke has made a success of his venture.

The First National of Hoopeston, one of the strong banks of eastern Illinois, has declared a semiannual dividend of ten per cent. J. S.

McFerren is the president and E. C. Griffith is the cashier. Hoopeston is in a very prosperous community and on a recent busy Saturday afternoon thirty-six automobiles, mostly belonging to farmers, were parked in the block adjacent to the First National.

A farmer youth by the name of Harry Casel, attempted to hold up the Putman County Bank at Hennepin. The youth shot W. C. Patterson, the cashier, but was frightened away before he secured any booty. A sheriff's posse followed him to an island in the Illinois river where the young bandit was captured after a desperate struggle.

The Taylor interests of St. Louis have secured 15,000 acres of coal rights near Taylorville besides the 11,000 acres previously retained. About $336,000 will be paid to the farmers of Christian county this winter for these lands through the bank of John B. Colegrove and Company of Taylorville.

Danville banks announce that beginning January 1st they will pay interest at the rate of three per cent on all savings and time deposits. This is the first time that the Danville banks have mutually offered interest to their customers.

The Illinois State Grange has announced its corn growing prizes, which were offered through the liberality of the Home Savings and State Bank of Peoria.

Champaign county farmers and bankers are discussing the possibility of employing a county soil expert and demonstrator such as W. G. Eckhardt of DeKalb county. There will be an effort made to raise $25,000 for this purpose.

OPPOSES ANNUAL MODELS OF AUTOMOBILES

H. O. Smith, president of the Premier Motor Manufacturing Company of Indianapolis, in a paper read at a recent meeting of the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers held in Detroit, argued against the practice of automobile manufacturers bringing out new models each year.

It is believed that the value of a bankers loan to an automobile concern greatly is depreciated by reason of annual automobile models, because no asset depreciates more rapidly than does the automobile.

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

Deposits in Milwaukee banks have increased nearly $11,000,000 during the past year, a record unprecedented in the city's financial history. Nineteen banks show deposits of $90,437,474, compared with $79,524,860 last year. The nineteen listed include three new banks founded during the year. With one exception all the banks in existence at this time last year show a gain in deposits.

The following table, compiled by James A. Fetterly, assistant secretary of the Merchants & Manufacturers Association, from records of the commissioner of banking, shows the individual progress of Milwaukee's banks for the last twelve months:

During the same period the aggregate capitalization of the banks listed was increased from $8,665,000 to $8,990,000, showing a gain of $325,000, although the Milwaukee National, with its capitalization of $450,000 is no longer in existence.

A total increase for 1912 in the resources of the 607 state and mutual savings banks and trust companies in the state is computed by Banking Commissioner A. E. Kuolt at $23,033,951.58. In a supplementary report the bank commissioner states that while an increase in the number of institutions this year accounts for the gain to some extent, there is undoubtedly a great increase in the wealth of the state and that the prosperity of its citizens is greater than at the time of any preceding report.

Banks Observe Christmas

The Yuletide season was observed in customarily munificent fashion by Milwaukee banks with Christmas gifts from two weeks' to a month's salary to employees. According to past custom, the presents are made in new currency, and to meet this demand, and that of several large offices and industrial establishments following the same policy, extra consignments of new money were received at most of the banks last week.

Second Ward Savings to Have Bond Department

Concurrent with its opening for business in its new building at Third and West Water Streets, the Second Ward Savings Bank will institute a bond department, under the supervision of William L. Ross of Cleveland, who resigns his position as office manager for the Tillotson & Wolcott Company, investment bankers of that city, to accept the offer of the Milwaukee institution. The Second Ward Bank is already moving securities into the vault of its new building although it will do business from its present temporary headquarters on Third Street until January 15th, which the officers have set as the probable date for the final removal.

On Committee for Reorganization of Utility Company

President Fred Vogel, Jr., of the First National Bank, is one of the three members of the bondholders' protective committee whose recommendations relative to the reorganization of certain public utility companies of Wisconsin and Minnesota will in all likelihood be adopted. The plan contemplates a merger of the LaCrosse Water Power Company and the LaCrosse City Railway of LaCrosse, and the Winona Railway and Light Company of Winona, Minn., under the title of the Wisconsin Railway, Light, and Power Company, capitalized at $1,300,000 and with bonds to the amount of $2,500,000. It is proposed that Clement C. Smith of Milwaukee direct the destinies of the new enterprise for a five year term as president, following the reorganization.

Chamber of Commerce Adopts Amendment

Following the hottest contest ever waged on the 'change floor of the Chamber of Commerce the organization on Monday adopted an amendment to its rules, permitting the delivery of public warehouse receipts of regularly organized exchanges outside Milwaukee. Under the old rule only Milwaukee warehouse receipts were deliverable. The change of rules is expected to place Milwaukee in a prominent position on the grain trade map. Prominent men of other cities who came to Milwaukee to support the measure included F. D. Underwood, New York, president of the Erie railroad, E. W. Wagner and Alexander Lowitz, Chicago.

Death of H. M. Ackley

Henry M. Ackley, pioneer banker of Wisconsin, died last week at his home in Oconomowoc, Wis. Mr. Ackley was president of the Bank of Oconomowoc until failing health necessitated his retirement several years ago.

Milwaukee Notes

The First National Bank of Stevens Point will hold its annual meeting of stockholders and directors on January 14th.

The Warner Instrument Company of Beloit, Wis., which was purchased last week by the Stewart & Clarke Manufacturing Company of Chicago, for a reported consideration of $2,000,000, was founded only eight years ago, following the invention by Arthur and Charles Warner of the automobile speedometer that bears their name and is now used in all parts of the world.

Newman Erb, representing the interests of the Ann Arbor, Chesapeake & Ohio and the Minneapolis, St. Louis, and Iowa Central lines, is reported to have secured 18,000 of the 25,000 shares of common stock of the Green Bay and Western Railway Company, with headquarters at Green Bay, paying $100,000 for the same, which expires March 1, 1913.

Final settlement of the estate of Charles W. Allen, millionaire tanner and banker of Kenosha, Wis., this week showed the value of the estate to be $4,974,012.55, exclusive of real estate valued at $60,000. Mrs. Ella E. Allen, the widow, is named as the sole heir.

Northern Michigan Notes

Former cashier Elven T. Larson, convicted of complicity in the wrecking of the First National Bank of Ironwood, Mich., four years ago, has been released on parole from the house of correction at Detroit after serving one year of a three and one-half year term to which he was sentenced. He has signified his intention of allying with mining interests in Utah.

A RIVAL TO McKINLEY SYSTEM

According to an announcement made from its head offices at Mattoon, the Central Illinois Public Service Company is about to begin the construction of a network of interurban lines which will rival those of the Illinois Traction Company, commonly known as the McKinley system. A new line into Springfield from Mattoon, through Pana and Taylorville, is one of the projects.

Ocock of the University of Wisconsin, Eugene Becher of the Atlantic-Blau Gas Company and H. H. Musselman of the Michigan Agricultural College. A business meeting and smoker was held in the evening.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis, December 26th.—Business at the financial institutions during the past week has been quite active and all branches of banking are reported in a satisfactory condition. The demand for money has been of fair proportions and came from all classes of customers. Rates held firm at 5½ to 6 per cent on call and time loans. New York exchange has been in fair offerings and demand and the discount rate has been slightly lower, namely, 15 cents premium per $1,000 between banks.

Broadway National Asks for State Charter

The Broadway National Bank has filed new articles of incorporation to change its organization from national to state, under the name of the Broadway Bank of St. Louis. F. Ernest Cramer, president of the bank, stated the reason for this was that a national bank is forbidden to loan money on real estate security. "We have demands for real estate loans and we want to be in condition to meet these demands," said Mr. Cramer. The capital of the Broadway National is $200,000. The capital of the new bank will be $100,000, with a surplus of $25,000. The bank at present has a surplus of $10,000. The excess over the new stock and surplus will be divided among the present stockholders. The stockholders named in the articles of incorporation are: F. Ernest Cramer, C. S. Marsh, Edward Beisbarth, Eugene H. Freund, John Clemens, George Rueckholdt, A. J. Liermann, Edmund L. Wachter, J. E. Schlichter, Henry C. Menne and Xenophon P. Wilfley.

Boosters Club Holds Banquet

The annual banquet of the Boosters Club, an organization composed of the employees of the Title Guaranty and American Trust Companies, was held Monday night at the City Club, an elaborate menu being served, while an excellent musical program was rendered. The object of the meeting is to bring the employees into closer fellowship and to bestow on them the prizes awarded by the company each year, in the form of checks, for business brought in. Under the general title "Ourselves as Others See Us," the following responded to toasts: "From a Director's Standpoint," George L. Edwards of A. G. Edwards & Sons; "From a Customer's Standpoint," George D. Rosenthal, manager General Electric Company; "From an Outsider's Standpoint," Vincent L. Price, vice-president National Candy Company; "From an Insider's Standpoint," J. C. Van Riper, president of the trust companies. An original poem by M. Walker Van Riper, secretary of the trust companies was read, and during the evening a number of choruses were rendered. There were several selections by a quartet and other amusement features. During the evening President Van Riper announced that the companies had taken out insurance policies covering every officer and employee, and that in the event of the death of any one of them his beneficiary would receive a sum equivalent to the yearly salary of the employee or officer. This evidence of interest by the company in the men working for it provoked great enthusiasm among the men.

Tootle-Lemon National on Business Outlook

The Tootle-Lemon National of St. Joseph makes the following observations in its recent monthly letter:

"Movement of merchandise from the jobbing houses and wholesalers of this city to thousands of country stores in the West and Southwest continues on a large scale. This is an excellent sign, for such a demand never arises in years of uncertainty or distress. The average farmer of the West is now in very good circumstances and is able to purchase merchandise on a much more liberal scale than was possible last year or the year before. This accounts for the number of orders received by the great mercantile concerns of St. Joseph, which are doing a very satisfactory business. The position of most of the large mercantile interests in the West is still very strong. Not for many years has there been a broader demand for money from manufacturers, merchants and those in control of great industrial enterprises. This is suggestive of a quickening of general trade which is still the strongest feature of the present situation. This prosperity is likely to continue without interruption for some time to come. It must be remembered, however, that as the time approaches for the new administration to assume charge of the national government more will be heard of tariff revision and the extent to which the present duties will probably be reduced. So far the prospect of such a reduction has had scarcely any influence upon general business. This has been one of the curious phenomena of the year, since almost invariably during periods of uncertainty about the tariff there has been more or less nervousness reflected in business circles. As soon as the actual work of extra session is taken up, however, the subject of the altered schedules will claim public attention and it may be that business in certain lines will be checked for a time. It is too early, however, to speak with assurance on that point as the leaders at Washington have not yet outlined their program or made any public announcement respecting their plans for the future. The opinion still prevails that the work will be taken up scientifically and with a definite purpose of interfering with business as little as possible, so that the activity of no great industry will be seriously disturbed. Of all legislation in the world none needs to be more carefully studied or more perfectly adjusted to the needs of the people of the country than legislation changing the tariff."

Bank Yegg Suspects Caught

Two men charged with robbing the Kyle State Bank were arrested last Friday near Liberty Hill, Tex. Sums of money placed in various banks in Williamson County gave a clue leading to the arrests. No formal charge has been filed against the prisoners.

American Trust of Houston Reduces Capital

In keeping with action that was outlined at a recent meeting of the directors of the American Trust Company, Houston, the capital stock has been reduced from $500,000 to $250,000. The directors decided not to return any of the capital to the stockholders, but to issue $250,000 in stock against the $500,000 of assets.

Bank Overdrafts Increase

State Bank Commissioner has made public a statement of the financial condition of the 744 state banks and trust companies in Texas at the close of business on November 26th. It shows that individual deposits increased from $72,260,528 to $100,893,148, or a net increase of $28,632,566 since September 4th, the date of the last previous call. There has been an increase of $1,401,432 in overdrafts, but this, the commissioner says, is due to the movement of the cotton crop. There is a net increase of sixteen new banks and trust companies during that period.

Texas Banks Finance Cotton Crop

The Guaranty State Bank & Trust Company and the American Exchange Bank of Dallas made available a half-million dollars for financing distressed cotton this past season and loaned money to the cotton farmers at 6 per cent, setting a precedent which was followed

New Texas Bank

An application has been filed with the comptroller of the currency to organize the Freeport National Bank, Freeport, Tex., capital $50,000.

CUTTER, MAY & CO. OFFERINGS

Cutter, May & Co., The Rookery, Chicago, are offering $50,000 City of Texarkana, Tex., 5 per cent school building bonds, dated January 1, 1913, due January 1, 1953, optional January 1, 1928. The denomination of the bonds is $1,000. The price is 103.75 and interest, yielding 4.65 per cent per annum to optional date; 5 per cent thereafter.

A direct annual tax has been levied to provide for the payment of interest and to create a sinking fund for the retirement of principal at maturity.

Texarkana is located on the border-line between Texas and Arkansas, and while commercially and socially it is one big city, it is necessary, because of its unique location, to have two separate municipal governments. These bonds are issued by the Texas municipality. Its geographical location makes it of importance as a railroad center, nine railroads having terminal facilities there. The city has all modern improvements, including gas, electric light and street railway systems, excellent water supply, a fine public school system, an organized fire department, two daily newspapers, three large hotels and a number of smaller ones, and a large number of factories and other flourishing business enterprises. Six banks, with combined assets of over $8,000,000, care for the financial interests. The country tributary to Texarkana is one of the most productive agricultural sections of the Southwest, and large shipments of corn, cotton, potatoes (Irish and sweet), alfalfa, and other forage crops, are made annually from Texarkana.

The company also is offering $27,000 Cuero, Tex., independent school district 5 per cent bonds, dated May 10, 1912, due May 10, 1952, optional May 10, 1932. The denomination of the bonds is $1,000. The price is 103.16 and interest, yielding 4.75 per cent per annum to optional date; 5 per cent thereafter.

The district, which has a total area of over 17,000 acres, includes the city of Cuero, which is the county seat of Dewitt county, situated in the Gulf Coast country, about 87 miles southeast of San Antonio. The location of the city at the intersection of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio (Southern Pacific) and San Antonio & Aransas Pass railroads, places it in direct communication with the most important cities and seaports of the state, and makes it the logical, as well as the actual central market place for a number of the richest counties in that section of the state. Cuero owns its own waterworks system, and there is a first-class electric light and power plant which furnishes light to the city and supplies power at a very low rate to the various manufacturing industries. The residence section is especially beautiful, and its public school system is the equal of any in the state. Three banks, with combined assets of about $800,000, care for the financial interests, and among the industrial enterprises are a cotton mill with 5,000 spindles, three cotton gins, a cotton-seed oil mill, a large creamery, and several large wholesale groceries and commission houses. Cuero is the third largest cattle shipping point in the South, and also makes large shipments of poultry and eggs. The money derived from the sale of these bonds is to be used for the erection and equipment of a brick high school building. Both of these issues have been approved by the attorney-general of Texas, and registered by the state comptroller, which, under the law, renders them incontestable except on grounds of forgery or fraud. They are a legal investment for the state permanent school fund, as well as for all banks, trust companies and insurance and fraternal organizations.

SHERIDAN TRUST AND SAVINGS, CHICAGO

Sheridan Trust and Savings, located at Evanston and Wilson Avenues, Chicago, is capitalized at $200,000 and has surplus and undivided profits amounting to $45,000. Deposits are $933,239.60. On November 27, 1910, they amounted to $484,479.09 and a year later $718,622.99. W. J. Klingenberg is president; W. G. Arnold, vice-president; Edwin L. Read, cashier, and E. J. H. Ayres, manager of the real estate loan department. Mr. Read was connected with the Central Trust Company of Illinois for nearly ten years and resigned an important position in their discount department recently in order to accept the cashiership of the Sheridan Trust and Savings.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST TERMINAL STATION

For the third time in its history the New York Central Lines will have "the greatest terminal station in the world." In the early days that famous railroad had its terminal at the city hall park, almost at the lower extremity of Manhattan Island. After a few years the city restricted the movement of trains south of 42d Street to horse power and for many years the small passenger cars toiled laboriously up and down, sometimes behind four and sometimes behind twenty horses, owing to the condition of the tracks. Later the Grand Terminal Station was erected on the site of the present Madison Square Garden at 24th Street while later a magnificent building for the times was erected at 42d Street, the present location of the "great monumental gateway to America's greatest city"—the new Grand Central Terminal of New York. At each of these successive steps and movements towards the north, the New York Central Terminal Station was the greatest in railroad history. To-day the new monumental building which extends almost as many stories below the surface as it does above, covers a total area of nearly eighty acres and is two and one half times larger than the next largest railway terminal in the world. No foreign railway station has more than one sixth of its capacity. This magnificent building extends from Lexington to Madison on 42d Street, two blocks, and for eight blocks northward. The express trains will be on a different level from the suburban trains and all of them will be below the street level. Still lower down will come the baggage rooms and power stations. Park Avenue, which otherwise would bisect the great building, is carried over 42d Street at an elevation and then deflects to the right and left around the huge building high above the street and thus furnishes a cab stand which is acres in extent and will take all of that great business entirely away from the street sidewalk. Under those elevated streets surrounding the huge building will be restaurants and other accommodation rooms for passengers. Eighty thousand people will not crowd the new structure and it will handle seventy thousand passengers per hour during the busy season. All of the various elevations are reached by "ramps" and no stairways will be used. These inclined walks will rise or fall, as may be, at a grade of eight feet in every hundred. There are so many modern innovations in this huge passenger and traffic building that anything like a mention would be too great for the space at our command. The passengers' baggage will be shot from the ticket window through a pneumatic tube to its place of destination at the train side. There will be no trucks or trunks to impede the easy entrance to the train. All of that business will be handled blocks away and far underground so far as the patrons of the road are concerned. An attempt has been made to make this the most beautiful building of its kind in the world and to make it large enough to answer the purpose of the road for all time to come. Whether these great problems have been figured out correctly must remain to be seen. It is said that Commodore Vanderbilt, who was three years in building the old Grand Central Station, then the very largest in the world, thought that it had been planned large enough to meet any future condition of traffic that might be encountered. It had fifteen tracks as against sixty-eight of the present station and was found to be almost too small by the time it was completed.

The tracks of the New York Central Lines are below the surface as far north as 56th Street and the space above them—two blocks wide—at the present time will be open to the sky. The streets, ten in number, have been carried across this open division east and west on iron and granite structures, and Park Avenue after circling the main building continues north directly in the center and over the tracks on the same kind of support. It is the intention of the railway company to erect buildings above all of these open spaces to be used as museums, hotels, business blocks, theatres, clubs and for any other purpose which will admit of a bold architectural treatment on a large scale and in harmony with the general plans. These buildings will not be sold but will be leased on long terms at reasonable rates. Probably the leases will run for as long as ninety-nine years if so required. In such cases the cost of the buildings will be repaid to the company in installments. In all of the thirty or more blocks there will be but two chimneys or smoke stacks and all power and heat will be furnished from these plants all the way from 56th to 42d Street. So vast is this great public improvement that it is expected that even the surfeited New Yorker will have something additional of which to be proud. It is quite an accomplishment to have even a railway station two and one half times larger than its nearest rival in the world and so fitted up when completed that it probably will become the new civic center for the greatest city on the western continent.

IMPROVED BANKING CONDITIONS SOUGHT

Colorado is going through the same trials through which other states went in the battle to put all banking, not national, under state supervision. Defeats have met her efforts just as they have thwarted the intentions of sister commonwealths for a time. It was so in New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Missouri. It will be true in Illinois and Iowa, the latest of all to engage in the warfare for better things. Out in Colorado they have a banking commissioner to start with, a thing unknown in Iowa and in Illinois. Emil Pfeifer is a member of the unafraid and he comes out boldly for state supervision, as the only remedy for almost intolerable banking conditions. He declares all banks should be compelled to incorporate for the protection of the depositors and he recommends that the state legislature be asked to enact such a law. He says:

"Strange as it may seem, bankers may now violate the laws of Colorado with impunity. We should have a good tight law carrying stiff penalties for violations, and continued violations should call for a revocation of the charter. The day of the 'dummy' director should be in the past. 'One-man' banks should be discontinued. Directors should be held responsible for acts of their officers. The man who lends his name to a bank should be made to 'pay the freight' when the institution goes under. I shall ask the legislature to abolish the private bank; I believe that all banks should be incorporated. The state should also have the power to refuse charters to newly organized banks under certain conditions. This would prevent the organization of dummy banks for the purpose of stifling competition."

All of the above has been quoted from Examiner Pfeifers' annual report to Governor John F. Shafroth and is the result of his experiences in the office of banking superintendent. His words convey a lesson to this and other states where banking is a go-as-you-please game without involuntary restrictions.

Mr. Pfeifer has other advanced ideas in addition to the abolition of the private bank. He would see none but competent men for officials and none but active men for directors. Put Pfeifer down as a true progressive in the non-political sense.

BEAR THIS IN MIND

If we are to have remedial monetary legislation within the next four years, it must come with democratic aid and consent. For that period any currency plan believed, or even suspected, to have emanated from Wall Street will meet certain defeat. Politicians west of the Hudson have used Wall Street in financial affairs and Tammany Hall in politics for years to their own profit. The idea may be a myth, but the result is a reality. Yet the opportunity offered to democracy is tempting. Should that party settle fairly and with prosperity a new banking system and a moderate tariff upon this country, its stay in Washington will be prolonged indefinitely.

CHEAP LAND LOANS DANGEROUS

The governmental proposed rural land credits would be a misfortune if they brought with them a recurrence of conditions of a generation ago. The farm mortgage was the butt of the jester. The ruralist was plunged in debt. Our farmer is freer of debt to-day than ever before; freer than the farmers of any other country. His lands have advanced in value and the "home market" is making him rich. Cold storage, and not the overworked soil, can be blamed with the most of the high cost of living. Any lowering of credits which will help the farmer who needs farm machinery or fertilizer, or which will enable him to re-fund his loans at a lower rate, will benefit. A rate which will cause him to plunge into land speculation will be very harmful.

SAYS LONDON FINANCES IMPORTS

Andrew Carnegie, in a recent paper prepared by him, is authority for the statement that foreign banks, especially those of London, now finance our foreign trade and that we pay them rich tribute for the service. He expressed the belief that unless we speedily reform our banking system so that we may be in a position to finance the Panama Canal trade, a good part of the money expended in its construction will be wasted. In speaking of the antiquated banking laws now in vogue, Mr. Carnegie said: "That our defective banking laws have been in existence for half a century, that they still continue to exist, are matters of wonderment throughout the civilized world. Perhaps the simplest explanation is that our country is comparatively so new. With tremendous natural resources back of us and with unequaled enterprise we have gone ahead sweepingly and regardlessly. But with all our wastefulness it is doubtful if any one extravagance equals in dire results the successive losses this country has sustained from our periodical money panics brought on directly by our panic-breeding banking system."

He advocates American banks in foreign markets, believing that they would be powerful aids in the upbuilding of our commerce and that they are indispensable because:

First. They would furnish a direct financial exchange.

Second. They would provide a safe and efficient means of obtaining credit information, independent as to foreign merchants and impartial as to American exporters.

Third. They would correctly present to foreign customers the standing of our own export houses.

Fourth. They would furnish capital or credit at the foreign market.

Fifth. They would bring American financial interests in touch with foreign enterprises, which, if exploited, would create business for the American exporter.

Mr. Carnegie further said:

"Our banking system is unique. Unlike any other country, we have independent banks. They have no way of co-operation. But complete banking co-operation is absolutely necessary to control arising panics. Other countries have proven this. Our banks have demonstrated it by being compelled in times of stress to fall back upon their local clearing-house associations, the only means—but a crude means—of co-operation we have. The necessity of co-operation is a fundamental banking principle. It is not to be argued against. But aside from this theoretical truth we have had the obvious to guide us. They do not have panics abroad; we do.

"Again, it is only by co-operation and the consequent fixing of a uniform rate of discount, to be raised or lowered as circumstances demand, that we can control the flow of gold to and from this country. This is fundamental to international credit. It is also a banking principle.

"A second striking peculiarity of our banking system is that we have no broad discount market such as they have in Europe. Our banks are forbidden by law to accept business bills for discount. Instead, they take, for instance, the business man's promissory note. In other words, a merchant in this country who has sold a bill of goods and wishes to realize at once on the sale, cannot change this prime evidence of exchange into a credit instrument. He gets credit at his bank on his paper "promise to pay." But this latter instrument, showing no transaction to goods, is confined to the one bank that takes it. The maker's ability to pay is unknown at other banks. So this kind of a credit instrument has no circulation powers whatever.

"In Europe, on the contrary, the business bill becomes in itself a credit instrument. The bank accepting it stamps it as a banking instrument. It is good at any other bank in that country, it may be rediscounted at the central bank of all of these banks, or it may travel to other European countries.

"Now, aside from the ready elasticity of credit that such a discount and rediscount market gives to business at home, it must be apparent that it has also a direct effect upon foreign trade. To-day our local credit instruments do not pass current in the world's markets. As a consequence the American shipper is forced to buy foreign exchange. Aside from the fact that for this unnecessary accommodation we pay annual tribute to Europe of millions of dollars, it must be apparent that the whole period of our foreign trade expansion has been seriously hampered by banking accommodations which are necessarily worked upon a limited scale and which assuredly have no reference to the broader needs of this country.

"The general and further result of the workings of our discredited monetary system is the isolation, in a measure, of the whole American market."

INCORPORATION OF CLEARING HOUSES

Of late there has been renewed interest in the proposition to incorporate clearing houses under federal law. New York bankers who have been interviewed regarding the subject, have been reluctant to commit themselves. It has been pointed out by some that no especial benefits or advantages would be derived by means of incorporation; at the same time, no serious objections have been raised to the plan. It is said that James G. Cannon, president of the Fourth National of New York, expressed himself as favoring such a plan in an address delivered before the Finance Forum in March, 1910. Interest also is being revived in the Pugsley bill on this subject, introduced in January, 1902, in the house of representatives by C. A. Pugsley, president of the New York Bankers Association, and head of the Westchester County National of Peekskill.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS CONVENES AT CAIRO IN GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT

school. If it is the business of the state to assist the farmer and save him money when his hogs are afflicted with cholera, it is just as much the business of the state to see that he does not lose money when he hauls the hogs to market over the public road. Social life in some parts of our state is at a low ebb because of bad roads. Thousands of women who feel the isolation most go insane on farms. The attendance at our churches suffers when travel is bad. Boys and girls desert the rural districts for the cities because bad roads keep them within narrow confines during long winter and spring months. The general welfare will be promoted by an era of good roads and it becomes apparent, I believe, that the state and the county should co-operate in their construction and maintenance.

2. A non-political state highway commission of at least three competent members, who shall devote their entire time to their duties.

The value of our public roads runs close to $75,000,000. Each year in Illinois we spend $7,000,000 for roads and bridges. In any other line of public or private enterprise the running of a $75,000,000 enterprise at an annual outlay of $7,000,000 would be along systematic, business lines. There would be a head some place, a source of authority. As has been said hundreds of times, we have 4,800 highway commissioners building roads and spending money in 4,800 different ways. Among the delegates at Peoria were representatives of the highway commissioners, led by Mr. Donovan, their president, and none better than they understood the haphazard system now in vogue and its sad results. We need a central body of some kind which will run this business of our public roads, just like a board of directors operates a railroad. No one would think of letting 4,800 employees operate a railroad, each one acting on his own initiative.

3. Improvement (in such counties as elect to come under the provisions of the law) of main, continuous, inter-county highways connecting county seats and other important cities, principally at the expense of the state and county; such roads to be selected and improved by county authorities, subject to the approval of the state highway commission, and after improvement to be turned over to the state for perpetual maintenance.

Engineers of the federal government demonstrate that twenty per cent of the roads carry about 20 per cent of all traffic and that 15 to 20 per cent of road mileage carries 60 to 70 per cent of local farm traffic. Improved market roads connecting the county seats and principal cities and towns of the state would make about 20 per cent of the total mileage in Illinois. It is these roads which bear the brunt of travel both local and foreign. On these the state and county should co-operate.

4. Improvement, maintenance and control of remaining roads (about 80 per cent of the whole) under supervision of county and township authorities.

"The lateral roads should be left to the control of the local authorities under competent county and township jurisdiction. These roads are all important, for they make up the highways over which the farmer must haul his crop to reach the main road. Each local community should solve the question of secondary roads for itself, deciding whether any should be made hard roads and dragging and draining the earth roads. It is the practice in some states to have county engineers, or county superintendents, who may be the county surveyors, co-operate with the township commissioners on these roads.

5. Effective measure to guarantee maintenance after roads are once constructed.

"Some states have learned by hard experience that maintenance is just as important as, if not more important than, original construction. A road may as well not be improved as to leave it without maintenance. In England and France maintenance systems have been perfected to a high degree. They lessen the cost in the long run. In the Philippines our government has constructed 1,000 miles of good road and has copied the European system of watchful maintenance. It seems queer, does it not, that here in Illinois we should be behind the Philippines in road matters. At the Peoria Convention A. P. Grout, president of the Illinois Farmers Institute, and H. G. Herget, chairman of the good roads committee of the Illinois Manufacturers Association, were forceful in their advocacy of a strong maintenance section in whatever road laws the legislature passes.

6. Use of the state automobile tax, together with such other funds as the legislature may appropriate, in the improvement of highways.

"The question of financing improved highways for Illinois is not so troublesome as some people think. If we could spend the money now wasted on bad roads in a business-like manner, the problem would be partially solved. Investigation has shown that an average of 37½ per cent of the total of $7,000,000 is wasted through inefficiency of road builders, or because the funds are lost because inadequate. The state automobile tax fund will be a nucleus for a fine highway fund. Hereafter the automobile license fund will be about $450,000 a year. In some states a fund of this kind has been capitalized and bonds issued against it, the fund being used to pay off both the principal and the interest. In some states state bonds are issued for main state roads, county bonds for county roads and township bonds for township roads. In Illinois at present hundreds of townships do not issue bonds, as they may under the law. It has been suggested that the legislature appropriate annually a sum equal to the Illinois Central Tax and the inheritance tax, some $3,000,000 all told, for the state's part of road work. In some states the state and the county each furnish 50 per cent of the money for main roads, while in others the county's portion is cut down by a levy of 10 or 15 per cent against the township. At all events, in Illinois, with economy and wise financing, it should be possible to raise a road fund without adding a single penny to present taxes.

7. Extension of the employment of prisoners in state institutions in the preparation of material for road building, and the use of state prisoners—under state direction—on an honor system, in actual road work when practicable.

"There is a growing sentiment in Illinois in favor of the employment of convicts in open air work. In states where it has been tried, like Colorado and Oregon, road work for convicts has been found most beneficial. It has a humanitarian side which, indeed, is the more important side, because it saves to society and the state hundreds of men who would be degraded into outcasts by indoor confinement. But there is a practical side to the question as well. Illinois has hundreds of convicts who could be employed in the preparation of road material. By the use of modern machinery the present output of crushed stone at Joliet and Chester penitentiaries could be greatly increased. Among the Peoria delegates the sentiment was freely expressed that the state could establish camps in various parts of the state where there are natural stone and gravel deposits which prisoners could prepare for road work. At Peoria, Edwin R. Wright, president of the State Federation of Labor, made an impassioned plea for the adoption of the convict labor plank, saying that such an honor system as is followed in Colorado would not only assist the inmates of our institutions, but would also minimize the competition of prison labor with free labor.

8. Payment of all road taxes in cash.

"In some parts of Illinois road taxes are still paid in work. The taxpayer delays doing this work until such time as suits his convenience. Almost always this is at a time when the work does no good—in the late fall or winter, when no amount of work on a dirt road will guarantee its condition in the spring or summer. There is no more reason why a taxpayer should pay his tax in work than why he should do a day's work on the railroad to pay for the shipment of an express package.

9. Compulsory dragging of all dirt roads.

The road drag is a wonder-worker. It transforms a mire into a boulevard. A compulsory drag law in Iowa has given that state some of the best roads in the West. Iowa, like the greater portion of Illinois, must depend on its dirt roads. Iowa roads used to be worse than those of Illinois. Now they are uniformly better because of the compulsory drag law.

10. Safety of road users, such as "Rules of the Road," and the proper construction and guarding of crossings at railroads and intersections of streets and highways.

"At all intersections of roads, weeds and other obstructions should be cut down. At railroad crossings every obstruction which cuts off a view of the tracks from the road a reasonable distance back should be removed. On the main highways there should be extra danger signals and at some there should be gates and flagmen. There is a heavy death toll from grade crossings in the country and it can be cut down by law.

"W. D. Snow of Bloomington and W. E. Stalnaker, manager of the Premier agency, Chicago, also were in attendance. Mr. Stalnaker is a brother of President Stalnaker of the Indiana Capital National of Indianapolis."

old ones liquidated. Measures tending to check industrial development are highly dangerous and may have evil effects that may require decades to overcome. Credits for carrying stock accounts are economically beneficial and even indispensable, and such loans do not affect the Reichsbank to any great extent in proportion to its total outlay; moreover, it is a well-known fact that operators usually reduce their engagements as the ends of the quarters draw near. The German banks, in taking over foreign loans, have proceeded with as much regard as possible for the money market. Such loans are often of the greatest importance in promoting foreign trade, and the banks often have taken them with no prospect of profit, but only for the purpose of subserving this higher end.

In discussing remedies for the pressure at the Reichsbank, Dr. von Schwabach said that the issue of small notes already has had a good effect; but the law fixing a maximum amount of such issues is unnecessary, since there will be no danger for a long time—in view of the customs of the German people in making payments—of depleting the circulation of its gold element. Referring to the innovation introduced last year by the Reichsbank of charging extra interest at the quarters' ends as a means for relieving the pressure upon it, he was of the opinion that the measure had been practically without effect. The point of difficulty lies, not in increasing the volume of discounts, but in strengthening the metallic covering of the notes; and precisely this result has not been attained through the measure in question.

The most important means for improving the status of the Reichsbank, continued Dr. von Schwabach, is to reform the method of making payments. Much can be done toward progress at this point. The bank cheque must be popularized in the widest sense. Progress has been made in the use of post-office cheques, whereas the circulation of bank cheques actually has been narrowed by the stamp-tax introduced in 1909. All experts and all organs of commercial opinion are unanimous in demanding its abolition. The experiment of mortgage clearings—begun by the Reichsbank several years ago, but subsequently abandoned by reason of the slight co-operation of the mortgage banks—again should be taken up as one means of avoiding the transport of large amounts of cash about the streets of Berlin at the quarters' ends. Bankers might help to alleviate the pressure at the Reichsbank by gradually increasing their own cash reserves, as well as their balances with it, and by requiring larger margins on the stock engagements of their customers.

Richard Schmidt, president of the Leipzig Chamber of Commerce, combated the view that a bank is in a satisfactory position when two-thirds of its liabilities are covered by its quick assets. This may have proved adequate in former times and under different conditions, but the concentration of banks has thrown such heavy pressure upon the Reichsbank that the two-thirds covering no longer suffices for it. The old rule never has been tested in a grave political crisis since the changed conditions referred to came into existence. The cash reserves of the big banks in particular are too small for the heavy liabilities maturing at the quarters' ends. Credits have been greatly lengthened within recent years—ordinary commercial credits extend in some cases to a full year; and this compels manufacturers and merchants to avail themselves more extensively of bank credits. This affects the Reichsbank both directly and indirectly. Other causes for the pressure are found in heavy speculation in commodities, securities, land, and business buildings. The extraordinary economic development of the country, which has outstripped the process of creating and accumulating new capital, makes itself felt at the Reichsbank, whose returns show that it is approaching the limit of its capacity. The pressure is intensified by the rise in prices and wages, increased social-reform burdens, improved standards of living, and increased luxury.

Director von Lumm, of the Reichsbank, who has been writing effectively in banking publications in defense of the Reichsbank's endeavors to reform banking practice, noted that the previous speakers fully agreed with him as to the necessity for an increase of balances with the Reichsbank on the part of the credit banks. The president of the Reichsbank, as well as he himself, wanted to see competition among the banks kept within safe bounds, but the means for achieving this result must be left to the banks themselves, rather than fixed by legislation. It is the aim of the Reichsbank to induce the banks to increase their cash reserves, and thus to place the entire business activity of the country upon a broader basis. Dr. Heiligenstadt, president of the Preussische Zentral-Genossenschaftskasse, the central institution established by the Prussian Government with public funds for the purpose of assisting the co-operative agricultural banks, pointed out that his institution long has been occupied with the problem of improving the liquidity of the co-operative banks, but it was defeated in this by the

Thus far this winter the Central West has had so little moisture that farmers have begun to worry over the wheat crop and merchants are complaining that their stocks of cold weather clothing cannot be moved. Warm and bright days have prevailed which, while very pleasant in themselves, are not conducive to enthusiasm on the part of business men. The holiday business has been very satisfactory and indicates widespread and well distributed prosperity among the people. "It is too true that people are hard to please," remarked President J. R. Dominick to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER the other day, "but it is a fact that this sort of weather is really bad for business. Of course there is still plenty of time for the rains and snows which usually mark the mid-winter season, but the delay already has brought serious loss to many merchants. Stock feeders are having ideal conditions and there is scarcely any question now but the supply of fat stock will be plentiful in the early spring. The one favorable aspect of this dry spell has been the absence of high winds calculated to dry the earth and blow seeds out of the fields. One or two good snows or soaking rains will put the wheat in growing condition. Banks are reporting normal business and reflect the good holiday business enjoyed by merchants. In Oklahoma and parts of Texas good rains and snows have fallen in generous measure and this condition taken with the minimum of loss to the cattle interests ought to mean continued prosperity in that part of the Central West."

Sawyer to Succeed J. N. Dolley

Although the organized protest among the Kansas state bankers against the appointment of Charles Sawyer to the office of state bank commissioner promised to develop a puzzling political situation in that state, the storm has been averted and Governor-elect Hodges has notified all concerned that Mr. Sawyer will get the appointment which will become effective March 1, with the retirement of Mr. Dooley. The latter says he does not care to hold on until that time, but he has about twenty employees, mostly examiners who will lose their positions when he vacates the office and he does not want to turn them out in the middle of winter. An amusing feature of the objection of the state bankers to the appointment of Mr. Sawyer was the fact that he is a prominent national banker and the state bankers feared his attitude toward the enforcement of the state bank deposit guaranty law. It now turns out that, while Mr. Sawyer is a national banker, his greatest financial interests are invested in several state banks and that he is a strong advocate of the deposit guaranty system.

Kansas State Banks

According to the report of Bank Commissioner J. N. Dolley, deposits in Kansas state banks are still over the hundred million dollar mark. This report is based upon the state bank call of December 4. The actual total deposits in the 903 Kansas state banks are $105,570,314, a decrease of $475,000 from the statement of September 11, but an increase of more than three million dollars over the deposits of a year ago. It is pointed out that the bank deposits of the winter season usually show a small decrease from the early fall statements when the big wheat movement is on. The recent statement shows an increase in all the other banking items except overdrafts, which decreased more than $100,000, indicating that business men are paying their debts. The cash held in reserve is 32 1-4 per cent of the total deposits, 10 per cent more than the legal requirement.

Loan School Fund to Farmers

Kansas farmers are casting wistful eyes upon the school fund of that state which may become available in the form of loans on farms at a low rate. This fund is now a little more than nine million dollars and is invested in school district and municipal bonds. J. H. Miller, dean of the extension division of the Kansas State Agricultural College, is leading in a movement to convert the school fund into cash to be lent on long terms—eight to twelve years—to ambitious farmers who wish either to buy new farms or add to their present agricultural holdings. It is proposed to make the rate of interest very low—five per cent or less—and many prominent men in Kansas are in favor of the project. Of course the nine million dollars would not be sufficient for the demands, but that sum would go a long way toward reducing interest rates by competition and it would help to solve the farm credit problem. In all probability this matter will be presented to the Kansas legislature this winter.

File Suit Against Lumber Company.

By the filing of a suit of foreclosure against the Consolidated Lumber Company of Denver, a number of Omaha bondholders have made a last effort to realize something on the $500,000 which they invested in that project six years ago. The suit was filed last week and the assets of the company will be sold and may be bought by the Omaha bondholders in the hope that more funds may be secured and the business placed on a paying basis. The Omaha men most heavily interested are Charles Harding, George E. Barker, Thomas A. Fry, W. J. Foye, John H. Harte, Samuel Rees, Sr., and George Bancroft. In addition to the Omaha interests Denver capitalists put about $400,000 into the enterprise. This was a promotion scheme and appeared to be a good thing but it was found necessary to build a railroad in connection with the lumber mill and the investment was too heavy for the business done.

Banks Not Permitted to Form Trust Companies

According to a ruling given by First Assistant Attorney General Crawford, of Texas, last week, it is a violation of the anti-trust laws of Texas for a national bank to organize a trust company, the stock of which is to be taken by the stockholders of the bank in the same proportion in which they own stock in the bank and to hold together the stocks of the two institutions. The ruling came after the question had been put by Henry C. Coke, of Dallas, who, in a communication to the banking department, stated that the business of the American National of Dallas, having within the last few years grown so large, now finds that much valuable business is constantly offered which must be declined. This ruling probably will cause a reorganization of several trust companies in the Lone Star state and will be of interest in several other western states where practically the same anti-trust laws are in force.

Early in the morning of December 19, robbers blew open the vault of the Bank of Jones, twenty miles from Oklahoma City, and secured $1,800. They escaped.

A. M. Bedford, 84 years old, and for fifteen years president of the State Savings Bank of Savannah, Mo., died last week of pneumonia.

Walton H. Holmes, president of the Pioneer Trust Company of Kansas City, was elected vice-president of the Kansas City Country Club last week.

Miss Josie McCormack, of Moran, Kas., took the examination before the Kansas banking commission last week and will engage in banking in her home town. She is the first woman to take the examination under the new rules.

State Bank Examiner Emil Pfeiffer of Colorado, in his recent annual report, recommends the abolition of private banks. The examiner contends that all banks should be compelled to incorporate for the protection of depositors and he asks the legislature to enact such a law.

sharp competition of the credit banks for deposits.

The congress finally adopted with unanimity and with lively applause a declaration of which the following is a condensation:

The causes for the strongly increased demands upon the Reichsbank are to be seen (1) in the intense economic development of Germany; (2) in the antiquated methods of making payments, in the slight use of substitutes for cash; (3) in the more intense utilization of all available capital, which necessarily finds expression in diminishing the liquidity of German business in general, and, in particular, in reducing cash holdings to a relatively low basis; (4) in the financial practice of the empire and the German states, which frequently ignore money market considerations in their operations.

The declaration further proposes the following remedies for existing evils: (1) The method of making payments must be improved by promoting the freer use of substitutes for cash, and by removing the stamp-tax on cheques; (2) the Reichsbank's gold stock must be enlarged by drawing gold from home channels, to which end small notes must be issued in larger amounts, and by the heaviest possible imports from abroad; (3) certain large, regularly recurring payments must be shifted from the quarters' ends to other dates; (4) the cash stocks of banks of all kinds must be enlarged, along with a curtailment of all excessive expansion of credits; and it is desirable that the banks increase their balances with the Reichsbank, but the latter is advised to carry through this reform by treating each account individually and without attempting to establish fixed general rules; (5) the empire, the states, and other public authorities must manage their finances with less regard to purely fiscal viewpoints and with more consideration for general economic interests.

Previous to the foregoing discussion the congress had considered the subject of the German imperial and state loans and their standing in the markets. It was opened with a remarkably interesting paper on "Suitable and Unsuitable Means for Raising the Quotations of State Paper," by Max M. Warburg, head of the well-known Hamburg house of that name. This subject has called for much attention in Germany for some years, and many proposals for lifting the price of the public fund have been put forth. Some six years ago Baron von Rheinbaben, then Prussian Minister of Finance, tried in vain to get the Chamber of Deputies to pass a law requiring the savings banks to invest a certain proportion of their deposits in the funds; and last winter another bill for this purpose was brought in, but it has not yet been disposed of.

LONG TIME TO FARM BUYERS

Details of the new land policy of the Canadian Pacific railway show that all of the company's lands, approximately 7,000,000 acres, will be withdrawn from sale to any but bona fide settlers, but that the sales to settlers hereafter will be on twenty year terms, the longest time ever granted to land purchasers.

ALASKA BANKERS ACQUITTED

Captain Elbridge T. Barnette and B. R. Dusenbury were acquitted by Federal Judge Thos. R. Lyons on Tuesday of last week of the charge of making a false statement of the condition of the Washington-Alaska Bank at Fairbanks. Judge Lyons said the prosecution had failed to show intent to deceive or to defraud. The testimony introduced by the prosecution showed that estimates of assets, which it was alleged were overvalued, were adopted by a committee of depositors after careful investigation of the securities held by the bank. The other case growing out of the failure of the bank, two years ago, will go to trial at once.

THE INVESTOR AND THE GOLD SUPPLY

In a series of articles recently published in Cotton and Finance, dealing with the subject of the gold-production and its effect upon the prices of bonds, stocks, and commodities, Theodore H. Price reaches a conclusion which, if it can be established, is of vital moment to every owner of property in the United States, whether that property be bonds, insurance policies, stocks, or real estate. Briefly stated, this conclusion is that the increasing production of gold is responsible for the great rise of prices which has been the characteristic feature of the last decade; that this increased production of gold will continue indefinitely, and that the world is facing an economic crisis arising out of the certainty of a persistent depreciation in its standard of value.

This subject has been much discussed in recent years, as the steady rise of prices has brought home to every class in the community the importance of the problem presented. The fact of the advance of prices is well established. In 1896 Bradstreet's compilation of the wholesale prices of 106 commodities, including all the leading commodities of commerce, was 59,124; in 1900 this figure had risen to 78,839; in 1905, to 80,987; and in 1912, to 90,362. Specimen increases in particular commodities are even more striking. For example, during this period of seventeen years the price of wheat rose from 64 cents to $1.22; the price of corn, from 33 cents to 86 cents; the price of beef cattle, from 4.6 cents to 9 cents; eggs, from 12 cents to 20 cents; raw cotton, from 7 cents to 11 cents; anthracite coal, from $4.25 to $5.50; and so on, with hardly an exception throughout the entire list. This rise of prices mainly is responsible for the high cost of living. The advance of prices is lessening the purchase price of gold over the necessities of life. On the other hand, because of the rapid multiplication of companies and the numerous safeguards which experience and information are teaching the bankers to throw about the stocks and bonds which they offer for sale, the competition of corporations for the money of the investor is growing constantly sharper, and is forcing down the prices of all securities which carry a fixed income, and which have no prospect of sharing in increasing profits. The investment fund, it is true, steadily is increasing, but since the purchasing power of 4 per cent or 5 per cent investment income is declining so rapidly, while at the same time the number of securities offering the rates of interest is increasing, the natural result is that the investor discriminates against so-called "gilt-edge" bonds. While this depreciation in the price of bonds apparently is an advantage to investors making new purchases, it is threatening heavy losses to the owners of investments already in existence.—Edward Sherwood Meade, Ph. D., in January Lippincott's.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

That there always is something doing in the lives of North Dakota bankers is shown by a newspaper statement of recent improvement in the facilities of a bank at Streeter, Stutsman county, under the head: "First State Bank Adds Man and Apparatus." Read:

"That the First State Bank is a growing institution again has been demonstrated by the necessity of adding another man to the force. The new member is Henry Buttweiler, a young man of Freeport, Minn., who entered upon his duties as bookkeeper Saturday morning. Their latest acquisition, however, in the line of apparatus, is an Edison Dictaphone which enables the chief to give orders to his subordinates even when they are not around. A machine for shaving the records also was purchased and enables them to use one record 120 times. They have received the blue prints for the lighting system of their building and the electric lights soon will be installed. Much of the success of this bank is due to their able cashier, Geo. H. Rieland, who is a hustler and stands for square and honest dealings. He has two able assistants in Rudolph J. Hoeschen and W. E. Barringer."

South Dakota Convention

The annual convention of the South Dakota Bankers Association is to be held June 25th-26th at Watertown. Decision was reached at a meeting of the executive council last week at the Royal hotel in Huron. The council passed a strong resolution favoring the "Blue Sky" corporation law and urging the bankers to aid in obtaining the passage of such a bill at the coming session of the legislature. Another resolution favored good roads legislation, increased appropriation for farmers' institutes and for promulgation of better farming methods. A review of the financial situation indicated that the state is in good shape. At the meeting were: M. P. Beebe, E. F. Waite, William Ontjes, C. A. Russell, W. S. Ayers, President F. C. Danforth and Secretary J. E. Platt.

"Blue Sky" Law for Minnesota

A proposed "Blue Sky" law to regulate sale of stocks and bonds in the state, and to prevent fraud by the sale of worthless securities, has been drawn in the office of the secretary of state of Minnesota, and will be introduced in the legislature next month by Representative C. T. Knapp. The law creates a corporation commission, consisting of the secretary of state, attorney-general and superintendent of banks. Any corporation, before its stock is placed on sale in the state, must file a complete statement of its condition, and this will be subject to approval by the commission.

Rapid Rise of Newsboy

J. Louis Kohn, who has been made vice-president and treasurer of the Liberty Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago, is a former Minneapolis newsboy and messenger. He graduated from the South High School and the University of Minnesota, and later from the law school of the Chicago University. His parents live in Minneapolis. While he was attending school Mr. Kohn was working in the employ of the Union Investment Company, Minneapolis. Later he went with a land company at Fargo, and then into the employ of Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago. He was connected with the banking business at Madison and Halsted streets, until the new bank was formed by the same interests.

Banker To Be Appraiser

J. P. Cooper, vice-president of the State Bank of Redwood Falls, Minn., has been called upon by the Northwestern Life Insurance Company to act as one of three auditors in appraising $300,000,000 of insurance business, including $100,500,000 in first mortgages. He has gone to Milwaukee to begin work.

Convicted Defaulter in Prison

Harry W. Parker, the convicted Winnebago

City banker, has a place in the state prison that is decidedly exclusive even for a prison. He has charge of the accounting system of the commissary department with a desk in the store room in the basement of the executive building. Visitors are not shown through those quarters and there are but two other convicts in the rooms.

No Apprehension as to Tariff

Accompanied by L. L. McClelland of Pittsburgh and A. B. McCaughey, Chicago, President W. S. Kuhn of the Second National of Pittsburgh, and of J. S. and W. S. Kuhn, has visited the Twin Cities. Mr. Kuhn said: "I have not been in Minneapolis for some time, but there is some little talk here of the new administration and the probability of tariff changes and hesitation. Pittsburgh is the country's greatest center of interest in the tariff, for obvious reasons. If there is a city where business men would have reason to fear a prolonged tariff debate in congress, it is Pittsburgh. Yet nobody there has any nervousness over it and everyone expects the present great business that Pittsburgh is doing to extend throughout 1913."

Mr. Kuhn is interested in irrigation development in southern Idaho and the firm of J. S. and W. S. Kuhn controls sixty-five water-power companies in various parts of the United States.

Increase Capital Stock

Conditions in St. Paul industrially are indicated by an increase in the capital of two manufacturing companies. The Hackney Manufacturing Company took on an increase of from $600,000 to $1,000,000 and Charles A. Stickney & Co., from $600,000 to $1,200,000.

Re-elected Director

F. E. Kenaston, president of the South Side State Bank, has been re-elected a member of the board of directors of the Union Bank of Canada, at the annual meeting in Winnipeg.

He had served since before the headquarters were moved from Quebec.

State Banks Report

The largest volume on record was reported by 767 banks in Minnesota under state supervision, at the last call by Kelsey S. Chase, superintendent, a total of $150,957,984.66. The gain over a year ago in capital is $707,000; in surplus, $526,131; time certificates, $5,299,711; deposits subject to check, $5,180,048 and savings deposits, $2,857,186. The increase in loans and discounts is $13,612,137. The total loans and discounts are $116,720,009, capital $14,791,000, deposits $39,804,118 and savings $7,527,384.

Northwestern National Bank Review

How a Minneapolis retail establishment with 6,000 installment accounts went through 1912 with a bad-debt loss of only .97 of 1 per cent is told in the Northwestern National Bank's December business summary. The normal bad-debt loss is said to be 2 per cent.

"The year is drawing to its close, marked by prosperity which is justification of the spirit of optimism that began to be felt early in 1911, after a period of more or less industrial inactivity and uncertainty," the review says.

It then notes developments for the year, each of great importance to Minneapolis. They are: Freedom of the money market from sudden fluctuation.

Big increase in Twin City bank clearings.

Confidence in industrial Minneapolis shown by prompt sales of new stock issues.

Active retail trade.

Good collections.

Fall weather that favored trade and prevented car shortage and fuel scarcity.

Sells Interest in Thief River Falls Bank

Controlling interest in the First State of Thief River Falls, Minn., has been sold by President C. L. Debner, to local capitalists, including A. M. Arpin and Frank Weiland of the Northwestern Drainage Company; and George Johnson, cashier of the Grygla State Bank. Mr. Debner started the bank twenty years ago when there was only one other financial institution between Crookston and the Canadian border. Capital of the bank is to be increased.

Opposes Sale of Bonds

Sale of the Virginia state bonds held by Minnesota for reinvestment for local land development was opposed by the auditor, S. G. Iverson, in a recent address at Bemidji, the center of a big development association which recently went on record for the sale of the securities. Mr. Iverson said that the state has applications for about $400,000 in loans which it cannot meet until June. The funds come from state royalty on ores, timber and land sales, repayment of former loans, etc. Next year the state will receive between $600,000 and $700,000, paid on matured loans, $350,000 from the matured bonds of Tennessee and the sales and royalties, and in 1914 $225,000 Louisiana bonds will mature. In three years the state will be looking for investments. The state has about $14,000,000 loaned out.

Minnesota Notes

The Farmers State of Farada, Minn., is capitalized at $10,000. The first board of directors is F. C. Meade, Tom Hyeda, Henry Dau, J. H. Cooley, Henry Daniels, John Lorenz, J. F. Krohn, William Toedter and T. R. Dummert.

Five bonding companies submitted identical bids for bonds on county officials at Minneapolis: $800 for the big bond of $300,000, subject to 10 per cent discount for two years, and $125 for the sinking fund surety of $50,000 with the same discount. Lots were cast and the first went to the National Surety Company, and the second to the Illinois Surety Company.

Virginia, Minn., has voted $450,000 bonds to buy the Virginia Electric Power & Water Company, to which sum will be added $100,000 tax levy. The city is expected to take the plant over April 1.

E. C. Warner, director in the Security National, and F. E. Kenaston, president of the South Side State bank, are among the bankers of a $5,000,000 Minneapolis company incorporated in Delaware, for a general financing business. The charter allows almost any kind of financing business.

Dakota Notes

A new bank is to be founded at Zell, S. D., to take the place of the Bank of Zell, recently wrecked by the defalcation of the cashier. It is to be founded by Jacob Siberg and J. B. Till of Mitchell, S. D., and W. P. Craig of Tulare. The bank will be opened in a few weeks.

The First State of Manvel, N. D., has been organized with N. J. Nelson as president, E. G. Bonlie as vice-president and D. A. Nelson as cashier.

K. B. Wylie has been succeeded as cashier of the Citizens State, Streeter, N. D., by C. W. Spalding, Jr.

The Northern State of Grand Forks, N. D., has increased its stock from $50,000 to $100,000.

The Commercial State of Plankinton, N. D., and the Farmers and Merchants State, have consolidated as the Farmers and Merchants State. The capital has been increased from $10,000 to $25,000. Arthur Harris is president, J. E. Morris is cashier, and Robert McIntosh and P. F. Nolan are assistants.

Mandan banks have deposits aggregating about 500 per cent greater than the average for North Dakota banks, on the showing made by the last statements. The average deposits for a North Dakota bank is $102,036.26, with 717 banks in operation, while the three Mandan banks have a total of $1,542,013.38. The increase in deposits for local banks this year has also exceeded by 200 per cent the average for all banks.

The first annual report of the North Dakota tax commission is to the effect that there is $1,500,000,000 taxable property in the state, which is assessed in 1912 at $294,770,370. The commissioners believe that property is being assessed at from 15 to 20 per cent of its value.

The last census gives the mortgage indebtedness on farms owned by actual operators at $47,841,587. It is a well known fact, points out the commission, that the mortgages in North Dakota are greatly in excess of those on lands actually owned by the operator. The bank deposits in September, 1912, aggregated $70,302,584.

SAYS CORRESPONDENT WAS MIS-INFORMED

EDITOR THE CHICAGO BANKER: We wish to call your attention to the article on page 22 of December 14th, under the heading, "Farmers Banks in Washington." The writer must be poking fun at us, or else he has relied on hearsay and not referred to statistics.

The comptroller's report for 1911 gives the capital of the national banks in Whitman County, seven in all, $415,000; the report of the state examiner for state banks, for 1911, twenty-five in all, $726,250; total $1,141,250. Your article states it $12,000,000. Your article states the smallest capital is $200,000, when the truth of the matter is there is only one bank in the county with a capital of $200,000, and only two others whose capital is above $50,000. All others are $50,000 and under.

Your article states that deposits amount to more than $35,000,000. The reports for 1911 of the comptroller and state examiner gives deposits in national banks $1,554,607 and in state banks $2,301,091.14. Total $3,855,098.14.

The other part of the article is just as far from the truth as the figures show on deposits and capital.

Yours respectfully,

G. W. NYE,

Cashier Garfield National, Garfield, Wash.

PRAISES TAFT'S WORK FOR AGRICULTURAL CREDIT BANKS

Washington, December 23d.—Myron T. Herrick, the American ambassador of France, who is here to agitate the establishment of agricultural credit banks as a means to bring cheap and abundant capital to farmers for the further development of their lands, has made public the following letter which he has received from David Lubin, American delegate to the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, Italy, praising President Taft's efforts to bring financial assistance to the American farmers:

"President Taft and yourself have spoken, and spoken down the ages of history. Our time, in its contemporary activities, is filled to overflowing with important events; important in the domain of the concrete and the abstract, of the sacred and the secular, of conservation and progress; but when distance of time shall have intervened and the brilliancy of many of these events shall have dimmed, the movement set going in the United States by the letter of President Taft and by your report shall stand and shine forth from among these, undimmed by time and unobscured by events to come.

"Why? Because you have by this act set in motion a current in political history which shall at last render popular government stable.

"You and I know that popular government is not a new experiment. We know that republics were, but that they faded away and perished.

"Why? Because the coalesced progressive forces of the cities devoured the uncoalesced conservative forces of the country. And do we not know that if we were to conserve the Republic we must conserve the conservative of the Republic, the farmer?

"To President Taft and to yourself belongs the honor of not alone knowing this cardinal truth, but of harnessing the proper means toward this end; of shaping the course of the Ship of State along the path which she should ever travel; when the state shall no longer swing to and fro, from progress to reaction, like a pendulum, but move in a well-defined evolutionary orbit.

"And thus the movement you have set going will tend to promote an 'experiment' into an enduring Republic—a Republic not merely of value to its own citizens but likewise of value, through its influence, to all the world.

"If this statement of the case seems too bold it is because we are living too close to the initiative; time will rectify that.

"God speed you in your great endeavor.

"Sincerely, DAVID LUBIN."

Pacific Northwest Banking News

All previous records for the planting of winter wheat in Washington have been broken this fall, according to figures just received from the crop statistical report of the department of agriculture. The total acreage devoted to winter wheat on December 1st, was 1,138,000, as against 1,035,000 in 1911. The condition December 1st was given as 100 per cent, the best record ever known in the state, as against 91 per cent for last year, with a past-10-year average of 92 per cent.

The same winter wheat acreage is reported for Idaho this year as in 1911, when it was 348,000. Oregon has 570,000 acres in winter wheat, as against 640,000 a year ago. Its condition is 97, as against 98 last year. Montana planted 557,000 acres this year; last year, 493,000. Condition, 1912, 91; 1911, 86.

A spirit of optimism regarding present conditions in the Pacific Northwest and faith in a still more prosperous future on the part of northwestern bankers is the report of J. L. Williams, in charge of out-of-town business of the Irving National Bank of New York, who is just completing a four months' business trip through the Northwest in the interests of his bank. "In the entire West I have not discovered one pessimist nor heard one pessimistic idea expressed by any of the bankers," said Mr. Williams, adding: "All the western bankers are optimists, and they have great faith in the country and look to next year to be one of the best in the history of the country. Their optimism is borne out everywhere by the wonderful crops, good prices, the abundance of money and business conditions generally."

Mr. Williams left New York August 11th, since which time he has visited Chicago, Denver, Omaha, St. Louis and all the principal cities of Arizona, California, Oregon and Washington. His bank handles the apple crop of Watsonville, Cal., and much of the Hood River product, and his visit to Washington was made in the hope of securing for the bank some of the apple crop of the big Washington districts. Mr. Williams sees a large eastern market for the Washington product, and one as yet but little developed.

D. S. Culver, president of the merged National German and the Merchants National Bank of St. Paul, journeyed from the Minnesota capital to Spokane to view the magnificent 14-story home of the Old National Bank.

"The Old National is quite as famous in my part of the country as it is at home," said Mr. Culver. "I had heard much of it, and when we decided to build, I could think of no way to learn more than by seeing it. I was much pleased with the main banking room, where is combined to a high degree all that is best in art and facility. The banking equipment, too, strongly attracted me."

Mr. Culver explained that it is the purpose of the directors of his bank to proceed along the same line in providing funds for erection of the building as was done here. A separate company will be formed and stock sold to those interested in the bank. The height of the building and the amount to be expended on it have not been determined.

Reports have been received in Prosser, Wash., that the Northern Pacific Railway Company will finance and build the high line ditch, an irrigation project that will water 200,000 acres of land in Yakima and Benton counties. For several years leading men of these two counties have been endeavoring to bring about the construction of this vast project. Of this 200,000 acres, the Northern Pacific owns 70,000. It has an elevation of 400 feet above the Sunnyside canal, and in some places there will be pump lifts above this elevation 150 to 250 feet. Water is secured from the government by the Northern Pacific at a cost of $15 an acre. The government has completed one of the big reservoirs at Lake Keechelus for the storage of water to be used in the canal, and another reservoir will be started in the spring, above Lake Keechelus. It is said that estimates for building the canal will be in the hands of Northern Pacific officials by March 1st, after which contracts for the work will be awarded and that actual construction will begin April 1st. It is estimated the ditch will be completed within two years after beginning the work.

Nine members of the Spokane Chapter of the American Institute of Banking tendered an informal banquet to T. H. Keown, acting accountant of the Bank of Montreal, on the occasion of his removal to Merritt, B. C., to become accountant at that branch. Mr. Keown has been connected with the Spokane branch for six years, coming here from Toronto, Canada. He has been a member of the executive council of the local A. I. B. chapter for two years. A number of banks were represented at the banquet, those present including W. N. Baker, Northwest Loan and Trust; J. W. Bradley and W. E. Tollenaar, Old National; E. R. Anderson and C. E. Cooper, Fidelity National; B. A. Russell, Washington Trust, and George C. Gage, Exchange National.

Big Apple Selling Plan Ready

The permanent incorporation committee named by the apple growers' conference has completed its work of preparing articles of incorporation and has decided that the big central organization be called the North Pacific Fruit Distributors, with its head office in Spokane at 907 Paulsen building, and controlled by nine trustees representing one each of nine northwestern apple districts described in the articles of incorporation which have been filed with the secretary of state for Washington. As soon as incorporation is completed the articles will be printed in pamphlet form and distributed to every growers' association in Washington, Oregon, Montana and Idaho. It will then be optional with the individual associations whether they ally themselves with the central organization. The association will be a mutual corporation controlled by the nine trustees and incorporated under the laws of Washington under the non-profit making law.

W. T. Clark of Wenatchee President

The permanent officers elected, who by virtue of a state law can hold office only six months, are as follows: W. T. Clark, Wenatchee, president, who is president of the First National at Wenatchee; J. H. Robbins, North Yakima, vice-president; H. C. Sampson, Spokane, secretary; H. F. Davidson, Hood River, treasurer; N. C. Richards, North Yakima, general counsel. The other members of the permanent committee who now become trustees of the corporation for six months are: Henry Huber, Walla Walla; W. M. Sackett, Bitter Root; P. J. Neff, western Oregon; W. N. Yost, southern Idaho, and W. S. Thornber, the Lewiston-Clarkston district. The Northwest is divided into nine districts and each must have its representative on the board of trustees. The date of the first annual meeting has been fixed for the third Monday in May. At this meeting the trustees elected will draw lots as to the length of their tenure of office, three to serve three years, three two years and three one year. After the first election the trustees will serve a three-year term.

General Purpose of the Corporation

"The general purpose of the corporation will be to provide for the marketing and distributing of the fruit of the Northwest," said N. C. Richards, general counsel-elect. "The articles give the corporation power to employ agencies to that end and construct the necessary property to market and distribute fruit, and generally to construct the machinery to represent the growers and eliminate waste. The corporation will handle the fruit of its members, either as individuals or organizations." The board of trustees will meet in North Yakima, January 3d, to further evolve plans.

of from one-half to one per cent over the rate paid in 1912. Elections to vote on the money by-laws will take place in February, and it is expected the debentures will be placed on the market in April. Under the head of debentures authorized but not yet sold, may be cited the following at 4½ per cent:

Isolation hospital, $100,253.34; site for civic office building, $76,406.67; cost of construction of this building, $225,000; park lands, purchased from the school board, $26,000; golf links, $310,000; police building, $75,000; land for central telephone department, $50,000; Alberta College property, $60,000. At 5 per cent: Car barn site, $50,000; bridging Forty-second Street, $25,000; land for phone substations, $22,000; land for parks and driveways, $150,000; warehouse site, $66,000.

To the foregoing will be added $750,000, the amount provided for in by-laws but not yet referred to the rate-payers for endorsement. This will bring the total to $2,083,000.

The various estimates for civic improvements brought down to date involve a total expenditure of nearly $7,000,000 during the fiscal year which began November 1, 1912, as follows:

Paving, $1,500,000; street railway, $1,500,000; sewer work, $1,250,000; sidewalks and grading, $300,000; power department, $430,000; telephone department, $900,000; water works, $300,000; electric light department, $250,000. In addition, the commissioners are planning to install a gas distributing system and a central public market, also build a bridge over the Saskatchewan river at Fifth Street and expend $80,000 in the department of health.

Edmonton led all the cities in Canada in the percentages of increase in bank clearings and building permits issued in November.

The former showed a gain of 71 per cent over November, 1911, while the amount involved in building operations was 475 per cent larger than for the eleventh month in 1911. The bank clearings for the first eleven months in 1912 totaled $199,078,413, an increase of 85 per cent over 1911. Building permits issued during the eleven months of 1912 mean the expenditure of $13,850,422, a gain of 237 per cent over the same period in 1911. A. O. Whitmore, secretary of the Edmonton Builders Exchange, says there is every indication that the building season of 1913 will be even better.

San Francisco

Officers and members of the executive council of the California Bankers Association held their regular semi-annual meeting recently in the Savings Union Bank building. The protective department reported that since the annual meeting in May it had co-operated with agents of the American Bankers Association in an investigation of forty-eight cases, which included thirty-five forgery cases, one robbery and twelve cases of swindling in which fictitious checks and telegrams played a part. Forty-seven banks were defrauded, sustaining losses aggregating $8,000; twenty-three persons were arrested, of whom eight have been convicted and sentenced, three placed on probation, ten await trial and two were dismissed. The legislative committee will co-operate with the state superintendent of banks at the coming session of the legislature to secure several needed amendments to the state banking act. The bankers association will advocate the passage of the uniform negotiable instruments act, bills of lading bill, false statement for credit bill, and the Kansas "Blue Sky" law.

The next general convention of the association will be held at San Diego on May 22d to 24th, the executive council having accepted on behalf of the association, the invitation by the San Diego bankers.

The directorate of the Los Angeles Hibernian Savings Bank has increased the capital stock $125,000. The present capital is $250,000, and with the increase the capital stock and surplus will be brought up to more than $400,000. Joseph D. Radford, vice-president, states that the policy of paying 5 per cent per annum on sums from $1 up to $5,000 has met with success, and that deposits have increased over $1,000,000 during the past year.

George W. Kramer has been elected assistant cashier of the Sacramento Bank as his reward for twenty-six years service. Other officers of the bank are Phillip Scheld, president; W. M. Bowers, vice-president; James M. Henderson, Jr., cashier; Frank H. Conn, assistant cashier.

Henry Lawrence, pioneer president of the Tomales (Cal.) Bank and Trust Co., has resigned, his place being filled by the election of David Burbank of Petaluma to the presidency. Wm. Bassett, a director, was made vice-president.

COURT MAKES IMPORTANT BANK RULING

The supreme court of Idaho holds that the receiver of the defunct State Bank of Commerce of Wallace, Idaho, of which B. F. O'Neil, recently tried on a criminal charge, was president, is the proper person to bring suit against the directors of the banking house to recover the funds lost by depositors, and not the depositors. The ruling was made in an opinion on appealed case of Edward McTannany vs. E. R. Day et al., directors of the bank.

Des Moines, December 26th.—Twenty-one bankers attended the meetings of the executive council, the taxation committee and the legislative committee of the Iowa Bankers Association held in the offices of Secretary P. W. Hall in this city last week. Charles Hannan of Council Bluffs, treasurer, was the only member of the executive council who did not attend. Two members of the taxation committee were not present. Much important business was transacted and much constructive work planned.

Special interest attaches to the report of the legislative and taxation committees. However, it was thought best not to make public the recommendations of the legislative committee. The object is obvious—the members do not wish to place the Iowa Bankers Association in the attitude of working for any legislation. However, the various bills which will be favored will be introduced through the various members of the legislature. One bill that will be recommended will be the placing of more drastic punishment for bank robbers on the statute books of the state. The bankers want the maximum penalty for bank robbery by use of explosives fixed at forty years, with a minimum of fifteen. For bank burglary with tools and without the use of explosives the maximum desired is to be fifteen years. Similar laws in other states are of value in deterring would-be bank robbers.

The taxation committee did not make any recommendations but explained the report of the tax commission. The recommendations of this commission, if carried out will be satisfactory to the bankers. The commission favors, in brief, the taxation of all property on the basis of 100 cents on the dollar. In the case of banks the capital stock is to be taxed on this rate against the shareholders with no deductions for debts. The surplus and undivided profits shall be taxed as are moneys and credits at the flat rate of five mills on the dollar. If these recommendations are carried out, the present discriminatory methods will be done away with and the rates so reduced as to make the amounts paid equitable to all. In addition, a permanent tax commission is favored and the office of the county assessor will be created.

The council of administration voted to employ Attorney James S. Parsons of Des Moines to act as council for the association. Mr. Parsons came to Des Moines from Rock Rapids, the home of President Shade. He is a lawyer of ability.

The question of bank insurance was taken up and discussed at length. It was explained that various casualty companies which are seeking to get the business away from Secretary Hall, who turns commissions into the protective fund, are cutting rates. The council passed a motion that the president, vice-president and secretary act as a committee to secure lower rates from the company represented by Secretary Hall so that the latter can compete with those who are trying to break the contracts now prevailing.

An attempt was made to organize a mutual bank burglary association. The plan contemplates an assessment among all of the banks sufficient to cover the losses incurred by bank robberies. However the motion was lost by an overwhelming vote.

The question also was raised as to whether casualty companies are permitted under the Iowa laws to offer rebates. Secretary Hall had been of the opinion that such could not be done but recently the state insurance commissioner notified a Des Moines casualty company that the Iowa laws do not prohibit rebating or rate cutting so far as casualty business is concerned. This has changed the entire aspect of the case although Secretary Hall is outspoken in his statements that he does not intend to resort to rebating.

It was voted to ask the Des Moines Clearing House Association to arrange it so that one day of the state convention next June shall be given over to an inspection of Ames Agricultural College. In this way, the bankers will be given a splendid incentive to make improved farming methods an active object for constructive work the following year.

Secretary Hall has Trophy

Secretary Hall has suspended in his office a gun which was found near the scene of the Goldfield bank robbery. The weapon had one shell in the chamber when found, while other shells were found along the route of the team, which had run away with the robbers in their hasty escape. One end of the gun barrel has been sawed off so as to make the article fit into a suit case. It is so constructed that the charge would scatter and at a close range would prove a most effective weapon. Bloodhounds were placed on the trail of the Goldfield robbers but no arrests were made.

Alleged Swindler Busy

Howard Lewis, who boasts several aliases, has been heard from in Missouri. Lewis now has floated about seventy-five checks and each is worth $14.70. The checks are drawn on Des Moines banks but Lewis has been securing the money on them through merchants. His plan is to buy a small article and pay for it with a check for $14.70, pocketing the change. To allay suspicion, he leaves the article to be called for later. Of course he never comes back. The banks have thus far lost nothing but the merchants are beginning to get suspicious.

Gives Views on Good Roads Legislation

Dennis P. Hogan, president of the Farmers Savings at Massena, was one of the many bankers who attended the state good roads conference in Des Moines last week. Mr. Hogan, while in the city, outlined his ideas of what should constitute good road legislation in the coming general assembly. He was a legislator last term but was defeated this year. He believes that first in importance is a state good road commission which should include several expert engineers. This commission should establish in each county a sub-system by which the board of supervisors should name a county road supervisor, who in turn should work under the direction of the state commission. The roads in Iowa are built and improved too much upon the hit and miss plan at present, says Mr. Hogan, and experience of other states shows that well-defined and systematic efforts are necessary to success.

Money Situation

Financial conditions in Iowa have tightened up somewhat during the closing days of the year. There is a big demand for money, especially in the farming communities where farmers are holding their crops for higher prices and using their money in the bank for practical purposes. Then again the Balkan war, which has had an effect in the East, also has affected the Middle West, as conditions in the East are reflected in this territory. Money just now is considered closer in Iowa than at this time last year but no apprehension whatever is felt as to continued prosperity.

J. N. Dolley to Address Bankers Club

The Bankers Club of Des Moines announces that J. N. Dolley, state bank examiner for Kansas will speak on the "Blue Sky" law of that state January second. It was intended that he should speak at the December meeting but it later was thought best to postpone. Interest in the "Blue Sky" law is becoming intense throughout the state. It fully is apparent that the legislature will be asked to pass such an act and it seems certain that the enactment will go through. Senator Fred Larabee, one of the senate floor leaders, announced at his home at Fort Dodge last week that he is for such a measure and will support it in the legislature.

City to Pay Costs

The Des Moines city council finally has ordered the costs which accrued in the Home Savings Bank case paid out of the city treasury. The amount is only $158.80, but the case is interesting because it is the echo of one of the bank assessment fights which have been many and numerous in Des Moines and which the banks almost invariably have won. The city won the case growing out of bank assessments in 1906 in the district courts. When the case was appealed to the state supreme court, the city won again. But when the United States supreme court got hold of it, the bank won. The city was ordered to pay the costs, but, upon the claim that the city is not liable for actions arising through the board of review, withheld the money. The bank then started suit and finally the council decided that the easiest way is to pay up.

Iowa Notes

W. C. Logan celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of his connection with the Leavitt and Johnson banking interests at Waterloo December 18th. It was in 1882 that Mr.

Logan began his employment with the firm as bookkeeper. Gradually he worked upward until he became director for the Leavitt and Johnson Trust Company, and cashier of the Waterloo Savings. He was one of the organizers of the latter concern ten years ago.

The Council Bluffs banks have issued statements which show that the banks in the city have resources which total $282 for each man, woman and child residing there. If the amount were divided among the residents of Iowa the per capital amount would be $3.72. The statements show the resources combined to be $8,281,604.92. The total deposits in the institutions there are $6,719,414. Postal savings deposits allotted to the various banks amount to $19,436 as against $12,175.82 in June.

The Des Moines school board has decided to ask the people to vote a bond issue of $400,000. Of this amount, $200,000 is to go for an addition to the West Des Moines high school. The remainder goes for improvements in the various ward buildings of the city. However, North Des Moines residents likewise are asking for an addition to the building and it is probable that before the school election rolls around in March the amount to be asked will be much larger than the $400,000 authorized.

B. W. McElhinney, the Goldfield banker whose bank was robbed of over $4,000 recently, believes that he is the original victim of hard luck. The same week his bank was robbed he was called into court as defendant in a damage suit brought by relatives of a girl, who allege that he ran over her in his automobile last fall, causing her death.

J. P. O'Malley, president of the Peoples National at Perry and one of the leading democrats of Iowa, has retained Des Moines architects to draw up plans for a handsome new bank building.

The Coon Rapids National has decided to liquidate, according to reports which have reached Des Moines. There are three banks in Coon Rapids and it has been learned that this is too many. The bank will continue to settle up its business, pay depositors, etc., until the first of the year and by that time it is figured that the business will be cleaned up.

Mrs. Homer Miller, wife of the president of the Iowa National, led a score of Des Moines women who swooped down upon the good roads conference last week and secured the adoption of a resolution favoring woman's suffrage.

Sioux City

The Bear Butte Valley bank has purchased the fixtures and building of the now defunct Meade County bank and will succeed it in business at Sturgis, S. D. In the purchase price of $9,000 are included two small buildings adjoining. The new bank will soon open. The court order of sale paves the way for winding up the affairs of the old institution.

The death of Miss Susanna Weare, of Sioux City, takes from Iowa the notable daughter of a notable banker, George Weare, one of the pioneer bankers of Iowa. Her brother, Henry G. Weare, is a vice-president of the First National Bank.

W. J. Reed, one of the best known bankers of northwestern Iowa, a pioneer and a leader in business circles of Ida Grove for 30 years, has disposed of all his holdings in Iowa and will make his residence hereafter in Los Angeles, where his family already is established. Mr. Reed conducted a banking business under the name of Baxter, Reed & Co., his associate being Jas. R. Baxter.

FIRST WOMAN TO TAKE EXAMINATION

Topeka, Kansas, December 22, 1912.—Miss Josie McCormack, of Moran, Kansas, is the first woman in the United States to take an examination for bank cashier. For three days she has been at work in the office of State Bank Commissioner J. N. Dolley working out answers to the financial questions before her. She has completed the examination and made an excellent showing.

January 1st she will become cashier of the Moran State Bank. That was the object in taking the examination. She has been employed in the bank for two and one-half years as a bookkeeper. Recently she applied to the banking department for text books and a course of study. They were sent to her and she went through them thoroughly, then came to Topeka to take the examination.

Many men have taken these examinations and many of them have failed. If a prospective banker takes the examination and receives a grade of less than seventy, he is sent back home. He has an opportunity to take another examination ten days later. If he fails on that one, he goes home and waits six months. Seventy is the minimum. Miss McCormack did not have to worry about the minimum.

Kansas is the only state in the Union where persons who intend to become bank cashiers are required to pass an examination. That is one of the reforms installed by State Bank Commissioner Dolley. He has been requiring the examination for two years or more and has brought up the standard of bank cashiers in Kansas. They must have the necessary qualifications now if they get the jobs.

Miss McCormack was the first woman to apply and she made equally as good a showing as the average man who takes the examination.

"I am always glad to see women take a place in a bank," said Mr. Dolley. "We have a large number of women in the state banks of Kansas and they are among the best bank workers we have. They are honest, reliable and are hard workers. They are mighty careful about making a loan. They take fewer chances than men. There are thousands of women employed in banks all over the United States and not a single one has ever been charged with defalcations. No woman banker has ever gone from the bank to the penitentiary. They make clear-headed and honest bankers and we need them in the business in Kansas."

STANDARDIZING THE DOLLAR

Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale University will today (Saturday) before the American Economic Association at Boston, make public in detail his plan for "Standardizing the Dollar." Dean David Kinley of the University of Illinois, has said of Dr. Fisher's plan:

"So far as concerns your specific proposal to keep the average purchasing power of gold stable, I do not see any logical flaw in it.

"The desirability of fixing the price level, however, is very different, in my judgment, according as the changes originate in the one source (gold) or the other (goods). For that reason the simple fact that a plan like your own brilliantly conceived, logically worked out scheme, will accomplish the purpose of steadying the average purchasing power of gold is not enough, in my judgment, to commend it for adoption.

"Since I agree with you in the belief that a plan like the one you suggest is theoretically correct, I have but little objection to make to your specific plan, although, after all, it seems to me to be but an indirect method of applying the tabular standard, against which there is, in my judgment, much to be said."

RICHMOND CHAPTER NEWS

By J. S. HAW, SECRETARY

At a recent meeting of the Board of Governors of Richmond Chapter, Aubin K. Parker, president, handed in his resignation. The amount of extra work incident to the taking over of another bank by the institution with which he is connected made it impossible for Mr. Parker to devote the necessary time to the office, and it was with regret that the Board accepted his resignation. Thus it was that our chapter was late in beginning its operations for the season of 1912-13. We were fortunate, however, in filling the vacancy, to select a man who is thoroughly capable of piloting the chapter's affairs to a successful conclusion when the season closes next spring. We refer to Henry G. Proctor whom the chapter delights to honor for he has been one of the old standbys and always has had the interest of the chapter at heart whether he was connected with it officially or not.

With such a capable man at the helm and several thoroughly live committees at work, although late beginning, the success of the year's work seems assured. At present we are without permanent quarters, having had to vacate the rooms formerly occupied over the National State & City Bank, that institution having to use them.

Our first meeting was held on Nov. 12th in the magnificent new ballroom of the Richmond Hotel. We were delighted to have with us Harry V. Haynes of Washington, vice-president of the Institute, who spoke on "The Institute." Among other things Mr. Haynes pointed out the fact that the various chapters are putting the social side of chapter life more in the background, and are featuring the educational side. This is the ideal toward which all of those who have the interest of the Institute at heart are working. Mr. Haynes pointed out as a notable example the case of the New York Chapter where there are five nights a week devoted to study classes.

The other speaker was Wm. T. Dabney, better known as "Booster Bill," who makes it his business to tell people what they are missing by not being in Richmond. He told us something about the Salt Lake City convention and succeeded in working up enthusiasm for the big convention when it meets here in 1913. He also took occasion to give the young fellows some sound advice as to how to succeed in business whether it was banking or not, for the principles he laid down were applicable, he said, to any business.

Although it will be some time before the 1913 convention, we already have appointed our general committee, which is composed of Geo. H. Keesee, D. E. Mountcastle, R. L. Gordon, C. L. Williams and H. G. Proctor. Any communications with reference to the convention should be addressed to Geo. H. Keesee, chairman, care of Merchants National Bank. Our class in banking is progressing nicely and we hope to turn out some certificate-holders before many months have passed.

The success of our first meeting, which was held on Nov. 12th, was largely reflected through the acceptance by the Board of Governors at a recent meeting of applications for membership from seventy-six men. This is a source of great satisfaction to us and it might be well at this time to commend to the other chapters the methods which we are now using to interest all bank clerks in chapter work. A membership committee composed of Messrs. Clinton L. Williams, Geo. H. Keesee and C. V. Blackburn has secured the names of every bank clerk, officer and director in this city and has listed these names on cards divided into two sections—one section for the names of members and the other for names of non-members. Each member of this committee assumes responsibility for work among a given number of banks, who in turn enlist a number of additional men in each bank whose duty it is to supply information for the membership committee, distribute notices, solicit members and do general missionary work on behalf of the chapter. The number of men to do this work in each bank is not necessarily limited, but the committee of course will not ask the services of anyone other than those interested in the work.

At the same meeting of the board above referred to, it was decided to issue a monthly pamphlet or bulletin to be called the "Rich Chap," under the able supervision of Mr. Blackburn. This pamphlet will be conducted in a manner similar to that in vogue in some of the other chapters.

PHILADELPHIA CHAPTER

By THOMAS W. SMITH

A severe arraignment of present methods of tariff making especially as illustrated by the Payne-Aldrich law was made recently by Professor C. W. Veditz, of the George Washington University, former chief examiner of the United States tariff board, in an address on the "Proper Functions of a Tariff Commission," delivered before the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Institute of Banking. As the speaker was connected with the tariff board at Washington until its abolition last summer, his references to the work of the board were of peculiar significance.

He regretted that the tariff board had had "saddled upon it from the start the incubus of an absurd theory of tariff adjustment, namely the so-called comparative cost of production theory of protection, according to which the tariff should be so adjusted upon each article as to impose a duty equivalent to the difference between the domestic and the foreign cost of production, plus a reasonable profit for the American manufacturer." Despite its appearance of scientific accuracy, this cost of production theory, said the speaker, was ardent nonsense. No permanent branch of the government should have its work and investigations shaped in the light of a partisan and impossible economic theory; and in the last analysis it was this misfortune that probably led to the abolition of the tariff board, which certainly could have performed a multitude of useful services regardless of the dominant political situation.

"The Payne-Aldrich tariff," said Mr. Veditz, "was the result of nearly three years' deliberation on the part of the republican congress. There was less haste in its enactment than in that of most tariff laws. The democrats were too weak and too divided at that time to have any effect whatever upon shaping tariff legislation. The act was the best that under prevailing methods could have been obtained; but these methods are defective and inadequate, not to say vicious, beyond expression. The ways and means committee could not and did not obtain anything like an adequate knowledge of the factors involved. As in previous years, it had to rely upon 'ex parte,' conflicting, misleading and incomplete testimony. The committee deliberately was misled in a number of instances. The debate on the bill in the house was a curiosity in the history of fiscal legislation. There was no opportunity either for genuine argument or for amendment of crucial paragraphs.

"Whether we are to have a tariff for protection or a tariff for revenue, there ought to be devised some means for collecting information about industrial conditions at home and abroad and the effect of different tariff rates upon them. A tariff board could help revise the present obsolete classifications; it could translate the tariff into plain English; it should show the relation between duties and prices; it could help educate congress and the people as to industrial conditions here and in competing countries. What is needed in our tariff making, whether for revenue or protection, is more light—more adequate and reliable information. Now there is no way to get it, and congress and the people are at the mercy of schemers and corruptionists."

AGRICULTURAL CONFERENCE

Eugene Davenport, dean and director of the University of Illinois College of Agriculture and Agricultural Experiment Station, Urbana-Champaign, announces a two-weeks' session of the corn growers' and stockmen's convention at the University beginning the middle of January, at which time instruction is given in the general lines of agriculture to about 1,000 farmers from all over the state. Tuesday, January 21st, has been set aside as road day. On that day there will be an address by A. N. Johnson, state engineer, Springfield, and the Hon. Homer J. Tice of Green View, chairman of the committee on roads and bridges of the Illinois legislature; also by W. G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois and president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association.

man is going ahead with prosperity and believes in his country just as he believes in himself.

OUR old friend, W. O. Jones, one time poet laureate of Kansas, but now one of the main stays of the big Park National, is said to have "come back" to his best form recently in verse creation.

HE was addressing his Sunday school class out in Flat Bush, and in a moralizing frame of mind, and this is as we get it from the "Billy" J. Burns dictaphone:

IF you have an old lead dime,
Pass it on.

Do not fuss and waste good time,
Pass it on.

You may feel real mean, it's true,
But in just a week or two

It will come right back to you,

Pass it on.

ISN'T it grand?

CASHIER.

CLOSED BANK PAYS DEPOSITS

Pottstown, Pa.—The Tri-county Banking Company last week paid the claims of all depositors, amounting to $110,000. The bank had suspended business owing to failure to realize on investments. The depositors received the full amount of their deposits which had been withheld for months pending settlement of the bank's affairs.

NEW BOOKS

"A book for a gift if you wish to compliment a friend" is an old adage. Two of the latest Harper Bros. productions are likely to fill just such a demand.

"The Man in Lonely Land" by Kate Langley Bosher, who wrote "Mary Cary," is a tale of a lonely bachelor and his fine old dog, a charming Southern girl, two sweet and interesting children, the enthusiasm of Christmas, and the author's clever skill in story-telling, combine to make it a capital story. It is inspiring in its message, lively with wholesome fun, and imbued with warmth and color of high personal ideals. Price $1.00 net.

"Charge It" is by Irving Bacheller, a very distinguished author. He wrote the Eben Holden tales, "Keeping up with Lizzie," etc. The fun and philosophy of "Keeping up with Lizzie" are even excelled in these new pages, which reveal the wonderfully interesting doings of some of the same people—our old friend Socrates Potter, Betsey Smead, the Warburtons—and some very enjoyable new people, too. Extravagance and love of display have reached their height when the story opens. In fact, young Harry Van Alstyne's slogan, "Charge it to Harry," is the keynote of the whole town. As events come before our view we see the servants—under the wise guidance of Socrates—administering unconsciously a lesson to their snobbish employers; we see the rise and final success of the Society of Useful Women; we see Marie Benson, "the most terrible talker in Pointview," attempting to reform Nancy Doolittle; the financial difficulties of the young men in their attempt to keep up with Harry—all these and scores of other humorously thoughtful scenes, and a delicate love story through them all.

This also is by the Harper Bros. and sells at $1.00.

Stuart B. Stone is the compiler of "The Nonsensical U. S. A.," which title betrays its contents. While the book claims to be funny, and openly makes a bid for one's smiles, it is entitled to them because it really is funny. The author "hits off" all our cherished national ideals, from baseball to millionaires, pays his compliments to Arctic explorers, aeroplanists, highballs, best sellers, and every other imaginable phase of American life. Like Trilby, it is funny without being vulgar. (New York: H. M. Caldwell Co.)

KANSAS CONVENTION

The 1913 convention of the Kansas Bankers Association will be held at Hutchinson, Tuesday and Wednesday, May 6th and 7th.

SUE BANK DIRECTORS

Suit for $361,077 has been filed against nine directors of the First National of New Berlin, N. Y., which failed some time ago owing to defalcations of Frank T. Arnold, the cashier. It is alleged that the directors largely are responsible for the failure of the bank because, despite the extravagant mode of living of the cashier, they permitted him a free rein.

GROWTH OF OHIO BANKS

The 505 state banks and trust companies in Ohio show a net increase of approximately $4,000,000 in aggregate resources in the past three and a half months. The condition of the banks is said by the superintendent of banks to be entirely satisfactory.

ELECTED BANK DIRECTORS

Lewis E. Pierson of Austin, Nichols & Co., formerly president of the Irving National of New York, and Horace Havemeyer have been elected directors of the North Side Bank of Brooklyn.

The Farmers State Bank, recently organized at Kirklin, Ind., has the following officers: Herbert F. Wills, president; C. M. Faussett, vice-president, and G. A. Miller, cashier.

THIS picture represents so far as a line drawing can, the magnificent new home of the Ayers National at Jacksonville, Ills. The bank is just about to move in from its temporary quarters and immediately thereafter the business of Dunlap, Russel & Co. will be taken over. Nothing has been left out that the Chicago architects could think up for the beauty, safety and comfort of the new plant. M. F. Dunlap will be the president and Andrew Russel, the ex-state treasurer, will be the active vice-president.

ONE may anticipate some lively matter when "The Bank of Chicago," alias F. B. Carson, gets up before Judge K. M. Landis, "superintendent of such private banking" for this district.

NOW that bankers and political parties generally have "quit" the Aldrich bill, the solitary vote cast against the diversion at New Orleans by President W. R. Hamby of the Texas Bankers Association becomes a sort of a mile post.

OTHERS there were among the A. B. A. delegates who felt the same way, but Gen. Hamby was the only real insurgent.

THE proceedings book of the Washington Bankers Association convention at Tacoma-Olympia in June is out. Was delayed by the illness of Secretary Kauffman.

HIBERNIA BANK & TRUST, New Orleans, is sending out in pamphlet form the address of its Mr. Hecht on "Louisiana Drainage Bonds," delivered at the Investment Bankers convention in New York.

H. B. CRADDICK of Minneapolis, expert in bank advertising, is sending out a beautiful calendar.

ARE you keeping your eye on the State Bank & Trust Co., out at Sioux Falls? Had deposits in 1911 of $1,402,101.32. Now has $2,062,746.30. That is what the New York Central Terminal builders would call a "ramp," only the ascent is a long way over "eight feet in a hundred."

ALLERTON, GREENE & KING, Chicago, have a circular on "Is this the right time to buy bonds?" Ask for it if you can't quite decide.

C. A. PUGSLEY, president of the New York Bankers Association, has been mentioned for a cabinet position under Wilson. Secretary of the treasury is the particular job mentioned and one for which he is qualified in rare degree.

GROUP 7 of New York has indorsed him in a fine set of resolutions. He is the head of the committee on finance for the democratic state central committee and has given valuable services in congress.

W. M. H. MANLY, Birmingham, was one of those who helped to get the new Alabama banking law passed. He rejoices now that it has been upheld by the state supreme court.

SUPPOSE J. PIERPONT were interested in making out a case against the money trust? Of course it couldn't be, but just suppose. Well, wouldn't you like to read the testimony?

MINNESOTA bankers think they've landed another winner in their new secretary, George H. Richards. What luck!

PRIVATE bankers of Ohio will make a fight before the state legislature to maintain their institutions distinct from the national and state banks. Plans which they have completed as a result of the adoption of the constitutional amendment requiring state or national regulation of all financial institutions do not contemplate their coming in under either class of supervision as now known.

THE private bankers will seek a law providing for sweeping safeguards against the operation of financial institutions under the name of "banks," but will seek to have their class of concerns continued outside the limitations placed by either the present national or state banking laws.

JANUARY 1st there will be 240 Ohio private banks to report under the new constitution. The state holds that no additional act is required to put the new constitution into effect.

THE "Big Five" of Illinois in A. B. A. matters are out in a warming-up letter for new members. A pamphlet goes along entitled, "What Every Bank Should Have."

NELSON H. GREENE of Moline, W. G. Edens and W. T. Fenton of Chicago, E. E. Crabtree of Jacksonville, members by election, and J. Fletcher Farrell, member ex-officio of the Executive Council, join in signing the letter.

IF everyone helps, enough new members of the A. B. A. should be secured to get us another man on the Big Council from Illinois. F. A. Crandall, member as chairman of the Executive Committee of the A. I. B., also is a member and will help.

C RANDALL for his short term of one year will be found just as anxious as the others to stick up for Illinois and he is a long way from being a green hand at convention ethics.

TRULY it is difficult to think a banker real smart who keeps his bank out of the association. Col. Dinwiddie proved by actual showing a direct money benefit of over thirty dollars for a five dollar membership in the Iowa association.

PART of this came from reduced cost of cleaning time locks, part from bonds and insurance and from other sources. Col. Farnsworth has done quite as well for the A. B. A., but the greatest benefit is indirect and intangible, but just as real as if you could load it on a wheelbarrow.

OUR "Big Five" as above ask the bankers addressed to "not think about it" but to "take it on faith" and "sign the enclosed blank." We hope it works out as it deserves.

PRYOR, OKLA., has a new bank, "The American State." Even if the bank calls its reserve its "reverse," the figures are O. K. and sound. The capital is $25,000 and the cash on hand $53,000. A. J. Langer is president and J. C. Martin, cashier.

THE good assets of the First State, which failed, were taken over by the new bank.

THOMAS GAMMON, JR., treasurer of the First Trust Mortgage Guarantee Trust, Philadelphia, is the new president of the Bank Clerk's Beneficial Association of that city.

C. H. FOX, who travels out for the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company is being groomed for the race for the treasurer-ship of the I. B. A., to succeed Mr. Hiser.

MR. FOX is young, handsome and popular, goes to all the group meetings and state conventions and has earned the friendship and confidence of the bankers of the state. Lend a hand!

J. E. BUCKINGHAM, the new president of the Kentucky Bankers, is co-operating with that most efficient of secretaries—Arch B. Davis—to make it 100 per cent in membership this year. It's a strong team.

IT has been said that the strongest argument for peace up to date is Mary Johnston's "Cease Firing." The horror, the desolation of our Civil War so vividly pictured, is a greater incentive to arbitration than the most carefully planned arguments ever can be.

SECRETARY J. E. SHEPARD of the Utah Bankers is sending out his proceedings book covering the July 12th-13th convention. Mr. Shepard is cashier of the Cache Valley Banking Company at Logan.

"PLEASE send draft for dues," was the solicitous Christmas message of Secretary W. B. Hughes to all Nebraska bankers.

FORGERS, swindlers and safe blowers continue to prevent Brother Hughes from leading the simple life he would enjoy so much.

THOSE of you who are fortunate enough to get a copy of the Washington proceedings book will have a rare treat. The Tacoma convention was a record breaker and the book, as everything is which comes from P. C. Kauffman, is complete.

IF you want to see a real nifty investment circular for "January funds," write to D. Arthur Bowman & Co., St. Louis.

JOLIET FIRST NATIONAL employees are in on a profit sharing plan which pays Christmas dividends. The high man got $170 this year and low gun drew $50.

THE plan is to deposit ten per cent of salaries for investment. This year the fund earned 48 per cent. Employees who wish to invest their entire savings are guaranteed 6 per cent.

FOR the corn show held by the First this year, one of President Woodruff's hobbies, the prizes went to William Brookman, Troy; William M. Greene, Lockport, and H. W. Palmer, Jackson, in the order named. The "show" will be booked for a return engagement in 1913.

VERMONT will hold its state convention February 21st at Rutland. This probably opens the 1913 season? About 80 per cent of all banks in the state are members.

VERMONT is getting back on the map in the bankers' atlas. Has a member on the Big Council. He is H. L. Ward of Burlington, quite an active spirit. The association had great prosperity last year under the presidency of F. H. Farrington of Brandon.

WE are going to print a new picture of Frank D. Brundage one of these days. Are you all ready? He's been "reducing," same as Mary Garden and the Fair Lillian, but still keeps his favorite brand of travelers' checks in the lead.

THE best of schemes will peter out,
The best of plans may fail;
But in the bank, there is no doubt
Hard work will get the kale.

ALFRED H. CURTIS, with Pell & Co., New York, has remembered his banking friends with a useful diary and note book of vest pocket size. Always did do the neatest things in the very handsomest way.

THE literacy test for immigrants isn't so important, we think, as their place of landing. They should be sent to smaller ports where labor is in demand and conditions are healthful. In the large cities, notably New York, they are a drug on the market and chiefly fill the jails, the asylums and the poor houses. Send them where they are needed.

I THINK so soon as men see this is business and not amusement, an enthusiasm will arise by which it will be revealed that honor and integrity of purpose breed more prosperity than any other things in the world.—Woodrow Wilson.

"STOP, look, listen!" doesn't apply only to crossing State Street mid trucks and autos. Let it temper your January One resolutions.

NO wise guy believes that the "money trust," "free trade" or "Aldrich plan" are more than just so many political scarecrows to frighten the timid. The American business
